PEABODY.

The third meeting of the Unity club was held Monday evening at the residence of Mrs. Dr. Worcester. A large number filled the parlors, and a very enjoyable evening was pissed. The secretary stated that for the past three years the Club had done much financially, and that a large sum was in the hands of the tresurer. It was voted to give several entertainments during the winter, and committes were chosen to arrange matters. A very interesting essay on coal, contributed by members was read, and the evening was devoted to amusements. The next meeting will be held at Mrs. John Culliton's on Chestnut street, Dec. 31, the regular meeting being postponed on account of its coming on Chiristmas eve. Mr. H. F. Walker will read an es say.

Peabody is and has been for years regarded as rather a Jonah for local trade and it is true that retail business, where it is necessary to sell to the same customers year after year, must be conducted on a more strict and honest principle than in a city where there is a large transient trade, and we desire to make special mention of one of our business men who has been successful in conducting his business to the general satisfaction of the public and himself. We refer to Starr C. Hewitt, who came amongst us seven years ago a perfect stranger and has done business in such a manner that it is only necessary to say that a watch or any other article in the jeweler's line warranted by Hewitt is sure to be satisfactory and all that is represented.

The official vote of Essex county for County Commissioners is: George J. L. Colby of Newburyport, 23,792; Zachariah Graves of Lynn, 21,055. Special Commissioners — Daniel B. Lord, Democrat, of Salem, 23,471; Olando B. Tenney, Republican, of Georgetown, 20,856; Aaron Sawyer of Amesbury, 67: Thomas Kevelle of Salisbury, 18,427; Thomas Kevelle of Amesbury, 3820; Thomas Kevelle of Essex, 1145; Thomas Kevelle of Newburyport 34.

The comet now in the heavens reaches its perihelion or nearest point to the sun on the 25th of January, being then about seventy million miles distant from the great central orb. It will be increasing in brightness until that time, and will therefore be in its best estate during the holidays. It is not likely that it will be of great size, or that it will unfurl a tail of astounding proportions.

Gen. John L. Swift, of Boston, a brilliant and popular Lecturer will address the people of Peabody at the New Town Hall, on Sunday evening, Dec. 16th., commencing at 7 o'clock, at which all are cordially invited. Subject, "The Home versus the Saloon." A choir of prominent singers accompanied by an orchestra will furnish music. A collection will be taken to help defray the expenses.

The gravel train on the South Reading branch is engaged in conveying gravel to Danversport, where the Eastern Railroad is building a new piece of track from Danversport to the Danvers Iron Works, for the convenience of that firm. This arrangement saves all teaming for the mill, as all stock can be carried by rail direct to the company's works.

An entertainment for the benefit of the Band of Hope will be given in the South Church Vestry, Thursday evening, Dec. 20, consisting of Readings by Miss Alice C. Newton—an elocutionist with rare power to please an audience—violin solo by Hazen Quint, Instrumental music by Miss Grace Stevens and others, and singing by a chorus of children, under direction of Mr. J. K. Cole. Admission 20 cents; Children under twelve, 10 cents. Doors open at 6.45, commence at 7.15.

Quite a number of people who own nice lawns are covering them with a good coat of top dressing for the winter. This is a good idea and should be done by all who like to see the grass nice and green.

Mr. James H. Thomas has a card in this issue. Mr. Thomas acts in the capacity of a broker, and is prepared to attend to any business left with him. His room is in Allen's Block,

Remember the Missionary Tea Party at the vestry of the Methodist Church on Thursday evening. Among other and varied exercises, Mrs. Dr. D. Steele will be present and address the assembly. Admittance free. All invited.

A large wooden tank 19 feet in diameter and 3 feet deep to contain water to supply the large vacuum pump has been placed in position at King Upton's glue factory.

Governor Butler and Council passed through town last Thursday morning, in a special car on the 9.08 train, bound for the Danvers Insane Asylum.

Prof. Henry Frye of New York city was in town last Friday to attend the funeral of Benjamin Huntington.

J. G. Olin's elegant show windows on Market street, Lynn, are an attraction to the ladies. Rich holiday presents abound.

Annual meeting of the West Peabody Farmers Club was held Friday evening Dec. 7 th. '83. And the following officers were elected: President, B. H. Taylor: 1st. Vice President, E. C Farwell: 2nd. Vice Pres., D. A. Small: Secretary J. F. Ingraham: Treasurer, E. N. Moulton: E. C. Farwell, E. N. Moulton and Geo. Legro were elected Committee on subjects; Bowman Viles, Musical director of the Chorus Club. There was a good attendance, the meeting was very harmonious, and there is a good prospect for success of the future weekly meetings to be held at the shoolhouse hall every Friday eve., and interesting. subjects will be in order each evening.

NORTH PEABODY.

A short time since, the hoodlums again committed their depredations, beginning at Daniel Buxton's by breaking the slats on his fence, next at Mr. Bodge's field by breaking the posts at his house and then to Mr. R. H. Wilson's, demolishing his fence: at Mr. G. H. Reynolds' they broke the blinds and window glass; proceeding to Miss Elizabeth Wilson's residence they broke the end window in the bright glare of the street light which falls directly upon the spot; becoming frightened by the passing of a Boston team they ran off through the fields. Their frequent disturbances shows the need of the police.

Judge Endicott is having his barn reshingled and repaired at the Endicott farm.

E. A. Ward has recently trapped three skunks on the land just purchased by Perley King on Andover street.

Mr. Michael Kelly of this town, has has purchased the George Deland estate on Andover street, at auction for $1200, and will remove thereto.

Mr. J. C. Rogers of Oak Hill has had his farm buildings painted red with white trimmings.

Mr. Thomas O Brien has removed to Fulton street.

Mr. Patrick Cashman has built a shed between his house and barn.

Mr. David Muse has returned to his home in Yarmouth, N. S.

Mr. Francis Peabody has had his residence connected with Oak Hill by telephone.

The Rand Bros. have had their barn reshingled.

Mr. Arthur Bodge has removed to his father's residence on Andover street.

As the Holiday season is upon us and visions of Christmas with i s good cheer and pleasant influences come to us, we are naturally led to give some thought to the purchase of suitable gifts with which to confer pleasure on those around us and appropriately observe the happy occasion. And it gives us pleasure to state what is well known to most of our citizens, that in no establishment are patrons received with greater courtesy or dealt with more conscientiously than at the store of Geo. A. Collins, 198 Essex street, Salem, who enjoys more than a local reputation for skill as an artisan and honorable dealing as a merchant. Our citizens may be assured that for anything in the line of a first class jeweler there is no need of going beyond the limits of his store.

Mr. Southwick has sold his fish market on the square, to Mr. Wm. Stopford of Beverly. Mr. Stopford also has branches in Beverly, Manchester, and by buying in large quantities, direct from the boats, he is enabled to have the freshest and best that the market affords at the lowest price. Oysters in the shell or opened are received on every steamer from Norfolk. Also all kinds of fancy oysters on hand. He contemplates making some extensive repairs and improvements in the near future, Mr. Sam Southwick is retained for the present to look after the Peabody branch, which will be known as the Central Fish Market. Large buyers will find it to their interest to give the "Central" a call.

Have you noticed the advertisement of Mr. J. A. Stein? He is prepared to show you a fine line of boots and shoes at reasonable prices. All who call on him will find courtesy and fair dealing a marked characteristic. Call on him when you are in Lynn.

Perhaps many of our readers may not be aware that we have a practical electrician so near us. If so we would call their attention to the advertisement of Mr. Curwen, of Salem. By employing him you can save about half the usual expense incurred by employing Boston parties, and feel sure of more perfect satisfaction.

THE MAYORALTY elections yesterday were a triumph for the citizens' candidates in nearly every instance—showing that in these elections the majority of fair minded men are in favor of a non partisan vote—and for the election of the best men without regard to party affiliations. This we believe to be the proper spirit. In Boston, Gen. Martin, an honest and upright democrat, was elected handsomely against a party nominee. In Salem, Mayor Hill, the citizens' candidate was re-elected by a larger majority than has been given to a successful candidate for many years. His administra has been endorsed by the citizens, and personal quarrels were wiped out of sight. In Lynn the citizens' candidate was triumphantly elected. Altogether the voters have reason to be proud over the result.

In the confusion of getting out a Holiday number last week we forgot to mention what had happened to Mr. C. H. Shepard of the Danvers Mirror. Why he has developed more "nerve" than his best friends thought possible. In fact he, (an old "bach") got married on Thanksgiving day to Miss Eliza M. Hersey of East Corinth, Me. It is said that Miss Hersey is one of the accomplished young ladies of that town, and every body congratulates Brother Shepard. But what the people down that way say is that Massachusetts men should be prohibited from coming into their state and taking the fairest flowers, and if it keeps on they won't have girls enough left to form a quadrille. We congratulate Brother Shepard and his wife and trust that,

"All the way along life's journey,
Be the skies dark or serene,
They will walk so close together
That no shadow falls between."

Soon the pleasant jingle of the sleigh bell will take the place of the lonely bicycler's gong.

A. M. Neal & Co. have an attractive display of new mouldings for picture framing, including everything from the cheapest to the finest gilt.

Don't fail to read the Crusher of the New England Clothing Co., Lynn, in this week's issue. It certainly is a crusher on prices.

Those in want of Christmas presents, in the shape of skates, sleds and other necessary articles for the boys, can find a large variety to select from by calling at Samuel Trask's hardware store.

A couple of young ladies were out on the street in the wind last Friday morning to have the powder blown out of their hair. They took part in the Old Folks Concert the night before.

The ushers at the new town hall wore for the first time their new badges last Monday night. They are nickle plated and are quite neat. They were furnished by Mr. John F. Moreland.

There will be a dramatic entertainment in the vestry of the Universalist church, Thursday evening, Dec. 20. See advertisement in another column. There will be a great umbrella case and a tender attachment.

Mr. J. K. Cole has been elected superintendent of the South Church Sunday School, in place of Benj. N. Moore who has declined serving. A. H. Whidden was elected assistant, R. H. Wilkinson treasurer, and Miss Lizzie Kimball Secretary.

Last Wednesday the teachers received their last lesson in drawing from the state instructor. These lessons have been of great advantage to the teachers, and the result will be seen in the marked improvements in the pupils. A uniform system of study will also be of great advantage.

SPARKS.

The Engineers held their regular meeting in their room in the town hall, and considerable business was transacted. New appointments were made as follows:—Arthur S. Reed, to the Trucks, from Nov. first; Frank Warner to Steamer One, from Nov. 1st; M. W. Mugford to Hose 4, from Dec. 1st; George A. Lawrence and James T. Marrs, to Hose 2, date from Dec. 1st; George A. Buxton to Hose 3, date from Nov. 1st. Wm. D. Butts was notified that his services would not be required after the first of January, 1884. The committee on repairs were instructed to look into the matter of repairs at the house of Hose 4. It was also voted to contract for a new carriage for Hose 3, and the appropriation for the same, $650, was turned over to Engineer D. B. Lord, Jr., and he is to get what he deems suitable, probably a carriage similar to that of Hose 1. The old carriage being rebuilt by Bowditch & Cogswell, was ordered to be placed in the house of Hose 4. This action brought out an indignant protest from Hose 4, at a meeting of that company, held Thursday evening. The company thought that as their engine was the first one sold, that they should have some choice of carriages, and not have to run a second hand carriage. They say that if the board put that one in the house, they will settle up all bills and retire from the department. Engineer Pierce came out Saturday in the daily papers, with the following statement: Geo. O. Pierce, Engineer of Hose 4, wishes the firemen and citizens of Peabody to understand that he has done all in his power to have placed in the house of Hose 4, a hose carriage adapted to the wants of the fire department, and our present system of high pressure water. Any fireman or citizen can inquire of him at any time, and receive all the information needed why anything done is not his fault or choice. The carriage run by Hose 4 was borrowed from chief Stanford, of Salem, on July 1st, and loaded for fire duty under his direction, before the old engine left town, and was called back to relieve the William Penn's on account of an accident after five months service, and under all circumstances, he takes no part of not providing all he was allowed to do.

In reference to the carriage being recalled, Mr. Pierce means that the carriage that has been in use by Hose 4 since July 1st, was taken back to Salem on Friday, to take the place of Three's carriage of the Salem department. The jumper of Steamer one was put in the place for awhile.

After the sale of the Volunteer, last summer, the Engineers began to see what they could do in the way of supplying the hose companies 3, 4 and 5, with suitable carriages. They wanted carriages that could be run either by horse or hand, and among other things decided to rebuild the old hand carriage of Hose 1, and at a meeting of the Board, held a few months ago, it was put into the hands of the committee on repairs, consisting of Chief Littlefield, and Engineers Folsom and Reed, and as it was then decided to put the carriage in four's house, Engineer Pierce thought that he should have some say about the business, and he was added to the committee. The whole charge of the carriage was put into the charge of a sub-committee, Pierce and Folsom, and the carriage was sent to Boston; where it remained untouched for over six weeks, owing to the refusal of Engineer Pierce to sign the contract as he wanted a new reel and a different gear from the old one that was on the carriage. At the request of Engineer Pierce, a special meeting of the board was called, and the matter referred back to them. As the changes asked for would require an extra appropriation of about $75, it was defeated, and Mr. Pierce then resigned from the committee, the whole business then being put in charge of Engineer Folsom, who then went ahead with the work, and the carriage will be delivered about Christmas. The carriage is as near like the carriage of Hose 1, as could be made from the stock of the old carriage, has shafts and spire, driver's seat and footboard; place for a gong and reflector, wheel brake and reel brake, a step on behind, and a 44 inch reel, able to carry 1000 feet of hose, is painted carmine with fancy striping, &c. The contract price was $285. One reason why Mr. Pierce opposed the building of the carriage, was that the old gear added so much more to the weight than the one that he wished put on did. The two gears were weighed and the difference between the two was about 12 pounds in favor of the new gear. When it was decided at the last meeting to put the carriage in four's house, Mr. Pierce wished to go on the committee again, but as he had once resigned from the committee, he was not put on.

The committee chosen by the four companies in the brick house, to make arrangements for the Union Ball, met Thursday evening with J. K. Williams, the chairman, and J. B. Reith, the secretary. A committee of three, Wm. J. Roome, Wm. H. Jolls and C. K. Mallard were chosen to see about music; hall caterer, &c., and to report at an adjourned meeting.

Steamer two completed arrangements for the variety show in the town hall, on the 19th, by the United Novelty Troupe and Reinwaid's Orchestra of seven pieces. Tickets will be on sale at Spaulding's, the last of this week at 25 and 35 cents, and checks will also be sold by members of the steamer company, which can be exchanged for reserved seats at Spaulding's.

Tickets for the Truck's assembly on the 20th, are going like hot cakes, and the prospects are that they will have a large crowd. Music by the Salem Band, R. L. Reinwald, leader. Tickets for sale by members of the company at 50 cents a couple.

Hose 3 held one of their sociables at the hose house Friday evening, with about 30 couple on the floor.

Frank A. Warner wet down his election into the old steamer company, last Friday, by a clam chowder at Wm. J. Roome's on Foster street. Quite a crowd was present and a good time the result.

A call was made on this town Saturday last, from Danvers, for a hand engine to pump out the cellar of the barn burned at the Port that morning, but they could not get one.

An alarm of fire was nearly started Sunday afternoon about four o'clock, by somebody on the Lowell railroad track. The bell rope was taken down and the drivers had started for their horses before the cause was found out.

At the alarm in Danvers, Saturday morning, considerable delay was caused in getting the truck to the scene of the recent fire, as the doors of the truck house were locked and no one holding keys could be found, but an entrance was forced and the apparatus got into the street, but it was some time before a crowd could be got to man it. When that carriage was in this town, two or three men have taken it almost to a fire many a time, and they must have some pretty weak men up there or else the running part is most awfully out of order.

For some time past a good deal of whispering and running here and there has been observed among the members of Hose 2 and 4, and last evening it culminated in a grand series of surprises for Engineer Geo. O. Pierce. Some days ago Mr. Pierce received an invitation to be present at a clam chowder at the four's house on Tuesday evening, and he was on hand promptly. About 8.30 last evening Hose 2 with Eddie Pierce as drummer and H. C. Wilson as fifer, marched to the four's house and in a short time after their arrival the fun commenced. Foreman Johnson opened the meeting with a few preliminary remarks and then called up Engineer Pierce and presented him with a handsome gold badge made in the shape of a fancy hat front inscribed upon the face, "Engineer Geo. O. Pierce, Peabody F. D.," with the engraving of a hose carriage across the face; on the back "Presented to Engineer Geo. O. Pierce by members of Hose 2 and 4, Dec. 11, 1883." Mr. Johnson's speech was as follows: "Engineer Pierce, in behalf of members of Hose 2 and 4, I present you this gold badge as a testimonial of our kind regard, and our appreciation of your services as a fireman, your example and your encouragement, which as members of this branch of the Department we can never forget. May the glistening of this golden token, which we present to you to-night act as a headlight to guide you on to noble deeds and more brilliant achievements. May old Father Time deal with leniency toward you. God grant that such may be the case; and when Old Age claims you as one of his subjects, may you look back, and comfort yourself with these thoughts: I endeavored to do my duty and I try to deserve well of my brother firemen and fellow citizens. May the gathering of the firemen and friends to-night recall to you in years to come many pleasant remembrances of by-gone days." Engineer Pierce was completely taken by surprise, said that he had thought of getting a benefit, but did not expect such a one as this; thought it was going to be a clam chowder, but when Hose 2 arrived he thought he was to be hauled over the coals. He thanked the members of the two companies for their handsome present and would try to deserve it, but he did not see that he had done anything to receive such marked appreciation. After speeches by a number of prominent citizens on the state of the fire department, supper was announced and the company proceeded to the room below where Caterer Herbert Foan had prepared a splendid supper of chowder with all the fixings. After supper cigars and speeches were in order and in the midst Foreman Larrabee of Hose 2 rose and told Mr. Pierce that the members of the two companies had been ashamed of his fire uniform for some time, and had made up their minds to improve it, and so he, in behalf of the two companies presented him with a Hat Front. Mr. Larrabee hoped he would live a good many years to wear the front and when he did change it would be for Chief. Mr. Pierce was considerably puzzled to know how they came by his fire hat as he had left it at home. Before he could recover from his surprise, Stephen Cragin of Hose 2 came in with a tin cracker box and said he would complete the outfit, and and presented him with a white rubber coat. Mr. Pierce answered in his usual good style, and then the evening was enjoyed until midnight when the party broke up. The presents were supplied by J. F. Moreland from Boston parties.

Hose 1 has one of the shut off nozzles, Walden's patent, on its carriage.

The Salem News asks why the contract to re-build the hose carriage was given to Bowditch & Cogswell of Boston when Dole & Osgood of this town made a lower bid. The Engineers say there was a difference of $25 in favor of the Boston firm, so the contract was awarded them.

The hydrants are receiving their white caps to-day. Z.

Mary W. a ten year old daughter of Frank C. Ferguson, broke through the ice of the pond in the rear of the Bowditch school last Thursday afternoon, and had a narrow escape from drowning.

We notice many boys who should be attending school, loafing about the streets. Since the resignation of Mr. Reed, truancy has increased, and the boys know there is no one to look after them.

The water board have got a new idea on stopping a person's water. In case it is not wanted a seal is placed on the faucets by a patent arrangement, and can only be removed by the proper authorities.

Pickets have been wrenched from the fence about the residence of the late Geo. Upton on Chestnut street, and the pupils attending the Center school, cross the lawn, and play about the buildings.

On the retirement in January, of Sheriff Clark, of Suffolk, Sheriff-elect Herrick, of Essex, will be the senior sheriff in service in the commonwealth, having served continuously since January 1865.

Some one exchanged hats with a well known gentleman in one of our barber shops the other day. He says the hat he received in exchange is good enough but his head will never be small enough to fit it.

The price of pork has advanced one dollar a barrel, and lard one-half a cent a pound, since the receipt of the information that France had repealed the law, prohibiting the importation of American pork.

Several of our adopted citizens about this town are getting ready to send a snug little sum of money to the "old folks" across the water. It is a most acceptable gift, and is always appreciated by the receiver.

Mr. A. E. Wells has been appointed principal of the evening school, Mr. Barnes having declined to serve any further. Mr. Wells has not yet appointed his assistants. The school will probably begin early in January.

Mr. C. A. Weare, law partner of Frank E. Farnham, Esq., left town yesterday morning for Auburn, Me., where he was married to-day to Miss Nellie Goss of that city. The couple will reside at 22 Franklin street.

After engaging the new town hall some weeks ago, for Christmas night, preventing its engagement by other parties who would have hired it, Post 50, G. A. R., gives it up, after unsuccessful attempts to engage a company.

Somebody's pet poodle nearly lost its life the other day on the square. It objected to a freight train and run under the tender of the engine. It got out just in time to leave the tip of its tail under the wheel. It was a valuable animal.

We observed one party the other day who was determined to have a sleigh ride. At any rate he was sitting in a sleigh with a horse attached—to a wagon which it was placed, going to the paint shop.

Two destitute women came to town last Thursday from Lowell. They were just from the old country, their fare having been paid by charitable people. They expected to find relatives in town. One of them had several children.

The West Peabody people have started a petition, asking the Trustees of the Peabody Institute to form a branch library in their part of the town. That is the way, West Peabody will want the earth next. What are the claims of South and North Peabody?

The National Greenback Labor Club have elected officers as follows:—Pres., Richard Kimball; Vice Presidents, Ira Foster, James F. Sullivan; Secretary, Edwin Boxwell; Treasurer, Wm. F. Sumner; Executive Committee, Edward Trask, Geo. F. Barnes, Joseph Swett, Lewis F. Peabody, John J. O'Leary.

HOME HAPPENINGS.

The old folks concert at the Peabody Institute last Thursday evening by the Baptist society was a grand success. The hall was full and the chorus was very good and showed the excellent work of the director, Mr. Eri Littlefield. The singers were dressed in the costume of "ye olden time" and the latter were no small part of the entertainment. The programme was long, and was carried through to the end without the audience showing signs of weariness. Miss Annie Liebsch, late of Bennett & Moulton's Opera Company, sang several pleasing selections. Miss Campbell gave very fine violin solos. Another taking feature was a negro sketch by Messrs. C. Morrill and F. A. Hutchings, in which several musical instruments were introduced. The concert netted the society $96.08. After the concert a collation was served in the Baptist vestry to those who took part.

A resident of Franklin street saw several boys throwing stones at his house last Wednesday, and one stone went through the window. He gave chase to the boys, who ran in different directions. He noticed one of them as he thought enter one of the buildings of Upton's Glue Works. He knew there was only one entrance, and so stationed himself near it to catch the boy when he came out. Half an hour passed and as the r. o. f.s. was about to give up the job and go home, he discovered within two feet of him the boy whom he was waiting for, laying close to a fence, where he remained all the time. The boy was taken from his cramped position and gave the name of a Mills boy as the one who broke the glass. Officer Peasley was notified and gave the boy some fatherly advice at the Center school, last Thursday.

Little Corinne and her company appeared in the New Town Hall, Monday evening, to an appreciative and enthusiastic, though small audience. The entertainment was "Bijou" in which is comprised an entertaining selection of gems from the popular Operas besides an Olio by the different members of the company. Corinne is as lively as ever, and sings better this year than we have heard her. The Salem Cadet Orchestra showed of what stuff they are made, and was pronounced by the Company to be the finest orchestra they had ever played with. Taken with the fine upright Fischer piano, the music was the best that has been heard in the hall.

A boy named James McGerry had a narrow escape from drowning, while playing upon the ice on Crowninshield Pond, Monday afternoon. The ice was very thin and rotten; and he went through in deep water near the middle of the pond. His playmates ran for assistance, and a carpenter named Holmes tried to get out to him, but could not. A Mr. Friend, employed at Leverett Poor's, then tried to reach him, but the ice would not support him. At last some ropes were obtained and the chilled boy was drawn out after having been in the water over half an hour. He is now sick from the shock sustained, and his recovery is deemed doubtful.

An entertainment under the direction of Misses Gussie E. Nelson and Minnie E. Nelson, of Salem, will be given at the Peabody Institute to-morrow evening. The Misses Nelson have been heard on the violin and 'cello several times by our people, and with the additional talent, including Master Hazen Quint of this town, an enjoyable entertainment will doubtless be given. Tickets at popular prices are now on sale at Spaulding's.

At a recent meeting of the School Committee, the sub-committee of the High School were instructed to prepare a new schedule of studies for that school. It is desired by the Board that the scholars shall attain a certain percentage of rank at the examinations, in order to progress with the class. It was also decided to place the routing of the School hall in West Peabody in the hands of a sub-committee of the Board and the chairman

Mr. Charles Thompson the driver on the Lynn and Peabody horse railroad, who runs to Peabody on the first trip, was given a surprise last Wednesday night by his fellow employes, at his home near the stables at Wyoma. During the evening nearly all the conductors and drivers put in an appearance. He was presented with a fine ulster, which he probably will appreciate this winter. An old fashioned baked bean supper followed the presentation.

The following Peabody people are among the successful ones who drew prizes at the S. of V. fair at Salem last Monday night: Geo. W. Russell a silver ice pitcher; Mrs. Albert Trask $100 cash; C. S. Kimball China toilet set; "N. E. G." harness; "Why not" lady's gold ring; Amos King $5 cash; "B. B. B & S" silver watch; Dr. W. O. Gray unknown prize, ($40.15.)

Mrs. Mary wife of Mr. Lendell Foan of this town, died on the morning of 6th. inst.

A beautiful spirit has left us. Young, lovely and full of hope, and most happy in her married relations. She was summoned from earth at a moment when life to her was most inviting, and had assumed its brightest and most enchanting aspect. Inheriting a frail constitution, she was subject to frequent attacks of illness which sometimes awakened the solicitations of friends. But she was disturbed by no fear; death to her had no terrors. Years since she had given herself and her life to God and to his service. Her last sickness was very painful, but was borne with remarkable patience and resignation. Not a word of complaint or of unreconciliation escaped her lips. A sweet smile and a pleasant word greeted all who came to her bedside. Words spoken during her sickness to husband and friends, words of cheer, felt in view of immortal bliss, then just before and to which when her husband came she would be there to welcome him, will never be forgotten. A few hours before her death, the 91st Psalm having been read at her request, and prayer offered by her husband, she, amid intensest suffering, followed in an earnest prayer committing herself, her husband, mother and friends to God—to His grace and keeping. And then subsequently, as though sensible that her work on earth was finished, she said, "Dear Jesus, now let me go home," or words to that effect, and in a few minutes had fallen restfully asleep in Jesus. May the prayer of the dying wife find an answer in large gifts of divine grace and strength to the bereaved husband and friends. S.

Jordan Lodge, F. & A. M., will celebrate the 75th anniversary of its existence, at the new town hall. In 1778 there was a lodge in Danvers called United States Lodge, but so many of its members were in the army, and the affairs of the country occupied so much the thought of all, that it gradually weakened and ceased to exist. In 1808 it was revived with a new name, and on the 12th of December was chartered as Jordan Lodge. The exercises to-night will consist of instrumental music by the Salem Cadet orchestra, Miss Grace Stevens pianist, and Master Hazen Quint violinist; recitations by Wyzeman Marshall, of Boston; and a historical and Masonic address by Rev. E. C. Bolles, of Salem. After these exercises there will be a supper served by Caterer Wentworth, of Salem. Guests are invited from Salem, Lynn, Danvers and Beverly. It will undoubtedly form a memorable occasion to the fraternity and those privileged to be present. L. A. Southwick is the Worshipful Master, and the anniversary committee having the matter in charge are D. P. Grosvenor, J. C. Jodrey, Geo. Randall, H. P. Reed and L. Purtell.

The following from the Brockton Gazette may interest our readers. Rev. Mr. Montgomery was at one time pastor of the Unitarian Church, of this town, some fifteen years ago, and prior to the pastorate of Rev. Mr. Galvin: "An advertisement has been inserted in the Boston Herald by a London, Eng., solicitor offering a reward for information concerning the present address of the wife of Rev. David Henry Montgomery, formerly pastor of the Unitarian Church at West Bridgewater. Rev. Mr. Montgomery went to England about three years ago for the benefit of his health and had charge of Hastings Chapel up to June, 1881. The advertisement sets forth that Mrs. Montgomery is about 55 years old, has a son about 16, and is believed to have belonged to a Californian family. The friends of the family are much mystified over the advertisement, as they are not aware of anything having gone wrong with Mr. Montgomery, who was highly esteemed during his residence and ministry among them."

To-morrow and Friday, afternoons and evenings, the ladies of the Universalist Society will hold a fair in their vestry which will be a novelty in the manner of the arrangement of the different departments. There will be an art gallery, refreshment tables, and suppers will be served. They have printed a goodly sized paper, the Bazaar Notes, and a new edition of their tested receipts, with many additions, will be offered for sale at the fair.

Mr. William Bushby had been losing his hens of late, and supposing that some animal was at work set a trap for it. Yesterday morning he found in the trap a very fine specimen of mink, an animal that is very rare in this vicinity. The skin they say is worth $5 00. Ten hens were killed by the mischievous fellow.

The ladies of the Unity club don't intend leap year shall get the better of them—especially the unmarried one—and they have already in contemplation a leap year assembly early in January. The ladies of the club are invited to meet with Mrs. Dr. Worcester to-morrow evening.

Mr. Ira Foster's hay wagon broke down the other day. One of the axles broke off close to the wheel.

MANUFACTURER'S PRICES.

A DECIDED SUCCESS.

A great many firms in Lynn are puzzled at the large attendance and great success of our special sales, simply because these same firms have failed in their own efforts to attract attention and accomplish the same results. The reasons are plain, for we assert that our establishments can show many advantages over others. We give the following, which are convincing:

First.

Enormous stock. The immense stock of our wholesale house, together with our two retail stores, 84 Market street and 23 Market Square, make a stock to draw from five times larger than all the other shoe stores in Lynn combined.

Second.

Low Rents. While our competitors are handicapped by having to pay exorbitant rents, we with our three stores, have to pay rent only on one—a fact, the significance of which as bearing upon our ability to sell for less than others, will be apparent to all.

Third

Wholesale. Our wholesale trade, which now extends to every city and town of any importance in New England, obliges us to carry an immense stock and gives us an advantage in buying entirely beyond the reach of our competitors. For where they buy of the jobbers in small lots, we buy direct of the manufacturers, and that we can buy as low as the large Boston jobbers is abundantly attested by the fact that we are able to meet and compete with them on their own grounds and build up a wholesale trade which is constantly increasing.

Fourth.

One Price. Marked in plain figures on every pair of boots and shoes, guarantees low prices.—Equal treatment to all classes and shows at a glance the quality of the goods.

Fifth.

Truthful Representations. No misrepresentations are tolerated. Goods are sold for just what they are. Some stores adopt the "bait" plan, advertising great slaughter, immense bargains, etc. Call in half an hour after such stores open and in nearly every instance the salesman has the old story to tell you: "All gone;" "haven't your size;" "too late;" "very sorry, but we have had such a rush they are all out.—Can't we show you something else?" We have no such nonsense. It won't do.

Sixth.

Quick Sales and Small Profits. Quick sales are the life of a successful business. Small profits are sufficient when the business is done on live business principles. You save one profit by buying of the wholesaler.

Seventh.

Exchanging Goods or Refunding Money. When any dissatisfaction occurs because the selection does not please in every particular, the goods, if returned uninjured in a reasonable time, can be exchanged; and it matters not of whom it was selected, any salesman at leisure will pay careful attention to the customer. In case nothing is found to please, the cash will be cheerfully refunded.

Eighth.

Prompt Cash Payments. We are so conscious of the overwhelming advantages we possess both in buying and selling we have no hesitation in asserting that no prudent purchaser can afford to buy anything anywhere else until they have looked through our stock and got our prices. Ready money in our hands enables us to buy goods in large quantities at figures that the average retailer knows nothing about. To-day we stand simply as the connecting link between the manufacturer and consumer.

We have an immense surplus stock which we are going to close out during this sale. In order to accomplish this purpose we know at the outset that it will be necessary to offer sufficient inducements which we are determined to do. Consequently, in this instance as well as all others, we appeal directly to the interests of every purchaser, regarding that as decidedly more potent than volumes of positive assertions.

Book Notices.

A portrait of Peter Cooper taken a few months before his death is the frontispiece to the December Century. There is an anecdotal paper by Mrs. Susan N. Carter, which throws much light on the ideas of Mr. Cooper. There is an illustrated paper on Los Angelos and "H. H." closes her series on So. California. There is a generon amount of fictions, an instalment of 'Bread Winners" of "Dr. Sevier," and the beginning of Robert Grant's story of New York life "An Orange man." There are poems, Topics of the Times, Editorials, &c. For sale by the Peabody News Company.

The editor of FRANK LESLIE'S SUNDAY MAGAZINE, (T. De Witt Talmage, D. D.,) commences the fifteenth volume and the year very brilliantly; he presents in the January number a most attractive and interesting holiday one, replete with delightful reading and artistic excellence. The contents are extremely varied; the editor has a characteristic article, "The Coming Sermon," and there are contributions in prose and poetry from some of our most popular writers. Now is the time to subscribe, and no one could fail to appreciate as a holiday gift, a year's subscription to this popular magazine. The price is 25 cents for a single number, or twelve numbers for $2.50, postpaid. Address Mrs. Frank Leslie, Publisher, 53, 55 and 57 Park Place, New York.

The December (Christmas) Magazine of American history is one of the most attractive issues of this excellent periodical that has yet appeared. It contains four historical Essays on Christmas and its observances in various parts of early America and among different nationalities. John Esten Cooke contributes the leading article on "Christmas Time in Old Virginia," and Mrs. Lamb, Editor of the Magizine, writes of the "Christmas Season in Dutch New York." Then comes an article by the learned and scholarly Horatio Hale, M. A., entitled "A Huron Historical Legend." The third chapter of the Private Intelligence Papers, of Sir Henry Clinton occupies the department of Original Documents, together with two unpublished letters of special interest. This Magazine is deservedly recognized in every part of the country as one of the best historical publications ever offered to the public. Publication office, 30 Lafayette Place, New York City.

Ballou's Magazine for January is a splendid number, and contains more good reading than any serial in the country. There is the commencement of Mr. William H. Thomes's new yarn, "On Land and Sea, or California in the Years 1843, '44 and '45," which will prove very interesting to the pioneers of that State, and all who have visited that country. No one should fail to read it. No one who reads Ballou's Magazine can fail to be interested in it. It is cheap and it is good, its price being only $1.50 per annum, or 15 cents a single copy. Just send 10 cents for a sample. For sale everywhere. Published by Thomas & Talbot, 23 Hawley Street, Boston.

Dexter Smith's Musical Record for December, has for Music "Little Footsteps in the Sand," by J. Thomas Baldwin, arranged by Lawrence Knight; "Dream Faces Waltz," by W. M. Hutchinson; "Thy Face," words by R. Lejoindre, music by C. H. R. Marriott; and a Christmas Carol by J. G. Holland, music by J. T. Draper. The Record costs only $1 a year.

DECORATIONS AND SOUVENIRS.—Detach the notice from your bottle of MORSE YELLOW DOCK, and mail per directions on each bottle, and thus secure an assortment of our elegant decorative Advertisements, Souvenirs, &c.

M. Y. D. SYRUP CO.

President John Taylor, the official head of the Mormon church, is preparing an elaborate statement of the political and social attitude of the Latter-day Saints, for the January number of the North American Review.

GIVEN AWAY.

We cannot help noticing the liberal offer made to all invalids and sufferers by Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption. You are requested to call at Spaulding's Drug Store, and get a Trial Bottle free of cost, if you are suffering with Consumption, Severe Coughs, Colds, Asthma, Bronchitis, Hay Fever, Loss of Voice, Hoarseness, or any affection of the Throat or Lungs. It will positively cure you.

Don't fail to read Wilmot's advertisement on the first page. Manager Boynton is increasing his trade rapidly by selecting such goods as his customers wish, and selling at prices that nobody can find fault with.

Wanted—a missing dog scarf, belonging to darling little "Mephistocles." Please return at once to his distracted mother, and receive lasting gratitude and a bountiful reward.

Wanted—by sweethearts a delicate, yet stiff-kneed and rapid method of popping the question; must be patented and warranted to cure or kill in forty seconds.

Wanted—at once for tanning, the skins of the bears that are squeezing the leather market. A liberal sum will be paid for the entire scalp of each.

The window of Smith & Robinson, Market street, Lynn, which is always arranged with artistic taste, presents an unusually attractive ensemble at the present time. In what may be called the background, are two large and beautiful photo-grauves, respectively entitled Le Nuit and Le Gue. These are separated and flanked by panels of clayoid, representing vines. Near the foreground are two lovely landscape pastels. From these radiate in every direction the greatest profusion of beautiful fancy goods, suitable for holiday gifts, and which it would be impractible to attempt to describe. The window is attracting the attention of thousands who pass it daily, and excites enthusiastic expressions of admiration. Within the store there is the most animated and tasteful display of fancy goods in almost infinite variety. The Art Gallery in the rear of the Store is in keeping with the season, and is receiving the attention of lovers of everything in the line of engravings, statuary, and a great and fresh supply of articles of virtu.

The advertisement of the Salem Oratorio Society is now complete in its information. The new oratorio is announced, as well as the date on which tickets will be sold and checks exchanged. Particular attention is called to a change in place for exchange of checks. Messrs. Geo. F. Ropes & Co.'s is the place.

SOUTH PEABODY.

Mr. Geo. Jones, formerly of this town, but late of Lowell, Mass., died at the latter city, last Saturday, and was buried from this place last Monday afternoon. The remains were buried in the family lot in Cedar Grove cemetery.

Mr. David Putnam has built him a large henery in the rear of his house on Lynnfield St., the past week.

Mr. Joseph Keazer and brother from Colebrook, N. H., have been visiting their brother J. C. Keazer on Washington street the past week.

Mr. Fellows has painted the house of Miss Mary Tudbury, the past week.

Mr. A. T. Parker is the happy father of a nine pound boy.

About thirty passengers came up in the extra car last Monday night from the play in the Town hall.

Mrs. Frank Needham sprained her ankle last Tuesday, while walking down stairs at her residence on County street.

The celebrated Rogers' Groups are an appropriate and acceptable gift to a teacher or parent for the Holiday season. There are several new ones this year, which will repay a careful examination of those desiring to purchase. H. P. Ives, at the Old Corner book store in Salem, is the sole agent in this vicinity, and in addition to these groups he is showing an elegant lind of books and games for the Holidays. Mr. Ives probably has the largest assortment of books anywhere in Salem; and in albums, Christmas cards and the thousand and one articles which are always to be found in a first class store like that of Mr. Ives, our readers can find something that will please them.

The new Art Store of O. W. H. Upham, No. 267 Essex Street, Salem, is a great attraction. Everything about it reflects the taste of the proprietor. An elegant line of cards, hand painted placques, engravings and etchings, can be seen at all times. A fine etching of William Cullen Bryant, is one of the many fine things at his store.

The Brightest, Freshest, Broadest Newspaper

IN NEW ENGLAND.

The Springfield Republican

DAILY, SUNDAY, WEEKLY.

ESTABLISHED IN 1824 BY SAMUEL BOWLES

SOME OF ITS CHARACTERISTICS AND SPECIAL FEATURES.

It is thoroughly independent in politics and all matters of public interest.

It is a live, progressive newspaper, and labors earnestly in behalf of better government and better conditions of society.

It is an enterprising newspaper, and seeks to inform its readers promptly and intelligently of everything important that is transpiring in the world from day to day; not simply of crimes and casualties, but all the great movements and causes that interest and affect the people.

It is a representative New England newspaper, gathering the news of this section with special care and thoroughness and presenting in its editorial columns the best thought and most intelligent opinion of the New England people.

It is a literary newspaper of high standing, and numbers among its staff several accomplished critics.

Its special and regular correspondence is of varied and interesting character, embracing regular letters from the leading capitals, and frequent letters of teavel, criticism and observation.

Its miscellaneous reading matter is selected with great care both for entertainments and instruction.

THE SUNDAY REPUBLICAN furnishes an extensive variety of agreeable and valuable reading in addition to its full presentation of local and general news. Each number contains a sermon or other religious article and an original story.

THE WEEKLY REPUBLICAN gives the cream of the seven daily issues, the news being carefully condensed and sifted and the best editorial and special matter from the daily being reproduced. In compact and convenient form it offers an admirable weekly picture and review of American life.

THE SUN.

NEW YORK, 1884.

About sixty million copies of THE SUN have gone out of our establishment during the last twelve months.

If you were to paste end to end all the columns of all THE SUNS printed and sold last year, you would get a continuous strip of interesting information common sense wisdom, sound doctrine, and sane wit long enough to reach from Printing House square to the top of Mount Copernicus in the moon, then back to Printing House square, and then three-quarters of the way back to the moon again.

But THE SUN is written for the inhabitants of this earth; this same strip of intelligence would girdle the earth twenty-seven or twenty-eight times.

If every buyer of a copy of THE SUN during the past year has spent only one hour over it, and his wife or his grandfather has spent another hour, this newspaper in 1883 has afforded the human race thirteen thousand years of steady reading night and day.

It is only by little calculations like these that you can form any idea of the circulation of the most popular of American newspapers, or of its influence on the opinions and actions of American men and women.

THE SUN is, and will continue to be, a newspaper which tells the truth without fear of consequences, which gets at the facts no matter how much the process costs, which presents the news of all the world without waste of words and in the most readable shape, which is working with all its heart for the cause of honest government, and which therefore believes that the Republican party must go, and must go in this coming year of our Lord, 1884.

If you know THE SUN, you like it already and you will read it with accustomed diligence and profit during what is sure to be the most interesting year in its history. If you do not yet know THE SUN, it is high time to get into the sunshine.

TERMS TO MAIL SUBSCRIBERS.

The several editions of THE SUN are sent by mail, postpaid as follows:

DAILY—50 cents a month, $6 a year; with Sunday edition, $7.

SUNDAY—Eight pages. This edition furnishes the current news of the world, special articles of exceptional interest to everybody, and literary reviews of new books of the highest merit. $1 a year.

WEEKLY—$1 a year. Eight pages of the best matter of the daily issues; an Agricultural Department of unequalled value, special market reports, and literary, scientific, and domestic intelligence make THE WEEKLY SUN the newspaper for the farmer's household. To clubs of ten with $10, an extra copy free.

THE LEADING MAGAZINE FOR THE BOYS & GIRLS

ST. NICHOLAS,

EDITED BY MRS. MARY MAPES DODGE.

The New York Tribune once said: "In the avalanche of immoral literature that threatens the children, some strong, vitally wholesome, and really attractive magazine is required for them, and St. Nicholas has reached a higher platform and commands for this service wider resources in art and letters, than any of its predecessors or contemporaries." The reference to the wide resources in art and letters commanded by St. Nicholas was never more fully illustrated than by the extraordinary list of attractions which that magazine announces for 1884. The following will be some of the leading contributors:

Louisa M. Alcott, J. T. Trowbridge,
Captain Mayne Reid, Hjalmar Hjorth Boyesen
Maurice Thompson, Frank R. Stockton,
Charles Dudle Warner, Joaquin Miller,
Elizabeth Stuart Phelps, Mrs. A.D.T.Whitney
Julian Hawthorne, Celia Thaxter,
Mary Mapes Dodge, Lieut. Frederick Schwatka,
Rose Hawthorne Lathrop, E. S. Brooks,
George W. Cable, Chas. G. Leland,
Susan Fenimore Cooper, John G. Whittier,
"H. H.," W.O. Stoddard, C. P. Cranch.

and scores of other distinguished writers. The best artists and engravers illustrate the magazine. It has been truly said that the reading of St. Nicholas is for the boys and girls who are fortunate enough to have it. In no other book or periodical is instruction so happily blended with recreation and amusement.

"A LIBERAL EDUCATION"

The price is $3.00 a year, or 25 cents a number. Book-sellers, news-dealers, and postmasters receive subscriptions, or remittance may be made direct to the publishers, by money or express order, bank check, draft, or in registered letter.

ABOUT TEN FEET HIGH.

YARDSTICK AND THE OTHER BOARDERS TRUST NOT THE TALE—CERTAIN DEDUCTIONS.

"How high was that? Just read that again," sang out young Yardstick, one of our boarders, who is in the dry goods line, to Professor Seedling, who sometimes reads aloud a paragraph, after supper. The Professor complied, lending the beauty of his voice to the following statement:

"In the year 1772 a Dutchman named Roggewein discovered Easter island, and reported that the men on that island measured twelve feet in height, although the women were commonly not above ten or eleven feet high."

"Well," said young Yardstick, "in my opinion he was a Flying Dutchman and a lying Dutchman," and the other boarders agreed with him.

While nobody desires American ladies to be giants, all would be delighted to see them well and strong. Yet a thousand causes combine to keep a large proportion miserable. Too much confinement in heated rooms, or in the same house, multiplied domestic and family worries, want of sleep, little illnesses hard to describe, but peculiar to their sex—are the wolfish pack that drive the women "half out of their heads."

Miss M A. Packard, of No. 323 Ewen street, Brooklyn, N. Y., confesses to having suffered from nameless physical disarrangements so induced, and says: PARKER'S GINGER TONIC is my strength and shield. It cured my dyspepsia, and for those general ills of which women complain so much, the Tonic is better than all things else. I have suffered for years in this way and speak from experience. A valuable feature to women is its delicious taste."

PARKER'S GINGER TONIC is not an essence of ginger, but a highly scientific combination of the best vegetable curative agents known to the medical profession. Physicians endorse it, and no wife or mother should be without it. Prices, 50 cents and $1 a bottle. Your druggist keeps it. Hiscox & Co., Chemists, New York.

Miscellaneous.

A PARROT'S PECULIAR TALK.

Bird fanciers sometimes play rather clever tricks to effect sales, but the sequel to one anecdote of the practice is rather remarkable. In the village where I resided was a lady very fond of birds. One day a "gentleman" from Whitechapel called to give her the offer of a fine green parrot of really beautiful plumage. There was something tempting even in the appearance of the bird; but there was one desideratum with the lady and she naturally enough asked: "But will she talk?" "Oh, yes, marm; like a hangel." "What will she say?" "Every mortal thing. What can you say, Polly?" "Every mortal thing," was the prompt reply. "There, marm," continued the gentleman from Whitechapel; "picked it up in a moment; never heard it afore, I warrant. Just ask her yourself." The same question was put and the same answer given. It was perfectly true that Polly could say "every mortal thing," and she did it every time she was asked to do so; but "every mortal thing" was the sole phrase in Polly's repertoire.

One day, however, the door of the cage was left open, and Polly escaped. There was a hue and cry raised at once, and the boys of the village perseveringly pursued the fugitive from roof to roof and tree to tree. At last a farmer's son coming up presented his gun at Poll as she was seated on a haystack. "No, yer don't," said Poll, for the first time uttering something new, and giving a sort of loud laugh took to the wing. Polly was caught shortly after, having taken refuge in a covecote. When brought home her mistress took her kindly on her finger and said: "Why, Polly, what have they been doing to you?" "Every mortal thing," was the ready answer, and at the same time bending down her head she bit the lady's hand rather badly. "Oh, what did you do that for, you naughty bird?" "Every mortal thing, every mortal thing," and being put into her cage the recaptured prisoner paced backward and forward in evident anger upon her perch, jerking out "Every mortal thing" for nearly half an hour. All this is simple enough so far as the one phrase is concerned, but whence got she the second, together with the chuckles so appropriate to the moment when the gun was presented? A score of people heard the words, but no living soul in the place had ever heard Poll get beyond her constantly repeated phrase before, nor have they since.

ARMIES ANCIENT AND MODERN.

Armies are now so organized that they can keep the field without the intermission of the seasons; they can be moved great distances with extreme celerity; they are furnished with terrible means of destruction, the formidable inventions of modern science; they are trained to march, to manœuvre, to fight, with an efficacy which, in the days of Froissart, would have seemed beyond the capacity of man, and they are composed of multitudes which a Du Guesclin or a Talbot would have pronounced impossible. On the other hand, civilization has made the natural defenses of a country weaker; the multiplication of roads and bridges has facilitated the advance of an enemy; diminution of the power and numbers of fortresses has had a like result, and the improvement of agriculture, by increasing the means of subsistence for an invading army, has operated in the same direction. War in the fourteenth and fifteenth centuries was carried on in a very different fashion, and in character and effects was wholly dissimilar. Armies were still, in the main, the feudal militia; they were on foot only a few weeks in summer; their movements were pitiably slow and limited; their artillery and arms were cumbrous and feeble; their operations were rude, imperfect, and seldom produced decisive effects, and compared with the hosts of the present day, they were no more than a handful of men. Again, a country in those days presented great and various obstacles to an invader; the roads were few and bad, and the large rivers were bridged only at wide intervals; every avenue was guarded by feudal castles, and every town was a kind of fortress; woods and marshes barred an invader's progress; and owing to a backward state of husbandry, a hostile army was often unable to obtain supplies in its line of march, and was paralyzed or compelled to retreat. Offensive operations are thus favored to an extraordinary degree in modern war; the obstinate and protracted wars of defense which were waged occasionally with complete success even down to the eighteenth century, have become altogether things of the past.

ANTS AS MEDICINE.

A curious use is made of ants by the Indians in Brazil, who employ them to dress wounds, causing them to bite the edges together, and then cutting off the head; the jaws will not relax, but hold the wound together till healed. They were formerly used as a cruel instrument of torture by South African tribes, who tied their victim to a tree, smeared his body with grease, and placed an ants' nest at his feet. The Arabs, according to Mr. Moggridge, placed an ant in the hand of a newly born child, that the virtues of the insect may pass into the infant. Naturalists also sometimes make use of these industrious scavengers. When they require a perfect specimen of the smaller vertebrates, they place the body in a box, bore a few holes in it and bury it near an ants' nest; in a few days a perfect and most delicately whitened skeleton will be found in the box.

Do not speak with contempt and ridicule of a locality where you may be visiting. Find something to truthfully praise and commend; thus make yourself agreeable.

13 Strike at the Bottle.

A nervous and disease-stricken old gentleman was sitting in his room on an easy-chair, his physician being at his side.

Said the old gentleman, "Now, doctor, you have been treating me for a long time, and haven't done me much good. I'm tired of all this. I want you to strike at the root of all my disorders."

Said the doctor, "Do you mean exactly what you say?"

"To be sure I do," said the venerable invalid.

"Well, here goes!" said the doctor;—and with one whack of his cane he broke to pieces the brandy-bottle which stood on the mantel.

The old gentleman was angry and excited, but he had a good answer ready for the doctor. "Doctor, if it hadn't been for your doctrine, I never would have got into the habit of drinking."

In Brown's Iron Bitters there is strength for the debilitated, refreshment for the nervous, and new life for the broken-down.

COLOGNE

THE CENTURY.

Programme for 1883-84.

The programme for the fourteenth year of this magazine, and the third under the new name, is if anything more interesting and popular than ever. With every season, THE CENTURY shows a decided gain in circulation. The new volume begins with November, and, when possible, subscriptions should begin with that issue. The following are some of the features of the coming year:

A NEW NOVEL BY GEORGE W. CABLE, author of "Old Creole Days," etc., entitled "Dr. Sevier," a story of New Orleans life, the time being the eve of the late Civil War.

"LIFE IN THE THIRTEEN COLONIES," by Edward Eggleston, separate illustrated papers on subjects connected with the early history of this country.

THREE STORIES BY HENRY JAMES, of varying lengths, to appear through the year.

THE NEW ASTRONOMY, untechnical articles by Prof. S. P. Langley, describing the most interesting of recent discoveries in the sun and stars.

A NOVELETTE BY H. H. BOYESEN, author of "Gunnar," etc. A vivid and sparkling story.

THE NEW ERA IN AMERICAN ARCHITECTURE, a series of papers descriptive of the best work of American architects in Public Buildings, City and Country Houses, etc. To be profusely illustrated.

A NOVELETTE BY ROBERT GRANT, author of "Confessions of a Frivolous Girl," etc., entitled "An Average Man,"—a story of New York.

THE BREAD-WINNERS, one of the most remarkable novels of the day, to be completed in January.

CHRISTIANTY AND WEALTH, with other essays, by the author of "The Christian League of Connecticut," etc., on the application of Christian morals to the present phases of modern life.

COASTING ABOUT THE GULF OF ST. LAWRENCE, a series of entertaining articles, profusely illustrated.

SCENES FROM THE NOVELISTS, Hawthorne, George Eliot, and Cable, with authentic drawings.

ON THE TRACK OF ULYSSES, the record of a yacht-cruise in the Mediterranean, identifying the route of Ulysses on his return from the Trojan war.

"GARFIELD IN ENGLAND," extracts from his private journal kept during a trip to Europe in 1867.

"THE SILVERADO SQUATTERS," by Robert Louis Stevenson, author of New Arabian Nights.

There will be papers on outdoor England by John Burroughs and others, a beautifully illustrated series on Paris, a number of papers by the eminent French novelist Alphonse Daudet, articles on art and archæology by Charles Dudley Warner and others, illustrated papers on sport and adventure, short stories by the leading writers, essays on timely subjects, etc., etc.

Subscription price, $4.00 a year; single numbers sold everywhere, at 35 cents each. All dealers receive subscriptions, or remittance may be made direct to the publishers by postal or express order, registered letter, bank check or draft.

SPECIAL OFFERS.

To enable new subscribers to begin with the first volume under The Century name, we make the following special offers:

New subscribers beginning with November, 1883, may obtain the magazine for one year from date, and the twenty-four previous numbers, unbound, for $8.00. Regular price for the three years, $12.00.

Or, if preferred, a subscription and the twenty-four numbers bound in four elegant volumes will be furnished for $10. Regular price, $16.

RATHER TOO LONG.
AFTER TWENTY YEARS ON THE WRONG SIDE OF LIFE A VIRGINIAN TURNS THE TABLES.
"How long did you say?"
"Twenty years, I said Up to the time I mentioned I had suffered from diseased liver for t enty years." said Mr. S. T. Hancock, of Richmond, Va., half sadly, as though thinking of that dilapidated section of his life. "At times I almost wished it had pleased providence to omit the liver from the human anataomy."
"Bad enough—twenty years of that sort of thing," responded a listener. "What was the upshot of it?"
"The upshot was that some time ago I went down to Scott's drug store in this city, and bought one of BENSON'S CAPCINE POROUS PLASTERS, applied it and was relieved in a few hours, and am now as sound as though my liver were made of India-rubber."
Benson's—unliks the old-fashioned kind of plasters—act promptly. Look for the word CAPCINE which is cut in the genuine. Price 25 cents. Seabury & Johnson, Chemists, New York.

Miscellaneous.

THE EARTHQUAKE SENSATION.

In "Travels in Peru and Mexico," the writer gives Juan Romero's story of a recent earthquake in the equatorial Sierras, from which he and his cattle were sufferers. At the first warning rumble in the ground, he and his family and his workmen all quitted their occupations and ran to the middle of an open field. But before we reached this, he says, the earth trembled beneath our feet and we were all thrown to the ground. We were all, however, soon on our feet again, and in a position of comparative safety where we could watch the effects of the earthquake upon the animals. These all stood motionless with their legs stretched out and their heads bent down almost to the ground, one or two of the cattle moaning.

A second shock was very different. During the first one we seemed to be drawn or pushed from side to side; but now we felt for a minute or more, as if some weight was pressing us to the ground, and immediately after this as tight as if we were ascending into the air, showing that the shock was in the first case horizontal, and in the second in a perpendicular direction.

Of his own feelings, Mr. Romero said that he experienced a kind of terror hard to describe. "My first sensations were a dread that the earth was about to open and bury everything within its bosom. But what I felt after this was not like the fear of death which I have experienced in other cases. I have faced the bayonet and stood before the cannon's mouth, and I cannot say altogether without fear of human enemies who, one might suppose, experienced the same unpleasant sensations as oneself. The prospect of death, however, is generally accompanied by hopes of the future; but during an earthquake the reason is subdued, and my predominant feeling was that we were utterly lost. It seemed as if all nature was about to expire; and for an hour or two after the shocks there was the same appearance of dread among the whole party. Even the beasts stood for some time in the position which they had taken during the shocks, and required patting and reassuring before they would move."

THE AURORA SALT WELL.

A correspondent of the Auburn Advertiser writes: We have had the pleasure of visiting the promising salt well of Cayuga Lake and tasting its briny water. While passing through the village of Aurora we saw no person on the streets, all was still and quiet as the unruffled water of the lake. The only one discovered was John Locke, sitting on a horseblock, peacefully smoking the same pipe—apparently—that we saw him smoking nearly fifteen years ago. Poor old mind-be-clouded John, he has walked the streets of Aurora, and eaten the bread of charity this many a year; he is happy in the belief that he owns Cayuga Lake and the town of Ledyard; but his pipe of life is nearly smoked out, his days "are nearly ended," and when he lays aside this earthly clog, his mind may come out as fair and sound as it was in youth; who knows? On arrival at Payne's Creek we found salt water running to waste like a thing of little value. It is said that the shaft has been sunk to the depth of a thousand feet, and that a stratum of sixty feet of solid saline rock has been found. If this is true, it is a mine of untold wealth, and in a little while the song of the salt boiler will be heard at Payne's Creek and the peaceful village of Aurora will rise to active importance through the saving grace of salt. As Syracuse has grown and prospered, so will Aurora advance and be built up from the same antiseptic cause. Block will be added to block, store to store and shop to shop; republican residences will be built, avenues and parks laid out and bulwarks extended; boats will be freighted to the water's edge and the railway will need another track.

AN INDIAN PRODIGY.

A pious Brahmin named Kanhai Patak, lately purchased a mango grove near Mazufpurpo. Being doubtful of the probity of his neighbors, the worthy Indian watched the ripening fruit by day and night, having his simple couch placed outside for that purpose. One night a brilliant light suddenly flared up in a corner of the grove, and the startled Brahmin saw a truly remarkable sight. "A huge serpent roamed for prey around the light," and when the watcher approached the reptile "it hurried to the jewel, swallowed it and disapeared." It was a gem of some sort that emitted the wonderous light, but the account does not mention how it got among the mango trees. Next day, Mr. Patak acquainted his friends with his remarkable adventure, and that night they participated in his vigils with the gratifying result of seeing the same phenomenon. Once more the grove was lighted up, once more the big snake went circling round it, and once more the gem had to do its sparkling in the stomach of a serpent. Such is the description forwarded by a highly educated Baboo to the leading native paper at Calcutta.

AN IMMENSE TERRITORY.

Russia has a continuous territory unparalleled by any other State in the world. Stretching from the Baltic to Behring Straits, it is a few hours journey from Berlin on the one hand, and on the other almost touches the territory of the United States. The Czar's empire reaches nearly half round the world. Humbolt, to present it fairly to the imagination of his readers, had to go to the heavens for his parallel, for he compared its extent to that of the visible face of the moon.

MR. E. MARTIN,

IN PORTER'S DEPARTMENT OF THE U. S. ARMORY SPRINGFIELD, MASS.—INTERESTING STATEMENT OF HIS SUFFERING.

Here are plain facts from a most reliable source. Your reporter found Mr Martin in Porter's department of the United States Armory, Springfield, Mass. After being introduced, Mr. Martin said: "I am willing to say what I can for the benefit of those afflicted as I have been. For years I have been a terrible sufferer from kidney and bladder difficulties, Mine being of the calculous or stony form. I have visited all the mineral springs whose waters have been recommended to me by the best medical authorities. I have tried every known remedy, and have submitted to several operations, and have tried everything that money could obtain in the way of relief, but I find that Dr. Kennedy's FAVORITE REMEDY is the best medicine of all my experience—I have received more benefit from it. It is certainly a wonderful remedy for diseases of this kind. I have recommended FAVORITE REMEDY to others in the city of Springfield whom I knew to have suffered from Kidney and Liver complaints; and, I assure the public, that the FAVORITE REMEDY has done its work with a similar completeness in every single instance, and I trust some other sick and discouraged mortal may hear of it and try the 'Favorite Remedy' as I did."

Dr. David Kennedy's FAVORITE REMEDY is not a disguised enemy of the human race; where it cannot help, it does not harm. FAVORITE REMEDY is a combination of vegetable alteratives. It does not heat nor inflame the blood, but cools and purifies it. In all cases of Kidney troubles, Liver complaints Constipation of the Bowels and the delicate derangements that afflict women, the action of FAVORITE REMEDY is beyond praise. Thousands of grateful people voluntarily testify to this in letters to Dr. Kennedy; and with a warmth and fullness of words which mere business documents and certificates never possess.

Miscellaneous.

RULES FOR RIDING.

Bob Burdette gives the following: In mounting, face the near side of the horse. The near side is the side nearest yourself. If you stand on the right side of the horse, which is the wrong side, when you mount you will face the crupper. Then everybody will know your name is Johan Gottlieb Ernsigelfolger if you cannot mount from the ground, lead the horse to a high fence, climb up on the fence, say "whoa" two or three times, and jump over the horse's ears. You will light somewhere on his neck, and you will have plenty of time to adjust yourself while the horse is running away. Another method of mounting, largely practised by young gentlemen from the city, is to balance yourself on one foot on the fence, and point the other leg at the horse, in the general direction of the saddle, saying "whoa" all the time. The horse, after this gesture has been repeated a few times, backs away, pulls the alleged rider off the fence, and walks up and down the lane with him at a rapid gallop. This gives the rider in about ten minutes all the exercise he wants for a week. If by some miracle you manage to get into the saddle, hold on with both hands and say "whoa." The faster the horse goes the tighter you must hold on, and the louder you must "holler." If you are from New York or Philadelphia, you will shorten the stirrups until your knees are on a level with your chin. Then as you ride you will rise to your feet and stand in the attitude of a man peering over a fence to look for his dog, and then suddenly fall in the saddle like a man who has stepped on a banana peel, This is the English school. It is hard on the horse but is considered very graceful. A man cannot wear false teeth, however, and ride in this manner.

SEPARATING THE SEXES.

A writer in the Quitman (Ark.) Light says: "Promiscuous sitting in church is a practice that should be condemned by all who go to the house of God to worship. Worship ought to be the purpose of every one who goes; but, alas, it is not so. There are no reasons to justify young, unmarried people for sitting in the same pew in the house of God. The rules of etiquette do not demand it; but rather the contrary. The influence of this practice operates against the worshiping." The gentleman is no doubt a pious man and evidently intends to worship with all the ardor of sincerity, but he would turn the alleged house of the Lord into a place of uncomfortable restriction. As a rule, in the country, when a young man accompanies a young lady to church, he conducts her to the door where he leaves her to find a seat if she can, and goes out under the trees, where he spreads out a blanket, and lolls around, talking about horses until "meetin' breaks," when he goes to the door and meets the young lady as she comes out. If the young man was allowed to sit in church with the young lady, he would not desert her at the door. If it is wrong for unmarried people to sit together, it is wrong for them to come together. It is wrong for them to live in the same neighborhood, and a committee of men with the Quitman gentlemen as Chairman, should be be appointed to keep the young people apart. It would be a good idea to have two churches, one for the men and the other for the women. These churches could be built with a narrow space dividing them, and the minister could march along and preach in at the windows.

ABOUT DREAMING.

A correspondent in a foreign scientific contemporary tells this story about dreaming: "In the Summer of 1882, when an undergraduate of Trinity College, Cambridge, I was permitted to reside in college rooms during the Summer long vacation. As fires were not wanted in our sitting-rooms it was customary for each resident's bedmaker or other officer to carry his water kettle for breakfast and tea to the college kitchen and bring it back with water boiling. On one occasion I had overslept my usual hour, and I dreamed a dream. I was at the gate of a country farmyard well known to me, and there came a long procession of horses, asses, oxen, hogs, sheep and all the animals usually to be found in a farmyard, followed by a north country drover, with his plaid crossed over his shoulders, who walked up to me and said: "Sir, I have brought your cattle." In an instant I perceived and actually heard, so intimately were the auditory sounds and the intellectual interpretation intermixed that my bed maker was at my chamber door calling to me: 'Sir, I have brought your kettle.' The hearing had been confused; there had been no reasoning, but there had been instantaneous vigor of creative imagination."

HOW EGYPT'S SICK ARE DOCTORED.

It is quite rare and exceptionable for persons suffering from disease to be seen during life by a medical man, unless it be a few of the better class, such as the Copts, Jews, Greeks and richer Moslems. The village barber is the registrar. He never, unless by chance, sees a patient during life. His functions apparently only come into operation after the death of the sick person, and, according to the statements made to him by the relatives or friends of the deceased, he enters on his register what he considers to be the cause of death, and then grants a permit for burial. It is on such a system as this that the vast majority of the mortuary returns of the country are based.

Sulphurous acid generated in cellars by the combustion of sulphur will destroy the germs which injure the flavor of cream and milk kept in cellars or outhouses. In damp cellars the butter product is seriously decreased besides being injured in quality.

Wanted—by a very few ladies only, seal skin sacks, dolmans and furlined circulars. No agents having them to hire for the season need apply.

Wanted—A steady, reliable umbrella, cotton preferred, that will not persist in being among the missing.

MR. PEABODY,

How are you? Have you ever been in Lynn? Yes—no! Well go there and don't you fail to go and see the fashionable Shoe Store

22 CENTRAL AVE,

LYNN.

The horse cars will leave you at the door, or it is only two minutes walk from the Eastern Railroad depot. It is one of the prettiest and cosiest little stores in Essex county. The proprietor,

JOS. A. STEIN,

shows excellent judgment in buying direct from the manufacturers and after comparing his fine selected stock with the Boston Stores, it will make you laugh to see his and groan to think you have been paying extravagantly for "foot gear." He carries

GENTS' BOOTS AND SHOES

all sizes and widths, all kinds of toes and prices varying from $9 to $2 a pair. You can't find a better if you hunted all over the state and at a reasonable price too, than at his store.

BOY'S SHOE,

LADIES,

If you are going to give your gentleman friends or relatives a pair of Slippers,

go and see the fine assortment he has on hand, or if you have your patterns all ready, bring them over and he will make them up for you in time for Christmas.

NEWPORT, R. I., Nov. 12, 1883.

J. D. & J. W. EATON. Dear Sirs: Enclosed please find check for amount of bill for CRAWFORD RANGE and Ware. It arrived last Friday noon, and we had it set up and a fire in it before four o'clock. We are more than pleased with it. All our cooking was done Saturday morning. It usually takes all day to do it. My wife thinks she shall take to cooking again herself, as it is real fun to cook with such a Range as the CRAWFORD. Hoping you may sell a great many more of them, and every purchaser be as well pleased as we are. I remain yours, very truly,

THE BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA

AND

THE SALEM ORATORIO SOCIETY

will give a course of FIVE CONCERTS the coming winter, three Symphony Concerts and two Oratorios, on the following dates:

Oratorio Elijah, Dec. 27.
Symphony Concert, Jan. 23.
Symphony Concert, Feb. 21.
Symphony Concert, March 13.
Oratorio, to be announced.

At the performance of "Elijah," Mr. George Henschel will sing the part of "Elijah;" and the following soloists are engaged for the other parts: Miss E. C. HAMLIN, of Albany, N. Y., Soprano, one of the leading Soloists at the Worcester Musical Festival in September last: Mrs. G. E. MERRILL, of Salem, Alto; and A. E. PENNELL, of Portland, Tenor; and other distinguished soloists will take part in all the concerts.

The price of tickets with reserved seats to the course has been fixed at $3.00. These tickets will be sold in the form of checks, and are now on sale at the store of Merrill & Mackintire, or may be obtained from any member of the Society. The sale of these checks will close on Saturday, Dec. 15.

On Monday and Tuesday, Dec, 17 and 18, all persons holding these checks can exchange them for course tickets with reserved seats at the drug store of Geo. F. ROPES & Co., 214 Essex street, after which dates the sale of course tickets will be open to the public. The sale will open on Monday morning at 7.30 o'clock, and each person will be limited to ten tickets.

A New Departure of the Popular New England Family Newspaper.

The Boston Weekly Journal,

Tried and appreciated by all readers, will be sent to single subscribers in 1884 for

One Dollar.

Or less than two cents per week. No change in Quality or Quantity

Ten Copies and one Extra Copy to the getter-up of Club $10

Twenty Copies and two Extra Copies to the getter-up of Club $20

An Extra Copy for every Ten Subscribers.

In the month of December, 1882, The Boston Daily Journal was reduced in price from $9 per annum to $6 per annum. It achieved almost from the start a decided success. We now reduce the price of The Boston Weekly Journal from $1.50 per annum to

One Dollar.

This reduction makes it the Cheapest New England Newspaper. There will be no abatement in the effort to make the paper more acceptable than ever to the people of New England. It will not be cheapened in any department, but it will be improved to meet the expectations of the Fifty Thousand New Readers.

Who we are confident will send in their names.

For less than Two Cents per week, postage prepaid, the reader will have a weekly newspaper of Thirty-six Long Columns, which will give him all the news of the day, Reports of the Markets; Articles on the Crops; Essays upon House Topics, by our own Contributor; What is going on in Boston, Musical, Monetary and Financial; Correspondence from all parts of the World, by our own correspondents. Manufacturing and Railroad News; Congressional Matters; Political Jottings; Editorials upon Live Topics. Associated Press Dispatches from all parts of the United States, and Current News from Maine, New Hampshire and Vermont, from our own resident correspondents.

Presidential Year.

The year 1884, which is the Presidential year, will be one of great interest. While The Journal is known as the leading Republican Newspaper of New England, it never fails to give full reports of the leading features of the campaign as presented by both parties.

No one need plead ignorance of what is taking place on account of the cost, for The Boston Weekly Journal has proved in the past, and will continue to be a great educator of the people of New England.

We part with gratification to the following opinions of The Journal:

The Journal is a clean paper, and there is never anything in its columns that can offend good taste or corrupt the morals of the young, at the same time it is fully abreast of the times in everything that pertains to first-class journalism.—[Boston Courier.

The Boston Journal is a credit to our journalism. Its tone is high, its conduct is able, its news is fresh, its telegraphic dispatches are admirable as well as strictly reliable.—[Boston Gazette.

The Journal is a candid, consistent, able and enterprising newspaper.—[Boston Times.

To great business sagacity in its management, The Journal adds a scrupulous regard for what is wholesome and manly in journalism. The influence of a great newspaper is far-reaching, especially upon society and in the home, and the reading public owe it to themselves to discriminate in favor of a newspaper of the abounding enterprise and high character of The Journal.—[Nashua Telegraph.

The Journal's prosperity, which is of substantial character, has been well earned by honest dealing with the public. It is in its fiftieth volume, more vigorous than ever.—[Philadelphia Ledger.

The Journal is one of the ablest and brightest papers in New England, and its splendid success is the best kind of a compliment to the discriminating judgment of its constituency.—[Philadelphia Press.

Harper's Bazar.

ILLUSTRATED.

Harper's Bazaar is at once the most brilliant and useful Household Journal in existence. It is the acknowledged arbiter of fashion in this country. Its fashion plates are the newest and most stylish; and its pattern sheet supplements and economic suggestions alone are worth many times the cost of subscription. Its illustrations of art needlework are from the best resources. Its literary and artistic merits are of the highest order. Its stories, poems, and essays are by the first American and European authors. Its choice art pictures would fill portfolios, and its numerous cuts are the most amusing to be found in any journal in America. A host of brilliant novelties are promissed for 1884.

WIDE AWAKE

(Only $2 50 a year.)

ADVANCE BULLETIN, 1884,

For Boys, Girls, and Everybody.

Starting at the source of good things, we give here a list of some famous contributors whose stories and poems and articles are already in hand for the coming year:

Elizabeth Stuart Phelps, Mrs A. D. T. Whitney, Mrs. Dinah Mulock-Craik, Edward Everett Hale, "H. H.," Susan Coolidge, Arthur Gilman, Lucy Larcom, E. E. B., Mrs. Catherwood, Rev. Charles R. Talbot, Mrs. Lucy C. Lillie, Margaret Sidney, George MacDonald, Lady Dunboyne, Mrs. Raymond Blathwayt (Annie Maggie), Mrs. Louise J. Craigin, Mrs. Lizzie W. Champney, Mary E. Wilkins, Mrs. Kate Gannett Wells, Prof. D. A. Sargent, Ernest Ingersoll, Marion Harland, Sarah Orne Jewett, Mrs. Clara Doty Bates, Elbridge S. Brooks, M. E. W. S. (Mrs. John Sherwood), Miss Amanda B. Harris, Sophie May, Mrs. Kate Upson Clarke, Margaret Eytinge, Rose Kingsley, Edwin D. Mead, Mrs. Susan Power, Mrs. Jessie Benton Fremont, Mrs. Sarah K. Bolton, Phillip Bourke Marston, Celia Thaxter, Nora Perry, Rose Hawthorne Lathrop, Mrs. A. M. Diaz.

ILLUSTRATED SERIAL STORIES FOR 1884:

I. A BRAVE GIRL. By Elizabeth Stuart Phelps, author of Gates ajar, Doctor Zay, The Story of Avis, etc.

II. A DISTRICT MESSENGER BOY. By James Otis.

III. PANSEY BILLINGS. By "H. H."

IV. PAMELA'S FORTUNE. By Mrs. Lucy C. Lillie, author of Prudence, etc..

V. HIS THREE TRIALS. A story for boys. by Mrs. Kate Gannet Wells.

VI. AN HISTORICAL SERIAL. (To begin in December.)

VII. IN NO-MAN'S-LAND. A wonder story for little folks. By Elbridge S. Brooks.

Among the purely pictorial attractions will be fine Frontispieces from the studio of F. H. Lungren, whose A-Maying and Winter Birds, in Wide Awake attracted so much attention in 1882. W. Parker Boulton will contribute a picture-serial, in fifty scenes and twenty-four interludes, entitled Through France in Sabots. Miss Jessie McDermott has prepared a novel set of twelve full-page pictures under the title, The Procession of the Zodiac. Joseph Pennell has sent from Italy some twenty interesting and beautiful drawings of Child-Life in Venice; Henry Sandham has contributed another series, illustrative of a Winter Carnival in Canada; and George Foster Barnes has just completed an alphabet of novel and artistic decorative initials.

Many valuable contributions, very pleasant reading for the curious, are in hand; among them two articles about Famous Dwarfs, and one about Famous Giants, by Isabel Smithson, illustrated by Edmund H. Garrett, from authentic sources; The Troubadours, by George Foster Barnes illustrated by the author; The Gypsies, by Mrs. Catherwood, giving much novel matter, the illustrations including drawings from life sketches made among the gypsie caves of Granada the past winter.

Edward Everett Hale will make an interesting contribution to historical literature, through Wide Awake, in the form of several articles entitled The Story of Boston Common, giving complete its curious early history, describing famous events and scenes connected with its green shades and malls, and narrating many tales and traditions, quaint but authentic. These articles will be fully illustrated.

Mrs. Clara Doty Bates, whose versifications in Wide Awake of various nursery tales, Silverlocks and the Bears, Three little Pigs, Little Red Ridinghood, etc., are received as the classic and standard form of these old favorites, has now put in verse Twelve of Æsop's Fables. These fables have a setting decoratively novel and richly pictorial.

Twelve of George McDonald's lyrics are being set to music by popular foreign composers, among them, Reinecke, Jadassohn, Rheinberger, Lachner, Jungmann and Cowen. These musical compositions have been secured for Wide Awake by Louis C. Elson, the musical editor, lately in Europe on that commission, and they will undoubtedly form the most notable of contributions to music for young folks.

In addition, there have been secured a brilliant line of short stories, travels, practical articles, illustrated poems, etc.; and when the attractions of the C. Y. F. R. U. Reading Course, with its seven series of pithy articles are taken into account, our readers, young and old, may feel assured of a year of rich entertainment.

Wide Awake is only $2.50 a year. Liberal terms to agents. Address D. LOTHROP & CO., Franklin street, Boston

NEW ENGLAND ONE PRICE SHOE HOUSE.

The Salem Cadet Band were not only able to send a good Orchestra to the large hall Monday evening, but one equally fine for the dance of the United Workmen in the small hall below. Notwithstanding the fact that both the play and the dance were in progress at the same time, neither disturbed the other. This is worthy of mention, and shows that both halls can be used at the same time.

Revere beach railroad stock must be in pretty good condition. It recently brought 97 1-2.

Benjamin McKean, while placing the bed of a glassing machine at Mr. A. B. Clark's shop caught his fore finger, bruising it so badly that it was amputated at the first joint by Dr. Pike.

A man named Driscoll, employed at Proctor's factory, while picking up bark in the freight yard, run a piece of railroad iron, nearly two inches long into his hand, making a painful wound.

The St. John's C. T. A. Society have organized a debating club with the following officers; President, Michael Ray; Vice President, Henry Claxton; Secretary, William McFarland.

We hope that the many lovers of good music who read our columns, have not overlooked the unusual opportunities for its enjoyment presented by the combined course of five concerts by the unrivalled Henschel Orchestra, and two by the Salem Oratorio Society, to be given in Salem during the present season. The first of these concerts will be the performance of Mendelssohn's great work, the Oratorio of Elijah, by the Salem Society on the evening of Thursday, Dec. 27th, when Mr. Henschel, himself, will take the part of Elijah, in which he has never been heard in this country, and the orchestral accompaniment will be played by members of the Henschel Orchestra. The great enthusiasm which has marked the rehearsals of the Oratorio Society for the coming concert, and the full ranks, nearly two hundred and fifty members, ensure a performance of this work of great excellence. The sale of checks which entitle the holder to select reserved seats on Monday and Tuesday, Dec. 17 and 18, will close on Saturday of this week, and we are requested to call the attention of those who hold checks, to the change of place of exchanging them for reserved seats to the drug store of Geo. F. Ropes & Co., 214 Essex street, Salem. We are informed that any person desiring to purchase checks can do so by applying to T. M. Stimpson at 14 Main street or at the store of B. F. Stevens during the present week.

The Ladies connected with the Baptist Society desire to express their thanks to the public for its patronage at their concert; to the friends outside the society who so ably assisted them, and to all who in any way helped to make the entertainment a success.

It is reported that the National Greenback Labor party have in contemplation the opening of Ashland hall as a headquarters for men out of employment. In that case any one desiring help either for a day or longer would know just where to find their man. It would also have the effect of keeping the men from loafing around bar rooms and other places where temptations abound.

STORY IN EIGHTEEN CHAPTERS BY

MERRILL & MACKINTIRE.

CHAPTER 1.

BOOKS.

Our success in the past with these, the best of all Holiday Souvenirs, has encouraged us to put forth greater efforts to give our patrons the choice of all the leading Juvenile, Miscellaneous, and Standard Books. We enumerate below a few of the hargains that we are offering:—

Getting Ahead, Pansies, Two Boys, 75 cent Books for 25 cents.

Wide Awake, $1.50 Books for 44 cts.

Peter Parley's Annual, 300 pages, with colored illustrations, $1.50 Book for 74 cents.

And a host of other bargains which must be seen to be appreciated.

CHAPTER 2.

FINE FANCY GOODS.

We flatter ourselves that the assortment of these, now on exhibition, is second to none in the county, and consists in part of Celluloid Sets, Nail Sets, Glove and Handkerchief Boxes, Ink Stands in every conceivable shape, Thermometers, Watch Stands, Ash Trays, Ladies' and Gents' Dressing Cases and Companions, on the line of goods. If we do say it, no house in his county can show you a larger assotment or quote you any lower prices.

CHAPTER 3.

Photograph, Albums.

The remarkable success attending our sales the past year, has encouraged us to put in a larger line than ever.

Lot No.	1,	25c,	never sold	less	than	40c
"	"	2, 67c,	"	"	"	1.00
"	"	3, 1.00,	"	"	"	1.25
"	"	4, 1.50,	"	"	"	2.00
"	"	5, 2.00,	"	"	"	2.50
"	"	6, 2.50,	"	"	"	3.00
"	"	7, 2.88,	"	"	"	3.25

And so we could go on giving prices up to $25 retail. Suffice it to say that if you desire to purchase a Photograph Album, we can save you from 20 to 25 per cent. The line embraces Padded Tops, Patent Catches, Round Corners, and all the novelties.

CHAPTER 4.

WALLETS. BILL BOOKS, CARD CASES, LETTER CASES.

PURSES, CIGAR CASES, FLAT SHOPPING BAGS, &c., &c.

We consider this our best department and have stocked it accordingly. Never before have we had the immense stock of the above goods, and varied enough in price and styles to suit all tastes, that we are to offer to you this season.

Wallets, from 10c to $7.00 each.
Bill Books, from 25c to $5.00.
Card Cases, from 25c to $3.00.
Letter Cases, from 25c to $5.00.
Purses, from 10c to $3.50.
Cigar Cases, from 25c to $5.00.
Flat Shopping Bags, from 75c to $4.50.

More kinds and more of each kind than any retail house in the State.

CHAPTER 5.

Christmas Cards.

From all the leading card makers of the world, ranging in price from 1 cent to $5 each. Acknowledged by all who have looked them over to be the choicest and largest collection ever shown here. Having a jobbing trade in these goods, it enables us to buy them in large quantities, and to see the complete lines of all the best manufacturers; and we feel sure, after an examination, you will with one accord, give our exhibit first rank over all others.

CHAPTER 6.

LITERARY CALENDARS.

Wholesale and retail. The line includes Bryant's, the most beautiful of all; Longfellow's, Emerson's, Shakspeare's, Day Unto Day, Scriptures, American History. All at popular prices

CHAPTER 7.

BLOCKS, GAMES AND PUZZLES.

More new Games this season than have been published for some years past, and we should be pleased to show them to you. Dominoes, Checker Boards, Backgammon Boards; the new Emca Puzzle, that is selling like hot cakes; Paint Boxes, from 5 cents to $1 each, and our Dollar Paint Box is the best one you ever saw for the money; Transparent Slates, "Fisher's Educational Toy; Money is a capital thing for the children."

Magic Lanterns—we have a right good one for one dollar.

Bicycle Race and Skating Rink—four new games in one. The most elegant Gams Board ever published.

CHAPTER 8.

WEST'S GROUPS & STATUARY

Similar in coloring and material to the celebrated Rogers Groups, only they are sold at prices that come within the reach of all. All the new ones, and the best of the old, from $1.50 upwards.

CHAPTER 9.

GOLD PENS, PENCILS, ETC.,

AND THE LATEST NOVELTIES IN PENCIL CHARMS

Our assortment for this season comprises the usual lines of staple goods, has been largely increased by the addition of many new goods suitable for the holiday trade, making our collection the richest and most inviting in the market.

CHAPTER 10.

OPERA & FIELD GLASSES.

What better or more lasting present for a lady or gentleman? and our assortment this year is larger and more varied than ever. Some beautiful glasses in Pearl at lower prices than ever before.

CHAPTER 11.

Autograph Albums, Card, Scrap and News Cutting Albums,

From 10 cents to $3 each. The 10 cent Album is a regular 25 cent book, and would be cheap at that price, but in buying a large quantity we were enabled to get them at the rock bottom price, and we propose to give our patrons the benefit of it. When you are in, ask to see them.

CHAPTER 12.

INK STANDS.

For the Library, Office, Counting Room, or School, in Glass, Bronze, Brass, Olive Wood, Leather, etc., in every conceivable shape, and marked at prices that will tell, and everybody will tell the prices.

CHAPTER 13.

FANCY BOXES OF STATIONERY.

Each containing 24 Sheets Note Paper and 24 envelopes. This being the class of goods that we sell the year round, we do not hesitate to lay in an immense stock at this time of the year. There are some of the choicest designs, this year, that we have ever seen put upon the market. They range in price from 5 cents to $5 per box. An examination of these goods will well repay you.

We have a two quire Box, with Envelopes, Marcus Ward's fine Linen Paper that we are selling for 50 cents.

CHAPTER 14.

Bibles, Prayer Books, Hymnals, and Catholic Devotional Books.

A splendid lot of the Teachers' Bibles, with Circuit Edges, at lower prices than ever before.

Last Spring we imported a lot of Catholic Prayer Books especially for the holiday, and we can safely say it is the most elegant lot of Books that can be found in this country. You must call and see for yourselves and be convinced.

CHAPTER 15.

DIARIES.

One, two, and three days to a page—a jobber's stock to select from.

CHAPTER 16.

KNIVES AND SCISSORS.

A first class stock of fine and medium priced Knives, that we can warrant.

Scissors in cases. No more useful present to give a lady than these, and the nicest lot to select from that we have ever been able to get.

CHAPTER 17.

Black Board and Printing Presses.

Quite a variety of Black Boards from $1.25 each upward.

The Novelty Printing Press, that we sell at $2.25. Any boy can soon get his money back and more too, for it is acknowledged by all who bought them last year to be a real bargain.

CHAPTER 18.

Music Rolls & Lap Tablets

Two very sensible presents, and as we have always had good success with them, we have a better variety this year than ever.

As our space will not allow us to further enumerate, we cordially invite you to come and look our stock over; we shall be pleased to show you the goods and quote prices.

Think it over!

Read it over!

VOL. 24. PEABODY, MASS., WEDNESDAY EVENING, DECEMBER 19, 1883. NO. 52.

WILMOT'S SUCCESS!

THE TALK OF THE PEOPLE AND ENVY OF CERTAIN NARROW MINDED COMPETITORS.

Ever since we came to Salem, our trade has been on the increase, in spite of a certain competitor, (better known for his loud talk and boast than for his deeds,) who said when we came to Salem, that he would drive us from the place inside of six months, but he should remember that we are not the kind to be driven, in fact it looks as though the boot was on the other leg. We are here to stay and we shall keep right on underselling any and all competitors, no matter if they go on the warpath every day during the week and twice on Sunday.

Business Is Booming!

And we are having a constant rush since we began our Mammoth Mark down Sale of

OVERCOATS, SUITS AND PANTALOONS.

In fact some would be big competitors almost die of grief and envy at the success we are having, for they know as well as the people that it is useless for them to try to compete with a manufacturer. But they try to rally by copying our advertisements almost word for word, talk never hurts anybody, figures tell every time, and it is Figures we shall give you, not talk. REMEMBER! That no competitor, no matter what he says, has any of our clothing, although they advertise to that effect.

200 Men's Heavy Fur Beaver Overcoats.

This is the same overcoat a certain competitor advertises for $1.75, and considers that a low price, we can sell ours a great deal less than $1.65, if we see fit, as we don't consider that we gain many laurels by selling such goods at any price. This is the only lot in our entire stock that is the same as our boasting competitor carries. We sell nothing but good clothing,

400 Men's All Wool Winter Overcoats.

Goods made by the well known Connotton Valley Mills and warranted all wool; the coats are lined with a warm woolen lining, are cut extra long and by our best patterns, made on honor, and would be a cheap garment at $14; never have been sold by us previous to this date at less price, but we are sometimes famous for bargains, and this is our sometimes. We shall sell what we have of these Coats to the first comers, of which we have all sizes, 35 to 42, at $4.00.

Certain competitors are advertising that they are selling this same coat for $3.90, but the fact is, the coat they advertise at that is not worth as much as our coat by $2. See for yourself; we advertise facts and not fiction.

300 Men's Full Weight Elysian Winter Overcoats,

Bound with fine Mohair Braid, lined with good durable lining, Silk Face. Velvet Collar, and the quality usually sold at $8 to $10; but this is a year of wonders.

☞ This coat cannot be purchased outside of our store at any price.

375 Fine black Elysian Overcoats, extra heavy weight, made and trimmed in good shape,—a good dress coat. Our price is $8.00.

If the coat can be purchased within two dollars of the price we advertise, at any other place, we will cheerfully refund the money paid for the same.

Large lot of Melton beaver overcoats, cut D. B. and S. B., ly front (equal in style and fit to any $35.00 Custom Overcoats), made and trimmed in extra fine shape, and a coat worth $15.00, but our price is $7.50.

The terror of competition and "THE WONDER OF THE AGE," is 150 Men's Heavy Winter Chinchilla Overcoats, cut D. B. and S. B., bound narrow, has a fine velvet collar, made in the best possible manner, and our price is $9.00.

If this coat can be bought outside of our store for $15.00 or less, we will cheerfully refund the money to anybody who has purchased of us.

200 Blue Beaver Overcoats, warranted fast color, lined with the best satine lasting, and guaranteed to be the best made and best styled overcoat in the city. This coat previous to now has been marked $18.00, but our price is now

Size 34 to 44.

"THE BEST YET." An extra fine, black, all wool, diagonal overcoat, made in the best manner, and sold by some of our competitors as a bargain for $16.50, but, as we are bound to lead in the bargain line, our price will be $14.50.

The difference between the above described coat and that so-called bonanza, by a certain competitor, is so apparent that any person wishing a really good coat would gladly pay four dollars more for ours, but we only ask two dollars. Examine them for yourself.

UNDERWEAR.

To-day, we begin a special mark-down sale of winter underwear, and we guarantee that we shall offer such bargains, that it will be a matter of the utmost importance for you to examine our stock.

Remember our prices are always the lowest of the low.

HATS AND CAPS.

We shall offer this week a splendid line of stiff and soft Hats, at 75 cents.

All of our other Hats to be closed out at greatly reduced prices.

☞ Examine them before you purchase, you will be able to make a great saving.

CUSTOM DEPARTMENT.

Here we have made a sweeping reduction, and we are able to make to order, overcoats, suits, and pantaloons at prices never before quoted by any tailor in New England.

PEABODY

Horse trading is lively!

Had your first sleigh ride?

Christmas next Tuesday!

About two weeks more of 1883!

Some call them "comet parties!"

Christmas decorations are going up!

Yesterday was the shortest day in the year.

The ice men were getting a little anxious.

"The cold winds did blow and we did have snow."

This is the last issue of the 1883 volume of this year.

Frosty mornings and beautiful days most of last week.

Our banks publish notices of their annual meetings.

The Unitarian Sunday school enrolls about 100 pupils.

The High school boys are talking of adopting a military cap.

Bell telephone stock declares 3 per cent for the quarter.

Work at the Essex Glue Company's factory closes at dusk.

The stationary engineers initiated a new member at their last meeting.

So mild was the weather, last week, that several parties did their fall plowing.

The shifter is being thoroughly repaired, and will soon be in running order.

We can generally tell a gentleman from a blackguard when we hear him talk.

Mr. B. D. Hill has an elegant bed of pansies growing under glass at his residence.

Starr C. Hewitt is telling the people by flyers what he has got for Christmas.

The Almanac's winter commences next Friday. Ours began last Saturday.

The old carpet factory at Tapleyville, is to be used for the manufacture of boxes.

The ladies' society of the Baptist church will meet at the vestry to-morrow afternoon.

On the approach of the holidays the foreign order business at the post office becomes brisk.

The police are having very little to do at present. Very few arrests and no disturbances.

Mrs. Calvin Lord and daughter, Mrs. Thomas Robson, have removed to Norman street, Salem.

Fine Florida oranges may be found at Geo. Stevens' fruit store. They are earlier than usual.

The next Unity Club meeting will be held at the residence of Mrs. John Culliton on Chestnut street.

Ice dealers say that there is a scarcity of water to freeze, and consequently the ice crop will be small.

The Republican National Convention will meet at Chicago, June 3, 1884. The campaign will open early.

Christmas stockings are to be made unusually large this year. Nothing smaller than a No. 10 will be worn.

In proportion as the tramp's spirits fell at sight of the snow last Monday, the spirit of the stablekeepers went up.

An aged lady while walking up the slippery sidewalk on Chestnut street, fell and was quite badly shaken up.

Mrs. Benjamin F. Upton sang at the Baptist Church last Sunday, taking the place of Mrs. Shaumway, who has resigned.

Don't forget that diary. Keep it faithfully for one year, and it will interest you more than any novel you ever read.

We were shown last Thursday a dandelion blossom in full bloom that was gathered on the sunny side of Bushby's hill.

A communication from "well wisher" did not find room in this issue. The point is well taken and the suggestion good.

A team belonging to Peter Morrin of Salem became frightened at the cars while standing on Railroad Avenue and ran away.

We haven't noticed any of our exchanges remarking that Christmas and New Year's fail to come on the same day this year, yet.

Call at Collins' cigar store for a holiday present for your husband. A smoking case, meerschaum pipe or cigar case would be appropriate.

Mr. William Stopford of the Central fish market has bought the fish market of Moore & Lamson, of Danvers. He now has a market in four towns.

Children have been forbidden to coast across the track at the foot of Franklin street, and the section hands will see that the order is enforced.

We will say for the benefit of those who don't know why the drinking fountains for equines are not supplied with water is that it is too low in the ponds.

Last Saturday a child named Masterson was badly bruised by falling the whole length of the stone steps at the new town hall, where it was playing with a companion.

Parties wishing anything in the Millinery line will strike a bonanza by calling at Sawyer's. He is clearing out the department for his elegant show of Christmas goods.

The regular Christmas vacation of the schools will begin next Monday night and continue until after New Year's day, as has been the custom in former years.

Mr. John Cullin will occupy the house recently purchased on Washington street by Mr. W. H. Brown. It is the Runlet house and was last occupied by Chief Peasley.

The New England Methodist Conference is expected to meet in Lynn in March next. Arrangements have been made to pay one dollar per day for the board of the members.

The play of Uncle Tom's Cabin is never tiresome. The characters have a world-wide reputation. The company at the New Town Hall is one of the best. Secure your seats at Spauldings.

As Christmas approacheth as a matter of course our Sunday schools increase in proportion. "Our boy" and several of his chums are going next Sunday.—They will try and join several schools.

The Eastern Railroad engineers have inspected the bridges and culverts along the Lawrence Branch and pronounce them in good condition. They will soon go over the South Reading branch.

There was a slight altercation on the corner of Main and Caller streets, last Friday evening, resulting in the flooring to mother earth of one of the men, who were both well known. No arrests.

Francis T. Morrill, formerly of Peabody, and at one time proprietor of the Derby House in Salem, died at the Danvers Asylum on Thursday evening. He had been an inmate for the past two years.

About this time there is an air of secrecy about the house, and mysterious packages are seen to disappear upon the approach of certain members of the family. Never mind Christmas will soon be over.

New Years' eve, Dec. 31st, Hallett & Hayes' Consolidated Minstrels and Old Folks' Concert Co., will hold the boards at the new Town Hall, under the management of the St. John's C. T. A. Society.

In dropping letters or packages into the mail boxes, it is important that full postage is paid by stamps affixed; and when in doubt, it is much better to add an unnecessary stamp than to have the mail matter detained.

By order of Supt. Foster of the Lynn and Boston Horse R. R., the trips leaving Lynn depot at 10 a. m. and 2, 3 and 7 p. m., and those leaving Peabody at 11 a. m., and 3, 4 and 8 p. m., will not run in heavy weather.

Thomas Sunrise, the Indian temperance lecturer gave an interesting lecture at Hibernian Hall last Thursday evening, a delegation of the Lynn reform club was present, speeches were also made by Isaac Hardy and Neil Shaw.

Friday night Abbey's Double Mammoth Uncle Tom's Cabin Company will appear in the new Town Hall. We are prepared to assure our readers that a rare treat is in store. There are over 25 people in the cast, and colored jubilee singers, with their melodies, will sing during different portions of the acts. There will be two Topsys and two Marks, and there will be no end of fun, besides the true business of this great and popular drama. Everybody will want to go. Seats at popular prices at Spaulding's Satisfactory arrangements having been made, the remainder of the free course of lectures will be given in the new town hall.

Tickets are selling readily to the coming fair of Union Post 50, G. A. R. The committee have sent a large number of them to comrades of other Posts to dispose of. Already one Post has reported all sold and a demand for more.

A two year old son of Mr. Frank Wilson, on Central street, died very suddenly last Monday morning. It was apparently as well as usual until within a few hours before its death. He was a bright little fellow and very forward for his age.

Perhaps the Standard Leather Measuring Machine Company have'nt got so "soft a snap" on Dave Winter, as they think. Just wait, there may be a machine on the market that will beat the other by considerable. "He laughs best who laughs last."

To-morrow evening the Universalists will have a dramatic entertainment in their vestry, which will merit the patronage of our readers. The admission will be 20 cents, and a very amusing farce, The Great Umbrella Case will be given.

Mr. Benjamin Wilson, brother of Mr. Warren Wilson, died at the Worcester Insane Asylum where he has been confined for many years. He was possessed of a large property and it was not spared in caring for his comforts. He was never married.

While you are enjoying your own Christmas remember that there are some about you who can only have a feast and good time on that day with assistance from others. A little help to some poor family will make your own Christmas the merrier.

We would announce to our advertising patrons and friends that we have connected the PRESS OFFICE by telephone, and we shall be ready at all times to receive their favors over the wire. Send in the news or give orders for job work—either will be acceptable.

Last evening a horse belonging to Daniel Haskell, attached to a light wagon, became frightened by the cars at the railroad station, and ran into a carriage belonging to John Pinder, springing the axle of the latter's and doing other damage. The horse was secured.

Rev. Mr. Chipman of the Baptist church, informed his people, last Friday night, that he should not be able to attend all his pastoral duties for a few months, as he has been called to settle his father's estate, which will necessitate his being out of town a part of the time.

The Danvers Mirror says: Dr. Stedman of the Asylum visited the Peabody almshouse this week to examine the insane patients, several of whom are confined there. A general inspection of the establishment was made and everything found to be in excellent condition.

Last Friday a horse attached to a cart came down Central street and was turned into Tremont street where he took the sidewalk. When near Wallis street a child had a narrow escape from being struck by the runaway. The horse continued down Northend street towards Salem.

Miss Nellie, daughter of the late John Dodge, died at her home on Lowell street, last Monday evening. She was a young lady loved and respected by all who knew her, and a large circle of friends will mourn her early death. She was seventeen years of age and had been a sufferer with consumption for some time.

Next week Thursday, the Essex Agricultural society will hold its first Farmers' Institute at the new town hall in this place. J. J. H. Gregory, of Marblehead, will speak at 9.30 a. m., of "Fertilizers" and in the afternoon President Ware on "Field Culture of Roots and Vegetables." The public are cordially invited to be present.

About 10 o'clock last Thursday, a resident in the vicinity of B. B. Humphrey's store on Washington street, hearing a crash, raised the curtain and saw a man standing near the side window of Mr. H's store. He immediately took his departure. Investigation showed that the glass had been broken by throwing a small tub against it. The object is doubtful.

Vesper Hymn.

Down on the hills, gently falling,
Comes the mantle of closing day.
And our souls on thee, Lord calling,
Thus to thee humbly pray.
For only on thee relying,
We offer our evening prayer;
And we pray thee, Lord, for Jesus' sake
To have us within thy care.

Thus while we are helpless sleeping,
And thine angels do watch our rest,
Grant thy care to our absent loved ones;
May they heed thy saving behest.
And ever, our Father, save them
From sin and from error's night,
And save them at last we pray thee
Within thy house of light.

And into our hearts, O Father,
Pour thine own balm of peace.
And if we should wake on the morrow,
Or die, as thou thinkest best,
O we pray thee, our Father, take us
Beneath thy sheltering wing,
That when heaven's morn shall wake us,
Thy praises we may sing.

And thine shall be all the glory
In songs that shall never end,
And far through the regions of heaven
Shall resound one great amen.

Selected Story.

UNCLE DAN'S ADVICE.

Edward Stone stood impatiently upon the top step of Uncle Dan's stately residence. There was not the faintest sign of life any-where around—the whole front of the house was closed and darkened, and having rung several times without eliciting any response, he was about to conclude that there was no one within hearing, when a head was thrust out of one of the upper windows.

'Young man, go round to the side door.'

Considerably startled by this unexpected address, the young man obeyed. Upon the porch, brushing away the leaves that covered it, was a young girl of fifteen. She looked very pretty as she stood there, the bright autumnal sunshine falling on the round, white arms and uncovered head. Setting down her broom, she ushered him into a medium-sized, plainly furnished room, which gave no indication of the reputed wealth of its owner.

The young man took a seat, brushed a few flecks of dust from the lapel of his coat, ran his fingers through his carefully arranged hair, and said:—

'Tell your master that his nephew, Edward Stone, is here.'

A faint smile touched the rosy lips and with a demure "yes, sir," and the girl vanished.

A few minutes later an elderly gentleman entered, with intelligent strongly-marked features and shrewd look in his eyes, which seemed to take the mental measure of his visitor at a glance.

'Well, sir, what is your business with me?'

'I am your nephew, Edward Stone.'

'So my daughter told me. What do you want?'

'I want your assistance.'

'Yes, but what do you want me to do for you?'

'I was thinking of going into business, and I thought I would come and talk it over with you, and ask you to give me a lift.'

'What better capital do you want than you already have? A strong, able-bodied young man wanting a lift! You ought to be ashamed of yourself! What have you been doing?'

Edward's face flushed at this unceremonious language, but feeling that he could not afford to quarrel with his wealthy relative, he gave no indication of it.

'I've been in a store since I left school, two years ago.'

'Saved nothing from your salary, I suppose?'

'No, it's only five hundred—not more than enough for my expenses.'

'Humph! You are able to dress yourself out of it, I perceive. I have known men to rear and educate a large family on five hundred a year; and if you have been unable to save anything, you certainly are not fit to go into business on your own account. When I was of your age my salary was less than three hundred, and I saved half of it. What business do you wish to engage in?'

'Stationery and books. Six hundred dollars will do it, as the owner is obliged to sell; a rare chance. I don't ask you to give me the sum, only to lend it: I will give you my note with interest.'

'Young man, I have several such papers already. You can have them all for five dollars; and I warrant you they will prove a poor investment at that. I can give you some good advice, though, which, if you d follow will be worth to you a good many times over the amount you ask. But you won't do it.'

'How do you know that?' said Edward with a smile, who began to feel more at home with his eccentric relative. 'I'd like to hear it anyway.'

'Well, here it is. Go back to your place in the store, and save three dollars a week from your salary, which you can easily do; learning, in the meantime, all you possibly can in regard to the business you intend to pursue. At the end of four years you will have the capital you seek, together with sufficient experience and judgment to know how to use it. And, better still, it will be yours, earned by your industry and self-denial, and worth more to you than ten times that amount got in any other way. Then come and see me again. You'd rather have my money than my advice, I dare say,' added Mr. Stone, as Edward rose to go; 'but we will be better friends four years hence than if I let you have it. Sit down, nephew; the train you will have to take won't leave till six in the evening. You must stay to tea. I want you to see what a complete housekeeper I have, and make you acquainted with her. Polly!' he called out opening the door into the hall.

In prompt obedience to this summons a rosy-cheeked, bright-eyed girl tripped in. The pretty pink dress had been exchanged for a pretty merino, but our hero did not fail to recognize her, and his face flushed painfully as he did so.

'Polly,' continued her father, 'this is your cousin Edward. He leaves on the six o'clock train; and I want you to make his short stay with us as pleasant as possible. Pollie is my little housekeeper,' he added, turning to his nephew: 'I hire a woman for the rough work, and she does the rest. When she's eighteen she shall have all the servants she wants, but she must serve her apprenticeship first. It may stand her in good stead; she may take it into her head to marry a poor man as her mother did before her. Eh! my girl?'

Mary's only reply was a smile and blush. Our hero was considerably embarrassed by the recollection of the mistake he had made; but the quietly cordial greeting of his young hostess soon put him comparatively at his ease.

At her father's request—who was very proud of his daughter's varied accomplishments—Mary sang and played for her cousin; and his visit ended in singular contrast to the way it commenced. Edward refused the five-dollar note tendered him by his uncle at the parting for his travelling expenses. The old gentleman smiled as he returned the note to his pocket-book.

'He's a sensible young chap, after all,' he remarked to his daughter, as the door closed after his guest. 'It is in him if it can only be brought out. We shall see, we shall see.'

'A good deal for father to say,' was Mary's inward comment, who thought her cousin the most agreeable young man she had ever met.

Three years later Mr. Stone and his daughter passed in front of a small, but neat and pleasant-looking shop, on the plate glass doors of which were inscribed the words, 'Edward Stone, Stationer and Bookseller.'

It being quite early in the day for customers, they found the proprietor quite alone; his face flushed with pride and pleasure as he rose and greeted them cordially.

'I got your card, nephew,' said the old man, with a hearty grasp of the hand, 'and called round to see how you were getting on. I thought it was about time I gave you that little lift you asked of me about three years ago. You don't look as if you needed it, though.'

'Not at present, thank you, uncle,' was the cheerful response. 'Curiously enough it is the same business I wanted to buy then. The man who took it had to borrow the money wherewith to purchase it, getting so much involved that he had to sell it at a sacrifice.'

'Just what you wanted to do.'

Edward smiled good-naturedly at the point made by his uncle.

'It isn't what I have done though. I have saved four dollars a week from my salary for three years, and so was not only able to pay the money down but had fifty dollars besides.'

'Bravo, my boy!' cried the old man with another grasp of the hand that made our hero wince. 'I'm proud of you; you're bound to succeed, I see, and without anybody's help. I told your cousin Polly that when she was eighteen I'd buy her a house in the city; that she could furnish it to suit herself and have all the servants she wanted, and I've kept my word. Come and see us whenever you can. You will always find the latch string out.'

Edward did not fail to accept the invitation thus frankly extended—a very pleasant intimacy growing up between the three during the twelve months that followed. Our hero's business had prospered until he began to think of removing to a larger place. His uncle had given him several liberal orders as well as sent him a number of customers, but said nothing about assisting him until Christmas Eve. Entering the cosy room where Edward and his daughter were sitting, he said,—

'I musn't delay any longer the lift I promised you, nephew.'

Edward glanced from the five-thousand dollar check to the lovely face at his side, and then to that of the speaker.

'You are very kind, uncle—far kinder than I deserve, but—'

'Speak out, lad! Would you prefer it in some other form?'

'Yes, uncle—in this.'

The old man looked keenly from one to the other.

'You are asking a great deal of me, nephew. Polly, have you been enouraging this young man in his presumption?'

'I am afraid I have, father,' was Polly's response.

'Then go, my daughter; I give you into worthy keeping; and if you make your husband's heart as happy as your mother made mine during the few short years that she tarried by my side, he will be blest indeed.

Book Notices.

GOLDEN FLORALS.—For the season of 1883 Messrs. Lee and Shepard have ready six important additions to their Golden Floral Series, than which nothing more beautiful in conception or more perfect in execution has ever been published for the price. "He Giveth His Beloved Sleep," an illustration of Mrs. Browning's touching poem, Home, Sweet Home,—a small quarto with full page illustrations from designs by Miss L. R. Humphrey, engraved by Andrews; "Abide with Me," a favorite poem by Henry Francis Lyte, the engravings for which are singularly appropriate and characterized by purity and elevation of sentiment. The Breaking Waves Dashed High, by Mrs. Hemans, which every body has read and admired. In the edition published by Lee and Shephard, the excellence of the poem itself is enhanced by the beautiful illustrations designed by Miss L. R. Humphrey, and engraved by Andrew. These pictures are in full keeping with the poem and exquisitely interpret its patriotic spirit. The book is issued by the publishers, not only in the original cloth binding, but also in the rich and gorgeous dress of the "Golden Floral." There is not one of the series that is not admiringly and eagerly sought for as one of the most appropriate gifts for the holidays that can be conceived. A full line of them can be found at Merrill & Mackimire's or H. P. Ives' Old Corner Book Store in Salem.

OUR DAILY BREAD.—Heavy and sour bread or biscuit have a vast influence through the digestive organs upon the measure of health we enjoy. How important to our present happiness and future usefulness the blessings of good health and a sound constitution are, we can only realize when we have lost them, and when it is too late to repair the damage. And yet, notwithstanding these facts, thousands of people in our own city daily jeopardize not only their health, but their lives, and the healths and lives of others, by using articles in the preparation of their food the purity and healthfulness of which they know nothing. Perhaps a few cents may have been saved, or it may have been more convenient to obtain the articles used, and the housekeeper takes the responsibility and possibly may never know the mischief that has been wrought. Pater familias may have spells of headache, Johnny may lose his appetite, Susie may look pale; if so the true cause is rarely suspected. The weather; the lack of out-door air, or some other cause, is given, and the unwholesome, poisonous system of adulterated food goes on. Next to the flour, which should be made of good sound wheat and not ground too fine, the yeast or baking powder which furnishes the rising properties is of the greatest importance, and of the two we prefer baking powder, and always use the Royal, as we thereby retain the original properties of the wheat, no fermentation taking place. The action of the Royal Baking powder upon the dough is simply to swell it and form little cells through every part. These cells are filled with carbonic acid gas, which passes off during the process of baking.

"A LITERARY REPUBLIC."—"Fifty millions of people, mostly fools," was Carlyle's pointed way of putting it. The now brilliantly successful Literary Revolution—which a few months ago was supposed to be permanently doomed—assumes the opposite, that people are not mostly fools, but that they want good books rather than trash, and the "Literary Republic" is the result. Every reader is a voter. Ballots in the first election are to be cast (by postal card), before January 1, 1884. The following are the first "candidates" for honors:

George Rawlinson.—"History of the Seven Great Monarchies of the Ancient Eastern World." In three large 12mo. volumes about 2,400 pages, with profuse and fine illustrations. Price reduced from $18 to $4. John Ruskin.—"Modern Painters" and "Stones of Venice." In five handsome 12mo. volumes, about 3,250 pages, with many illustrations. Price reduced from $30 to $5. Guizot and DeWitt.—"History of France from the earliest times to 1848." Translated from the French. Profusely illustrated. In five large 12mo. volumes, about 4,000 pages. Price reduced from $36 to $5. Henri Van Laun.—"Complete History of French Literature." In two large 12mo. volumes, about 1,000. Price reduced from $7.50 to $1.50.

The candidates stand separately. Vote for those you want, one or all. It will take 10,000 votes to elect. The 10,000 being received, the books described will be published during the present winter on the terms stated. No money is asked in advance. You can receive and examine the books before paying for them. A specimen number of the Irving Library giving samples of type, paper and other particulars, will be sent free to any applicant. Address John B. Alden, Publisher, 18 Vesey St., New York.

Demorest's Monthly for January, 1884, is an unusually entertaining number, and exceedingly rich in illustrations. Among the articles of interest may be mentioned "On The Thames,", "Sentiment and Science on Philanthropy," by the Rev. O. B. Frothingham; "How We Live in New York," by Jenny June, and "The Home of Dorothy Vernon." The interesting serial "The Shores of Nothing" is continued, and "The World's Progress" and other departments are full, useful, and varied. The frontispiece is a fine steel engraving of Sir Frederick Leighton's celebrated painting, "Wedded."

The North American Review for January presents a table of contents possessing in the highest degree the character of contemporary human interest. First the opposite sides of the question of Ecclesiastical control in Utah, are set forth by two representative men, President John Taylor, the official head of the Mormon Church, and Gov. Eli H. Murray, Governor of Utah Territory. Senator John I. Mitchell writes of the "Tribulations of the American Dollar." In an article entitled "Theological Re-adjustments," the Rev. Dr. J. H. Rylance insists upon the necessity of eliminating from the formularies of belief and from the current teachings of the churches, all doctrines which have been discredited by the advance of exegetical scholarship and by the progress of natural science. Senator Henry W. Blair advocates a submission to the people of an amendment to the United States Constitution prohibiting the manufacture, sale and importation of intoxicating liquors. Finally the subject of "Bribery by Railway passes" is discussed by Chas. Aldrich and Judge N. M. Hubbard. Published at 30 Lafayette Place, New York and for sale by booksellers generally.

The Royal is made from pure grape acid, and it is the action of this acid upon highly carbonized bicarbonate of soda that generates the gas alluded to; and these ingredients are so pure and so perfectly fitted, tested and adapted to each other, that the action is mild and permanent, and is continued during the whole time of baking, and no residue of poisonous ingredients remains to undermine the health, no heavy biscuits, no sour bread, but if directions are followed, every article prepared with the Royal Baking Powder will be found sweet and wholesome.

This is the season of the year when the Editor's room is bombarded by specimen "Washington Letters" and propositions to furnish them regularly. Taken by and large, for publication they are worth about 4 cents a cord: for paper rags one cent a pound.—Woburn Journal.

PEABODY.

The grand rally in the new Town Hall last Sabbath evening was a success in every particular. The chorus choir of the South Church, with additions, under the direction of Prof. Bill, were present, and an orchestra under the direction of R. L. Reinewald, leader of the Salem Brass Band. The clergy of our different pulpits were seated on the platform. The exercises commenced with a selection by the orchestra, followed by "Nothing but leaves" by the choir, to the accompaniment of the piano and orchestra. Rev. Mr. Smith read selections of scripture, followed by a prayer by Rev. Mr. Sprague. Rev. Mr. Sperry then announced in behalf of the lecture committee of the Peabody Institute, that the remaining lectures in the Free Course would be given in the new Town Hall, and he also announced that a collection to help defray the expense of the meeting, would be taken up. A song was then rendered by the double quartette of the South Church, Mrs. B. F. Upton taking the solo, followed by "America" in which the audience were requested to join. Charles A. Haskell, Esq., then stepped forward, and, in fitting words, introduced the speaker of the evening, Gen. John L. Swift of Boston. Gen. Swift, after announcing his subject, observed that it was many times to our advantage and honor to say "no," decidedly and emphatically, when asked to indulge socially in the wine cup—not so much for our personal benefit as for the example—and when asked to cast a ballot to legalize the rum traffic. There should be no evasion. There should be an absolute divorce from all participation in it. The speaker related his experience in the state of Iowa, where he had taken part in a contest on this great issue. He found that this question—this issue—was the only thing the people cared to hear, and by a majority of 25,000 or 30,000 they had gained the victory against license. He referred with pride to the record of this state. They had a Capitol building costing over three millions of dollars—they had no debt—they spent five millions for educational purposes, and only fifty years ago it was a wilderness. What a leap forward in half a century! The battle she fought is a battle that is to be fought everywhere. It is the home against the saloon. The speaker knew what home meant, and the children of the homes of this country were the hope of the world. He alluded to the members of the Peabody Band of Hope who were present, as showing that the community put the proper estimate on the rising generation. The crusade of the women of the West against the saloons, started a movement which will never end. A sheaf of wheat goes in two directions—either to the mill or the still—in the one case bringing peace and happiness, in the other moral ruin and death. This strikes at the root of the whole matter—we must put our homes before the saloon,—if for no other reason, because the latter is so profitable to the undertaker. Gen. Swift referred to the different theories of government, but the best definition of a good government he had ever heard was one which made it easy for a man to do right and hard for a man to do wrong. The temperance people are here met by those who talk sumptuary laws—an issue which the speaker said was dead—and of which those who brought it forward knew no more than of the transit of Venus. These men say give us a license law, and make it as strong as you please—the stronger the better—and we will see it enforced, and the Legislature gave the towns and cities the option to sell rum or not. The speaker wanted no man to tell him about this law—he who came from a city where there were 3000 saloons, which spent twenty-five millions of money annually over the bar, which sends every night on the late trains drunkards to the suburban towns, where the license commissioners have demonstrated that the saloons were increasing every day, where the police commissioners report that the arrests for drunkenness exceed this year that of any year since the inauguration of the city. The law says no liquor shall be sold to minors. Over 5000 minors have been arrested the past year for drunkenness. It says none shall be sold to women. Women are arrested every day for drunkenness. It says none shall be sold on the Sabbath, yet Monday mornings the court room is crowded with the victims. This stamps as false the success of the license or option law. There never was a blacker falsehood than that the open sale of intoxicants would benefit the community. The speaker reiterated that the test of this government is to be fought on this line—between the home and the saloon. He referred to the fact that in Boston alone was found a school committee that would close up a school house that saloons may be opened. Schools to the rear—saloons to the front. Gen. Swift referred to the Great Fairs in Boston, where farmers, merchants and manufacturers brought forward the products of their skill, or the work of their hands. There are 11,000 saloons in this state. They take in more money than any single institution, more money is spent than is spent for sugar, or flour, six times as much as for education. Did any one ever see the product of these saloons? Let us have a little exhibition. Let us call in these 11,000 saloon keepers and ask them what they sell. They will tell you they sell alcohol in some form. What is alcohol? They tell you it is something nice to take. Science and the physicians say it is disease and death—moral and physical. What result do they show? Greater taxes to support crime; an increase of idiocy and mania and pauperism. They show also men at the ballot box asking for this evil to go on. The speaker dared not countenance any business that makes a profit by the wrecking of a human soul. But it is objected that we have no right to close up the saloons, and prohibit a man from drinking if he desired s o to do. The speaker frankly admitted that there was no right, unless we believed in the fatherhood of God and the brotherhood of man. If you believe that, you have a reason, or in the American doctrine that our government is for the benefit of all—of each for all the rest. The contrary belief is well enough for a monarchy, but it is not of those who live under the American flag. The saloons have not a ghost of a chance, under that flag. When fighting against the saloons we are still fighting for the old flag and for the old land. At the close of Gen. Swift's address, which was listened to with close attention, the Battle Hymn of the Republic was sung and the benediction pronounced by Rev. J. W. Hudson.

The fair inaugurated by the ladies of the Universalist Church, held in their vestry Thursday and Friday afternoons and evenings, was a success, as everyone acquainted with the resources and ingenuity of the ladies of that parish must have been aware. Early in the week a paper called the "Bazaar Notes" advertising the fair and its attractions was circulated about our streets, and from that time to the opening, preparations were in order for the good time which was surely coming. The vestry presented a most attractive appearance, the different displays being arranged under booths, which were of themselves a marvel of artistic arrangement. On the left, and the first to attract the eye, was the flower booth, and if the visitor was able to get as far as this booth without being made aware of its existence by the young ladies with button hole bouquets, he was fortunate. Next came the American table or booth, which was covered with our national colors and a liberal supply of bunting. At this booth was displayed fancy articles of every description, which evidently found a ready sale. Next to this in the corner, was the art gallery, of which the committee was A. H. Merrill, C. E. Teague, Mrs. J. N. Burbeck and Mrs. S. Chadwick. A catalogue of the attractions was furnished each visitor, and it proved to be no small portion of the entertainment to the company. On the opposite side was the Japanese booth, which was highly complimented by Prof. Morse of Salem. All that seemed to be lacking was to have had the attendants attired in the costumes of that country. But it was visited by every one, and was an object of much comment and curiosity. Nearest the door on the right was the Swiss booth, made of lattice work and a straw roof, where were sold toys and small articles. In the library was an express office, where Capt. Wiley presided as the veteran expressman, and we understand the business under his management was very successful. On Thursday evening a supper was furnished, and on Friday evening coffee, in after dinner cups, with the cup and saucer free to the purchaser as a souvenir. On this evening was also given an entertainment, consisting of a violin solo by Master Quint, and a poem in character, called the "Decorative Sisters." During the progress of the fair Rev. and Mrs. Sprague received a fine steel engraving, with metallic finish, entitled "Village Elms on Sunday Morning," a gift from the ladies of the parish. It was a great surprise to both Mr. Sprague and his wife. There was also offered for sale during the fair, copies of their "Tested Receipts" a new edition of which had been printed. About three hundred and twenty dollars was netted from the entire fair.

The Clinton Courant says: Rev. Albert Gould, not having had any vacation since he came to town in the spring of 1882, has in contemplation a couple of week's absence in January.

The illustrated lectures in Mechanic Hall, by Harry W. French, under the management of N. W. Andrews, are meeting with much encouragement. Two lectures have been given, the one last evening being on the "Wild New England Coast."—The three remaining are to be given Tuesday evenings, Jan. 1st, 8th, and 15th, 1884.

The Republican Headquarters have been let to a party of young men, as a club room.

JOHN P. FERNALD, ALBERT VITTUM,
Editors and Publishers.

ONE OF the advantages of our new town hall was clearly demonstrated last Sabbath evening. An audience limited only by the size of the immense hall was gathered to listen to the address of Gen. Swift, on the subject of temperance. We do not claim that the interest in the subject—to any greater extent than usual—brought together the vast assemblage. Had the same eloquent speaker delivered his address in the largest of our churches, there would have been an abundance of room—and to spare. But it was the increased attraction of the place and time, coupled with the fact that all our citizens of every class and every creed felt that they were equally welcome under its roof. It may be true that they would be equally welcome at any of our churches. But they do not feel so. And so it happened that General Swift spoke to an audience that any man would feel proud to address.

This leads us to a suggestion which is worth the consideration of our pastors, if they would speak to audiences which they could not gather in their respective churches. We believe that a series of union services, in which all the churches could unite, and at which each pastor in turn could preach a sermon to the masses, on living, burning subjects, without sectarianism, and with the attraction of good music, would not only attract the people in large numbers but would be a power for good in the community. People would be reached who scarcely, if ever, are seen in our churches. And surely, our elegant and spacious hall could not be used for a better purpose.

Our neighbor of the Reporter, in a half column article, pretends that he is "amazed" at the "coolness" of some people because they ask him to make a local of their entertainments, and have their printing done at this office. He says, "but to those narrow minded mortals who expect us to serve them without any recognition of business principles, probably because we do not happen to be of their particular faith or kin, we must say that we shall expect regular advertising rates, etc." Now, neighbor, this is the way we do it. Our paper and our job department are as separate as two different offices. Whatever is of a local nature and we believe would be interesting news to our readers will always find room in this paper. While we write, before us on our desk are tickets to at least two entertainments which we were pleased to notice because they were of interest to our readers. We know that the tickets, as well as the rest of the printing, was done at "the other office," but our readers were interested and we are very glad to give the items.

Yesterday morning Mr. Stoddard, in the employ of W. P. Upham of West Peabody, was driving a team around the corner by the South church, just as Skinner's train on the Reading Branch was leaving the depot for Boston. The horse became unmanageable, and instead of going forward, backed into the train. A boy who was on the runners, was thrown on the track, and if Engineer Kenney had not stopped the train, could hardly have escaped being run over.

Demosthenes, the greatest orator of the Old World, could not speak plainly at 12 years; Daniel Webster, the greatest orator of the New World, cried when required to "speak a piece" in school.

At last Barnum has secured his white elephant. Happy Barnum! "There's millions in it!"

Christmas Services.

At the South Church next Sabbath, Rev. Mr. Sperry will preach in the forenoon a sermon appropriate to the Christmas season. Sunday evening there will be a Sabbath School (Christmas) Concert in the vestry. Christmas evening (Tuesday) there will be provided an entertainment for the children in the vestry, at which there will be stereopticon views and other attractions.

At the Unitarian Church there wil be a Sabbath School Concert appropriate to Christmas Sunday morning at the usual hour, to which the public are cordially invited. In the afternoon the pastor, Rev Mr. Hudson, will preach a sermon appropriate to the occasion and the choir will sing the following selections of music:

There were Shepherds, Thomas
Chant, Pine
Introit, Duet.
Misses Dalton and Felt.
Hymn.
Carol, Hark, hark my Soul, Barnby
Hymn,
Miss Grace F. Dalton, Soprano.
Miss Minnie K. Felt, Contralto

Mr. S. P. Chase, Bass.
Mr. Francis Upton, Organist.

Christmas Eve (Monday) an Operetta will be performed in the Chapel by members of the Sabbath School, and presents to the children will be distributed by Santa Claus in person.

At the Universalist Church, Rev. Mr. Sprague will preach a Christmas sermon at 2.15 P. M. The following selections will be given by the choir under the direction of W. P. Clark, Esq.:

Anthem, Solo, Day of sweet Memories Dow
Hymn, Song of the Angels of Bethlehem, Corwood
Response, How lovely are the Messengers, Mendelssohn
Hymn, Calm on the listening Ear of Night. Sears
Christmas Anthem, Glory to God. Davenport
Miss Nellie Hutchinson, Soprano.
Miss Anna Hubon, Contralto.
Mr. W. P. Clark, Tenor.
Mr. Frank W. Taggard, Bass.
Miss Nellie Bartlett, Organist.

In the evening there will be a Christmas Concert by the Sabbath School. On Christmas Eve (Monday) there will be a children's Festival given to the Sabbath School by the Murray Club in the vestry. The entertainment will probably be some pictures on a screen and ice cream and cake will be furnished.

At the Methodist Church the pastor will preach an appropriate sermon at 2.15 on Sunday. On Monday evening the Sabbath School will have a Christmas exercise in the vestry in connection with which there will be a Christmas Tree.

At the Baptist Church it is expected that Rev. Mr. Chipman will preach at the usual hour of service on Sunday. On Monday evening the Sabbath School will have a Christmas tree in the vestry.

Rev. Mr. Colwell will preach next Sabbath in the forenoon at West Peabody, and the afternoon at So. Peabody. In the evening at So. Peabody there will be a Christmas Bible reading and praise service. The Rockville Sunday School have a Christmas tree and exercises Monday evening in the vestry. The West Peabody Sunday School have a tree and Christmas service in the hall on Christmas night.

At the St. John's Church the music will be of a high order under the direction of Chas. A. Clark. The first mass will be sung by a choir of children, also the Adeste. At the last mass will be sung the Imperial Mass by Haydn, at the Offertory the "Adeste" as arranged by Novello, and the hymn before the sermon, arranged by Lewis, all voices in unison. The music at Vespers will be as follows:

Adeste, Novello
Magnificat, Est
Alma Wilcox
O Salutaris Stearns
Tantum Ergo, Rossi
Laudate Dominum.

At the St. Paul's Church there will be the following services for the Christmas season. Sunday services, Matins, Litany and Sermon at 10.15 A. M. Evensong and Sermon at 7 P. M. Christmas Day, Matins and Holy Communion at 8.30 A. M. Friday, Dec. 28th, Festival of the Holy Innocents, Evensong with address, 7.30 P. M.

Quite a little excitement has been created in the Western part of the town, by a private letter to the chairman of the school board, by Rev. J. W. Colwell, protesting against, at the request of some of his parishioners, the using of the West Peabody school house for dancing purposes. This hall was partly finished by the religious society there, and a platform erected and meetings held regularly. The hall was let last winter for dancing and parties of questionable character from Danvers, Lynnfield and South Peabody attended, liquors were drank on the premises, and empty "smugglers" were picked up by the school children the next morning. Against this and this only, do the people protest; not against the using of the hall by West Peabody people for their own enjoyment, but for the good of the community. The letter has had the desired result as the committee has placed the letting of the hall in the hands of a sub-committee who will consider the class of entertainments before giving them the use of the hall.

The word "dun" (to demand) owes its origin to Jeo Dun, an indefatigable collector in the time of Henry VII.

PEABODY.

We have to record the decease at the good old age of 81 years, of our well known citizen, Franklin Osborn, which occurred at his late residence on Oak street, Sabbath forenoon. Mr. Osborn was born in this town, in the house on Central street now occupied by H. M. Osborn, the grocer, Feb. 9. 1803. He had three brothers and four sisters, only one of them, Mrs. Cheever, who was the youngest of the family, survives him. His early trade was that of a potter, at which he worked until he was twenty years of age, when he went into the tanning business with his brother Kendall, at a shop in front of Dodge's blacksmith shop, between the Tuft's house, and that now occupied by E. A. Blaney. In 1828 he removed to Foster street and continued in the business until 1864, when he was succeeded by his sons, Franklin, Jr., Joseph and John, forming the present firm of F. Osborn, Jr., & Co. Mr. Osborn was in the leather business when it was conducted differently from the present system. The leather was mostly sold from the shops here in town directly to the manufacturers, without the profit which now goes in a measure to the middle-men. As the founder of the present firm, he was well and favorably known to the trade not only at home but in Boston, and a goodly delegation from this city was present at his funeral. Mr. Osborn was the second treasurer of the Peabody Institute, succeeding the late Eben Sutton. He was also one of the original directors of the Warren Savings Bank, and up to the time of his last illness could be seen mornings at that Bank, where his presence and genial temperament was always welcome. He was also a trustee of the Peabody Institute and treasurer of the Monumental Cemetery. Mr. Osborn was a member of the South Church, and was greatly interested in all that pertained to its ancient history, or the history of the town in his boyhood's days. He furnished for these columns an account of Main and Central streets 50 years ago—which was of great interest to our readers, and had in contemplation the continuation of the history in different parts of the town. Mr. Osborn lived a modest and upright life,—no man among us had fewer enemies and more friends. He leaves five children, three sons, Franklin, Joseph and John, and two daughters, Mrs. B. F. Southwick and Mrs. Geo. T. Poole, of Somerville. His funeral was observed yesterday, Rev. Mr. Sperry officiating.

A shocking accident occurred in Mrs. Towne's room in the Center school this forenoon. The particulars of the case are as follows: A boy about ten years of age, named Edward Danahy, was attempting to remove the ball from a cartridge, with a piece of hoop skirt wire, when it exploded completely, severing the end of the thumb and all but the little finger of his left hand, making a horrible wound. The index finger and thumb of the right hand was also shot off. There were pieces of the shell in his face in thirteen different places.

A boy named Charles Cassidy, who occupied the seat in front of Danahy, turned to see what he was doing receiving portions of the shell in his face and hands, and a piece entered the corner of his left eye. Mr. J. K. Cole, the principal of the school, and Mr. Edward Trask assisted the boys to Dr. Shanahan's office. After washing the blood from the wounds the doctor took them to the Salem Hospital. Danahy was etherized, and his thumb on he left hand was cut off at the first joint; the next two fingers at the hand and the third at the middle joint. The end of the thumb and the first joint of the index finger of the right hand was also removed. The recovery of the boy is doubtful. Cassidy was taken to Dr. Coggin, who was unable to say whether the boy would lose the sight of the eye or not, as there is a piece of shell to be removed.

The private party in Upton's Hall last evening, under the management of Wm. Farnham and Wm. Flanigan, was a success in every particular. A large party, good music and successful management, made it one of the most enjoyable parties of the season.

The balcony seats, especially in the front row, of our Town Hall, are the first seats to sell. The reason is obvious—the footlights and the netting over them are about eighteen inches too high, and obstruct in a measure the view from the front seats on the lower floor.

There is a possibility, we learn, of there being a first class concert in town next month, at which Miss Lizzie Webb Cary will appear. Miss Cary is winning an enviable position in Boston. She was the vocalist at the last recital of Geo. E. Whiting, in Tremont Temple, and has been heard several times by the Raymond excursionists at Washington, and Newport. She is soprano in Dr. Patterson's church in Boston Highlands, and a pupil of O'Neil, the teacher of Lillian Norton.

The ball committee selected some two weeks ago, for the four companies in the brick house, to make arrangements for the Union ball, met at an adjourned meeting and voted to hire the Salem Band Orchestra of seven pieces with R. L. Reinwald as leader. Van Vranken, the Salem caterer, was the choice of the committee, and he will furnish the supper at 50 cts. per plate. The printing was put into the hands of a committee of one to procure two samples and prices, and report at an adjourned meeting the first of February. The price of tickets was set at $1 per couple, and tickets will be found for sale by members of the different companies in the house the first part of February. The question of the hall was left with the former committee, who will probably engage Upton's hall. The reputation of last year's ball will help the sale of tickets and secure a good crowd.

HOME HAPPENINGS.

Last Thursday was a red letter day among the Masonic fraternity in this town, it being the seventy-fifth anniversary of that ancient and honored institution. For a number of weeks past, known Masons have been observed in earnest conference on the street corners and at divers places, and the uninitiated were carefully excluded from the impromptu (as it were) gatherings. They were also carefully excluded from the anniversary exercises. But from a word dropped here and there, and the publication under Masonic authority of a portion of the address and other exercises, we take it for granted that there were some things that transpired there which it is privileged the uninitiated to know. The exercises consisted of music by the Salem Cadet orchestra, an address of welcome by W. M. S. Augustus Southwick, an address on the topic of the hour by Rev. E. C. Bolles, of Salem, music on the piano by Miss Grace Stevens, and readings by Wyzeman Marshall, the well known and once favorite actor. The address of Dr. Bolles was pronounced a masterly and eloquent attempt, as might be expected from the well known ability of the speaker. He referred to many of the aged fathers of the lodge, Gen. Sutton, N. P. C. Patterson, H. O. Wiley, Bro. Low and Fitch Poole. At the close of the literary exercises the audience was taken to the corridor, where a collation had been prepared by caterer Wentworth, of Salem. After this had been thoroughly discussed there were more readings by Mr. Marshall, and some remarks by District Deputy G. M. Welch, of Danvers. The committee having in charge the affair were D. P. Grovenor, John C. Jodrey, Lawrence Purtell, Geo. Randall, Herbert P. Reed.

The residence of Mr. Fred Wagner was the scene of a very happy event last Sat. eve no less than the uniting in marriage of Mr. Thomas Bank of Windham, Minn. and Miss Ellie Waterman of Lunenburg, N. S. The ceremony was performed at seven o'clock, in presence of a number of invited guests, the Rev. Mr. Walker officiating. The bride was dressed in garnet satin, white lace and tea roses, and looked very lovely. After the customary congratulations were offered, an inviting lunch was served and the evening passed most enjoyably. The bride and groom were the recipients of some very pretty wedding souvenirs and take with them to their western home the best wishes of many friends.

Last Thursday morning our citizens were supprised to hear that Mr. Joseph Fenderson had suddenly died. He appeared to be in his usual health the day previous, but towards night was taken ill. Mr. Fenderson came to this town when a young man, from Parsonfield, Maine, and was engaged, during his life, in the business of tanning and currying, from which he retired some years ago—his health not permiting him to pursue the business. He was a faithful and consistent member of the South Church in this town, from the membership of which, as well as from the nearer circle of home and friends, he will be greatly missed.

The parlor entertainment under the management of Misses Nelson, of Salem, in the Peabody Institute, last Thursday evening, should have been better encouraged. There were no less than five different entertainments going on at the same time that evening, which doubtless accounts for the smallness of the audience. But those that attended were amply repaid for their patronage. Master Quint is developing a remarkable proficiency on the violin, and the Misses Nelson were the recipients of hearty favor.

Don't miss the free street parade, Friday, by the Uncle Tom's Cabin Co. There will be a band, little Eva on her pet pony, Marks and his educated donkey, bloodhounds, colored jubilee singers and other attractions. And when you have seen it, don't fail to be at the new town hall in the evening, where Uncle Tom's Cabin will be brought out with all its splendid effects.

The Enos Attatchment Co., of Peabody, who have invented and placed on the market a humane invention for saving limb, and sometimes life, of operators on the splitting machine, have improved the attatchment by placing one roll above the other, and are putting a great many on the Union machines. Mr. Rufus H. Brown, the tanner, of Peabody, is the leading promoter of the enterprise.—Shoe and Leather Reporter.

The ladies of the Unity Club have decided to hold their leap year party in Upton's Hall—the members of that club not favoring the idea of eating their supper in the corridor, as the town fathers have decided that the town hall is too good to be used for such purposes. We think the decision of the club a sensible one.

Mr. Joshua Buxton, the oldest and a respected citizen, died at his residence on Central street, last Sunday afternoon, at the advanced age of 98 years, 5 months. Deceased was a native of this town, being born on Central street in the house now occupied by Charles G. Folsom. From boyhood, he followed the occupation of gardener; was married, and some 5 years ago he lost his wife and since that time has been gradually failing. A short time since, he had an attack of pneumonia which was very severe, and this, no doubt, was the immediate cause of his death. He leaves three children to mourn his loss, two sons and a daughter; Henry V. Joshua, and Mary J. Previous to his death he was a great sufferer, but passed his last moments quietly. The funeral occurred this afternoon at 2 o'clock.

Taken in connection with the use of the hall for the Peabody Institute Lectures and the week for which it is engaged by the Grand Army, our large hall is booked for a goodly number of evenings ahead, and will yield quite a little revenue to the town. We understand that it is the intention of the Post to run a series of entertainments on each night of the Fair, in the large hall, thereby adding to the interest. Probably the opening evening will be devoted to a concert by the Salem Brass Band, and one of the other evenings a concert of war songs similar to that given by the Post in the Institute, is contemplated. There are to be other attractions which will be duly announced.

Mr. William Sutton, son of the late Maj.-Gen. Sutton, and a brother of Brig.-Gen. Eben Sutton, of No. Andover, died at his residence, in Salem, Wednesday morning, at the age of 53. He was for many years a prominent citizen of this town, and conducted the wool business in "Pool's Hollow," established by his father, until recently. The deceased was a member of the veteran corps of the Salem Cadets, and of the Masonic fraternity. He leaves a widow and three children. A few years ago, for quite a time, he was connected with Sutton's Mills; the concern suspended operations Wednesday forenoon. He was a sincere, genial and frank gentleman. The employes of Sutton's Mills sent a magnificent floral tribute to his late home.

Of course a rehearsal is not the place to judge any musical organization, but as we have been invited to attend such an entertainment we may later be called upon to give our opinion of it. We are talking about a rehearsal by the Peabody Amateur Orchestra, to which three young men connected with this office belong. They invited the lady attaches to a rehearsal, recently. As the ladies approached the house, they met people leaving from the vicinity in great haste, and they, themselves, were glad to take refuge in a field nearly half a mile away in order to hear themselves think, and still the orchestra had only begun on a few strains of "Home, Sweet Home."

The Gloucester Advertiser in a sketch of Mr. James Perkins, a signer of the petition to the Legislature to make Magnolia a separate town, formerly of Peabody, says: He resides at Magnolia Point; voter; 1883 tax $67; Mr. P. was, we think, the first summer visitor to build a cottage at Magnolia, and afterwards became a permanent resident. Interested in the summer hotel business. A republican prohibitionist. Native of New Hampshire. Served in the Gloucester Common Council in 1880.

The New York Herald has the following notice of the company who are to play Uncle Tom's Cabin at the new town hall Friday evening: "Will innovations never cease," the latest is two Topsys and two Lawyers, Marks Sr. and Marks Jr. in Uncle Tom's Cabin Company at Booth's theatre during the past week. The introduction of this novelty is no doubt one of the principal causes for the enormous business to which this excellent company is continually playing.

The spar track of the Eastern R. R. from the station at Danversport to Hanson's Mills has been completed, and Porter's grove is to be opened as a freight yard. Scott Brothers have the contract for building the freight scale upon which the cars can be weighed after they are loaded. The stone will be hauled from Raddin's Ledge, South Peabody.

Mr. John Handel, formerly of this town, a son-in-law of Mr. David Bailey, has been appointed to the position of manager in the finishing department at the bleachery at Saylesville, R. I. Mr. Handel has many friends in town who will be pleased to know of his promotion to so responsible a position.

A man named Dalton, while intoxicated, called at Norton & Gilman's store last Monday night, and refused to leave when requested by the proprietors, but when the demand was enforced by officer Peasley, he was more agreeable. He was taken to the station house. He had only one shoe, having lost the other in the snow.

CHRISTMAS PRESENTS

— AT —

PACKARD'S!

We have made preparationsthis season for the greatest display of

THE ANNOUNCEMENT of the great value of the diamonds worn by Patti, the operatic prima donna, with the statement that they are constantly guarded by four men, to prevent loss, is worthy of mention. It is an indication of the great wealth of the fair owner, obtained, principally, by the almost fabulous sums which she receives nightly from the managers who deem themselves so fortunate (?) as to secure her services.

It is surprising to what an extent the public of this country will go in their patronage of high priced stars from the Continent, and what encouragement these enterprising managers have to bring over some novelty from England or elsewhere in Europe and put the price of admission at more than double the usual price. Take for example the English actor Irving. Except for the novelty of seeing an Englishman play Hamlet, we see no reason why our people should pay twice as much to see him, as they would to see our own Booth, or Barrett or McCullough. And yet the price of admission at the Boston Theatre this week is to be $2.50. As long as the public are willing to pay these exorbitant prices, just so long will the managers demand them. And the enormous sums taken ot the box offices, during the reign of leading star actors and actresses, shows plainly that with reduced prices of admission a handsome sum could be netted to the performers.

The press of New York city are already demanding a reform in this direction—a reform which we believe must be brought about. With few exceptions, one dollar ought to secure the best seat in any of our city theatres.—We are aware that it cannot be done under the present prices paid to star performers. But these salaries have got to come down. Good entertainments at popular prices will be the demand of the future. This demand the managers must meet. There is no reason why the performances, by star actors, should be the monopoly of the rich. The poor man, with his little family, must necessarily forego the pleasure to be derived from them, or spend a large portion of his week's wages, at the present prices. High priced entertainments must go.

The disagreeable operation of forcing liquids into the head, and the use of exciting snuffs, are being superseded by Ely's Cream Balm, a cure for Catarrh, Colds in the head and Hay Fever. Price 50 cents. Apply into the nostrils with the finger. Only Two Bottles. Messrs. Johnston, Holloway & Co., wholesale druggists of Philadelphia, Pa., report that some time ago a gentleman handed them a dollar, with a request to send a good catarrh cure to two army officers in Arizona. Recently the same gentleman told them that both the officers and the wife of a well-known U. S. A. General had been cured of Catarrh by the two bottles of Ely's Cream Balm.

F. W. Lucas & Co., the New England Boot & Shoe Store in Salem, are doing an immense trade. Weather don't seem to make the least difference. The reason is, the elegant line of goods displayed—and the low price on them. Besides, customers are treated courteously, and invited to call again.

Our bright and handsome exchange, the Roxbury Advocate, issued a six page edition in honor of Thanksgiving. Addie, may your success be proportioned to your enterprise.[—Chelsea Telegraph. Wonder if the editor of the Telegraph wasn't thinking of the last part of that paragraph when he wrote the first.

Mr. J. W. Pike, the Lynn Tobacconist, invites the attention of all making Christmas presents. He has a fine line of fancy smoking sets, pipes, holders and other articles usually kept by first class tobacconists, and his store is so neatly appointed that ladies will not hesitate to call on him.

While the aspirants of the political world seem to center on 1884 as the year that will prove their future destiny, the young, unmarried generation look forward with equally as much interest, and, to some extent, base their fortunes upon the out-comes of that celebrated year.

The Danvers Mirror says: Alden A. White is about to retire from the shoe manufacturing business conducted by him, alone and with partners, for many years past on Locust street, at present at the Pope shop. Mr. White will close up the business, and is not to be succeeded by any one, as we are informed. Mr. W. began his business career in this town.

The postal note, which it was expected would come into common use, does not seem to meet with a great degree of favor with the public. Being made payable to the bearer, there is no way of recovering the amount if one is lost, and as for a few cents more the amount sen is guaranteed safe, the general verdict is that the postal note must go. A limited number only have been sold from the office here.

SELLING

BOOTS AND SHOES

— AT —

MANUFACTURER'S PRICES.

A DECIDED SUCCESS.

A great many firms in Lynn are puzzled at the large attendance and great success of our special sales, simply because these same firms have failed in their own efforts to attract attention and accomplish the same results. The reasons are plain, for we assert that our establishments can show many advantages over others. We give the following, which are convincing:

First.

Enormous stock. The immense stock of our wholesale house, together with our two retail stores, 84 Market street and 23 Market Square, make a stock to draw from five times larger than all the other shoe stores in Lynn combined.

Second.

Low Rents. While our competitors are handicapped by having to pay exorbitant rents, we with our three stores, have to pay rent only on one—a fact, the significance of which as bearing upon our ability to sell for less than others, will be apparent to all.

Third

Wholesale. Our wholesale trade, which now extends to every city and town of any importance in New England, obliges us to carry an immense stock and gives us an advantage in buying entirely beyond the reach of our competitors. For where they buy of the jobbers in small lots, we buy direct of the manufacturers, and that we can buy as low as the large Boston jobbers is abundantly attested by the fact that we are able to meet and compete with them on their own grounds and build up a wholesale trade which is constantly increasing.

Fourth.

One Price. Marked in plain figures on every pair of boots and shoes, guarantees low prices.—Equal treatment to all classes and shows at a glance the quality of the goods.

Fifth.

Truthful Representations. No misrepresentations are tolerated. Goods are sold for just what they are. Some stores adopt the "bait" plan, advertising great slaughter, immense bargains, etc. Call in half an hour after such stores open and in nearly every instance the salesman has the old story to tell you: "All gone;" "haven't your size;" "too late;" "very sorry, but we have had such a rush they are all out.—Can't we show you something else?" We have no such nonsense. It won't do.

Sixth.

Quick Sales and Small Profits. Quick sales are the life of a successful business. Small profits are sufficient when the business is done on live business principles. You save one profit by buying of the wholesaler.

Seventh.

Exchanging Goods or Refunding Money. When any dissatisfaction occurs because the selection does not please in every particular, the goods, if returned uninjured in a reasonable time, can be exchanged; and it matters not of whom it was selected, any salesman at leisure will pay careful attention to the customer. In case nothing is found to please, the cash will be cheerfully refunded.

Eighth.

Prompt Cash Payments. We are so conscious of the overwhelming advantages we possess both in buying and selling we have no hesitation in asserting that no prudent purchaser can afford to buy anything anywhere else until they have looked through our stock and got our prices. Ready money in our hands enables us to buy goods in large quantities at figures that the average retailer knows nothing about. To-day we stand simply as the connecting link between the manufacturer and consumer.

We have an immense surplus stock which we are going to close out during this sale. In order to accomplish this purpose we know at the outset that it will be necessary to offer sufficient inducements which we are determined to do. Consequently, in this instance as well as all others, we appeal directly to the interests of every purchaser, regarding that as decidedly more potent than volumes of positive assertions.

Come and See What a Little Money will do at

OSBORNE'S

TWO STORES,

84 MARKET ST., AND 23 MARKET SQUARE, LYNN.

The average age of farmers is sixty-five years, while that of printers is only thirty-three, which shows the necessity of prompt payment to the latter, so that they may have the pleasure of handling their own money during their short sojourn on this sublunary sphere.

We have received from Messrs. Meek & Fielden of Salem, a large road map of Salem, Beverly, Danvers, Peabody and Marblehead, substantially mounted on linen and rollers. Also a pocket edition of the same. The maps are well got up and are accurately drawn.

The Commander-in-Chief of the G. A. R., has issued an order to all Posts, to furnish Comrade W. W. Dudley, Pension Commissioner, a descriptive list of members, not for publication, but to facilitate the matter of meeting claims for pensions.

Miss. S. M. Spiller calls attention in another column to a large lot of Dolls and Dolls' furnishings. She is prepared to meet or discount Boston prices. Miss Spiller is well known to most of our readers and hence any comment on her usual line of fancy goods would be superfluous.

We have heard of two cases where a certain Salem paper has sent in a bill for a very large amount, after the decease of an old resident of this town. One was paid recently amounting to some sixty dollars. The idea of letting a subscription bill run till it amounted to such a sum is ridiculous.

Now it is that the ambitious young athlete gets his head and shins kicked much more frequently than he kicks the football.

TO THE PUBLIC!

We have always possessed the idea that the poor man's hard earned dollar should purchase just as much as a like amount of his wealthy neighbor.—WE BELIEVE IT. WE ACT UPON IT. Three years ago it was hard to convince customers that a firm in the FURNITURE business would or could make such a departure. WE DID, and our business to-day is a pleasing monument of its kindly reception by the people of Lynn, Swampscott, Saugus, Nahant, Marblehead, Peabody, Danvers, Lynnfield, Salem, &c., to whom we are more than thankful.

THE SUN.

NEW YORK, 1884.

About sixty million copies of THE SUN have gone out of our establishment during the last twelve months.

If you were to paste end to end all the columns of all THE SUNS printed and sold last year, you would get a continuous strip of interesting information common sense wisdom, sound doctrine, and sane wit long enough to reach from Printing House square to the top of Mount Copernicus in the moon, then back to Printing House square, and then three-quarters of the way back to the moon again.

But THE SUN is written for the inhabitants of this earth; this same strip of intelligence would girdle the earth twenty-seven or twenty-eight times.

If every buyer of a copy of THE SUN during the past year has spent only one hour over it, and his wife or his grandfather has spent another hour, this newspaper in 1883 has afforded the human race thirteen thousand years of steady reading night and day.

It is only by little calculations like these that you can form any idea of the circulation of the most popular of American newspapers, or of its influence on the opinions and actions of American men and women.

THE SUN is, and will continue to be, a newspaper which tells the truth without fear of consequences, which gets at the facts no matter how much the process costs, which presents the news of all the world without waste of words and in the most readable shape, which is working with all its heart for the cause of honest government, and which therefore believes that the Republican party must go, and must go in this coming year of our Lord, 1884.

If you know THE SUN, you like it already and you will read it with accustomed diligence and profit during what is sure to be the most interesting year in its history. If you do not yet know THE SUN, it is high time to get into the sunshine.

TERMS TO MAIL SUBSCRIBERS.

The several editions of THE SUN are sent by mail, postpaid as follows:

DAILY—50 cents a month, $6 a year; with Sunday editions, $7.

SUNDAY—Eight pages. This edition furnishes the current news of the world, special articles of exceptional interest to everybody, and literary reviews of new books of the highest merit. $1 a year.

WEEKLY—$1 a year. Eight pages of the best matter of the daily issues; an Agricultural Department of unequalled value, special market reports, and literary, scientific, and domestic intelligence make THE WEEKLY SUN the newspaper for the farmer's household. To clubs of ten with $10, an extra copy free.

THE LEADING MAGAZINE FOR THE BOYS & GIRLS

ST. NICHOLAS,

EDITED BY MRS. MARY MAPES DODGE.

The New York Tribune once said: "In the avalanche of immoral literature that threatens the children, some strong, vitally wholesome, and really attractive magazine is required for them, and St. Nicholas has reached a higher platform, and commands for this service wider resources in art and letters, than any of its predecessors or contemporaries." The reference to the wide resources in art and letters commanded by St. Nicholas was never more fully illustrated than by the extraordinary list of attractions which that magazine announces for 1884. The following will be some of the leading contributors:

Louisa M. Alcott, J. T. Trowbridge, Captain Mayne Reid, Hjalmar Hjorth Boyesen, Maurice Thompson, Frank R. Stockton, Charles Dudley Warner, Joaquin Miller, Elizabeth Stuart Phelps, Mrs. A. D. T. Whitney, Julian Hawthorne, Celia Thaxter, Mary Mapes Dodge, Lieut. Frederick Schwatka, Rose Hawthorne Lathrop, E. S. Brooks, George W. Cable, Chas. G. Leland, Susan Fenimore Cooper, John G. Whittier, "H. H.," W. O. Stoddard, C. P. Cranch, and scores of other distinguished writers. The best artists and engravers illustrate the magazine. It has been truly said that the reading of St. Nicholas is for the boys and girls who are fortunate enough to have it. In no other book or periodical is instruction so happily blended with recreation and amusement.

The price is $3.00 a year, or 25 cents a number. Book-sellers, news-dealers, and postmasters receive subscriptions, or remittance may be made direct to the publishers, by money or express order, bank check, draft, or in registered letter.

BY THE LIGHT OF DAY.

PAST IMPOSSIBILITIES THE FACTS OF THE PRESENT—HELP IN THE NEW ERA.

"I remember when they were putting up the poles for the first telegraph line in the State of New York, and now look there!" exclaimed a citizen of the metropolis to his friend, as the two stood on the summit of the tall Equitable Building in Broadway. "The city is strung with wires like a harp, and electric communication is the daily miracle of the world. People no longer wonder and laugh at it as they did at Morse when he first suggested its possibility."

The age marches on and prejudice must give way. Nobody has a monopoly of truth. Even the conservative guild of physicians admit that the secrets of medicine are shared by all men. "I dressed his wound, and God healed him," said old Galen. Once that terrible disease, Rheumatism, was supposed to be a shifting, local ailment, now attacking the joints and now the muscles. To-day it is demonstrated to be a disease of the blood."

Mrs. Henry Bogert, of No. 454 Atlantic Avenue, Brooklyn, N. Y., writes to Messrs. HISCOX & Co., of New York, proprietors of PARKER'S GINGER TONIC, that "she had been completely disabled from Rheumatism and pain in the back and limbs. She was advised to take the Tonic for Kidney disease. She did so, and her Rheumatism disappeared." The reason is simple. Diseased kidneys produce rheumatic symptoms. Cure them and you destroy Rheumatism. This is now admitted by all intelligent physicians. It is the new light thrown on their time-worn and mistaken theories.

PARKER'S GINGER TONIC, which is a combination of the best remedies for the blood known to science, is universally successful in combating this terribly complaint. Those who, like Mrs. Bogert, suffer from Kidney or Liver diseases or any complaint arising from impure blood, will find the TONIC a prompt and certain remedy. Prices, 50c. and $1. a bottle. The larger size the cheaper.

THAT BUGLE CALL.

Old Cerro Gordo Williams is the handsomest man of his years in Kentucky, not excepting General William Preston, formerly Minister to Spain, and at the court of susceptible Isabella. Williams is six feet two inches, with a grizzled iron mustache and curled wig, piercing gray eyes, the frame of a giant and a voice of fine, melodious ring. He is as vain as a peacock. While travelling in Southern Russia, when a young man, he alighted at a village where the Emperor Nicholas was hourly expected. Williams was taken for the emperor. It took the Russians an hour to get over their mistake, but Williams never entirely recovered. He won his title by gallantry before the walls of Cerro Gordo, a captain in Scott's army, and he has maintained his fame for prowess in many personal encounters since, in all of which he handled himself well. He affects the quality divine to politicians—of an infallible memory for names and faces, and is not above the crudest arts of a demagogue.

One evening, while he was dining with some friends in an upper room at the town hotel, one of his admirers stumbled across 'Buck" Combs, who had been bugler in Williams' regiment during the war. They had not met since. Combs got his bugle and, accompanied by an immense crowd, went down to serenade his old commander with war melodies. Standing under his window he lifted up his old regimental call to "boot and saddle." He repeated it once again.

"Tom," said old Williams to his host, "where is that stage going this time of night, and what is the driver tootin' so d—d much about."

"Why, Senator," explained his friend regretfully, that's 'Buck' Combs, your old bugler, serenading you. I told 'em you would remember him and his bugle, and they want a speech."

The old general stepped out of the window on the balcony, and, lifting his voice as silence fell on the crowd, began:

"That bugle call," he said, with a choking voice, "that bugle call, my friends, is like a dear echo of memory. If I had heard it in the untrodden wilds of a pathless wilderness, I would have known that old 'Buck' Combs was winding its sweet notes. Often has it called the old command to fields of carnage. [Cheers.] There is but one bugler in the world that could evoke these sweet notes, and that is 'Buck' Combs, of the old —th Kentucky. [Cheers.] I knew it the instant I heard it." [Cheers.]—Philadelphia Times.

PRIMEVAL TINDER.

There are some kinds of mushrooms, notably the woody and leathery ones, that no more suggest ideas of a meal to us than a log of timber or a pair of old boots do. But if we do not think of eating them, we can fashion them into excellent razor strops or other useful articles on occasion. Several polypores make first-rate tinder, and for such purpose they have undoubtedly been used from very remote times. We infer that fires were kindled by their means in the ancient Swiss lake dwellings, from the fact that they occur among the remains in almost every one of these old habitations. The common tinder polypore has also been found in the lake dwelling at Lochlee, in Ayrshire. Perhaps they may have been put to some other use. These old lake dwellers were probably not without their vices, and may have pounded polypores to dust and snuffed that up as eagerly as certain natives of Northern Asia do at this day.

A MAN'S TENDERNESS.

A Cincinnati paper says: In a pottery factory here there is a workman who had one small invalid child at home. He wrought at his trade with exemplary fidelity, being always in the shop with the opening of the day. He managed, however, to bear each evening to the bedside of his "we lad," as he called him, a flower, a bit of ribbon, or a fragment of crimson glass; indeed anything that would lie out on the white counterpane and give a color to the room.

He was a quiet, unsentimental man, but never went home at night without something that would make the wan face light up with joy at his return. He never said to a living soul that he loved that boy so much. Still he went on patiently loving him, and by-and-by he moved that whole shop into positively real but unconscious fellowship with him. The workmen made curious little jars and cups upon their wheels, and painted diminutive pictures down their sides before they stuck them in the corners of the kiln at burning time. One brought some fruit in the bulge of his apron, and another engravings in a rude scrap-book.

Not one of them whispered a word, for this solemn thing was not to be talked about. They put them in the old man's hat, where he found them; he understood all about it, and, believe it or not, as you will, but it is a fact that the entire pottery full of men, of rather coarse fibre by nature, grew quiet as the months drifted, becoming gentle and kind, and some dropped swearing as the weary look on the patient fellow-worker's face told them beyond mistake that the inevitable shadow was drawing nearer. Every day some one now did a piece of work for him and put it on the sanded plank to dry, so that he could come later and go earlier. So, when the bell tolled and the little coffin came out of the lowly door, right around the corner, out of sight, there stood one hundred stalwart workingmen from the pottery with their clean clothes on, most of whom gave half a day's time for the privilege of taking part in the simple procession and following to the grave that small burden of a child which probably not one had ever seen.

If you deal with a vulgar mind, life is reduced to beggary.

The Peculiar Old Mystery!

It was one of the peculiarities of the old-fashioned Doctors that they never would tell patients what they were prescribing for them. They said it would do the patients no good to know, and that it would only be gratifying a foolish curiosity. In order to keep patients from knowing, they would write the prescriptions in dog-Latin, so that most patients could not read them. All that sort of thing is now over. The patient wants to know what he takes. He is weak, and wants to be strong, or he is dyspeptic, and wants to digest well. Or he has a troublesome liver which he wants to put to rights. So he takes Brown's Iron Bitters about which there is no mystery at all. This is the best preparation of iron in the world, in combination with gentle yet efficient tonics. It gives strength. It builds up enfeebled systems. It enriches impoverished blood. It removes feminine weaknesses. It casts out debility. It is what YOU want, and your druggist has it.

THE CENTURY.

Programme for 1883-84.

The programme for the fourteenth year of this magazine, and the third under the new name, is if anything more interesting and popular than ever. With every season, THE CENTURY shows a decided gain in circulation. The new volume begins with November, and, when possible, subscriptions should begin with that issue. The following are some of the features of the coming year:

A NEW NOVEL BY GEORGE W. CABLE, author of "Old Creole Days," etc., entitled "Dr. Sevier," a story of New Orleans life, the time being the eve of the late Civil War.

"LIFE IN THE THIRTEEN COLONIES," by Edward Eggleston, separate illustrated papers on subjects connected with the early history of this country.

THREE STORIES BY HENRY JAMES, of varying lengths, to appear through the year.

THE NEW ASTRONOMY, untechnical articles by Prof. S. P. Langley, describing the most interesting of recent discoveries in the sun and stars.

A NOVELETTE BY H. H. BOYESEN, author of "Gunnar," etc. A vivid and sparkling story.

THE NEW ERA IN AMERICAN ARCHITECTURE, a series of papers descriptive of the best work of American architects in Public Buildings, City and Country Houses, etc. To be profusely illustrated.

A NOVELETTE BY ROBERT GRANT, author of "Confessions of a Frivolous Girl," etc., entitled "An Average Man,"—a story of New York.

THE BREAD-WINNERS, one of the most remarkable novels of the day, to be completed in January.

CHRISTIANTY AND WEALTH, with other essays, by the author of "The Christian League of Connecticut," etc., on the application of Christian morals to the present phases of modern life.

COASTING ABOUT THE GULF OF ST. LAWRENCE, a series of entertaining articles, profusely illustrated.

SCENES FROM THE NOVELISTS, Hawthorne, George Eliot, and Cable, with authentic drawings.

ON THE TRACK OF ULYSSES, the record of a yacht-cruise in the Mediterranean, identifying the route of Ulysses on his return from the Trojan war.

"GARFIELD IN ENGLAND," extracts from his private journal kept during a trip to Europe in 1867.

"THE SILVERADO SQUATTERS," by Robert Louis Stevenson, author of New Arabian Nights.

There will be papers on outdoor England by John Burroughs and others, a beautifully illustrated series on Dante, a number of papers by the eminent French novelist Alphonse Daudet, articles on art and archæology by Charles Dudley Warner and others, illustrated papers on sport and adventure, short stories by the leading writers, essays on timely subjects, etc., etc.

Subscription price, $4.00 a year; single numbers sold everywhere, at 35 cents each. All dealers receive subscriptions, or remittance may be made direct to the publishers by postal or express order, registered letter, bank check or draft.

SPECIAL OFFERS.

To enable new subscribers to begin with the first volume under The Century name, we make the following special offers:

New subscribers beginning with November, 1883, may obtain the magazine for one year from date, and the twenty-four previous numbers, unbound, for $6.00. Regular price for the three years, $12.00.

Or, if preferred, a subscription and the twenty-four numbers bound in four elegant volumes will be furnished for $10. Regular price, $16.

THE VOLTAIC BELT CO., Marshall, Mich., will send DR. DYE'S CELEBRATED ELECTRO VOLTAIC BELTS and ELECTRIC APPLIANCES on trial for 30 days to men (young or old) who are afflicted with Nervous Debility, Lost Vitality, and kindred troubles, guaranteeing speedy and complete restoration of health and manly vigor. Address as above.—N. B.—No risk is incurred, as 30 days' trial is allowed.

MADE ON PURPOSE.

ONE OF THOSE MISTAKES(?) WHICH ARE MORE FREQUENT THAN PROFITABLE.

"Why, my child, this is not BENSON'S CAPCINE POROUS PLASTER," said a father to his little daughter, after examining a package she had just brought from the drug store.

"Isn't it, Papa? I'm sorry, but I asked the man for Benson's—I know I did, and he took the twenty-five cents you gave me to pay for it with," exclaimed the child, positively. "Maybe the drug man made a mistake."

"I'll go 'round myself and see," was the gentleman's comment, as he donned his coat and hat.

"Why didn't you send me Benson's plaster, instead of this cheap and trashy thing?"

"Why, I,—I, thought that would suit you just as well—and—"

"You thought! you thought! What business had you to think? I don't pay you for thinking, but for filling my order," said the indignant caller, contemptuously, "There! take that thing back and give me my money, I don't want it anywhere."

Miscellaneous.

CARING FOR CATS.

Fish is a great treat for a cat; in many cases of illness they will eat this when they can take nothing else. Horse-flesh, when it can be had, is good occasionally, but it has a laxative tendency. Nice tripe or cowheel is excellent; but indeed nothing comes amiss that one eats one's self, only we must be careful to give bread and vegetables as well as meat. Raw beef minced finely is often given to cats when ill; so are boiled eggs and cream. Milk seems to be one of the necessaries of life to a cat; let it be good and abundant. Few people know that cats cannot be kept in health unless they be supplied with water. If a cat does not get water, she will have to help herself to it. This in the country she has generally a chance of doing, but not in towns. A saucer should be always kept in a corner for pussy, and the water ought to be fresh, and fresh every morning. Another thing that cats do not thrive well without is grass. Herein, again, the happy country cat has the advantage of the feline dweller in cities; nevertheless, grass may be pulled for a cat. I have known it placed between two bricks in the corner of the scullery, where it would keep fresh for a week, and be always handy when the little creature wanted it. There is no domestic animal in our possession more fond of cleanliness in every way than puss. Habits of cleanliness in the house are very easily taught; and a well cared for and properly treated cat will even teach her kittens to be cleanly. But pussy's food ought always to be nice and clean, and the dish that contains it should be washed every day. Putting fresh food among that which has been left from a former meal is a sure way of preventing a cat from enjoying, or even touching it. If well fed, a cat's coat is beautifully soft, thick, and sheeny, and she seems to take a delight in keeping it so. When ill or neglected, the coat becomes rough and thin. It is usually after a meal that puss sits down contentedly to wash herself and pay attention to her personal appearance; and those who breed beautiful cats take advantage of this and give the animal a tiny bit of butter after her dinner, or put a little cream on her paws. She requires no other incentive to cause her to proceed forwith to groom herself all over. The oil of the butter and her own saliva seem to form a kind of soap, which acts like magic when applied by means of her rough tongue to the coat. Sometimes a cat requires to be washed. The water should be lukewarm, the soap the mildest procurable, and the towels with which she is dried very soft; and after the operation she ought to be put into a clean room until thoroughly dry, or what is better still, placed in a clean empty cage near the fire.

AFRICAN ANTS.

Among the luxuries of travel in Western Africa armies of ants and venomous flies may be safely reckoned on. Crocodiles, mosquitos and serpents are such commonplace matters in comparison that it is not worth while to dwell upon them.

The bashikouai ants must be a terrible plague. They travel, we are told, night and day, in armies miles long. The elephant and gorilla fly before them; the black man runs for his life so soon as the ants are seen. It is related by a traveller that as he was going up one of the mouths of the Zambese he saw a whole village suddenly deserted by the inhabitants, who fled with all they could carry off, a proceeding which, as there was no foe in sight, rather puzzled him, till he found they were fleeing from the ants. When these ants enter a hut they clear it of every living thing in a few minutes. Huge cockroaches, almost as large as mice, centipedes, mice and rats are instantly devoured. A strong rat is killed in less than a minute, and in another minute its bones are picked, a leopard, dog or deer is soon dispatched and devoured, for they kill by their numbers. They are quite half an inch long, and one variety is so strong that it will bite pieces clean out of the flesh. They possess, however, one meritorious quality—they mortally hate, and whenever they can, put to death the mischievous white ants which make such destruction in houses.

In addition to these and the sand ants, which bite like scorpions, leaving distressing pain behind them, there are several varieties of flies which sting horribly, such as the igogonai, small gnats, whose bites go through the tough hide of the negros, causing a terrible itch; the ibolai, flies or gnats, which sting as though with a needle, and whistle as they dash at you; the richouma, which fills themselves with your blood before you know they are there, and then leave an itching that lasts for hours, varied at intervals by sudden sharp stabs of pain; the sloway, or nest-building flies, not quite so big as a bee, which cling to a man even in the water, and assail the natives with such ferocity that if a canoe, by chance, touch one of their nests, the men instantly dive overboard. These seem the most spiteful of all. The spots where they bite remain very painful for two or three days after.

AN OLD GREEK DWELLING HOUSE.

Letters from Athens announce an interesting discovery, brought to light in the course of some excavations which are being carried out in the island of Delos by the pupils of the French school at Athens. In the neighborhood of the Theatre of Apollo they came upon the remains of a private house, which apparently belonged to the Alexandrine epoch. A court surrounded by pillars and twelve chambers has been opened out. The floor is composed of mosaic, representing flowers, fishes and other ornaments. In the middle of the court is a well. The door of the house and the line of roadway or street leading to it have also been discovered. The excavations will be continued.

MR. AND MRS. NEWCOMB,

OF STATE ST., SPRINGFIELD, MASS. WHAT THEY SAY IN FAVOR OF A REAL HONEST THING—THEIR WORD AS GOOD AS GOLD.

Mrs. Newcomb is the wife of one of the employees in the United States Armory, Springfield, Mass. She says: "I have used Dr. Kennedy's FAVORITE REMEDY for Indigestion and Biliousness. My husband has also used it. We keep it in the house as a family medicine, and consider it the best ever made for the purpose recommended."

Dr. Kennedy is daily in receipt of letters from patients expressing similar sentiments as these expressed by Mrs. Newcomb, of State street. These letters are spontaneous and put in all varieties of phraseology, but invariably setting forth one thing—the value of Kennedy's FAVORITE REMEDY for many forms of disease. It may be just the thing you have been looking for. Is your Liver disordered? Have you Derangement of the Kidneys or Bladder associated with Constipation of the Bowels? If so, you want Kennedy's FAVORITE REMEDY. Dr. Kennedy practices Medicine and Surgery in all their Branches. Write and state your case. "Favorite Remedy" is fast becoming a trusted household friend in all cases of Female Weakness and diseases of the blood. One dollar a bottle. Your druggist has it.

DRAMATIC AND MUSICAL.

The press are unanimous in their praise of the production of the "Beggar Student" at the Bijou Theatre in Boston. The company has been enlarged, the orchestra strengthened and the entire presentation gives hope that the second year at this cosy parlor theatre will be equally prosperous with the first. Manager Tyler is again at the helm, and there is little doubt of the entire success of anything which comes under his control. The leading role is taken by Georgina Von Januschowsky, and the other ladies in the company are Adelaide Randall, who makes her debut in Boston, and Edith Abell, whose appearance in "Pounce & Co" made her so popular. Mr. Fessenden, Mr. Wilkinson and others of the company have important roles.

The engagement of Henry Irving at the Boston Theatre has been one of success, and this is the last week of the company. The chief charm of the performance is the attention to details which is given by every member of the cast. All is under the direct charge of Mr. Irving. To-night and to-morrow night, the play of Hamlet will be produced, Mr. Irving playing Hamlet and Miss Ellen Terry Ophelia. In this play Mr. Irving has received the greatest praise as well as the geatest criticism. For the holidays Callender's Mastodon Minstrels will appear, and Wednesday night Opera begins.

This week is Opera week at the Globe. Patti nights are Tuesday and Friday only. Lillian Norton sings in Faust to-night.

At the Park Theatre "Our Boarding House" will be the attraction, with those inimitable comedians, Robson and Crane, in the character of Gillypod and Elevator. This is attraction enough, and they always draw packed houses.

Next week the Madison Square Theatre will play Esmeralda, with Annie Russell who has rejoined the company in her original role of Esmeralda.

Stalwart John McCullough comes to the Boston "after the opera is over," January 7, for a month's engagement in his great tragedy roles.

Those of our readers who remember Miss Lizzie Harold at the Boston Museum, in Rice's Evangeline, one of the finest soubrette actresses that ever appeared in Boston, will be pleased to learn that she is to appear in Salem, under Moulton & Johnson's management Christmas afternoon and evening. She will appear in Princess Chuck, a play which is running at the new Park Theatre in York City, to immense business. Her song "Once upon a time there lived a maiden" has made her popular everywhere, and we look for a crowded house at both performances.

Julia Wilson, who plays Dot to Denman Thompson's Uncle Josh, is reported to be an heiress, and $30.000 is reported to be the size of her "little file."

Margaret Mather is reported to be a greater attraction than ever by Manager Hill, her "business" in places visited last year showing a decided increase. The young artiste comes to Salem during the season under the management of Moulton and Johnson. She will next year produce a new play written for her. Lady Macbeth, with Mr. Milnes Levick as Macbeth, will also be included in her repertoire.

The Sunday evening concerts in contemplation by Mr. Adolph Neuendorff will begin at the Bijou Theatre on the first Sunday evening in January. The resources of Mr. Neuendorff; his good taste and ability will insure some notable programmes at the entertainments.

Miss Florence Gerard will retire from Stetson's "Confusion" company at the conclusion of the coming week on the New England circuit, and her part will be played in Boston and thereafter by Miss Sara Martinot, whom Mr. Stetson has engaged for the remainder of the season.

A CHANCE FOR THE BOYS.—The Naumkeag Clothing Co. offers a $100 double clipper sled for the Essex county boy under 17 years of age who shall write the best original essay on the clothing business, the award to be made by two Salem school teachers Jan 15, 1884. This offer is free to all boys under 17 residing in this county, whether they buy or not. They also give to every boy purchasing clothing to the amount of $5, his choice between a handsome clipper or a finely illustrated story book. The essay prize sled is a magnificent affair, one of the finest ever seen in America. The books are well selected and elegantly printed and bound, and comprise a wide range of topics. Any one of the books will prove a valuable addition to a boy's library. We presume Manager Gallup must have a great liking for boys, to give them such valuable presents, besides selling the best styles of boy's clothing at prices below the ordinary rates for far inferior goods.

Don't forget the Fire Boys in the entertainment of the United Novelty Co., to-night. Go and have a good laugh and a good time.

NEWPORT, R. I., Nov. 12, 1883.

J. D. & J. W. EATON, Dear Sirs: Enclosed please find check for amount of bill for CRAWFORD RANGE and Ware. It arrived last Friday noon, and we had it set up and a fire in it before four o'clock. We are more than pleased with it. All our cooking was done Saturday morning. It usually takes all day to do it. My wife thinks she shall take to cooking again herself, as it is real fun to cook with such a Range as the CRAWFORD. Hoping you may sell a great many more of them, and every purchaser be as well pleased as we are. I remain yours, very truly,

BOSTON JOURNAL,

The Cheapest and Best.

A First Class Weekly Newspaper

FOR

ONE DOLLAR A YEAR,

Postage Included.

A New Departure of the Popular New England Family Newspaper.

The Boston Weekly Journal,

Tried and appreciated by all readers, will be sent to single subscribers in 1884 for

One Dollar.

Or less than two cents per week. No change in Quality or Quantity

Ten Copies and one Extra Copy to the getter-up of Club $10

Twenty Copies and two Extra Copies to the getter-up of Club $20

An Extra Copy for every Ten Subscribers.

In the month of December, 1882, The Boston Daily Journal was reduced in price from $9 per annum to $6 per annum. It achieved almost from the start a decided success. We now reduce the price of The Boston Weekly Journal from $1.50 per annum to

One Dollar.

This reduction makes it the Cheapest New England Newspaper. There will be no abatement in the effort to make the paper more acceptable than ever to the people of New England. It will not be cheapened in any department, but it will be improved to meet the expectations of the Fifty Thousand New Readers.

Who we are confident will send in their names.

For less than Two Cents per week, postage prepaid, the reader will have a weekly newspaper of Thirty-six Long Columns, which will give him all the news of the day; Reports of the Markets; Articles on the Crops; Essays upon Home Topics, by our own Contributor; What is going on in Boston, Musical, Monetary and Financial; Correspondence from all parts of the World, by our own correspondents. Manufacturing and Railroad News; Congressional Matters; Political Jottings; Editorials upon Live Topics. Associated Press Dispatches from all parts of the United States, and Current News from Maine, New Hampshire and Vermont, from our own resident correspondents.

Presidential Year.

The year 1884, which is the Presidential year will be one of great interest. While The Journal is known as the leading Republican Newspaper in New England, it never fails to give full reports of the leading features of the campaign as promulged by both parties.

No one need plead ignorance of what is taking place on account of the cost, for The Boston Weekly Journal has proved in the past, and will continue to be, a great educator of the people of New England.

We put with gratification to the following opinions of The Journal:

The Journal is a clean paper, and there is never anything in its columns that can offend good taste or corrupt the morals of the young, at the same time it is fully abreast of the times in everything that pertains to first-class Journalism.—Boston Courier.

The Boston Journal is a credit to our Journalism. Its tone is high, its candour is able, its news is fresh, its telegraphic dispatches are admirable as well as strictly reliable.—Boston Gazette.

The Journal is a candid, consistent, able and enterprising newspaper.—Boston Times.

To great business sagacity in its management, The Journal adds a scrupulous regard for what is wholesome and manly in journalism. The influence of a great newspaper is far-reaching, especially upon society and in the home, and the reading public owe it to themselves to discriminate in favor of a newspaper of the astounding enterprise and high character of The Journal.—[Nashua Telegraph.

The Journal's prosperity, which is of substantial character, has been well earned by honest dealing with the public. It is in its thirtieth volume, more vigorous than ever.—[Philadelphia Ledger.

The Journal is one of the ablest and brightest papers in New England, and its splendid success is the best kind of a compliment to the discriminating judgment of its constituency.—[Philadelphia Press.

TAKE NOTICE.

Subscriptions at the above rates will be received for one year from this date.

BOSTON SEMI-WEEKLY JOURNAL.

Published on Tuesdays and Fridays, is a paper of especial value to persons engaged in commercial pursuits outside the large cities. It contains, in addition to all the news of the day, the fullest possible market, commercial and marine reports, besides a large amount of valuable reading matter of a miscellaneous character.

The Boston Semi-Weekly Journal is a paper which no man actively engaged in trade and watching the course of mercantile affairs can afford to be without.

Harper's Bazar.

ILLUSTRATED.

Harper's Bazaar is at once the most brilliant and useful Household Journal in existence. It is the acknowledged arbiter of fashion in this country. Its fashion plates are the newest and most stylish; and its pattern sheet supplements and economic suggestions alone are worth many times the cost of subscription. Its illustrations of art needlework are from the best resources. Its literary and artistic merits are of the highest order. Its stories, poems, and essays are by the first American and European authors. Its choice art pictures would fill portfolios, and its humorous cuts are the most amusing to be found in any journal in America. A host of brilliant novelties are promissed for 1884.

WIDE AWAKE

(Only $2.50 a year.)

ADVANCE BULLETIN, 1884.

For Boys, Girls, and Everybody.

Starting at the source of good things, we give here a list of some famous contributors whose stories and poems and articles are already in hand for the coming year:

Elizabeth Stuart Phelps, Mrs A. D. T. Whitney, Mrs. Dinah Mulock-Craik, Edward Everett Hale, "H. H.," Susan Coolidge, Arthur Gilman, Lucy Larcom, E. E. B., Mrs. Catherwood, Rev. Charles R. Talbot, Mrs. Lucy C. Lillie, Margaret Sidney, George MacDonald, Lady Dunboyne, Mrs. Raymond Blathwayt (Aunt Margie), Mrs. Louise E. Craigin, Mrs. Lizzie W. Champney, Mary E. Wilkins, Mrs. Clara Doty Bates, Prof. D. A. Sargent, Ernest Ingersoll, Marion Harland, Sarah Orne Jewett, Mrs. Clara Doty Bates, Elbridge S. Brooks, M. E. W. S. (Mrs. John Sherwood), Miss Amanda B. Harris, Sophie May, Mrs. Kate Upson Clarke, Margaret Eytinge, Rose Kingsley, Edwin D. Mead, Mrs. Susan Power, Mrs. Jessie Benton Fremont, Mrs. Sarah K. Bolton, Phillip Bourke Marston, Celia Thaxter, Nora Perry, Rose Hawthorne Lathrop, Mrs. A. M. Diaz.

ILLUSTRATED SERIAL STORIES FOR 1884:

I. A BRAVE GIRL. By Elizabeth Stuart Phelps, author of Gates ajar, Doctor Zay, The Story of Avis, etc.

II. A DISTRICT MESSENGER BOY. By James Otis.

III. PANSEY BILLINGS. By "H. H."

IV. PAMELA'S FORTUNE. By Mrs. Lucy C. Lillie, author of Prudence, etc.

V. HIS THREE TRIALS. A story for boys. by Mrs. Kate Gannet Wells.

VI. AN HISTORICAL SERIAL. (To begin in December.)

VII. IN NO-MAN'S-LAND. A wonder story for little folks. By Elbridge S. Brooks.

Among the purely pictorial attractions will be fine Frontispieces from the studio of F. H. Lungren, whose A-Maying and Winter Birds, in Wide Awake attracted so much attention in 1882. W. Parker Boffish will contribute a picture-serial, in fifty scenes and twenty-four interludes, entitled Through France in Sabots. Miss Jessie McDermott has prepared a novel set of twelve full-page pictures under the title, The Procession of the Zodiac. Joseph Pennell has sent from Italy some twenty interesting and beautiful drawings of Child-Life in Venice; Henry Sandham has contributed another series, illustrative of a Winter Carnival in Canada; and George Foster Barnes has just completed an alphabet of navel and artistic decorative initials.

Many valuable contributions, very pleasant reading for the curious, are in hand; among them two articles about Famous Dwarfs, and one about Famous Giants, by Isabel Smithson, illustrated by Edmund H. Garrett, from authentic sources; The Troubadours, by George Foster Barnes illustrated by the author; The Gypsies, by Mrs. Catherwood, giving much novel matter, the illustrations including drawings from life sketches made among the gypsie caves of Granada the past winter.

Edward Everett Hale will make an interesting contribution to historical literature, through Wide Awake, in the form of several articles entitled The Story of Boston Common, giving complete its curious early history, describing famous events and scenes connected with its green shades and malls, and narrating many tales and traditions, quaint but authentic. These articles will be fully illustrated.

Mrs. Clara Doty Bates, whose versifications in Wide Awake of various nursery tales, Silverlocks and the Bears, Three little Pigs, Little Red Ridinghood, etc., are received as the classic and standard form of these old favorites, has now put in verse Twelve of Æsop's Fables. These fables have a setting decoratively novel and richly pictorial.

Twelve of George McDonald's lyrics are being set to music by popular foreign composers, among them, Reenecke, Jadassohn, Rheinberger, Lachner, Jungmann and Cowen. These musical compositions have been secured for Wide Awake by Louis C. Elson, the musical editor, lately in Europe on that commission, and they will undoubtedly form the most notable of contributions to music for young folks.

In addition, there have been secured a brilliant line of short stories, travels, practical articles, illustrated poems, etc.; and when the attractions of the C. Y. F. R. U. Reading Course, with its seven series of pithy articles are taken into account, our readers, young and old, may feel assured of a year of rich entertainment.

Wide Awake is only $2.50 a year. Liberal terms to agents. Address D. LOTHROP & CO., Franklin street, Boston

STORY IN EIGHTEEN CHAPTERS BY

MERRILL & MACKINTIRE.

CHAPTER 1.

BOOKS.

Our success in the past with these, the best of all Holiday Souvenirs, has encouraged us to put forth greater efforts to give our patrons the choice of all the leading Juvenile, Miscellaneous, and Standard Books. We enumerate below a few of the bargains that we are offering:—

Getting Ahead, Pansies, Two Boys, 75 cent Books for 25 cents.

Wide Awake, $1.50 Books for 44 cts.

Peter Parley's Annual, 300 pages, with colored illustrations, $1.50 Book for 74 cents.

And a host of other bargains which must be seen to be appreciated.

CHAPTER 2.

FINE FANCY GOODS.

We flatter ourselves that the assortment of these, now on exhibition, is second to none in the county, and consists in part of Celluloid Sets, Nail Sets, Glove and Handkerchief Boxes, Ink Stands in every conceivable shape, Thermometers, Watch Stands, Ash Trays, Ladies' and Gents' Dressing Cases and Companions, on the line of goods. If we do say it, no house in his county can show you a larger assotment or quote you any lower prices.

CHAPTER 3.

Photograph, Albums.

The remarkable success attending our sales the past year, has encouraged us to put in a larger line than ever.

VOL. 25. PEABODY, MASS., WEDNESDAY EVENING, DECEMBER 26, 1883. NO. 1.

WILMOT'S SUCCESS!

THE TALK OF THE PEOPLE AND ENVY OF CERTAIN NARROW MINDED COMPETITORS.

Ever since we came to Salem, our trade has been on the increase, in spite of a certain competitor, (better known for his loud talk and boast than for his deeds.) who said when we came to Salem, that he would drive us from the place inside of six months, but he should remember that we are not the kind to be driven, in fact it looks as though the boot was on the other leg. We are here to stay and we shall keep right on underselling any and all competitors, no matter if they go on the warpath every day during the week and twice on Sunday.

Business Is Booming!

And we are having a constant rush since we began our Mammoth Mark down Sale of

OVERCOATS, SUITS AND PANTALOONS.

In fact some would be big competitors almost die of grief and envy at the success we are having, for they know as well as the people that it is useless for them to try to compete with a manufacturer. But they try to rally by copying our advertisements almost word for word, talk never hurts anybody, figures tell every time, and it is Figures we shall give you, not talk. REMEMBER! That no competitor, no matter what he says, has any of our clothing, although they advertise to that effect.

200 Men's Heavy Fur Beaver Overcoats.

This is the same overcoat a certain competitor advertises for $1.75, and considers that a low price, we can sell ours a great deal less than $1.65, if we see fit, as we don't consider that we gain many laurels by selling such goods at any price. This is the only lot in our entire stock that is the same as our boasting competitor carries. We sell nothing but good clothing,

400 Men's All Wool Winter Overcoats.

Goods made by the well known Connotton Valley Mills and warranted all wool; the coats are lined with a warm woolen lining, are cut extra long and by our best patterns, made on honor, and would be a cheap garment at $14; never have been sold by us previous to this date at less price, but we are sometimes famous for bargains, and this is our sometimes. We shall sell what we have of these Coats to the first comers, of which we have all sizes, 35 to 42, at $4.00.

Certain competitors are advertising that they are selling this same coat for $3.90, but the fact is, the coat they advertise at that is not worth as much as our coat by $2. See for yourself; we advertise facts and not fiction.

300 Men's Full Weight Elysian Winter Overcoats,

Bound with fine Mohair Braid, lined with good durable lining, Silk Face, Velvet Collar, and the quality usually sold at $8 to $10; but this is a year of wonders.

$4.50.

☞ This coat cannot be purchased outside of our store at any price.

375 Fine black Elysian Overcoats, extra heavy weight, made and trimmed in good shape,—a good dress coat. Our price is $8.00.

If the coat can be purchased within two dollars of the price we advertise, at any other place, we will cheerfully refund the money paid for the same.

Large lot of Melton beaver overcoats, cut D. B. and S. B., fly front (equal in style and fit to any $35.00 Custom Overcoats), made and trimmed in extra fine shape, and a coat worth $15.00, but our price is $7.50.

The terror of competition and "THE WONDER OF THE AGE," is 150 Men's Heavy Winter Chinchilla Overcoats, cut D. B. and S. B., bound narrow, has a fine velvet collar, made in the best possible manner, and our price is $9.00.

If this coat can be bought outside of our store for $15.00 or less, we will cheerfully refund the money to anybody who has purchased of us.

200 Blue Beaver Overcoats, warranted fast color, lined wth the best satine lasting, and guaranteed to be the best made and best styled overcoat in the city. This coat previous to now has been marked $18.00, but our price is now

Size 34 to 44.

"THE BEST YET." An extra fine, black, all wool, diagonal overcoat, made in the best manner, and sold by some of our competitors as a bargain for $16.50, but, as we are bound to lead in the bargain line, our price will be $14.50.

The difference between the above described coat and that so-called bonanza, by a certain competitor, is so apparent that any person wishing a really good coat would gladly pay four dollars more for ours, but we only ask two dollars. Examine them for yourself.

UNDERWEAR.

To-day, we begin a special mark-down sale of winter underwear, and we guarantee that we shall offer such bargains, that it will be a matter of the utmost importance for you to examine our stock.

Remember our prices are always the lowest of the low.

HATS AND CAPS.

We shall offer this week a splendid line of stiff and soft Hats, at 75 cents.

All of our other Hats to be closed out at greatly reduced prices.

☞ Examine them before you purchase, you will be able to make a great saving.

CUSTOM DEPARTMENT.

Here we have made a sweeping reduction, and we are able to make to order, overcoats suits, and pantaloons at prices never befor quoted by any tailor in New England.

N. B. We guarantee a perfect fit, and good work or no sale

Good sleighing!

A white Christmas!

At a stand-still—peanuts!

School again next Monday!

It is a bad omen to owe men!

Fire alarms are now a rarity!

"Sponge it out" is the latest!

Our Boy got 0 in his stocking!

Sixteen below, Sunday morning!

What did you have in your stocking?

We trust you had a "Merry Christmas."

That was quite a ripple—the cold wave.

Chicken pox is reported among the children.

Parts of the fire apparatus are now on runners.

Sleighing on some of the back streets is excellent.

Is your good resolution ready to put into practice?

Boys should not be allowed to coast on the sidewalks.

It is odd—but there isn't a boy doll baby in the windows.

You could'nt call it "a green Christmas and a mild winter."

The demand for bicycles is passed. They have been shelved.

The granite steps leading to the town hall have been covered.

The horse cars have been running on four horse time since the snow.

Mr. Eugene McCarthy is principal of the boy's evening school in Salem.

Farmer's Institute in town hall tomorrow at 9.30 o'clock. All are invited.

The "oldest inhabitant" can't recall any finer weather than this in December.

The annual meeting of the Peabody Mutual Benefit Association takes place Jan. 4th.

The Naumkeag street railroad, are using runners in Beverly and rails in Peabody.

Snow balls and falls are now in order, and the supply exceeds the demand every time.

Fred T. Gurness, of this town, recently shot a snowy owl in the woods near Boxford.

Mr. Samuel Bruce has accepted a position as attendant at the Danvers insane asylum.

"Police Station" has been painted over the door leading into the basement of the town hall.

Several of our manufacturing establishments were troubled with frozen pipes on Monday.

There are six life members of the Unitarian Sunday School Association living in Peabody.

The tramps who slept at the station house have had the shoveling of the snow to do of late.

The members of Union Post 50, G. A. R., go to Danvers, this evening, to attend Post 90 camp fire.

The valuable trotting stallion, Geo. Wilkes, Jr. has been purchased by Geo. Barnjam, of Lynnfield Centre.

Sheriff Herrick will announce his deputies early in January. There will be no change in the Lawrence corps.

The snow was a little backward in coming, but nobody will say that when it did come it did not come with a rush.

Mr. Wm. Weaver, the well known Greenback advocate, who has lectured here, died at Nashua, N. H., last week.

"As the days begin to lengthen, so the cold begins to strengthen," is an old saying which has been often verified.

The Essex Agricultural Society fair will probably be held at the Willows the third Tuesday and Wednesday of September.

Business people have complained of dull trade, but last Saturday and Monday made things lively and all had a good business.

Wild & Stevens, the leading manufacturers of printer's rollers at 27 Hawley Place, Boston, have remembered us with calenders.

Bright little faces with sparkling eyes peer longingly into the shop windows where the holliday goods are so temptingly displayed.

Quite a number of families allow their acqueduct water to run over night to prevent its freezing. The Water Board don't allow it.

We suspect our friend Mr. K. M. Jarvis, of Malden, is on a southern trip, as we have received several Kentucky papers from him.

At this season of the year every one is getting ready to pay up those little bills, and some billheads from the PRESS office will be indispensable.

According to the statistics of the Secretary of State, there are 3,164 polls in Essex county, tax on polls $6,328, total valuation, $7,384,807, total tax 45,659.

The second private assembly under the management of Messrs. William Farnham and William Flanagan will be held in Upton's Hall, Tuesday eve, Jan. 1st.

The New York Independent Almanac for 1884 is replete with fine illustrations and interesting matter. There is a perpetual calendar and other new features.

Some one suggests the appointment of a fire inspector, who will inspect the pipes, chimneys, fire traps, and rubbish or other ignitable places in our town. Go ahead.

Venus appears in all her beauty illuminating the western sky just after sunset. This is her first appearance since she meandered across the disc of old Sol a year ago.

The free evening schools begin next Monday evening. Mr. Wells will have charge of the schools. He has had some difficuliy in obtaining assistants for the school.

The market reports say that coal is falling, and a further reduction is expected. The production of the year has been more than two millions of tons above that of 1882.

The name of the club room in the Republican Headquarters is the "Bradford Associates." There are fifteen of them and all were at one time pupils of the late Chas. E. Bradford.

Vennor says the latter part of this month and January will be very mild, but that March and April will make up for any mistakes which the season has previously made. Shoot Vennor.

A couple of young men found a resident of Mason street lying by the roadside in an exhausted condition from drink and exposure, last Saturday night, and removed him to his home.

Judge Holmes of the Supreme Court has decided that the "standard time is the legal time." "Our boy" says this is important particularly in this office where each one has a standard time of his own.

Mr. H. F. Lawrence, of this town, who has been employed at the Danvers asylum as upholsterer since last October, has been engaged of late in padding some rooms for violent insane inmates.

The old Franklin Trotting Park, at Saugus has been entirely restored; Essex county horsemen will look with much interest to the opening of the park. Several Peabody people are interested.

Miss Dora B. M'Causland, of the Centre school, received from her class as a Christmas present, a gold pen in a pearl handle, and two elegant cards. It was a complete surprise and will be appreciated by the teacher.

A union Christmas love feast will be held at the Methodist church on Thursday, eve., Dec. 27th, at 7 1-2 o'clock. Delegations are expected from the Lynn and Salem M. E. churches, also from Tapleyville and other places. All invited.

We are under obligations to Mr. John P. Peabody, for a generous supply of Christmas cards from his large stock, and it is a pleasure to note that Mr. Peabody's store never has looked so inviting to customers as during this holiday season.

It is said that the street drains are alive with musk rats this winter, more so than usual. Last Saturday night one very large one was noticed to run across the street and enter the drain in front of Mr. John M. Berry's residence on Washington street.

The supreme dictator of the Knights of Honor, R. H. Cochran, of Ohio, states that $2,730,000 were distributed to widows and orphans last year, and up to the present time this year $1,616,000 has been paid out of the supreme treasury for this purpose.

Postmaster General Gresham recommends that newspapers containing lottery advertisements be excluded from the mails. There are but two papers in Essex county, that we are aware of, that are publishing lottery advertisements. One a Salem and the other a Lawrence daily.

We are indebted to Hon. Eben F. Stone, our representative from this district to Congress, for copies of the Congressional Record which is sent daily to this office. Our citizens are cordially invited to visit our office and consult its pages at any time they may desire to do so.

There will be a public installation of the officers of Post 50, G. A. R., at the Peabody Institute, Monday evening, Jan. 7, 1884, by Past Dept. Commander J. G. B. Adams of Lynn. Addresses are also expected from Past Commander Patch, Capt. Benj. Pitman of Marblehead, and others. Music by home talent is also expected.

A man named Lawrence Drinan hired a team yesterday in Lynn and came to Peabody to see the sights. While he left the team on Shillaber street for a short time, the horse ran away, and made for the Square. A man named Baker discovered the runaway and overtook the horse and sleigh just in season to see the sleigh pretty well demoraiized.

Edward Cunningham and John Sullivan, a couple of young fellows, thought they had more right to the residence of John Donahue, on Hancock street, than John had himself, and therefore attempted to put him out last Monday night. The boys were arrested and peace now reigns at the Donahue house.

There are many pleasant ways in which young people can enjoy themselves, and there are many social clubs and associations to promote this enjoyment. The latest is the Morocco Dressers, who have advertised a dance to take place the 14th of January at Upton's Hall. They will present the best couple in fancy dancing with $5.

Mutual council No. 184, Royal Arcanum, elected the following officers Saturday evening: Regent, W. F. Wiley; V. R., Charles Goldthwaite; orator, Geo. A. Whitney; P. R., Geo. H. About 10.30 this forenoon, one of the copper smiths at work putting the gutters on the Catholic church, J. Harding by name, was thrown from the roof of the vestry by a slide of about two tons of snow from the main building. He fell a distance of 25 feet, injuring his right leg and bruising him up generally. He saw the snow coming and tried to hold it back but it was too much for him. He was taken to the house of Father Masterson and his injuries attended to. He was in the employ of E. B. Badger & Sons 63 Pitts street, Boston.

There was considerable indignation expressed last evening by the Peabody patrons of the show in Salem, on account of the lack of horse car accommodations. At the close of the show there was not a car to be seen. After some delay the regular car from Peabody under charge of Conductor Buxton, arrived and turned around for Peabody, but not more than half the people could get on the car. After nearly a half hour's delay further, most of which time the people were obliged to wait in a driving snow storm, a car from the stables arrived, and the passengers reached Peabody about 11.30 P. M.

SPARKS.

Steamer 2 did not meet with any very great success in their undertaking to run a show on last Wednesday evening. An audience of between 200 and 300 were present. The weather was bad for one thing, and that and other causes combined to make a failure of it, leaving the company considerably out of pocket.

The Hose companies have all got their hose packed into pungs during the snowy season. Hose 1 is having a pung built at Dole & Osgood's, running a borrowed one until the other comes. They have about 700 feet of hose on their pung. Hose 3 have a pung loaded with 800 feet, to be drawn by two horses. Hose 5 has a platform sled to run their carriage out, to be drawn by a pair of horses. Hose 2 and 4 also have pungs in their houses so that all are ready for service at any time whatever the travelling is.

Hose 3 had a very enjoyable assembly at their house last Friday evening, and like all of their times, it was a success.

It is said that there are over thirty applications for the janitorship at the brick house, all trades and kinds applying for what they think is a soft job.

Abel Proctor Hook and Ladder Co. had a large party, Thursday evening at the new town hall. Every body looked happy and so must have had a good time.

Probably the meeting for re-organizing the Relief Association under the new Charter, will be held in Temperance hall on Thursday evening, Jan. 3, 1884, and a full attendance will be requested, as it is an important meeting.

At a meeting of the Engineers called for the purpose of appointing a janitor for the engine house, Chas. H. Smart, fireman of Steamer one, was selected from about thirty applicants. The job is to be divided, the janitor to take care of the house and all apparatus, wash hose and all other duties on the premises, not including the stables, but he has not got to run the steamer as at present. Amos Corey was appointed to take charge of the steamer, and it will be run either by him or some one under his direction.

Hose 1 received their new pung Monday afternoon and at once loaded it for service, putting on about 750 feet of hose. The pung is about the same style as a common delivery pung, painted a dark maroon, striped with gold. Dole & Osgood are the builders.

Orders were issued by the Chief, to the effect that the horses of the steamers should be run on the H. & L. truck and the steamers to stay in the house until sent for. The hose carriages to take all care of a common fire, but in case of a big fire there is no doubt but what one or both of the steamers would be on hand promptly.

In the "Random Sparks" of this weeks Fireman's Journal is the following: "Excelsior Steam Fire Engine Co., No. 2, of Peabody gave their annual ball in the Town Hall, Dec. 19th." The above is a little mistake, as the company did not hold a ball, but some of the members felt as though they would like to "bawl" on that evening.

Papers received from "Old Business" and "Old N. Y. Mercury" correspondent at Minneapolis this week, giving account of fire business in that little "burgh."

The globe lantern in front of the engine house was broken this afternoon by a fall of icicles, caused by the thaw.

The boys were in great dread Saturday night, lest they should have to turn out into the cold. ZERO.

The next meeting of the Unity Club, will be held with Mrs. Culliton, on Chestnut street.

Several Peabody couples attended the grand firemen's ball in Essex, Christmas night.

While Samuel W. King was driving past the old Monument, Monday, the sleigh was capsized and Mr. King thrown out. No damage however was done either to the sleigh or its occupant.

As the hostler of J. E. Clement was hitching up a horse and sleigh last evening, the horse started with the sleigh and ran down Park and Boston streets, where he was captured and returned. No damage was done.

New Years' eve, Jan 31st, the St. John's C. T. A. Society will bring Hallett & Hayes' Consolidated Minstrels and Old Folks Concert Co., to the new Town Hall. Tickets at popular prices are now on sale at Spauldings.

Holton Lodge, I. O. O. F. held their election of officers last evening, for the ensuing term. The following are the elected officers: N. G., Geo. H. Manning; V. G., John O. Buxton; Rec. Sec., E. I. Kimball; Permanent Sec., Chas. A. Sanger; Treas., Geo. F. Sanger.

The tickets for the Leap Year reception to be given by the ladies of the Unity Club are out. The event will take place Wednesday evening, Jan. 9th in Upton's Hall, and there is no doubt that it will be a successful affair. The lady managers in charge of the reception know no such word as fail.

W. B. Gifford & Co., of Lynn will sell what remaining holiday goods they have on hand, at a great reduction previous to New Years'. Now is a golden opportunity to get gifts cheap. A list of some of the articles will be found in another column. Jan. 1st begins their great sale of Hamburg's.

Mr. Herbert Gardner, formerly of this town, but now engaged in the harness business in Leominster, was united in marriage yesterday to Miss Laura, daughter of Warren Poor, at the residence of the bride's father in Salem. They will reside in Leominster. We tender the happy couple congratulations.

Poet's Corner.

Fate.

Two ships passed out into the sea,
From one port launched, the self-same day;
One northward sailed, and one sailed south,
Till leagues on leagues between them lay.

And one, where tropic skys are bright,
And spicy odors fill the air,
And bright winged birds flit softly by,
At anchor lay in harbor fair;

And stored her hold and filled her decks
With treasures from the sea and shore,
While soft, warm wavelets laved her sides,
And perfumed winds sighed softly o'er.

The other pressed through frozen seas
Where biting blasts rude welcome gave.
And baffled, helpless, crushed, folorn,
In arctic gloom found icy grave.

"Out of opposites comes the most beautiful harmony."

Death and Sorrow and Pain are sweet,
And Life and Pleasure and Joy are good,
And these are one, and as one shall meet,
When all we feel shall be understood.

Then lift thy face to the Sorrow's rain,
Yea, count it sweet as the springs' young breath,
Stoop low and drink at the pool of pain,
Dip thy Life's urn in the well of Death.

For Joy is painlike, and Pain is bliss,
And Love must weep for an hour today
But Death shall waken at Life's warm kiss
And joy wed Sorrow in smiles for aye.

Gloria In Excelsis Deo.

A CHRISTMAS HYMN.

Bear the glad tidings from ocean to ocean
Waft it, ye angels, on every wind,
Children of earth bow in grateful devotion,
Christ the Redeemer is born to mankind.

He, from the throne of his Father descending
Meekly and lowly has come on the earth,
Angels and saints, in glad symphony blending,
Sing of His triumph o'er Satan and death.

Man from the darkness of sin which enthrals him,
Spurning the tempter, to life shall arise,
Out to the sunlight of freedom he calls him,
To life, and to glory, and love in the skies.

Glory to God! let the proud anthem ringing,
Roll to the uttermost ends of the earth,
Now let each heart, songs of victory singing,
Swell out in triumph, in gladness and mirth.

Bear the glad tidings from ocean to ocean,
Waft it ye angels, on every wind,
Children of earth bow in heartfelt devotion,
Christ the Redeemer is born to mankind. —William Collins.

And thou hast gone, departed year!
And left us here
O'er all thy gifts to joy or weep,
While thou dost sleep.
Some good we trace along the way
Where thou didst stray:
In spheres of action and of thought
Some wonders wrought.
Perchance remembered is thy name
In realms of fame;
And in some lowlier, humbler place,
Thy love and grace.

And with the good thy hand hath brought
Some ill is wrought;
For bliss and pain, and joy and woe
Together go.
And thus we leave thee, buried year,
With smile and tear;
O'er good and ill which thou didst bring,
Thy dirge we sing,
The while we greet, with joy and fear
The opening year,

Oh, glad New Year! all fresh and bright,
Oh, keep thee white.
And through the days that come and wane
Bring us no pain.
Oh, idle thought! we take it back,
Nor faith will lack,
That thou will bring along our way,
Thy good each day.
And more than this, full well we know
Both joy and woe,
To make us strong, and wise, and good,
Must be our food.
So only this the prayer we breathe,
Help us to wreathe
A crown of good to lay, New Year,
Upon thy bier.

An Epistle to a Little Friend, With some Christmas Gifts.

BY FRANCIS NUGENT.

A Merry Christmas! Mamie dear,
And may it bring to thee good cheer,
A lot of gifts, sweet meats "galeor,"
Choice blessings in abundant store.
Ah! surely such a winsome pet,
Old Santa Claus could ne'er forget;
For he doth loveth, and revere,
Folks who've been good all through the year;
No matter be they great or small,
At Christmas he rewards them all.
So lately in a talk with him,
Although our acquaintance is slim,
He desired me to send to thee,
Some Christmas gifts, which here you see;
I with them too good wishes doth send,
And pray that th' angels guard my friend,
And guide thee through virtues' sure way
From which may ne'er your footsteps stray.
As from a wee bud blooms the rose.
And unto all its sweets disclose,
So may thy rosy childhood bud,
Into perfected womanhood!
Long be, on earth, thy years of life,
All free from sorrow, care and strife.
Some noble deed mark each day spent,
Which bringeth peace and sweet content,
And when, at last, God calleth thee,
Unto His home—Eternity!
May you be found worthy a place,
Among the heavenly host to grace.
And with this benison I end,
This epistle to my little friend,
And, closing wish thee, Mamie dear,
Merry Christmas! Happy New Year!

Selected Story.

HONEYDEW'S VISIT.

'Going to get married, be you, Hiram?'

Hiram Honeydew colored at the abrupt question, but he answered truthfully.

'I don't see what else I kin do, Aunt Peggy. Sister Susan is bent on a-marryin' the school teacher, and a-goin' off to the Black Hills or som'eres away out of all creation. An' heres the fall work a-comin' on—that medder hay to stack, an' corn to cut, pumpkins to gather an' all them windfalls and Siberian crabs to make up in cider fur the apple-butter, an' no help to be got fur love or money. An' it stands to reason I can't tend the farm and cook the vittles, too. So I thought as soon as threshin' is over—you've promised to stay till then, Aunt Peggy—an' then I thought I'd go round som'eres nigh about Clover Creek, where some of our kinfolks live, an' stay a week or so, and git a—a—somebody that can housekeep an' the like—do the milkin' an' the churnin', tend to puttin' up fruit, makin' apple-butter, take keer of the chickens an' ducks, an' do the cookin' an' cleanin'. Sister Susan was a powerful good housekeeper, an' she couldn't be beat a-cookin', either. If I could find a good sort of a woman that'd cook ekal to Susan, I wouldn't mind a-marryin' her.'

'Humph! So you expect to git a a wife, an' a good one, too, in a week or so, hey? You're a gump, Hiram Honeydew, an' nothin' else. Besides you ought to git a wife you could keer fur, as well as a good housekeeper. Housekeepin' an' cookin' ain't everything, I tell you. There's such a thing as affeckshin between man and wife.'

But Hiram scoffed at this idea.

'One woman is the same as another to me,' he returned, loftily. 'I want a housekeeper, an' that's why I'm going to marry at all.'

'Wal, then, Hiram, if you're set an' determined to go an' hunt up a wife that way, mebbe I kin help you a little. I knowed the folks about Clover Hill like a book when your Uncle Eli was alive, an' we lived on the old Honeydew farm. An' thar was Mahala Nutter. She married Job Perky, an' they bought a farm on Clover Hill, t'other side the creek; an' there want nobody that could beat Mahala housekeepin' them days an' moss likely Martha Jane tuk after her. They're a sort of kin folks of yourn, too. Mahaly was yer Uncle Eli's own cousin. An' ef you like I'll write 'em a few lines an' tell 'em you're a-comin', an' sort of prepare 'em, fur nobody likes to have company onexpected.'

And so it was settled, much to Hiram's relief, and he whetted his scythe and went out to mow a field of clover for his horses with a lighter heart than he had had for a week.

For he had made up his mind that if Martha Jane Perky was as good a housekeeper as Aunt Peggy said, he would bring her back with him as Mrs. Honeydew in a week's time if she were willing.

And no doubt she would be, for Hiram was quite a good-looking man, with pleasant brown eyes, curly brown hair and a thick brown moustache.

Moreover, he was well-to-do, and almost any of the girls in his own neighborhood would have jumped at the chance of presiding over his broad acres and picturesque cottage farm house, half-buried in sugar and tall Lollard poplar trees.

But to Hiram, as to most others, distance lent enchantment to the view, and he was determined to seek his fate in some of the wide farmhouses that dotted the fertile borders of Clover Creek.

'He'll be an almighty good ketch fer you, an' no mistake, Marthy Jane, an' you must do your best to ketch him. 'Tain't often a girl has sech a chance throwed at her head, an' ef you've got a mite of pluck about you, you won't let them stuck up Brigses git ahead of you, I'll bet a button,' commented Mrs. Perky, when the letter had been duly read.

To which bit of logic Martha Jane assented, with a toss of her head, and the assurance that the Brigses nor any one else was going to git ahead of her.

Consequently when farmer Perky drove his team to the gate, with Hiram on the seat beside him, the necessary preparations—floors scoured, baking done, and a substantial country dinner, with a dessert of apple-dumplings with cream sauce ready to be served.

While Martha Jane, in a plaid frock with fluted ruffles, stood waiting to receive the expected guest.

'She's mortal homely, thought Hiram, as he sat smoking after dinner, on the porch, and mentally reviewing Martha Jane's narrow forehead, hard black eyes and high colored cheek bones. 'But, then I ain't a-lookin' out after beauty, an' if she suits me other ways, I reckon 'tain't no great matter how she looks, fer a gal with mahogany skin an' them kind of eyes kin do the chores an' make butter, an' sech things as good as if she had blue eyes an' goldy-looking hair, like that girl they call Hitty that brought in the dumplins an' passed round the dip fur them at dinner to-day. 'T any rate I ain't got time to hunt round much, an' I reckon Marthy Jane wont mind changin' her name to Honeydew afore long, an' I've got to hurry up; I ain't no time to waste a-courtin'. I reckon we kin git married an' be back home in a week ef nothin' prevents. I don't like stayin' here a-settin' around doin' nothin', with all the fall work a-comin' on at the farm.'

'Oh, dear!'

Down through the long grass and crimson clover bobs, under the scrubby haws and tall persimmon trees, went Hitty Mavis, a deep-caped sunbonnet shading her violet eyes and tangled yellow curls.

She was after the cows, standing knee-deep in the tall aftermath where they had been turned for pasturage after the meadow hay was cut.

She started back with a little scream, for seated under the shadow of a crimson-leaved sassafras tree, sat Hiram Honeydew, cooly watching her.

Hittie's cheeks turned from pink to scarlet as she met the admiring glance of his brown eyes, and her heart beat faster than common.

But Hitty was a sensible girl, so she said 'Good evening, Mr. Honeydew!' quite coolly, and began driving home the cows.

But Hiram sprang down from his perch on the rail fence and followed her.

'Let me help you, Miss Hitty!' he begged. 'I ain't used to loafin' around doin' nothin' like I've been fur some days now; and it will be a treat to drive cows, even.'

So they walked together through the velvety aftermath, the lowing cows slowly filing home, lazily chewing their cuds, and switching their tails at the flies.

Hiram let down the bars, and turned the cows into the yard, and Hitty brought out the milk pails from under a bunch of burdock leaves where she had left them.

And somehow, in spite of the milking and setting the sponge, and doing up the chores, Hitty's heart beat more lightly than it had for many a day.

And instead of one week, Hiram stayed two, but still Martha had not been invited to change her name.

'She is a mighty good housekeeper,' thought Hiram, meditatively. 'If little Hitty could only cook and housekeep as good as her, I—don't know—'

He ended by building a castle in the air, wherein Hitty Mavis, with her violet eyes and golden hair, was the chief figure.

'Hitty Mavis!'

Martha Jane's hard black eyes looked harder than ever, and her sharp features looked sharper still as she bounced wrathfully into the kitchen where Hitty sat slicing a bowl of yellow Crawford peaches for supper.

'You kin pack up your duds and go! You a settin' up to ketch a beau, as if Hiram Honeydew would look at you!'

'I—Martha Jane, what on earth do you mean?'

Hitty's eyes expanded, and the pink in her cheeks deepened to a glowing scarlet.

'You know well enough what I mean!' sneered Martha. 'You need not try to look so innocent, like butter wouldn't melt in your mouth, an' you a strainin' every nerve to ketch Hiram Honeydew— a-cajolin him to help you milk, an' drive the cows, an' the like. It's jest like your owdacious doin's, an' you can pack up an' leave—right away too!'

Hitty's heart beat like a frightened robin's at the thought of being driven friendless into the world, but Martha Jane was implacable.

'It's nothin' to me where you go, so you leave here,' she sniffed, as she flounced angrily away.

'Go with me, Hitty!' said a tender voice; and Hiram Honeydew stepped suddenly into the little kitchen. 'Go with me, Hitty, and be my wife.'

Hitty's cheeks grew redder than before: but she did not draw away from his offered embrace.

'Not gone yet?' cried a shrill voice as the door was jerked viciously open. 'Didn't I tell you to pack up—Oh, Mr. Honeydew, you here? Come and have tea—we're waiting fur you.'

Excuse me! was the cold reply. I shall just have time to take my wife—that is to be—over to the parsonage. Will you come to the wedding?

And so you did not marry Mahala's daughter after all! cried Aunt Peggy, who was waiting to receive them.

No! he stammered. Hitty can learn to keep house, I reckon.

Learn? cried Hitty, Why I did all the housekeeping. Mary Jane never did a lick of work in her life.

And so Hiram Honeydew got a wife and a housekeeper all in one.

A Christmas Legend.

BY FLORENCE SCANNELL.

It was Christmas Eve. The night was very dark and the snow falling fast, as Hermann, the charcoal-burner, drew his cloak tighter around him, and the wind whistled fiercely through the trees of the Black Forest. He had been to carry a load to a castle near, and was now hastening home to his little hut. Although he worked very hard, he was poor, gaining barely enough for the wants of his wife and his four little children. He was thinking of them, when he heard a faint wailing. Guided by the sound, he groped about and found a little child, scantily clothed, shivering and sobbing by itself in the snow.

'Why little one, have they left thee here all alone to face the cruel blast?'

The child answered nothing, but looked piteously up in the charcoal-burner's face.

'Well, I cannot leave thee here. Thou would'st be dead before morning.

So saying, Hermann raised it in his arms, wrapping it in his cloak and warming its little cold hands in his bosom. When he arrived at his hut, he put down the child and tapped at the door, which was immediately thrown open, and the children rushed to meet him.

'Here, wife, is a guest to our Christmas Eve supper,' said he, leading in the little one, who held timidly to his finger with its tiny hand.

'And welcome he is,' said the wife. 'Now let him come and warm himself by the fire'.

The children all pressed round to welcome and gaze at the little new comer. They showed him their pretty fir tree, decorated with bright colored lamps in honor of Christmas Eve, which the good mother had endeavored to make a fete for the children. Then they sat down to supper, each child contributing of its portion for the guest, looking with admiration at its clear, blue eyes and golden hair, which shone so as to shed a brighter light in the little room; and as they gazed, it grew into a sort of halo round his head, and his eyes beamed with a heavenly luster. Soon two white wings appeared at his shoulders, and he seemed to grow larger and larger, and then the beautiful vision vanished spreading out his hand as in benediction over them.

Hermann and his wife fell on their knees, exclaiming in awe-struck voices: 'The holy Christ-child!' and then embraced their wondering children in joy and thankfulness that they had entertained the Heavenly Guest.

The next morning as Hermann passed by the place where he had found the fair child, he saw a cluster of lovely white flowers, with dark green leaves, looking as though the snow itself had blossomed. Hermann plucked some, and carried them reverently home to his wife and children, who treasured the fair blossoms and tended them carefully in remembrance of that wonderful Christmas Eve, calling them Chrysanthemums; and every year, as the time came round, they put aside a portion of their feast and gave it to some poor little child, according to the words of Christ: "Inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of the least of these my brethren, ye have done it unto me.'

Making Christmas Presents.

Begin by paying your little bills. If you owe a small account at the little shop round the corner, or the washerwoman has been kept waiting for wages, or the milkman's bill is overdue, or there's fifty cents owing at the cobbler's and the sewing woman has been told to call again, see to it. These are such little things, that they slip the memory, perhaps. Bills of this class do not come in with printed heads and ornamental envelopes; they are not put on the mantel-piece like those the postman brings; they are little scraps of paper, with a few figures scratched in the corner, or a boy or little girl calls to ask if it is 'convenient,' which it always ought to be. Some people have an idea that the settling of these small accounts is conferring a favor—rather a meritorious act, indeed—because it is to be supposed they might have been put off longer still. Especially is this true when the money is paid for service done, which passes quickly out of sight, while the new carpet and window shades and vases, the new coat and hat, are reminders in themselves. All the more, then, should there be reckoning when people are starting out with full purses to buy Christmas presents, and the question be asked, 'How much of this money belongs to me.' It depends on the answer whether to go first to the purchase of expensive things, or whether this, that and the other forgotten dues are set aside and carried to their respective owners. So, when people are making out their lists of where to go and what to get for the children and sisters and aunts and mothers-in-law, let them first put down the little bills. Just what is paid in these small matters will help other people to make Christmas presents, or will make their Christmas somewhat fuller-handed. Whatever else may wait over until after the New Year, it ought not to be these.—Phila. Ledger.

A Word About Christmas.

When what was designed to be a pleasure becomes a burden, it is time to stop and examine it carefully, and see if it is the thing itself which has grown to be such a weight, or whether it is simply an awkward manner of carrying it. Certainly there must be something wrong in any celebration of Christmas which results in serious fatigue of mind and body. During the first three months of the year, nothing is more commonly given as a reason for ill health than an overstrain during the holidays. 'She got so worn out at Christmas,' or 'She worked too hard in finishing her Christmas presents,' or 'the week before Christmas she was tired out with shopping,' are excuses which appear as surely as January and February come. The question must occur sometimes to everyone, whether all this worry and wear of heart and hand and brain are really worth while. Is there not some better way of celebrating this day of days than for women to wear themselves out in making or buying pretty trifles for people who already have more than they can find room for? Setting aside all effort of eyes and fingers, the mental strain is intense. It is a remarkable fact that, although Christmas has been kept on the 25th day of December for more than 1,000 years, its arrival seems as unexpected as if it had been appointed by the President. No one is ready for it, although last year everyone resolved to be so, and about the middle of December there begins a rush and hurry which is really more wearing than a May moving. Above all things, if you give presents, be more anxious to give something which 'supplies a want' than to send some pretty trifle which can only prove in the end an additional care. There are numberless things which can be procured, without a wear and tear of mind and body which make the recipient feel as David did of the water from the well of Bethlehem, that what cost so much was too valuable to be accepted.

FARE versus FAIR.—The day before Thanksgiving a workingman, with a large turkey, entered a Salem horse car in which there were only two unoccupied seats. He took one and placed the turkey on the other. Shortly afterwards several ladies entered the car, and there being no seats, were obliged to stand. The conductor seeing the state of affairs, remonstrated with the man to remove the turkey. 'No,' said he, 'Fair play is a jewell,' and suiting the action to the word, 'I'll pay the turkey's fare, and then who'll have a better right to the seat. It goes for saying that the fair ones were disgusted at the unusual manner in which they fared, but the turkey returned the compliment, Thanksgiving-day, by giving the man and his family a plentiful fare.

Time is the old justice, that examines all offenders.—[Shakespeare.

CHRISTMAS SERVICES.

At the Unitarian Church the pastor, Rev. Mr. Hudson, preached from Philippians 2:9: "Wherefore God also hath highly exalted him, and given him a name which is above every name." The subject of the sermon the preacher announced to be the more important titles applied to Jesus in the New Testament. He had but one personal name—Jesus. It was the custom of that time to give only one personal name. If there were more than one of the same name it was customary to distinguish them by some adjective, or some designation of place or mark of dignity. It means deliverer. The word Saviour is simply a translation of the same word. The words Jesus and Joshua are identical—and it was a very common name, being used ten or twelve times in the Bible. Among Christians it is left sacred as applicable to Jesus of Nazareth. He was a deliverer in a higher sense, in that he came to save the people from their Sins. All that is touching in the word Saviour springs from this idea.

The title Emanuel was considered the fulfilment of an ancient prophecy in Isaiah, 7 chapter. The preacher explained the circumstances of this prophecy. The land of Judah was threatened with invasion, Ahaz became alarmed, and Isaiah foretold the appearance of a Saviour, and that the land would be delivered. This prophecy, says the apostle, was fulfilled in Jesus. God was with him,—Emanuel—a remarkable saying, God with man. This was the great truth which his life manifested. Human nature was meant to be godlike, and is divine in so far as it is true and not broken and degraded. This life manifested in Christ in an unexampled manner. This is the great truth underlying the doctrine of the Trinity—God in Christ. Not in a sense that sets him apart, but that identifies him with humanity. Christianity is the religion of manhood, and the chief corner stone is Emanuel. The two antithetecal titles Son of Man and Son of God seem opposed to each other. The first was the title by which Christ loved to speak of himself. He used it forty-seven times and only spoke the latter title five times, and then only as a quotation. The word son is an expletive in the Hebrew language. It is not a kindred, but a generic term, representing relations of things. The Israelites are called sons of Israel. Wicked men are called sons of wickedness,—in a generic or representative sense. He is thus called Son of Man,—it stands for manhood. The word man means human being,—not man as distinguished from woman—but the whole human world. It is a title that represents in Christ a remarkable freedom from the peculiarity of nation or race. Other men are the sons of the country where they are born—but he was the son of man. He was born in Palestine—but he was not a Jew. Nothing less than the whole world was his country. All find something common in Him. One age after another recognizes that His youth is contemporaneous with his own time. In the title Son of God, the word son is also used in a represen[illegible] There is as frequent us[illegible] mark other[illegible]rity dis[illegible] same thought in the Psalms, but it had never been uttered as a fundamental doctrine before the time of Christ. It was never apprehended until he made it in all its brilliancy. Christ was also called the only begotten son. Here again the title is not exclusive. The phrase meant in the apostle's time beloved—specially dear. In Hebrews 11:17 it is said, "By faith Abraham offered up Isaac." He had another son—an elder one, yet he is called only begotten. Paul speaks of Timothy as his only begotten son in the gospel. We are not to suppose he did not have others. Timothy was his dearest son in the sense spoken of as only begotten. There is also a term used familiarly, which resembles this in sound—God the son. The scriptures frequently speak of Christ as the son of God,—but God the son is not found there. We are to remember that his prayer was not to my father but our father. He throws the mantle of his sonship on all his disciples.

Messian or Christ means annointed. It was applied to various persons—not exclusively to Jesus. Solomon, David and even the heathen Cyrus is so called in Isaiah. It means one consecrated—set apart. Its use as applied to Jesus is one of the most remarkable in history. The times were ripe for it. They were in anticipation of the coming Man. By degrees they came to this title. It was by no means a fixed one. By some he was foreseen as a king—by others as a moral reformer. St. Peter was the first to apply this title to Jesus. And although he failed to meet the anticipations of that time, he accepted the title, designating him as the chosen deliverer from evil, as the mediator between the finite and the infinite.

At the close of the sermon, the Lord's supper was administered, and several persons admitted to the church. In the forenoon the Sabbath School gave a concert in the chapel. The programme consisted of singing, recitations and music. The superintendent, Mr. A. E. Wells, read an essay, and remarks were made upon the condition of the school by Rev. Mr. Hudson and several of the teachers. The school enrolls 101 pupils.

On Monday evening, an entertainment was provided for the children in the parlors of the church, consisting of an operetta by members of the school, the principal characters being Santa Claus by Warren Wilson, Jr., and Fairy by Miss Etta Winchester. There were also twelve imps and twelve fairies. The piece was well brought out, the children having been assisted in the rehearsal by Mrs. Frank C. Ferguson. Afterwards the usual Christmas gifts were presented to the members of the school. The Ladies' Society presented Mr. Nathaniel Simonds with an elegant easy chair—this Christmas season being the anniversary of his 50th birthday.

At the Baptist Church the exercises were in keeping with Christmas, Sunday. The Anthems and Hymns, all having direct reference to the Nativity, were finely rendered. The pastor, Rev. W. P. Chipman, was present, and read for his Scripture lesson, Luke, the second chapter and first twenty verses. His text was I Tim. 2:5, "The man Christ Jesus,"—and his theme, The Humanity of Christ.

Jesus Christ stands forth upon the Scripture page a two fold character. He is at once "the Son of God" and "the Son of man." Our thoughts however have been less with the man Christ Jesus than with the God Christ Jesus. We love best to think of Christ in His God-like character, and are prone to forget the human Christ,—the Christ that assumed our own nature, and became familiar with all the conditions of our earthly pilgrimage. Such a manifestation of God meets man's deepest necessities. I call your attention to this grandest of all facts,—God was actually among us as a man. It was more than 1800 years ago, at Bethlehem, and when the world was all unconscious of it, that Christ was born. Think of Heaven's connection with that tiny child lying in that rude manger. See, a joyous angel bears to those astonished shepherds, and thence to the world, the glad tidings, "For unto you is born this day in the city of David, a Savior which is Christ the Lord."

Such was the advent of God into a sinful world, and this alone should teach us how thoroughly was his humanity identified with our own. But it has been hard for the world to realize it. The fancy of the poet and painter have surrounded the head of our Lord with a halo of supernatural glory. They have sung of angels that hovered over his birthplace, of stars that lingered to shed their influence on that smiling infancy. But all that seems to me far from the reality. When those shepherds sought the child, I believe [illegible]ly upon a smiling, innoc[illegible] mark other[illegible] dis[illegible] was writ[illegible] manhood. He thought as we think. He felt as we feel. He worked as we work. He hungered as we hunger. He slept as we sleep. He grew tired as we grow tired. He suffered as we suffer. He was tempted as your child and mine, as you and I. His whole earthly life, save in the one respect of sin, was identical with our own.

There are two aspects in which this humanity of Christ ought to be of peculiar value to us. First as a development of christian manhood. God, instead of revealing unto us abstract theories of manhood, sent forth his son born of woman. Christ is God's theory of manhood. We look upon Him and behold what we should become. And second, Christ's humanity is of value to us as a means of communication with the Father. God, the Father is often hard to comprehend. Hence the necessity of the incarnation. It is in Christ alone, that we can know, approach, and commune with God. Every blessing we enjoy is for Christ's sake bestowed upon us. He is "God manifest in the flesh"—God descended to man's level, that man may understand and communicate with Him.

The custom has been for years to make this Christmas time a time of joy and thanks giving, in grateful remembrance of Him who has given us the priceless gift of His only Son. It is a beautiful custom, and a useful one, if it only draws us nearer Christ, and infuses into us more of that Christ spirit. But oh! the important question is, is He your Savior? The angel said, "Unto you is born this day a Savior." Is it true of you? Have you, through Him a right to Heaven? Then shall the Christmas bells ring out merrily the glad truth "that the man, Christ Jesus," born in David's city, has brought you into eternal friendship with David's son and David's lord. Amen.

The Christmas tree at the Baptist church, Monday evening, was a very pleasant affair. The vestry was nearly filled, and after songs and recitations by members of the Sunday school, the presents were distributed. A social hour followed, and then young and old parted with "a merry Christmas" for all.

At the South Church the Pastor preached to the children from Matt. 2: 23; "And He came and dwelt in a city called Nazareth." We never speak of Jesus of Bethlehem, but always of Jesus of Nazareth, because the latter was His earthly home for nearly thirty years. From Nazareth, though it was not the highest point among the Lebanon mountains, could be seen, probably, the finest view of the surrounding country. We do not understand how Christ could have been a child; but can we not think of Him as enjoying the beautiful scenes in nature around Him? We would not like to think that His childhood was spent in the narrow streets of some city, but rather that He knew nature, loved it, learned through it of His Father, and of His own nature. The works of nature lead us to know God, the Creator, and Jesus, His son. The whole story of the Kingdom of God on earth, was suggested to Christ by what He saw from day to day. In His home life Jesus was not extraordinary. He was not recognized as such by His brothers and sisters, or by His neighbors. But there was one who remembered His birth and patiently waited. Did she tell Him of the angels and the shepherds? Dr. Thompson says we may doubt if she ever did. But Mary kept all these things and pondered them in her heart. Jesus was taught the law, labored and was trained with the others, and He was obedient. Boys of to-day find home restraints irksome, but would they follow Jesus they must be subject to their parents. We are following Him when we do all home duties well and for Jesus' sake. At twelve years of age Jesus went to Jerusalem with His parents to the Passover. The journey was a great event in His life. There were new scenes on the way. The first view of the city and of the Temple was looked forward to with deep interest; but for Him the Temple had greater attractions than the glory of the city. We have only brief words in regard to His childhood. It was spent in innocence, never in sin or wrong doing. As to His clothing, manners, appearance, etc., as a child we know nothing. But these things are not important. His mission to earth is the important thing, and to that these glad Christmas days should lead our thoughts.

On Tuesday (Christmas) night, Mr. Walker entertained the children in the vestry with dissolving views, which were highly enjoyable. Following this came some light refreshments, such as cake and ice cream, which were duly disposed of.

At the Universalist Church the pastor, Rev. F. W. Sprague, took for his text the 14th verse of the second chapter of Luke, "Glory to God in the Highest, and on earth peace, good will [illegible]wards men." The sermon showed [illegible] the whole tenor of Christ's life and [illegible]xemplif[illegible]nd promoted a [illegible]was writ[illegible] men had already begun to understand the peace he sought, and longed for the new dispensation. Christ came at a time when men were at strife and longed for better times. Kings had reigned in glory, conquerors had pursued their triumphant ways, priests had darkened the heavens with the smoke of sacrifice but men had not found peace, Christ came to show a new manhood for all the human race. Peace beamed in his gentle eye, peace spoke in his tender voice, peace was exhibited in his forbearance, and amid all the tempests of life that stormed and buffeted about him, he was at perfect peace. He showed that peaceful ways were the strongest and the best. His teachings inspired the feeling of brotherhood. He showed that sin is war but that righteousness is peace. He proved to be the one true source of peace for the individual. There are two ways of building up character, one of the flesh and one of the spirit. Life is a struggle between the two ways and it is only by taking a stand for the right way and persisting in it that peace is secured and we attain the highest light. Then the spirit takes control and the peace comes which Christ gives to his believers. The bells of the different steeples were ringing out their several messages and mankind were seeking to give Glory to God and to attain the peace which the world cannot give. Would that all might ascribe the glory, attain the peace and exercise the good will. The sermon was pleasingly illustrated with incidents in Christ's life, and with his teachings; and as a whole was a suggestive and earnest Christmas discourse.

In the evening, an unusually fine Christmas concert was given by the members of the Sabbath School, consisting of singing and speaking by the school, and remarks by Rev. Mr. Sprague and Geo. Randall.

On Monday evening an entertainment was given the children by the Murray club, consisting of a series of views by Mr. Walker of Salem, after which there were games and refreshments, in which all participated.

Christmas services at South and West Peabody, Rev. Mr. Colwell's parishes, passed off very pleasantly, although the severe weather of Sunday, together with the wretched walking, thinned out the average attendance. The sermon was from the text of 2 Corinthians 5:14-15, "For the love of Christ constrained us; because we thus judge, that if one died for all, that they which live should not henceforth live unto themselves, but unto Him which died for them, and rose again." While this Christmas season suggests the advent of Christ rather than His departure, life rather than death, still what would Christmas be without Passion week? "what significance would the manger—cradle have for us were it not for the cross?" We must keep in view the end for which Christ came into the world. It was because He came to suffer and die, that the angel-hosts sang their rapturous song of "Peace and Good will" over the plains of Bethlehem. The thoughts suggested by the birth of our Lord as thus considered are: 1st, The Great Love of our Saviour for all men. 2d, The character and condition of man as requiring such a sacrifice, and 3d, The obligation of all to live not for self but for Christ. "The magi of old when they had found the Infant Redeemer, presented Him with kingly gifts; so let us as the star of faith guides us to our Saviour-king present him with princely gifts—the offering of our hearts—far more precious in his sight than gold and frankincense and myrrh."

On Sabbath evening there was a Bible Reading appropriate to the season, in the vestry of the Rockville church.

The Sabbath School festivals at both South and West Peabody were upon the night of Christmas. At the former place two trees graced the platform, filled with gifts for members of the School. Santa Claus was present and dispensed things with his accustomed liberality. Singing, recitations and music filled out the exercises of the hour.

At West Peabody a goodly number gathered at the School-house Hall, notwithstanding the unfavorable weather. A fine tree bore plenty of fruit for all. There was a Biblical exercise, singing of hymns and Christmas carols, readings and recitations. A very enjoyable time was had. The Pastor, who is also Superintendent of the School, was presented, by members of the School and parish, with an elegant hanging library lamp; and by a class of ten little boys, with a beautiful Family Bible.

At the St. John's Church, yesterday (Christmas) was appropriately observed. There were services at 6, 8 and 10 A. M. High mass being celebrated at 6 and 10, At the latter hour the musical programme was of a fine order, as was noted in these columns last week. A sermon appropriate to the day was preached by Rev. Father Masterson. In the afternoon there was a Christmas tree in the basement of the Church.

[illegible]ethodist Church, the pastor, [illegible] preached an appropriate sermon Sabbath afternoon. Monday evening there was a Christmas tree in the vestry, and speaking and singing by members of the school under the direction of George Goldthwait. The pastor, Rev. Mr. Smith, made some well chosen remarks on the condition of the school.

PEABODY.

Orlando F. Newhall has been chosen librarian by the Sabbath School of the So. Peabody Church. A first rate choice.

A team belonging to Bartholomew Connor run away yesterday on Aborn street. No damage done.

Edward Trask has invented an apparatus for sprinkling sand on sidewalks. It is to be attached to a cart, and prevents the cart wheels from slipping, at the same time sprinkling the sand over the slippery walk.

There was a very mysterious death at the police station, last Thursday. Dr. Michael H. Hughes, 25 years of age, of Troy, N. Y., but later of 446 Western Avenue, Lynn, came to this town, about two months ago, and occupied a house on Caller Street. Since coming here he had received but little practice on account of his dissipated habits. Thursday morning he was arrested on Short street where he had fallen in the snow while intoxicated. He was removed to the police station. Later in the day his father, who is a respectable grocer of Troy, N. Y., arrived in reply to a telegram, it is said, "that his son was dying." Dr. Shanahan attended the prisoner. The father went to Mr. Merrill and asked for the release of his son, claiming that he was in the habit of taking large quantities of opium, and also saying that he wished to place him in a reformatory institution. In the mean time the prisoner was in a dazed condition and at first did not recognize his father or his wife, who visited him in his cell. About four o'clock permission was given the father to remove his son, and he went away saying he would return for him immediately. He did not return, however, and about 7 o'clock, the son was found dead in his cell. Medical examiner Osborn was notified and expressed the opinion that he died from the effect of overdoses of opium and alcohol. His remains were sent to Troy, accompanied by his wife and father. There are several things about this case that have caused considerable talk and to say the least are a mystery. Why was a dispatch sent informing the father that his son was dead before he was arrested, even? Why did not his father remove him from the police station as soon as he had permission, if he thought it was not a suitable place for him, and as he agreed to? Why was it that an autopsy was not held and all doubt removed?

Excelsior Steamer Co. gave an entertainment in the new Town Hall last Wednesday evening to a small audience, the inclement weather contributing to this in a great measure. The performance was by the United Novelty Company, of Salem. This company do not claim, as we understand, to be professionals, and therefore should not be judged as such. They gave a good amateur performance, and were assisted in the musical part of the programme by the Salem Band Orchestra, R. L. Reinewald leader.

Uncle Tom's Cabin was presented Friday night in the new Town Hall to a good sized audience, despite the weather. The company was not what the public had been led to suppose by the statements of the management. The young miss who played the part of little Eva was a really talented performer for one so young, surpassing little Corinne in her song Peck-a-boo. Miss Blanche Sherwood was a good Topsy, and the Colored Jubilee Singers were recalled several times. Beyond this there was nothing worthy of favorable mention. The dramatic part of the play was painfully weak. The drop curtain had to be lowered between every scene, owing to the faulty arrangement of the regular scenery on the stage, and from the same cause some of the scenery brought by the company could not be used.

Lizzie Harold and a New York Company appeared in Mechanic Hall yesterday afternoon and evening under the management of Moulton & Johnson. Full houses greeted her on both occasions. Her singing and acting are as bright and entertaining as ever, and the supporting company far above the average—some of the acting being of a high order.

The course of illustrated lectures being given by Mr. French are very interesting and instructive. The views are fine and finely shown, and the lectures carry the audience along so pleasantly that they hardly realize that they have listened a full hour, and are reluctant to leave their seats at the close. If these lectures were better understood the hall would not be large enough for those who would flock to hear and see. Mr. Andrews deserves credit for giving us such a course.

The Langtry blooms on the Globe stage January 28, for a week's stay.

The many friends of Sadie Martinot will be glad of her re-appearance in Boston, having a prominent role in "Confusion" at the Globe Theatre.

RICH NEW STYLES in furniture can be obtained in Boston of the manufacturer at remarkably low prices. Paine seems to be leading in this, already his immense stock is attracting people from near and far. We know of no other establishment in America that carries so a large a stock of nice furniture ready to deliver at once and at such remarkable low prices. A visit to his store 48 Canal Street, opposite Maine Depot will prove to any one what we say to be correct.

HOME HAPPENINGS.

"Glad Christmas comes, and every hearth
Makes room to give him welcome now;
E'en want will dry its tears in mirth,
And crown him with a holly-bough."

A tall and bulky individual emerged from the gloom and bad odor of Spring street and paused under the lamplight in front of Stephen Craigin's,on Foster street, last Saturday evening. The remains of a last summer's twenty-five-cent straw hat, from under the edges of which escaped a grizzly head of hair, covered his head. A faded coat that had lost its color from battling with grease spots and coal dust, was buttoned around his shivering frame. He had in one hand a ninety-nine cent clock and a flat iron. He lingered on the corner a minute, and then seeing a pedestrian coming that way, he walked up to him and in a cracked voice, with a breath that would paralyze a man at two rods—so strong of cheap liquors did it smell, inquired where he could obtain lodging for the night. He was directed to the police station, and as a prospect of a warm shelter for the night came to him, he immediately struck for that home for tramps in the new town hall.

The changes in the Center school building, made necessary by the large number of pupils in the lower classes during the fall term, are nearly completed. During the Thanksgiving vacation partitions were put up dividing the hall into two equal parts, and making of the half on the Franklin street side, a school room of the usual size, and a recitation room, the latter for the use of classes from the principal's room. The carpenters have worked Wednesday and Saturday afternoons since vacation, putting up the doors, finishing under blackboards, &c., and the recitation room, and what is left of the hall are now finished. Furnishing the new school-room will probably be postponed until spring, as the number of pupils during the winter will be so small as to render the use of the new room unnecessary.

Sampson, Davenport & Co. are now gathering information for a new edition of the Salem directory for 1884, which will also include Peabody, Danvers, Beverly and Marblehead. The book will comprise a complete revision of these towns, and will be sold for one dollar. There will also be seperate directories issued for each of these towns, for which the price will be 50 cents. The publishers state that a larger number of the directories for 1882 were issued and sold by them than any previous issue. They anticipate a large demand for the next edition, and will endeavor to merit the generous support which they have heretofore received, by adding to it such means and methods of information as experience and judgment may suggest.

The Salem Oratorio Society will give the first concert of the series on Thursday, to-morrow evening, in Mechanic hall, when "Elijah" will be rendered. Evening tickets are now on sale at the drug store of Geo. F. Ropes & Co. Special attention is called to the afternoon rehearsal, admission to which may be had for the small sum of 25 cents. The entire Oratorio will be rehearsed, and those who cannot attend in the evening will find this an excellent substitute for the concert to be given later in the day.

There was not a large audience at the entertainment in the vestry of the Universalist church, last Thursday evening. An unbrella case was disposed of to the amusement and gratification of the court and jury, if not to the audience, and it was followed by a pleasing farce called "A Tender Attachment." The parts by members of the Murray club were well performed and displayed considerable dramatic talent.

The first snow storms of the season for the past thirteen years have fallen on the following dates: 1870, Dec. 3; 1871, Nov. 10; 1872, Nov. 23; 1874, Nov. 20; 1875, Nov. 4; 1876, Nov. 19; 1877, Nov. 6: 1878, Nov. 7; 1879, Nov. 3; 1880, Nov. 15; 1882, Nov. 17; 1883, Dec. 16. A slight snow squall occurred on Nov. 12, of this year, but the snow hardly whitened the ground.

Last Saturday evening an extra horse car loaded with ladies and gentlemen from Salem, and drawn by four horses was approaching the square when the car left the track, running into the horses, and nearly throwing the car on its side. But for the skill of the driver in handling the horses there would have been a serious accident.

The thirty-ninth annual meeting of the Massachusetts Teachers' Association will be held in the girl's high school building, West Newton street, Boston, Thursday, Friday and Saturday of this week. Among the subjects to be discussed is the "No recess question," by Chas. W. Cole, Supt. of schools, Albany, New York.

SOUTH PEABODY.

Mr. Chas. H. Richardson of Wolfboro, N. H., has been visiting at his mother's the past week.

The entertainment at the vestry Thursday, Dec. 20th, netted about $12 for the building fund. It was a very good concert and was deserving of a larger audience than was present.

Sixty passengers came up on the extra car from the Uncle Tom's Cabin entertainment last Friday night.

Mr. Sylvester Williams has opened a shop on County street, for the purpose of repairing boots and shoes. Give Ves a call one and all.

The Glass ball club had a target shoot in the rear of J. H. Keith's store Christmas day when some good shots were made.

Christmas trees were held at the church, also at the residences of Mr. Wm. Marshall and Mr. Luther Oliver on Lynn street, when Santa Claus gave away many valuable and useful presents.

Too much praise cannot be given to the Lynn and Boston Railroad Company, for the manner in which they break out and try to keep the road clear of snow in this section of the town. One thing is sure and that is the So. Peabody people never had the road broke out and the walking made as good as it has been through this last storm. The side walks were all filled up with snow last Sunday and were almost impassible; and those on Brown street, leading to the church were partially dug out by the residents of that street.

The lady friends of Union Post 50 G. A. R., are respectfully asked to contribute articles or money to furnish the So. Peabody table, in the G. A. R. Fair. Committee on contribution, Mrs. W. W. Reed. The table will be in charge of Mrs. Edward Meacom, with the following assistants: Mrs. Frank Larrabee, Mrs. H. D. Larrabee, Mrs. T. H. Murray, Mrs. John Twiss, Mrs. D. B. Brown. What is given will be thankfully received. All are requested to meet at the house of Mrs. W. W. Reed, Thursday evening, Dec. 27, at 7.30 o'clock.

One night recently, a young man about twenty-five years of age, called at the stable of a resident here who keeps a team, and sometimes lets it fot driving and hired it of a boy in attendance during the proprietor's absence, stating that he would return inside of two hours. At the end of that time the team did not turn up and about four hours later, the horse walked into the yard dragging an empty buggy. The driver has not yet made his appearance to explain about the team, or to pay for its use. The gentleman thinks he was fortunate to get the team at all.

The snow plow for the L. & B. horse railroad company has required twenty horses a day. This makes the number short for the Peabody trips, and some of the horses have had to make two trips, or double the usual work.

The snow storms of the past week have cost the Lynn & Boston Railroad Company about $2000. The president, Hon. Amos F. Breed, rigged out with heavy boots and storm clothes, has been out on the road pretty much all the week, directing the movements of his men in clearing the snow from the streets and keeping the cars on time. It has cost the company upwards of $1000 to remove the snow from the tracks and team it away from the principal streets, and the loss in travel will nearly reach another thousand. Notwithstanding the heavy storms, the cars have run with their usual regularity.

The committee of the Grand Army Fairoffer some prizes in addition to those already mentioned. A pair of seal skin gloves to the most popular car driver running into town; a whip to the most popular driver of a provision, grocery or fish team; a solid gold ring or pair of bracelets to the lady who receives the most votes; and a barrel of flour and ton of coal to the widow who receives the largest number of votes. See adv. of the Committee in another column.

PENALTY FOR SIN—Dec. 20. Jos. O. Gray, drunk, $5.83.
21. William Chancy, drunk, $5.83.
26. Edward Cunningham and John Sullivan, assault, $2.42 each.

Book Notices.

A DICTIONARY AND ENGRAVING FREE.—It will be seen from the advertisement of the American Agriculturist (N. Y.), elsewhere, that a splendid six-hundred page Dictionary and Superb Engravings, can be obtained free by everybody. The American Agriculturist now forty-three years old, continues to be the recognized leading Agricultural Journal of the world. Every number contains nearly one hundred columns of original reading matter, and one hundred original Engravings by the leading Rural writers of the country and by the leading artists. The editorial matter is furnished by such well known writers as George Thurber, Joseph Harris, Wm. Clift, Byron D. Halsted, Prest. Liautard, Prof. Slade, of Harvard University, and Prof. Thompson, Nebraska University, while such well known artists as Edwin Forbes, Wm. M. Cary, and Alfred Trumble get up the original illustrations. During the coming year the paper will devote special attention to house plnas for farmers, exposures of humbugs, and information as to the best points in the West for settlers. The circulation of this Journal is to-day larger than at any period since the organization of the Company publishing it, and it will continue to be, as heretofore, the great journal for the Farm, Garden and Household. Price $1.50 a year. English or German.

The COTTAGE HEARTH for January is on our table, and contains a wealth of Christmas cheer in the shape of stories, poems, hints for decoration, all beautifully illustrated. The frontispiece represents a bright sweet-faced young girl in hood and furs, on her way, we may suppose, to the village church, to join in the carol "Peace on earth, Good will to men." Joaquin Miller opens this number with one of his inimitable stories of frontier life, written, we think, with more than usual care, and certainly of thrilling interest. "Christmas in Russia," is a deeply interesting account by a native Russian, Mr. B. F. Gorow, of a personal Christmas day experience in Losnowka, and gives us an insight into the homes, habits and customs of the Russians in midwinter. "The First Nowell" is a pleasing Christmas carol of the Fifteenth century, illustrated by a beautifully drawn engraving of Mary, the Babe, and the adoring shepherds. Two pages of Christmas poetry, "Tim's Christmas Tree" and Marion Ford's Hints for Christmas Decorations" make this issue one of the brightest magazines of this Christmas season. The department of receipts, Floriculture, Fancy Work, Fashions, and Household Hints show the careful work of experienced hands in their practical suggestions, and cannot fail to be instructive as well as interesting to every lady. The Publishers are to be congratulated on arriving at the Tenth anniversary of the founding of the magazine, and we are sure that as they have always more than fulfilled their promises in the past, the coming years will bring the increasing prosperity that is due to their efforts to publish a clean, pure, "Home Magazine."

The temple of drunkenness flares and flames before the eyes of the drunkard, and its treacherous doors are ominously on the spring. The touch of a finger will open to the antichamber of hell.—Very Rev. T. N. Burke, O. P.

The disagreeable operation of forcing liquids into the head, and the use of exciting snuffs, are being superseded by Ely's Cream Balm, a cure for Catarrh, Colds in the head and Hay Fever. Price 50 cents. Apply into the nostrils with the finger. Only Two Bottles. Messrs. Johnston, Holloway & Co., wholesale druggists of Philadelphia, Pa., report that some time ago a gentleman handed them a dollar, with a request to send a good catarrh cure to two army officers in Arizona. Recently the same gentleman told them that both the officers and the wife of a well-known U. S. A. General had been cured of Catarrh by the two bottles of Ely's Cream Balm.

We are here on earth only to accomplish the will of God. That will fulfills itself day by day, and he who dies leaving his work unfinished, is as advanced in the eyes of the Supreme Justice as he who has time to finish it entirely.—[Frederick Ozanam.

SELLING

BOOTS AND SHOES

— AT —

MANUFACTURER'S PRICES.

A DECIDED SUCCESS.

A great many firms in Lynn are puzzled at the large attendance and great success of our special sales, simply because these same firms have failed in their own efforts to attract attention and accomplish the same results. The reasons are plain, for we assert that our establishments can show many advantages over others. We give the following, which are convincing:

First.

Enormous stock. The immense stock of our wholesale house, together with our two retail stores, 84 Market street and 23 Market Square, make a stock to draw from five times larger than all the other shoe stores in Lynn combined.

Second.

Low Rents. While our competitors are handicapped by having to pay exorbitant rents, we with our three stores, have to pay rent only on one—a fact, the significance of which as bearing upon our ability to sell for less than others, will be apparent to all.

Third

Wholesale. Our wholesale trade, which now extends to every city and town of any importance in New England, obliges us to carry an immense stock and gives us an advantage in buying entirely beyond the reach of our competitors. For where they buy of the jobbers in small lots, we buy direct of the manufacturers, and that we can buy as low as the large Boston jobbers is abundantly attested by the fact that we are able to meet and compete with them on their own grounds and build up a wholesale trade which is constantly increasing.

Fourth.

One Price. Marked in plain figures on every pair of boots and shoes, guarantees low prices.—Equal treatment to all classes and shows at a glance the quality of the goods.

Fifth.

Truthful Representations. No misrepresentations are tolerated. Goods are sold for just what they are. Some stores adopt the "bait" plan, advertising great slaughter, immense bargains, etc. Call in half an hour after such stores open and in nearly every instance the salesman has the old story to tell you: "All gone;" "haven't your size;" "too late;" "very sorry, but we have had such a rush they are all out.—Can't we show you something else?" We have no such nonsense. It won't do.

Sixth.

Quick Sales and Small Profits. Quick sales are the life of a successful business. Small profits are sufficient when the business is done on live business principles. You save one profit by buying of the wholesaler.

Seventh.

Exchanging Goods or Refunding Money. When any dissatisfaction occurs because the selection does not please in every particular, the goods, if returned uninjured in a reasonable time, can be exchanged; and it matters not of whom it was selected, any salesman at leisure will pay careful attention to the customer. In case nothing is found to please, the cash will be cheerfully refunded.

Eighth.

Prompt Cash Payments. We are so conscious of the overwhelming advantages we possess both in buying and selling we have no hesitation in asserting that no prudent purchaser can afford to buy anything anywhere else until they have looked through our stock and got our prices. Ready money in our hands enables us to buy goods in large quantities at figures that the average retailer knows nothing about. To-day we stand simply as the connecting link between the manufacturer and consumer.

We have an immense surplus stock which we are going to close out during this sale. In order to accomplish this purpose we know at the outset that it will be necessary to offer sufficient inducements which we are determined to do. Consequently, in this instance as well as all others, we appeal directly to the interests of every purchaser, regarding that as decidedly more potent than volumes of positive assertions.

A GREAT JOURNAL.

The American Agriculturist, now 42 years old, is the recognized leading Agricultural Journal of the world. It furnishes far more engravings than any $4 periodical, and nearly as much original reading matter. Every number contains nearly 100 columns of original reading and nearly 100 Illustrations describing labor-saving devices, animals, plants—everything pertaining to the Farm, Garden and Household. Its Family and Children's Departments are the best in the world. Much space is given to plans for new buildings of every description; to the exposure of all humbug schemes for defrauding the unsuspecting, and to the best localitres in the Far West for Farmers to migrate to, &c, &c. TO THE PUBLIC!

We have always possessed the idea that the poor man's hard earned dollar should purchase just as much as a like amount of his wealthy neighbor.—WE BELIEVE IT. WE ACT UPON IT. Three years ago it was hard to convince customers that a firm in the FURNITURE business would or could make such a departure. WE DID, and our business to-day is a pleasing monument of its kindly reception by the people of Lynn, Swampscott, Saugus, Nahant, Marblehead, Peabody, Danvers, Lynnfield, Salem, &c., to whom we are more than thankful.

THE SUN.

NEW YORK, 1884.

About sixty million copies of THE SUN have gone out of our establishment during the last twelve months.

If you were to paste end to end all the columns of all THE SUNS printed and sold last year, you would get a continuous strip of interesting information common sense wisdom, sound doctrine, and sane wit long enough to reach from Printing House square to the top of Mount Copernicus in the moon, then back to Printing House square, and then three-quarters of the way back to the moon again.

But THE SUN is written for the inhabitants of this earth; this same strip of intelligence would girdle the earth twenty-seven or twenty-eight times.

If every buyer of a copy of THE SUN during the past year has spent only one hour over it, and his wife or his grandfather has spent another hour, this newspaper in 1883 has afforded the human race thirteen thousand years of steady reading night and day.

It is only by little calculations like these that you can form any idea of the circulation of the most popular of American newspapers, or of its influence on the opinions and actions of American men and women.

THE SUN is, and will continue to be, a newspaper which tells the truth without fear of consequences, which gets at the facts no matter how much the process costs, which presents the news of all the world without waste of words and in the most readable shape, which is working with all its heart for the cause of honest government, and which therefore believes that the Republican party must go, and must go in this coming year of our Lord, 1884.

If you know THE SUN, you like it already and you will read it with accustomed diligence and profit during what is sure to be the most interesting year in its history. If you do not yet know THE SUN, it is high time to get into the sunshine.

TERMS TO MAIL SUBSCRIBERS.

The several editions of THE SUN are sent by mail, postpaid as follows:

DAILY—50 cents a month, $6 a year; with Sunday editions, $7.

SUNDAY—Eight pages. This edition furnishes the current news of the world, special articles of exceptional interest to everybody, and literary reviews of new books of the highest merit. $1 a year.

WEEKLY—$1 a year. Eight pages of the best matter of the daily issues; an Agricultural Department of unequalled value, special market reports, and literary, scientific, and domestic intelligence make THE WEEKLY SUN the newspaper for the farmer's household. To clubs of ten with $10, an extra copy free.

THE LEADING MAGAZINE FOR THE BOYS & GIRLS

ST. NICHOLAS,

EDITED BY MRS. MARY MAPES DODGE.

The New York Tribune once said: "In the avalanche of immoral literature that threatens the children, some strong, vitally wholesome, and really attractive magazine is required for them, and St. Nicholas has reached a higher platform and commands for this service wider resources in art and letters, than any of its predecessors or contemporaries." The reference to the wide resources in art and letters commanded by St. Nicholas was never more fully illustrated than by the extraordinary list of attractions which that magazine announces for 1884. The following will be some of the leading contributors:

Louisa M. Alcott, J. T. Trowbridge,
Captain Mayne Reid, Hjalmar Hjorth Boyesen
Maurice Thompson, Frank R. Stockton,
Charles Dudley Warner, Joaquin Miller,
Elizabeth Stuart Phelps, Mrs. A.D.T. Whitney
Julian Hawthorne, Celia Thaxter,
Mary Mapes Dodge, Lieut. Frederick Schwatka,
Rose Hawthorne Lathrop, E. S. Brooks,
George W. Cable, Chas. G. Leland,
Susan Fenimore Cooper, John G. Whittier,
"H. H.," W.O. Stoddard, C. P. Cranch.

and scores of other distinguished writers. The best artists and engravers illustrate the magazine. It has been truly said that the reading of St Nicholas is for the boys and girls who are fortunate enough to have it. In no other book or periodical is instruction so happily blended with recreation and amusement.

The price is $3.00 a year, or 25 cents a number. Book-sellers, news-dealers, and postmasters receive subscriptions, or remittance may be made direct to the publishers, by money or express order, anbk check, draft, or in registered letter.

BY THE LIGHT OF DAY.

PAST IMPOSSIBILITIES THE FACTS OF THE PRESENT—HELP IN THE NEW ERA.

"I remember when they were putting up the poles for the first telegraph line in the State of New York, and now look there!" exclaimed a citizen of the metropolis to his friend, as the two stood on the summit of the tall Equitable Building in Broadway. "The city is strung with wires like a harp, and electric communication is the daily miracle of the world. People no longer wonder and laugh at it as they did at Morse when he first suggested its possibility."

The age marches on and prejudice must give way. Nobody has a monopoly of truth. Even the conservative guild of physicians admit that the secrets of medicine are shared by all men. "I dressed his wound, and God healed him," said old Galen. Once that terrible disease, Rheumatism, was supposed to be a shifting, local ailment, now attacking the joints and now the muscles To-day it is demonstrated to be a disease of the blood"

Mrs. Henry Bogert, of No. 454 Atlantic Avenue, Brooklyn, N. Y., writes to Messrs. HISCOX & Co., of New York, proprietors of PARKER'S GINGER TONIC, that "she had been completely disabled from Rheumatism and pain in the back and limbs She was advised to take the Tonic for Kidney disease. She did so, and her Rheumatism disappeared." The reason is simple. Diseased kidneys produce rheumatic symptoms. Cure them and you destroy Rheumatism. This is now admitted by all intelligent physicians. It is the new light thrown on their time-worn and mistaken theories.

PARKER'S GINGER TONIC, which is a combination of the best remedies for the blood known to science, is universally successful in combating this terribly complaint. Those who, like Mrs. Bogert, suffer from Kidney or Liver diseases or any complaint arising from impure blood, will find the TONIC a prompt and certain remedy. Prices, 50c. and $1. a bottle. The larger size the cheaper.

Miscellaneous.

SIXTY FEET UNDER THE SEA.

"I was once a diver—not a wrecker, but a pearl diver—and hard business it was," recently observed the captain of a Spanish brig to a reporter of the California Times. "We worked off the Mexican and Panama coasts, principally on the Pacific side. Sometimes we worked alone, but generally on shares, and sometimes for pay. We went to the grounds in small sailing vessels, then we took to the small boats and covered as much ground as possible. Each man had a basket, a weight and a knife. For sharks? Yes, but it is a poor defence, for it is almost impossible to swing the arm with any force under water. The best weapon is a short spear. When you reach the ground you strip, put your feet in a big sinker, take the basket that has a rope for hoisting, drop over, and soon find yourself at the bottom.

"Then your business is to knock off as many oysters as you can and pile them into the basket before you lose your wind. It is a terrible strain, but I could stand it in those days for six minutes, and I have known some men who could stay down ten; but it is sure death in the long run. If the ground is well stocked you can get twenty or more shells, but it is all luck. When the basket is full it is hauled up, and after you come up for your wind down you go again, the sinker being hauled up with a small cord for that purpose. It was on one of these trips that I ran afoul of the animal that gave me a lasting fright. You will smile when I say it was only a star fish, but that it really was. I went down sixty feet with a rush, and landing on the edge of a big bunch of coral, swung offinto a kind of basin. The basket went ahead of me, and as I swung off to reach the bottom something seemed to spring up all around me, and I was in the arms of some kind of a monster that coiled about my body, arms and legs. I tried to scream, forgetting that I was in the water, and lost my wind.

"It was just as if the plant had sprouted under me and threw its vines and tendrils about me. There were thousands of them, coiling and writhing, and I thought I had landed in a nest of sea snakes. I gave the signal as soon as I could, and made a break upward, part of the creature clinging to me, while the rest, I could see, was dropping to pieces. They hauled me into the boat when I reached the surface, and pulled the main part of the animal from me. It was oval, about three feet across, and the five arms seemed to divide into thousands of others. I probably landed on top of that one, which at this time was the largest I had ever seen. I afterward saw the body of one that was washed ashore on the isthmus that must have had a spread of thirty-five feet. Their power of grasping is considerable, but touch them in a certain way and they throw off their arms in a regular shower, and are soon reduced to an oval body."

THE VENUS OF MILO.

The following was the manner in which this chef d'œuvre came into the possession of France: In 1820 a Greek peasant of the Island of Milo—the ancient Melos of the Cyclades—in digging the ground found it buried and broken in three fragments in a recess about seven or eight feet below the surface. The French consul at Milo was then M. Brest, whom the peasant informed of his treasure, and offered to sell it for a small sum. The functionary, who knew little about the fine arts, referred to M. Duval d'Ailly, Commander of the French Government transport the Emulation, then at the island. The latter proposed to purchase the statue immediately, and remove it to his vessel. But this proceeding was too hasty for the formalist, M. Brest, who wrote a long letter to the Marquis de Riviere, Ambassador for Louis XVIII. at the Porte. This communication was lost on the way, but, fortunately for France, M. d'Urville arrived at that moment in Milo to conduct a hydrographical survey. He saw the statue, recognized at once the value of it, and sent a special courier to the Marquis de Riviere. The Ambassador despatched Count de Marcellus to Milo, with instructions to effect the purchase. But all these formalities had taken time, and when the Count arrived in the island the Venus had been shipped on board a Turkish brig and was about to leave for Constantinople. He immediately applied to the Primate, who, pressed by his assistance and even menaces, ordered the statue to be landed and sold by auction. This was what Count de Marcellus desired, and having become possessor of the treasure he started for France with it, and did not stop until he had reached Paris. He had bought it in the name of Marquis de Riviere, who transferred his bargain to Louis XVIII., and the King presented the statue to the nation. Such is the history of one of the most exquisite specimens of Greek art in the world.

CASTILE SOAP.

The hard soaps made in this country are almost exclusively from animal fats. In the south of Europe, where the olive grows abundantly, the poorer kinds of olive oil are used for soap-making. Castile soaps are soda and vegetable oil. In making castile soap great care should be taken to avoid an excess of alkali (the soda), only just enough being used to neutralize the oil. On this account the much milder may be used on wounds and other surfaces where common soap would irritate and give pain. The mottled appearance of castile soap is due to a small quantity of solution of copperas (sulphate of iron), which is stirred into it before it hardens; this leaves a blush of oxide of iron in the soap, which when exposed to the air becomes changed to the red oxide. White castile soap is also sold, which is the same as the other without the coloring.

The Peculiar Old Mystery!

It was one of the peculiarities of the old-fashioned Doctors that they never would tell patients what they were prescribing for them. They said it would do the patients no good to know, and that it would only be gratifying a foolish curiosity. In order to keep patients from knowing, they would write the prescriptions in dog-Latin, so that most patients could not read them. All that sort of thing is now over. The patient wants to know what he takes. He is weak, and wants to be strong, or he is dyspeptic, and wants to digest well. Or he has a troublesome liver which he wants to put to rights. So he takes Brown's Iron Bitters about which there is no mystery at all. This is the best preparation of iron in the world, in combination with gentle yet efficient tonics. It gives strength. It builds up enfeebled systems. It enriches impoverished blood. It removes feminine weaknesses. It casts out debility. It is what you want, and your druggist has it. 2

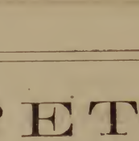
EDMUND BURKE,

Late Commissioner of Patents."



"Boston, October 19, 1870.

R. H. EDDY, Esq.—Dear Sir: You procured for me, in 1840, my first patent Since then you have acted for and advised me in hundreds of cases, and procured many patents, reissues and extensions. I have occasionally employed the best agencies in New York, Philadelphia and Washington, but I will give you almost the whole of my business, in your line, and advise others to employ you.

Yours Truly, GEORGE DRAPER."

COLOGNE

THE CENTURY.

Programme for 1883-84.

The programme for the fourteenth year of this magazine, and the third under the new name, is if anything more interesting and popular than ever. With every season, THE CENTURY shows a decided gain in circulation. The new volume begins with November, and, when possible, subscriptions should begin with that issue. The following are some of the features of the coming year:

A NEW NOVEL BY GEORGE W. CABLE, author of "Old Creole Days," etc., entitled 'Dr. Sevier," a story of New Orleans life, the time being the eve of the late Civil War

"LIFE IN THE THIRTEEN COLONIES," by Edward Eggleston, separate illustrated papers on subjects connected with the early history of this country.

THREE STORIES BY HENRY JAMES, of varying lengths, to appear through the year.

THE NEW ASTRONOMY, untechnical articles by Prof. S. P. Langley, describing the most interesting of recent discoveries in the sun and stars.

A NOVELETTE BY H. H. BOYESEN, author of "Gunnar," etc A vivid and sparkling story.

THE NEW ERA IN AMERICAN ARCHITECTURE, a series of papers descriptive of the best work of American architects in Public Buildings, City and Country Houses, etc. To be profusely illustrated.

A NOVELETTE BY ROBERT GRANT, author of "Confessions of a Frivolous Girl," etc., entitled "An Average Man,"—a story of New York.

THE BREAD-WINNERS, one of the most remarkable novels of the day, to be completed in January.

CHRISTIANITY AND WEALTH, with other essays, by the author of "The Christian League of Connecticut," etc., on the application of Christian morals to the present phases of modern life.

COASTING ABOUT THE GULF OF ST. LAWRENCE, a series of entertaining articles, profusely illustrated.

SCENES FROM THE NOVELISTS, Hawthorne, George Eliot, and Cable, with authentic drawings.

ON THE TRACK OF ULYSSES, the record of a yacht-cruise in the Mediterranean, identifying the route of Ulysses on his return from the Trojan war;

"GARFIELD IN ENGLAND," extracts from his private journal kept during a trip to Europe in 1867.

"THE SILVERADO SQUATTERS," by Robert Louis Stevenson, author of New Arabian Nights.

There will be papers on outdoor England by John Burroughs and others, a beautifully illustrated series on Dante, a number of papers by the eminent French novelist Alphonse Daudet, articles on art and archæology by Charles Dudley Warner and others, illustrated papers on sport and adventure, short stories by the leading writers, essays on timely subjects, etc., etc.

Subscription price, $4.00 a year; single numbers sold everywhere, at 35 cents each. All dealers receive subscriptions, or remittance may be made direct to the publishers by postal or express order, registered letter bank check or draft.

SPECIAL OFFERS.

To enable new subscribers to begin with the first volume under The Century name, we make the following special offers:

New subscribers beginning with November, 1883, may obtain the magazine for one year from date, and the twenty-four previous numbers, unbound, for $8.00. Regular price for the three years, $12.00.

Or, if preferred, a subscription and the twenty-four numbers bound in four elegant volumes will be furnished for $10. Regular price, $16.

MADE ON PURPOSE.

ONE OF THOSE MISTAKES(?) WHICH ARE MORE FREQUENT THAN PROFITABLE.

"Why, my child, this is not BENSON'S CAPCINE POROUS PLASTER," said a father to his little daughter, after examining a package she had just brought from the drug store.

"Isn't it, Papa? I'm sorry, but I asked the man for Benson's—I know I did, and he took the twenty-five cents you gave me to pay for it with," exclaimed the child, positively. "Maybe the drug man made a mistake"

"I'll go 'round myself and see," was the gentleman's comment as he donned his coat and hat.

"Why didn't you send me Benson's plaster, instead of this cheap and trashy thing?"

"Why, I,—I, thought that would suit you just as well—and—"

"You thought! you thought! What business had you to think? I don't pay you for thinking, but for filling my order," said the indignant caller, contemptuously, "There! take that thing back and give me my money, I'll get what I want elsewhere."

Miscellaneous.

CURIOUS NOTICES.

Genuine notices of a ridiculous nature are by no means rare. Adam Clarke relates that he saw exhibited outside an inn in Sweden this tantalizing notice to the weary traveller: "You will find excellent bread, meat and wine within, provided you bring them yourself." The following inscription was posted over a cobbler's stall of the last century: "John Nust, Operator in Ordinary and Extraordinary, Mender of Soles, Uniter of the Disunited, Restorer of Union and Harmony though of ever so long and wide a separation. N. B.—Gives advice gratis in the most desperate cases, and never pockets his fee till he has performed a cure." This figurative cobbler was perhaps educated at the Yorkshire village school, which, in 1774, exhibited on a sign the following specimen of the learning to be had within: "Wrighten and Readden and Trew Spellen and also Marchantts Ackounts with double Entery. Post Skript Girils and Bouys Boarded and good Yozitch for Childeren." If the "Yozitch" the children received at this Dotheboys Hall was on a level with the spelling we pity them. D an Alford relates that the following perspicuous notice to engine-drivers was exhibited—for a short time only, let us hope—at a railway station: "Hereafter, when trains moving in an opposite direction are approaching each other on separate lines, conductors and engineers will be required to bring their respective trains to a dead halt before the point of meeting, and be very careful not to proceed till each train has passed the other." Equally lucid was the placard announcing a pleasure trip on a trim little steamboat: "Gleaner is one of the finest and fastest boats on the Tyne; her accommodation is in every respect good and comfortable, her crew skilful, and obliging, being newly painted and decorated for pleasure trips." Those who write notices sometimes have the tables turned upon them by some waggish reader, who appends or deletes a few words or letters, which has the effect of making the imitation set forth a different meaning from the one intended by the original notifier. A few days previous to the beginning of a seseion this brief and serious enough looking notice was affixed to the notice-board at the entrance of one of the class-rooms of Edinburgh University: "Professor —— will meet his classes on the 4th inst." On the opening day a student, who had probably attended the class during the previous session and had imbibed some of the well-known humor of his witty preceptor, erased the letter "c" of the word classes, A group of youths remained in the vicinity of the entrance to observe how the professor would receive the intimation, which now set forth that he would "meet his lasses on the 4th inst." As the professor approached he observed the change that had been made, and quietly taking out his pencil made some further modification and passed on, a quiet smile overspreading his features. The notice now finally stood: "Professor —— will meet his asses on the 4th inst."

TEDIOUS TALKERS.

How many tedious talkers one is forced to tolerate in the highways and byways of society! They commence a sentence and pause, make a great account of a prolonged "and," use a word and then change it for another, and consume so much precious time that, the listener becoming impatient, what they say is deemed small compensation for the time occupied. Surrounded by bright spirits, all of whom have something to say well worth the hearing, it is insufferably annoying to be obliged to sit outwardly calm and respectful and listen to long-drawn sentences, the pith of whose meaning could have been expressed in a few well-chosen words. It may be said in extenuation that all have not the power to "talk right on." But the habit of talking well may be acquired. In the first place, one must be sure he has something to say before monopolizing the time which might otherwise be profitably and pleasantly employed; and then, in a few simple, well-adapted words, bear part in the general conversation. The wiser and more educated the society in which one finds himself, the less the necessity of robbing the dictionary for its polysyllables. The best one has to say is best said in the simplest manner, for all love most that "talk" which seems the natural overflow of the mind. Also discard all desire to shine, and listen with respectful attention when others speak.

AMERICAN CIDER.

Among the articles which Englishmen are glad to import from this country is sweet cider. Within the last three or four years a large trade has sprung up between New York and Liverpool, and a dozen merchants handle American cider in bulk. In Great Britain, English cider, made mostly in Devonshire, brings a less price than the American. Some cider also goes to France, but Frenchmen are not so fond of it as the English. The pressing is all done by steam in October, November and December. The apples used are mostly of the ungrafted kind, and are perfectly sound; otherwise the flavor of the cider would be impaired. Last season more than two hundred and fifty thousand bushels of apples were crushed, and the product was twenty thousand barrels of cider. The juice is allowed to ferment until it reaches a certain stage, and is then filtered through sand to clean it thoroughly. It is drawn off in large vats, and is kept until it is wanted for barreling. The barrels are bunged very tightly, and the cider keeps without change for two or three years. Any stock which becomes sour by age is made into vinegar and sells for three-fourths of the price of cider.

Self-reliance is quite distinct from self-assertion.

MR. AND MRS. NEWCOMB,

OF STATE ST., SPRINGFIELD, MASS. WHAT THEY SAY IN FAVOR OF A REAL HONEST THING—THEIR WORD AS GOOD AS GOLD.

Mrs. Newcomb is the wife of one of the employees in the United States Armory, Springfield, Mass. She says: "I have used Dr. Kennedy's FAVORITE REMEDY for Indigestion and Biliousness. My husband has also used it. We keep it in the house as a family medicine, and consider it the best ever made for the purpose recommended."

Dr. Kennedy is daily in receipt of letters from patients expressing similar sentiments as these expressed by Mrs. Newcomb, of State street. These letters are spontaneous and put in all varieties of phraseology, but invariably setting forth one thing—the value of Kennedy's FAVORITE REMEDY for many forms of disease. It may be just the thing you have been looking for. Is your Liver disordered? Have you Derangement of the Kidneys or Bladder associated with Constipation of the Bowels? If so, you want Kennedy's FAVORITE REMEDY. Dr. Kennedy practices Medicine and Surgery in all their Branches. Write and state your case. "Favorite Remedy" is fast becoming a trusted household friend in all cases of Female Weakness and diseases of the blood. One dollar a bottle. Your druggist has it.

HORSE FLESH IN FRANCE.

The following statistics, with reference to the consumption of horseflesh in Paris, may be found interesting: The municipal statistics of the City of Paris show that in 1881 the Parisians consumed 9,300 horses and 400 asses or mules, which amounts to about 2,000,000 kilogrammes of meat. The Hygiene Pratique et Gazette Hebdomadaire des Sciences Medicales de Montpellier regards this form of food as a valuable resource, when it is considered that many French people scarcely ever touch meat, in consequence of the enormous disproportion between the production of cattle and the population of the country. The same journal observes that science has long demonstrated the excellent quality of the flesh of the horse. The animal is essentially herbivorous, and no noxious element is elaborated in its animal economy; while its organic resistance is such that out of 3,000 horses which were cut up, M. Pierre, a well-known veterinary surgeon, did not find one in which the viscera showed any traces of morbid lesions. Like veal and young beef, the flesh of a young horse is white, and its nutritious qualities are in direct relation with the age of the animal which furnishes it; but when the colt is three years old its meat, already deep colored, is very nourishing. When the horse has attained full age its flesh contains, in a maximum quantity, all the nutritive qualities which are necessary. Liebig and Moleschott have pointed out that horseflesh contains more creatine, that is to say, more albuminous matter than ox-beef, which makes it largely nourishing. It has, in fact, been demonstrated that four kilogrammes of horseflesh are as nourishing as five kilogrammes of beef. The color is not displeasing, nor is the smell unpleasant, and its use in the treatment of diseases for which raw meat has been recommended does not present the inconveniences which are often met with in the raw flesh of beef or mutton; in fact, every day large numbers of oxen, cows and sheep are killed which are known to be diseased, and of which it is feared to lose the sale. This can never be the case with regard to the horse, for most horses used for food are sent to the slaughter house simply because they have become old or incapable of working, or because some accident has disabled them.—British Medical Journal.

SAVED BY A SNEEZE.

The sneeze was one of the old-fashioned whoop-ee-oo-whoop, three times order. I was surprised to see my friend, the Captain, step forward with eager spryness, and hear him shout with the joyfulness of a man who had made a discovery, "Why, how do you do, Major?"

The two men clutched each other, and shook each other by the hands and shoulders, and finally made me understand that they hadn't seen one another for nineteen years. The Major had changed greatly, and he asked, in bewilderment, how the Captain knew him. "By your sneeze," was the answer. "There is no sneeze like that in this country, you know. And when I heard it ring out I remembered the time at Guyandotte, you know, and I knew Major Mitchell was before me."

Then turning to me the Captain said: "That was our first scouting expedition early in the war. We landed in the evening to look up some guerillas who had made a rush that day to the steamboat landing. The regiment divided, and the men went scampering over the country in gleeful recklessness. Soon it became very dark, and both battalions lost their way. Moving forward in line, one battalion came suddenly on a body of troops formed to receive them, with skirmishers out. Neither officers nor men were clear as to what the regulations called for in such a case, and there was a hurried and excited conference. The troops might be our own men, but they ignored every challenge, and we knew that they, like ourselves, were ready to fire. There was a minute of terrible suspense, everybody in doubt. Then suddenly there rang out from the ghostly line in the distance the Major's double-shotted sneeze. It was like the ringing of a joyful knell, and in our relief both battalions fairly danced as roar after roar of laughter succeeded the sneeze. It was a narrow escape from a mistake, too common then, of one Union regiment pouring a murderous fire into another. The Major's sneeze saved us.—Chicago Inter-Ocean.

SHEEP RANCHES IN THE WEST.

The sheep ranches are usually desolate places; a great stretch of seemingly bare lands, with a few fenced corrals, blackened and foul smelling; the home and outbuildings clustered together in a hollow or on a hillside where there is water; the less human the neighborhood the better.

The loneliness of the life is, of itself, a salient objection to the industry. Of this the great owners need know nothing; they can live where they like. But for the small sheepmen, the shepherds and above all the herders, it is a terrible life—how terrible is shown by the frequency of insanity among herders. Sometimes, after only a few months of the life, a herder goes suddenly mad. After learning this fact it is no longer possible to see the picturesque side of the effective groups one so often comes on suddenly in the wildernesses; sheep peacefully grazing and the shepherd lying on the ground watching them, or the whole flock racing in a solid, fleecy, billowy scamper up or down a steep hillside, with the dogs leaping and barking on all sides at once. One scans the shepherd's face alone with pitying fear lest he may be losing his wits.

The best method of disposing of half the slanders of the age is to pay them no attention. It would be a much better arrangement.

NEWPORT, R. I., Nov. 12, 1883.
J. D. & J. W. EATON, Dear Sirs: Enclosed please find check for amount of bill for CRAWFORD RANGE and Ware. It arrived last Friday noon, and we had it set up and a fire in it before four o'clock. We are more than pleased with it. All our cooking was done Saturday morning. It usually takes all day to do it. My wife thinks she shall take to cooking again herself, as it is real fun to cook with such a Range as the CRAWFORD. Hoping you may sell a great many more of them, and every purchaser be as well pleased as we are. I remain yours, very truly,

In the month of December, 1882, The Boston Daily Journal was reduced in price from $9 per annum to $6 per annum. It achieved almost from the start a decided success. We now reduce the price of The Boston Weekly Journal from $1.50 per annum to
One Dollar.
This reduction makes it the Cheapest New England Newspaper. There will be no abatement in the effort to make the paper more acceptable than ever to the people of New England. It will not be cheapened in any department, but it will be improved to meet the expectations of the Fifty Thousand New Readers
Who we are confident will send in their names.
For less than Two Cents per week, postage prepaid, the reader will have a weekly newspaper of Thirty-six Long Columns, which will give him all the news of the day; Reports of the Markets; Articles on the Crops; Essays upon Home Topics, by our own Contributor; What is going on in Boston, Musical, Monetary and Financial; Correspondence from all parts of the World, by our own correspondents. Manufacturing and Railroad News; Congressional Matters; Political Jottings; Editorials upon Live Topics. Associated Press Dispatches from all parts of the United States, and Current News from Maine, New Hampshire and Vermont, from our own resident correspondents.
Presidential Year.
The year 1881, which is the Presidential year, will be one of great interest. While The Journal is known as the leading Republican Newspaper of New England, it never fails to give full reports of the leading features of the campaign as presented by both parties.
No one need plead ignorance of what is taking place on account of the cost, for The Boston Weekly Journal has proved in the past, and will continue to be, a great educator of the people of New England.
We point with gratification to the following opinions of The Journal:
The Journal is a clean paper, and there is never anything in its columns that can offend good taste or corrupt the morals of the young, at the same time it is fully abreast of the times in everything that pertains to first-class journalism.—[Boston Courier.
The Boston Journal is a credit to our journalism. Its tone is high, its conduct is able, its news is fresh, its telegraphic dispatches are admirable as well as strictly reliable.—[Boston Gazette.
The Journal is a candid, consistent, able and enterprising newspaper.—[Boston Times.
To great business sagacity in its management, The Journal adds a scrupulous regard for what is wholesome and manly in journalism. The influence of a great newspaper is far-reaching, especially upon society and in the home, and the reading public owe it to themselves to discriminate in favor of a newspaper of the abounding enterprise and high character of The Journal.—[Nashua Telegraph.
The Journal's prosperity, which is of substantial character, has been well earned by honest dealing with the public. It is in its fiftieth volume, more vigorous than ever.—[Philadelphia Ledger.
The Journal is one of the ablest and brightest papers in New England, and its splendid success is the best kind of a compliment to the discriminating judgment of its constituency.—[Philadelphia Press.
TAKE NOTICE.
Subscriptions at the above rates will be received for one year from this date.
BOSTON SEMI-WEEKLY JOURNAL.
Published on Tuesdays and Fridays, is a paper of especial value to persons engaged in commercial pursuits outside the large cities. It contains, in addition to all the news of the day, the fullest possible market, commercial and marine reports, besides a large amount of valuable reading matter of a miscellaneous character.
The Boston Semi-Weekly Journal is a paper which no man actively engaged in trade and watching the course of mercantile affairs can afford to be without.

Harper's Bazar.
ILLUSTRATED.
Harper's Bazar is at once the most brilliant and useful Household Journal in existence. It is the acknowledged arbiter of fashion in this country. Its fashion plates are the newest and most stylish; and its pattern sheet supplements and economic suggestions alone are worth many times the cost of subscription. Its illustrations of art needlework are from the best resources. Its literary and artistic merits are of the highest order. Its stories, poems, and essays are by the first American and European authors. Its choice art pictures would fill portfolios, and its humorous cuts are the most amusing to be found in any Journal in America. A host of brilliant novelties are promissed for 1884.

Elizabeth Stuart Phelps, Mrs. A. D. T. Whitney, Mrs. Dinah Mulock-Craik, Edward Everett Hale, "H. H.," Susan Coolidge, Arthur Gilman, Lucy Larcom, E. E. B., Mrs. Catherwood, Rev. Charles R. Talbot, Mrs. Lucy C. Lillie, Margaret Sidney, George MacDonald, Lady Dunboyne, Mrs. Raymond Blathwayt (Aunt Maggie), Mrs. Louise I. Craigin, Mrs. Lizzie W. Champney, Mary E. Wilkins, Mrs. Kate Gannett Wells, Prof. H. A. Sargent, Ernest Ingersoll, Marian Harland, Sarah Orne Jewett, Mrs. Clara Doty Bates, Elbridge S. Brooks, M. E. W. S. (Mrs. John Sherwood), Miss Amanda B. Harris, Sophie May, Mrs. Kate Upson Clarke, Margaret Eytinge, Rose Kingsley, Edwin D. Mead, Mrs. Susan Power, Mrs. Jessie Benton Fremont, Mrs. Sarah K. Bolton, Phillip Bourke Marston, Celia Thaxter, Nora Perry, Rose Hawthorne Lathrop, Mrs. A. M. Diaz.
ILLUSTRATED SERIAL STORIES FOR 1884:
I. A BRAVE GIRL. By Elizabeth Stuart Phelps, author of Gates ajar, Doctor Zay, The Story of Avis, etc.
II. A DISTRICT MESSENGER BOY. By James Otis.
III. PANSEY BILLINGS. By "H. H."
IV. PAMELA'S FORTUNE. By Mrs. Lucy C. Lillie, author of Prudence, etc.
V. HIS THREE TRIALS. A story for boys, by Mrs. Kate Gannet Wells.
VI. AN HISTORICAL SERIAL. (To begin in December.)
VII. IN NO-MAN'S-LAND. A wonder story for little folks. By Elbridge S. Brooks.
Among the purely pictorial attractions will be fine Frontispieces from the studio of F. H. Lungren, whose A-Maying and Winter Birds, in Wide Awake attracted so much attention in 1882. W. Parker Badlish will contribute a picture-serial, in fifty scenes and twenty-four interludes, entitled Through France in Sabots. Miss Jessie McDermott has prepared a novel set of twelve full-page pictures under the title, The Procession of the Zodiac. Joseph Pennell has sent from Italy some twenty interesting and beautiful drawings of Child-Life in Venice; Henry Sandham has contributed another series, illustrative of a Winter Carnival in Canada; and George Foster Barnes has just completed an alphabet of novel and artistic decorative initials.
Many valuable contributions, very pleasant reading for the curious, are in hand; among them two articles about Famous Dwarfs, and one about Famous Giants, by Isabel Smithson, illustrated by Edmund H. Garrett, from authentic sources; The Troubadours, by George Foster Barnes illustrated by the author; The Gypsies, by Mrs. Catherwood, giving much novel matter, the illustrations including drawings from life sketches made among the gypsie caves of Granada the past winter.
Edward Everett Hale will make an interesting contribution to historical literature, through Wide Awake, in the form of several articles entitled The Story of Boston Common, giving complete its curious early history, describing famous events and scenes connected with its green shades and malls, and narrating many tales and traditions, quaint but authentic. These articles will be fully illustrated.
Mrs. Clara Doty Bates, whose versifications in Wide Awake of various nursery tales, Silver-locks and the Bears, Three little Pigs, Little Red Ridinghood, etc., are received as the classic and standard form of these old favorites, has now put in verse Twelve of Æsop's Fables. These fables have a setting decoratively novel and richly pictorial.
Twelve of George McDonald's lyrics are being set to music by popular foreign composers, among them, Reenecke, Jadassohn, Rheinberger, Lachner, Jungmann and Cowen. These musical compositions have been secured for Wide Awake by Louis C. Elson, the musical editor, lately in Europe on that commission, and they will undoubtedly form the most notable of contributions to music for young folks.
In addition, there have been secured a brilliant line of short stories, travels, practical articles, illustrated poems, etc.; and when the attractions of the C. Y. F. R. U. Reading Course, with its seven series of pithy articles are taken into account, our readers, young and old, may feel assured of a year of rich entertainment.
Wide Awake is only $2.50 a year. Liberal terms to agents. Address D. LOTHROP & CO., Franklin street, Boston.

NEW ENGLAND ONE PRICE SHOE HOUSE.

The 1981 issue of the Boston Globe three years ago, was an immense hit. On January 1, 1884, next Tuesday, The Globe will go back 100 years, and issue a fac-simile of a Boston newspaper of January 1, 1784, and give a copy to every reader of The Globe. The state of society at that time will also be given, and The Globe itself will be illustrated, showing the firemen, policemen, etc., etc., of 100 years ago.

An exchange says that it is "certainly very funny to hear a man howling about home industry, when he uses a rubber stamp to make the most horrible daubs of letter heads and cards with which nice white paper is spoiled. Most men's idea of patronizing home industries is for everybody else to do it."

The window of Porter's market on Central street, Salem, was very fancifully arranged for the holidays. There was a large cornucopia, from which was being poured all kinds of vegetables and other edibles for sale at his market. It attracted much attention.

Plants and flowers for the holidays, and everything in the florists' line can be had on favorable terms of E. & C. Woodman, florists, Tapleyville.

The Raymond & Whitcomb winter excursion party to California already numbers upwards of 100, and will leave Boston Dec. 29. It is made up chiefly of people from the New England and the Middle States.

Mr. Chas. Smith, Lynn, Mass. writes that his wife has for years been a great sufferer from female complaints, indigestion, nervousness and general debility, for which I have spent over $500, but she received no help until she commenced to take Swedish Botanic Compound, which has entirely cured her.

The Foreign Exhibition in Boston is announced to close on the 5th of January, and we advise all our readers to make it a visit if possible. It is not merely to please the eye for a moment, but it is instructive and many valuable practical suggestions will be gained from it. An hour there is worth something, but an entire day can be profitably spent in examining its numerous features.

A series of conventions in the interest of a petition to the legislature of this state for constitutional prohibition, is to be held during the winter. Hon. John B. Finch, of Nebraska, the well-known advocate of temperance, has been secured to address these meetings, a fact which alone gives to the movement an importance that is unusual. The convention for the eastern part of Essex county will be held at Sewall street M. E. church, Salem, Friday, December 28, at 2 p. m.

A great demand for dimes having arisen of late, the director of the mint has authorized the purchase of 50,000 ounces of silver for the coinage of money of the above denomination.—That is where Uncle Sam has the advantage of the poor printer. He always feels the demand for dimes.

The latest typhoid fever theory is that the germs were scattered in milk cans. It is possible. Almost anything can be found in milk cans nowadays—almost anything but milk.

STORY IN EIGHTEEN CHAPTERS BY

MERRILL & MACKINTIRE.

CHAPTER 1.

BOOKS.

Our success in the past with these, the best of all Holiday Souvenirs, has encouraged us to put forth greater efforts to give our patrons the choice of all the leading Juvenile, Miscellaneous, and Standard Books. We enumerate below a few of the bargains that we are offering:—

Getting Ahead, Pansies, Two Boys, 75 cent Books for 25 cents.

Wide Awake, $1.50 Books for 44 cts.

Peter Parley's Annual, 300 pages, with colored illustrations, $1.50 Book for 74 cents.

And a host of other bargains which must be seen to be appreciated.

CHAPTER 2.

FINE FANCY GOODS.

We flatter ourselves that the assortment of these, now on exhibition, is second to none in the county, and consists in part of Celluloid Sets, Nail Sets, Glove and Handkerchief Boxes, Ink Stands in every conceivable shape, Thermometers, Watch Stands, Ash Trays, Ladies' and Gents' Dressing Cases and Companions, on the line of goods. If we do say it, no house in this county can show you a larger assortment or quote you any lower prices.

CHAPTER 3.

Photograph, Albums.

The remarkable success attending our sales the past year, has encouraged us to put in a larger line than ever.

Lot No. 1,	25c,	never sold less than				40c
" " 2,	67c,	"	"	"	"	1.00
" " 3,	1.00,	"	"	"	"	1.25
" " 4,	1.50,	"	"	"	"	2.00
" " 5,	2.00,	"	"	"	"	2.50
" " 6,	2.50,	"	"	"	"	3.00
" " 7,	2.88,	"	"	"	"	3.25

And so we could go on giving prices up to $25 retail. Suffice it to say that if you desire to purchase a Photograph Album, we can save you from 20 to 25 per cent. The line embraces Padded Tops, Patent Catches, Round Corners, and all the novelties.

CHAPTER 4.

WALLETS. BILL BOOKS, CARD CASES, LETTER CASES.

PURSES, CIGAR CASES, FLAT SHOPPING BAGS, &c., &c.

We consider this our best department and have stocked it accordingly. Never before have we had the immense stock of the above goods, and varied enough in price and styles to suit all tastes, that we are to offer to you this season.

Wallets, from 10c to $7.00 each.
Bill Books, from 25c to $5.00.
Card Cases, from 25c to $3.00.
Letter Cases, from 25c to $5.00.
Purses, from 10c to $3.50.
Cigar Cases, from 25c to $5.00.
Flat Shopping Bags, from 75c to $4.50.

More kinds and more of each kind than any retail house in the State.

CHAPTER 5.

Christmas Cards.

From all the leading card makers of the world, ranging in price from 1 cent to $5 each. Acknowledged by all who have looked them over to be the choicest and largest collection ever shown here. Having a jobbing trade in these goods, it enables us to buy them in large quantities, and to see the complete lines of all the best manufacturers; and we feel sure, after an examination, you will with one accord, give our exhibit first rank over all others.

CHAPTER 6.

LITERARY CALENDARS.

Wholesale and retail. The line includes Bryant's, the most beautiful of all; Longfellow's, Emerson's, Shakspeare's, Day Unto Day, Scriptures, American History. All at popular prices

CHAPTER 7.

BLOCKS, GAMES AND PUZZLES.

More new Games this season than have been published for some years past, and we should be pleased to show them to you. Dominoes, Checker Boards, Backgammon Boards; the new Emca Puzzle, that is selling like hot cakes; Paint Boxes, from 5 cents to $1 each, and our Dollar Paint Box is the best one you ever saw for the money; Transparent Slates, "Fisher's Educational Toy; Money is a capital thing for the children."

Magic Lanterns—we have a right good one for one dollar.

Bicycle Race and Skating Rink new games in one. The most e ams Board ever published.

CHAPTER 8.

WEST'S GROUPS & STATUARY

Similar in coloring and material to the celebrated Rogers Groups, only they are sold at prices that come within the reach of all. All the new ones, and the best of the old, from $1.50 upwards.

CHAPTER 9.

GOLD PENS, PENCILS, ETC.,

AND THE LATEST NOVELTIES IN PENCIL CHARMS

Our assortment for this season comprises the usual lines of staple goods, has been largely increased by the addition of many new goods suitable for the holiday trade, making our collection the richest and most inviting in the market.

CHAPTER 10.

OPERA & FIELD GLASSES.

What better or more lasting present for a lady or gentleman? and our assortment this year is larger and more varied than ever. Some beautiful glasses in Pearl at lower prices than ever before.

CHAPTER 11.

Autograph Albums, Card, Scrap and News Cutting Albums,

From 10 cents to $3 each. The 10 cent Album is a regular 25 cent book, and would be cheap at that price, but in buying a large quantity we were enabled to get them at the rock bottom price, and we propose to give our patrons the benefit of it. When you are in, ask to see them.

CHAPTER 12.

INK STANDS.

For the Library, Office, Counting Room, or School, in Glass, Bronze, Brass, Olive Wood, Leather, etc., in every conceivable shape, and marked at prices that will tell, and everybody will tell the prices.

CHAPTER 13.

FANCY BOXES OF STATIONERY.

Each containing 24 Sheets Note Paper and 24 envelopes. This being the class of goods that we sell the year round, we do not hesitate to lay in an immense stock at this time of the year. There are some of the choicest designs, this year, that we have ever seen put upon the market. They range in price from 5 cents to $5 per box. An examination of these goods will well repay you.

We have a two quire Box, with Envelopes, Marcus Ward's fine Linen Paper that we are selling for 50 cents.

CHAPTER 14.

Bibles, Prayer Books, Hymnals, and Catholic Devotional Books.

A splendid lot of the Teachers' Bibles, with Circuit Edges, at lower prices than ever before.

Last Spring we imported a lot of Catholic Prayer Books especially for the holiday, and we can safely say it is the most elegant lot of Books that can be found in this country. You must call and see for yourselves and be convinced.

CHAPTER 15.

DIARIES.

One, two, and three days to a page—a jobber's stock to select from.

CHAPTER 16.

KNIVES AND SCISSORS.

A first class stock of fine and medium priced Knives, that we can warrant.

Scissors in cases. No more useful present to give a lady than these, and the nicest lot to select from that we have ever been able to get.

CHAPTER 17.

ack Board and Printing Presses.

Quite a variety of Black Boards from $1.25 each upward.

The Novelty Printing Press, that we sell at $2.25. Any boy can soon get his money back and more too, for it is acknowledged by all who bought them last year to be a real bargain.

CHAPTER 18.

Music Rolls & Lap Tablets

Two very sensible presents, and as we have always had good success with them, we have a better variety this year than ever.

As our space will not allow us to further enumerate, we cordially invite you to come and look our stock over; we shall be pleased to show you the goods and quote prices.

Hail 1884!
Winter is around!
Job work is brisk!
Happy New Year!
Fix up your sleighs!
Back to school again!
"Ring out, wild bells!"
The Press is 25 years old!
Don't forget to write it 1884!
This year will have 366 days!
The shortest day has passed!
The rain is filling the ponds!
The revivals will soon revive!
Been struck by a falling icicle?
Broken your good resolution yet?
Caught on to a new almanac yet?
Had her out for a sleigh ride yet?
Too bad we havn't a skating rink!
Pretty good coasting, ain't it boys?
Did you make any new year's calls?
How do those Christmas slippers fit?

The cold weather calls out the sealskins.

About time for some sleighride parties.

And now the secre society elects officers.

Leap year and the ladies can pay all the bills.

Friday was the feast of the Holy Innocents.

The trade in lady's cloaks has been immense.

Livery stable keepers have had a good business.

Large quantities of dry hides are being received daily.

Mr. Sayford, the evangelist, was in town last Thursday.

The sun has reached its greatest southern declination.

Mr. J. Jerrold has opened a fish market at South Peabody.

Mr. Albert H. Poor is confined to the house with rheumatism.

Where did you watch the old year out and the new one in?

We wish our many readers a happy and prosperous new year.

Everything on wheels, except the horse cars, is taking a rest.

The rubber trade has been one continual boom with the retailer.

Daniel H. Townsend, the expressman, is still in failing health.

The town team sprinkled the sidewalks with sand. Good idea.

Don't forget to feed the sparrows while the snow is on the ground.

Rev. O. S. Butler of Georgetown, gave us a pleasant call last Thursday.

A bad break in the water pipe on Foster street was repaired last Thursday.

Sangers' coal office is receiving its fall cleaning in the shape of paint and paper.

This is the season of fresh eels, which for a rich and savory dish no fish surpasses.

Still another barber shop is threatened. It will be located in Poole's Hollow.

Ladies should remember that it spoils a carpet to sweep it with a stiff, half-worn broom.

The Selectmen should name the vicinity of the flag staff, "Printing House Square."

A good sized live fox was seen in the fields in the rear of Andover street last Wednesday.

Church entertainments of all sorts now furnish the Christian community with excitement.

Is your supply of billheads sufficient to meet the demand? Call on us to help you out.

It is probable that Gus Williams will appear in Salem next week, in "One of the Finest."

The rain storm of Thursday was accompanied in the evening by lightning but no thunder.

Dr. Shanahan received a very handsome writing desk as a Christmas present from his friends.

A great many people are turning over a new leaf. Particularly bookkeepers and proof-readers.

Rev. Mr. Chipman will preach at the Danversport Baptist Church, the second Sunday in this month.

Willie J. Goldthwaite lost the end of his thumb in a machine at George O. Peirce's shop last Saturday.

Mrs. J. W. Hudson's Sunday School class have presented that lady with a handsome card stand.

One young man was presented with four pair of fancy suspenders for Christmas from his lady friends.

The plumber profited by the first cold snap, and the horseshoer has since taken his profit from the first thaw.

Mrs. Underhill, formerly teacher of the high school, accompanied by her daughter, was in town last Thursday.

The locomotives running on the Eastern railroad are still draped in mourning for the death of Engineer Williams.

The Methodists prayed the old year out, and the new year in, at a watch meeting, held as usual, at their vestry.

According to the Boston Herald, Thomas E. Proctor pays a tax on $502,000, or a tax amounting to $7281.

Mr. C. A. Weare has been presented with an elegant silver spoon by his class-mates in the Unitarian Sunday School.

Miss Nellie Galeucia, who drew the harness at the Sons of Veterans Fair, will dispose of it by raffle.

I. H. Beede & J. B. Newhall commenced to cut ice at Crowninshield pond, last Friday. It was ten inches thick.

Mr. J. Henry Osgood remembers us with calendars. Mr. Osgood is doing a large business in printers' rollers in Boston.

Mr. Arthur Littlefield presided at the organ at the Baptist Church last Sunday, in the absence of the regular organist.

Mr. Frank Osborn is home from sea. He has shipped on another vessel from Boston to Cuba, where he will spend the winter.

A meeting of the farmers interested in Ensilage will be held at 55 Beekman street, New York, Wednesday, January 23d. at 12 o'clock.

Lewis F. Buxton, who has been travelling with Doris' Inter Ocean Circus, since last Summer, arrived home last Wednesday.

Mr. A. E. Wells has completed a very handsome checker-board at "odd jobs," made of chestnut, holly, tulip wood and ebony.

Mrs. Margarett Regan, residing on Harris street, slipped on the sidewalk on Walnut street, last Saturday, and sprained her ankle.

Any of our readers desiring the services of a competent nurse can hear of one by applying to Mrs. Stephen Fernald, Franklin street.

The man at the head of one of the classes of the free evening school, gives the name of John L. Sullivan. John might be in a worse place.

The St. Paul's Episcopal Church will give a sociable at Upton's Hall this evening. An entertainment will be furnished for the children.

As an elderly gentleman was slowly walking up School street Saturday noon a boy ran into him, while coasting, and gave him a painful dig in the shins.

One of Donnell's grocery teams, driven by Geo. Bushby, was upset on Main street, last Saturday, while crossing the railroad track. Slight Damage.

Blessed is the man who cleaneth the snow from off his sidewalk; but he who neglecteth so to do will have no opportunity to dispense ice in the hereafter.

Mr. Jacob Rogers has a handsome horse said to be a brother of the famous Jay Eye See. G. F. D. Skinner at the Danvers Trotting park has charge of him.

Two ladies and afterwards a gentleman seemed to be having a basket picnic in front of the new town hall last Saturday. At least they sat down very suddenly on the sidewalk.

Mr. S. S. Littlefield of this town, as District Deputy to Danvers Lodge, I.O. O. F. installed the officers of that lodge last evening, assisted by several of the Past Grands of Holten Lodge.

A little daughter of Byron Burns, while searching for Christmas presents brushed a razor off a shelf, the blade of which in its descent struck the child on the foot cutting a deep gash.

An exchange wants all the weather prophets killed off, for, it says, their forecasts are at variance and it is hard to tell what kind of weather we are going to have until it comes upon us.

We call attention to the poem Baby Mine, on our second page, which was written by Mrs. Katie E. De Wolff, (nee Smith) formerly of this town—the adopted daughter of Samuel Newman.

The Danvers Mirror says:—Peabody has now the best hall and Town building of any town in the County, surely, and probably there are few if any better in the cities. Right you are, Brother.

Mr. George H. Norman, the well known contractor, the gentleman who built our waterworks, sent his two sisters and two neices at Newport, R. I., five thousand dollars each for Christmas.

Mr. Frank C. Ferguson has finished 44 pairs of Indian clubs for the use of the pupils of the high school, delivering them last Saturday afternoon. They weigh two, three and four pounds each.

A small house greeted the Hallet & Hayes Minstrels at the town hall Monday evening. Those who were present say that the performance was in advance of most amateur shows on the road.

The red light appeared in the sky again last Friday at sunset. Is the sky going to change its color, and are we to hereafter speak of sky-red noses instead of sky-blue eyes? Answer, oh answer!

"How do you like the new police station?" said a citizen to a tramp who was paying for his lodging by shoveling snow around the new town hall, the other day. "It's a cooler," was the laconic reply.

The price of season tickets on the Eastern R.R. between Salem, Peabody Marblehead and Boston, was yesterday reduced from $25 to $20 per quarter. A good beginning of the new year.

At the grand fair of St. John's Lodge of Masons at Newburyport, Mr. W. B. Richardson of Peabody drew a gold dollar and William Donnell a gents' gold watch. Quite a number of tickets were held here.

At the meeting of the Unity Club, last Monday evening, a note from the secretary of the Ladies' Association was read, inviting the Unity Club to the church parlors next Friday night to an oyster supper.

Mr. Geo. Hobart, who left town some years ago and entered the regular army, returned yesterday. For the past three years he has been employed as engineer of the surveying corps of the U. S. along the Pacific coast.

Now "our boy" is in the eleventh heaven of joy. An old horse, a sleigh, a pretty red cheeked girl and a bridge every hundred yards, where he collects toll—these are the elements of his supreme delight.

D. A. & F. H. Caskin offer bargains in stoves that cannot be beaten anywhere. They have the sole agency for the celebrated "Magee" patterns. Give them a call and be convinced of this plain and stubborn truth.

At the temperance meeting for constitutional prohibition, held last Thursday in Boston, James F. Almy, of Salem, was chosen President, and Rev. J O. Knowles, now of Worcester, chairman of the committee on resolutions.

Mrs. Putnam, mother of Mr. Thomas Putnam of Washington D. C., returned from Washington last week, accompanied by her grand daughter, Miss M. Lizzie Smith who is now a teacher in one of the public schools of Washington.

A citizen walking up Wallis street hill, the other evening, was astonished to find himself enveloped in a mantle, and still more so when he found that the mantle was a pair of ladies' ——— Blew from the roof where they were drying, you know.

A concert was given in West Peabody last Friday night for the benefit of the Chorus Club. Members of the club participated and were assisted by Flanigan's Quartette of Lynnfield. It was one of the best entertainments ever given in the hall.

Nearly a score of the many friends of Miss Lizzie Eyester, living on Tremont street, met at her home last Wednesday evening for the purpose of celebrating her birthday. The young folks congratulated themselves upon completely surprising the one to whom the party was given, while the evening was spent in conversation and the usual parlor amusements. Several small presents were given the young lady.

J. D. & J. W. EATON,

HOLYOKE BUILDING,

(Next door to Post Office,)

And 38 & 40 North Street,

Agents for the sale of the

Crawford Range

for Salem and vicinity, respectfully call attention to the following letter, which came to them ENTIRELY UNSOLICITED.

Although the same in substance as they are DAILY hearing from their local patrons, they respectfully submit the same for publication.

NEWPORT, R. I., Nov. 12, 1883.

J. D. & J. W. EATON. Dear Sirs: Enclosed please find check for amount of bill for CRAWFORD RANGE and Ware. It arrived last Friday noon, and we had it set up and a fire in it before four o'clock. We are more than pleased with it. All our cooking was done Saturday morning. It usually takes all day to do it. My wife thinks she shall take to cooking again herself, as it is real fun to cook with such a Range as the CRAWFORD. Hoping you may sell a great many more of them, and every purchaser be as well pleased as we are, I remain yours, very truly,

Poet's Corner.

I Wonder What Maud Will Say.

Dear Harry, I will not dissemble,
A candid confession is best;
My fate—but alas, how I tremble!—
My fate I must put to the test:
This morning I gathered in sadness
A strand from my locks slightly grey;
To delay any longer were madness—
I wonder what Maud will say!

The deed it were well to do quickly,—
Macbeth makes a kindred remark:
I wonder if Mac felt as sickly
When he carved the old king in the dark!
The fellows who marry all do it,
But what is the usual way?
Heigho! don't I wish I were through it!
I wonder what Maud will say!

Pray advise. Would you fix up a letter
With rhymes about roses and trees?
To tell it perchance would be better;
Alas, must I get on my knees?
No; kneeling is now out of fashion
Except in a novel or play.
Ah, love is a Protean passion!
I wonder what Maud will say!

Would you give her a pug or a pony,
A picture or only a book;
A novel—say Bulwer's "Zanoni,"
Or a poem—"Lucile," "Lalla Rookh";
Bonbons from Maillard's or a necklace
Of pearls or a mammoth bouquet?
By Jove! I am perfectly reckless—
I wonder what Maud will say!

Shall I speak of the palace at Como
Which captured the heart of Pauline!
There'e a likeness of Claude in a chromo;
Would you buy it and practice the scene?
But no! I'm no Booth, nor an Irving;
My fancy has led me astray.
To a lover so true and deserving
I wonder what Maud will say!

Could I warble like Signor Galassi,
In passonate song I would soar,—
I recall she applauded him as he
Serenaded the fair Leonore;
My strain should resound love-compelling,
Far sweeter than Orpheus' lay;
Already my bosom is swelling—
I wonder what Maud will say!

Shall I tell her my love very gravely,
Or propose in a moment of mirth,
Or lead to the subject suavely,
And mention how much I am worth?
Old fellow, I know I shall blunder;
When she blossoms as bright as the day,
My wits will be dazzled. Oh, thunder!
I wonder what Maud will say!

From the Century "Bric-a-Brac."

Baby Mine.

Now listen, my friends,
While I try to define
That sweet little nuisance
I call "Baby Mine."

In his quick imitation
He's like the Chinese:
Like a bright little flirt
In his power to please.

To a rose I'll compare him
When with color he's flushed;
To a lily, when sweetly
In sleep he is hushed.

His smile is a sunbeam
To chase clouds away,
As oft as you see it,
When he's at his play.

A whole panorama
His cute acts would make,
If of him an artist
A picture should take.

Now you who may think
I've o'errated this elf,
Just visit his lordship
And judge for yourself. S. E. C.

Hackensack, N. J., Nov. 7.

Selected Story.

Conquering a Husband.

'Uncle Phil has been lecturing me again!' exclaimed Mrs. Marian Dykes, as her husband came home to tea one evening. 'I cannot and will, not stand it any longer,' and the young wife dropped into a chair as though the last remaining portion of her strength had left her.

'What was the subject of the lecture, my dear?' inquired Mr. Dykes, with a cheerful smile, as though he did not regard the situation as at all desperate.

'You know very well that Uncle Phil has but one subject.'

'And that is extravagance, or the reverse, economy,' said Mr. Dykes.

'Of course that was the subject of the discourse; and you always take his side of the question. Uncle Philip has ten times as much influence with you as I have. Whatever he says is right, and whatever I say is wrong,' retorted Mrs. Dykes, rather warmly.

'If supper is ready, I think we had better attend to that next; and we shall have the whole evening to discuss Uncle Phil's lecture. The subject will keep for awhile.'

'But Uncle Phil will be here to take part in the discussion; and that is just what I don't want. He overshadows me entirely when he says anything, and I might as well hold my tongue as speak,' pouted his wife.

'Uncle Phil will not be here, Marian. It is half past six, and he goes to church meeting at seven.'

'Very well, but I am going to have something done this time. I wont have Uncle Phil here any longer. If he is to stay in this house, I shall not.'

Mrs. Dykes was very young, and her angry pout as she sailed out of the room, made her look decidedly pretty; at least so thought her husband. But before she was fairly out of the room, the door opened and Uncle Phil came in. The door was ajar and he must have been in the hall during some portion of the lady's severe remarks about him. But he looked as placid as though earth had no sorrow for him. He was a man of about fifty, though his hair and beard were white enough for seventy.

He did not seem like a man who could be very disagreeable if he tried. He had a deaconish look about his face, that of a serious, though not austere man. Certainly no one would have taken him for a shipmaster, but he had spent most of his life at sea or in foreign parts. He used to read the Bible to his crew every Sunday, and never allow any swearing or other bad language in his presence on board ship. Though he was a 'psalm singing skipper,' no captain was ever more popular with his men than Captain Dykes.

Uncle Phil had been married in early life, but his wife died while he was absent on a long voyage. He had recently given up the sea, and retired to his native town, now an important place of 10,000 inhabitants. He found himself a stranger there, but at his own request his nephew had taken him as a boarder.

The gossips were not a little bothered to determine whether the retired shipmaster was rich or poor. He engaged in every church and benevolent enterprise, and contributed moderately of his means.

Charles Dykes had opened a store in Tripleton a year before, and everybody thought he was doing well. Mrs. Dykes thought so, though Charles himself insisted that he was not making money very rapidly; he could not tell how much until he balanced his books and took account of stock. In the main he was a prudent, careful young man, or at least, was disposed to be so.

Uncle Phil made a hasty supper, and then went to his meeting. He acted just a little strangely for him, though the smile had not deserted his face. He said less than usual, and seemed to be thinking very earnestly about something.

'Do you suppose he heard what I said, Charles?' asked Mrs. Dykes, after Uncle Phil had gone.

'I think not; but you ought not to say anything behind his back that you would not say to his face,' replied the husband. 'Uncle Phil is a good man, one of the salt of the earth.'

'He is altogether too salt for me. If I should put too much salt in the doughnuts, you would not like them. Uncle Phil is salter than Lot's wife.'

'I am sorry you don't like him, Marian.'

'I can't like a man who is continually tripping me up, and lecturing me upon economy. You ought to know better than he does what you can afford.'

'I am sure nothing but his interest in us prompts him to say anything. If one means well almost anything can be excused.'

'When I said that I wished you would keep a horse so I could ride out every day or two, he read me a lecture half an hour in length. Whether he heard me or not, I said just what I meant. You must get him out of the house in some way, Charles. Take your clerk to board, and tell your uncle we must have the room.'

"If I tell him to go, I shall tell the reason why I do so.'

'I am willing to bear all the blame. I don't want any one in the house to come between me and my husband,' said the lady with a deal of spirit.

'Uncle Phil does not come between you and me, Marian. That is absurd.'

'I have asked you, and even begged you a dozen times, to keep a horse. Uncle Phil takes sides with you against me.'

'But he never said horse to me in his life. I can't afford to keep a horse.'

'Yes, you can, Charles. They say you are doing more business than Tinkham, and he keeps two horses; and his wife looks patronizingly down on me from her carryall when she meets me in the street,' added Mrs. Dykes, with considerable bitterness in her tone.

'I know nothing about Tinkham's business, and I do know something about my own,' replied Mr. Dykes.

Before the supper things were removed Charles Dykes had promised to buy a horse and buggy. It appeared to be the only way in which he could induce his wife to allow Uncle Phil to remain in the house. Doubtless he was weak to yield the point against his own judgment.

In the evening 'Squire Graves made a friendly call. Mrs. Dykes was very glad to see him, for he had a lady's horse to sell. It was just the animal she wanted, and as she had conquered her husband once that day, she intended to have the horse trade settled that evening.

'Glad to see you, 'Squire; anything new?' the young merchant began, doing the usual common-places.

'There is news, but I suppose you have heard it,' replied the visitor.

'I haven't heard anything; what is it?'

'Haven't you heard that Tinkham has been attached?'

'Tinkham! Is it possible?' exclaimed Mr. Dykes, glancing at his wife.

'It's a fact; a keeper was put in his store this afternoon, and an attachment put on his horses and carriages.'

'That was all because he kept two horses when one was enough for him,' interposed Mrs. Dykes.

With her the moral was between two horses and one.

Before the squire left he had sold his lady's horse. Mrs. Dykes was perfectly happy, and her heart began to warm even toward poor Uncle Phil. When the retired shipmaster came in from the meeting, there were a dozen things she wanted to do for his comfort. The lady had beaten her husband and his uncle, and she was satisfied.

Before breakfast the next morning, 'Squire Graves' man led the horse over and put him in the little stable. One of the clerks was to take care of him. Uncle Phil saw the purchase, but he said nothing unpleasant. He looked the animal over, said he was worth the hundred dollars to be paid for him in goods from the store. Marian even thought she liked Uncle Phil then. He did not prophesy any evil or disaster.

After breakfast the lady thought she would drive over to her father's in the next town.

She returned in season for dinner. But Uncle Phil did not come down to that meal. The lady rang the bell a second time, but with no better result. Uncle Phil evidently did not hear the bell, for he never kept the table waiting for him. The door was wide open, and she went in. The shipmaster was not there. His trunk was not there; the picture of the Sea-bird, in which he had sailed many a voyage, had been taken from the wall.

Was it possible that Uncle Phil had gone without even saying good-bye to them? There was a letter on the table. It was addressed to 'Mr. and Mrs. Charles Dykes.' With the letter in her hand, she hastened down to the dinner-room. To say that she was astonished and chagrined, would not half express her feeling.

'Uncle Phil has gone!' she exclaimed. 'He has left for good, bag and baggage.' She tossed the letter upon the table, for she had not the courage to open it.

'Then I suppose you are quite satisfied, Marian. You have got the horse, and got rid of Uncle Phil,' said Mr. Dykes, greatly grieved to learn that the worthy man had gone; and he saw that he must have heard the impulsive words of Mrs. Dykes the evening before.

Mrs. Dykes dropped into her chair at the table, and burst into tears. Just as she had become reconciled to the boarder, he had fled without even a word of explanation. She intended to treat him with the utmost kindness and consideration, as a noble warrior treats a fallen foe. Just then she felt as though she would be willing to lose the horse to regain Uncle Phil.

Charles opened the letter. It was very short, but there was not a particle of bitterness in it. He should still pray for them, and desired to do all he could to serve and make them happy.

'I will go to him and beg him to come back, Charles!' exclaimed the weeping wife. 'You will never forgive me.'

'I am very sorry he has gone, but I will not hate you, Marian. We will call upon him this evening at the hotel.'

They did call. Uncle Phil was exactly the same as he had been before. He was glad to see them, and there was not a particle of change in his tone or manner. Both Charles and his wife tried to say something about his leaving their house; but he headed them off every time. He would not permit the matter to be mentioned. They went home, unable even to get in an apology.

Both of them missed the kindly words and wholesome advice of the good man, though Mrs. Dykes would not acknowledge it. His good influence upon both was lost. Even Charles became reckless in his finances.

The close of Tinkham's store brought more business to the young merchant for a time, though the bankrupt's successor soon made things exciting for him. A ruinous competition followed. No longer restrained by Uncle Phil's prudent counsels, Charles branched out, and grasped more than he could handle.

At the end of the year the balance sheet was not pleasing to look upon. Then followed a reckless attempt to recover lost ground. Notes at the Tripleton Bank became very troublesome. One of them was given for a new piano. People said Dykes was too fast. The young merchant was worried. He had yielded to one extravagance and there was a long train behind it.

His next balance-sheet showed that he was three thousand dollars in debt, and his stock was not worth half the sum. He saw that he must fail. After supper, one evening, he told his wife all about it. It would be a terrible humiliation to fail, as Tinkham had; and poor Marian wept as though her heart would break.

In the midst of the scene Uncle Phil walked into the room, as he always did, without the ceremony of knocking. He often called.

'Uncle Phil; I am going to fail; for I cannot pay a note of four hundred dollars that falls due to-morrow', said Charles, bitterly, when he saw that he could not conceal the facts from the good man.

'How much do you owe in all, Charles?' asked Uncle Phil.

'About three thousand dollars,' groaned Charles.

'Will three thousand put you on your feet, solid?'

'Yes sir; but I can't raise three hundred.'

'I will give you a check for three thousand in the morning. I will be at the store at eight o'clock. I noticed that you looked worried lately, but you said nothing to me.'

'I could not say anything to you, uncle; and I cannot take your money, after what has happened.'

'Nothing has happened yet, and with the blessing of God, nothing shall happen.'

Uncle Phil would not understand him.

'You may help me on one condition,' added Charles, after some discussion. 'And that is that you will come back and live with us.'

Marian joined in insisting on this condition, and the good man yielded. He used no reproaches; he would not even say, 'I told you so.' The note was paid the next day, and in the evening, Uncle Phil was domiciled in his old apartment, quite as happy as the young people.

Charles sold the lady's horse, the buggy, the piano and other extras, and reduced all his expenses to a very reasonable figure. Marian was happy again and did not believe there was any too much salt about Uncle Phil. She had given up the business of conquering a husband. In fact, both of them have come to believe that neither should conquer or try to conquer the other.

After a while it came out that Uncle Phil was worth at least fifty thousand dollars. Doubtless the church and the missions will get some of it; but it is probable that Charles Dykes will be remembered, though both he and his wife sincerely hope that the good man will live till he is a hundred.—Good Cheer.

SLEEPING PALACES.—The latest addition to the rolling stock of the Boston & Albany Railroad Corporation consists of two Mann boudoir sleeping cars. These sleeping palaces, as they actually are, which have been named La Traviata and La Somnambula, far excel in beauty anything else of the kind running out of Boston. They are built on an entirely different plan from sleeping cars of all other makes, in that the berths run across the cars, instead of along the sides. At one side is a passage way running the entire length from which open the appartments as boudoirs. Of these four contain four beds each, or acommodations for four persons by night or by day. In each of these sections are two spacious seats, or sofas, facing each other, which are much broader than ordinary Pullman car seats. The backs are very high, and arranged at an angle which is perfection for comfort and ease. These sofas are finely upholstered, the armrests being small cushions which can be moved about at will and placed in any position desired.

When in order for night use, each of these seats becomes a bed and the backs are raised, being hung on hinges and are made up for the other two berths. Such is the arrangement in the four bed boudoirs. At the end of the bed are panels, and a door leading into the corridor can be closed, thus making an entirely enclosed and private apartment, when so desired, completely shut off from the rest of the car. A different set of curtains is provided for each berth, so a person getting into one does not disturb the occupant of the other.

In the centre of the car are two boudoirs with two beds each, which are of exactly the same description as the above. A solid partition separates them, in which there is a door that can be opened if the parties occupying the apartments so desire. There is also an apartment with two beds which is called the ladies' boudoir, and which is for the exclusive use of two ladies who may be traveling alone. A great convenience which other sleeping cars do not have is the abundance of racks for storing baggage. At each end of the car is a vestibule from which open respectively ladies' and gentlemen's dressing and toilet rooms. In these rooms everything is most complete, the lavatories being supplied with all toilet appliances. There is also a smoking room and arrangements for furnishing a light lunch to any who may wish it.

The interior of the car is finished most lavishly. The entire framing is of amaranth wood, which is of a very rich color. The remainder of the finish is of leather panelling embossed in most exquisite and beautiful designs. The reflection of the lamps, of which there is one in each boudoir, upon the gilded leather of the roof, makes the car very light, besides giving to everything a beautiful appearance. A system of ventilation is adopted which serves to furnish cool air in summer, and to warm the car in winter. These two cars began their regular trips recently, and will be run on the 11 a. m. and the 10.30 p. m. trains for New York.

The St. Louis and Deming Line of Sleepers, which leave St. Louis daily at 9 a. m., via the Iron Mountain Route will, on Dec. 1st, run cars to San Francisco without change, thus substantially completing our through car system from the Atlantic to the Pacific Ocean, and that at the Union Depot in St. Louis.

Prospective brides may be interested to learn that there are 32 days in the year on which it is unlucky to marry, according to the authority of a manuscript dated in the 15th century. Those days are January 1st, 2d, 4th, 5th, 7th, 10th, 15th; February 6th, 7th, 18th; March 1st, 6th, 8th; April 6th, 11th; May 5th, 6th, 7th; June 7th, 15th; July 5th, 19th; Aug. 15th, 19; Sept. 6th, 7th; Oct. 6th; Nov. 15th, 16th; Dec. 15th, 16th, 17th. Consequently January is the worst month and October the best month in the year for marriage.

The old and favorite stand No. 220 Essex street, has out done itself this season, under the skillful management of Merrill & Mackintire. They laid in a fine stock of goods for the holidays, and the rush of customers showed that they had the right kind of goods at right prices. They understand their business and any one in want of anything in the way of books, paper, envelopes, pens, inks, house papers, etc., will do well to give them a call. We presume they will make a specialty of blank books, diaries, etc., for the new year.

SELLING

BOOTS AND SHOES

— AT —

MANUFACTURER'S PRICES.

A DECIDED SUCCESS.

A great many firms in Lynn are puzzled at the large attendance and great success of our special sales, simply because these same firms have failed in their own efforts to attract attention and accomplish the same results. The reasons are plain, for we assert that our establishments can show many advantages over others. We give the following, which are convincing:

First.

Enormous stock. The immense stock of our wholesale house, together with our two retail stores, 84 Market street and 23 Market Square, make a stock to draw from five times larger than all the other shoe stores in Lynn combined.

Second.

Low Rents. While our competitors are handicapped by having to pay exorbitant rents, we with our three stores, have to pay rent only on one—a fact, the significance of which as bearing upon our ability to sell for less than others, will be apparent to all.

Third

Wholesale. Our wholesale trade, which now extends to every city and town of any importance in New England, obliges us to carry an immense stock and gives us an advantage in buying entirely beyond the reach of our competitors. For where they buy of the jobbers in small lots, we buy direct of the manufacturers, and that we can buy as low as the large Boston jobbers is abundantly attested by the fact that we are able to meet and compete with them on their own grounds and build up a wholesale trade which is constantly increasing.

Fourth.

One Price. Marked in plain figures on every pair of boots and shoes, guarantees low prices.—Equal treatment to all classes and shows at a glance the quality of the goods.

Fifth.

Truthful Representations. No misrepresentations are tolerated. Goods are sold for just what they are. Some stores adopt the "bait" plan, advertising great slaughter, immense bargains, etc. Call in half an hour after such stores open and in nearly every instance the salesman has the old story to tell you: "All gone;" "haven't your size;" "too late;" "very sorry, but we have had such a rush they are all out.—Can't we show you something else?" We have no such nonsense. It won't do.

Sixth.

Quick Sales and Small Profits. Quick sales are the life of a successful business. Small profits are sufficient when the business is done on live business principles. You save one profit by buying of the wholesaler.

Seventh.

Exchanging Goods or Refunding Money. When any dissatisfaction occurs because the selection does not please in every particular, the goods, if returned uninjured in a reasonable time, can be exchanged; and it matters not of whom it was selected, any salesman at leisure will pay careful attention to the customer. In case nothing is found to please, the cash will be cheerfully refunded.

Eighth.

Prompt Cash Payments. We are so conscious of the overwhelming advantages we possess both in buying and selling we have no hesitation in asserting that no prudent purchaser can afford to buy anything anywhere else until they have looked through our stock and got our prices. Ready money in our hands enables us to buy goods in large quantities at figures that the average retailer knows nothing about. To-day we stand simply as the connecting link between the manufacturer and consumer.

We have an immense surplus stock which we are going to close out during this sale. In order to accomplish this purpose we know at the outset that it will be necessary to offer sufficient inducements which we are determined to do. Consequently, in this instance as well as all others, we appeal directly to the interests of every purchaser, regarding that as decidedly more potent than volumes of positive assertions.

Book Notices.

The Musical Herald for December has for Music: Venite Exultemus Domino, by Norois; Deus Miseratur, by Langdon; Gloria Patri, by Wilcox; Gloria Tibi, by Greatorex; Jubilate Deo; Benedic Anima Mea; Bonum Est, by Gannett; Benedictus Est, by Tourjee; Gloria in Excelsis, by Zeuner; Christmas Hymn by Mendelssohn; and Work of God Inarnate, a motette for five voices, by Gounod. The January number will commence the fifth volume, and the Herald will appear in magazine form with the price fixed at $1 a year, and its management appeal "to all interested in music to help in the effort to maintain a pure, wholesome, scholarly magazine to advocate the interests of the universal art." It is published in Boston, and its editors are Messrs. Apthorp, Elson, Emery, Sherwin, Whitney and Tourjee.

Lippincott's Magazine for January gives the best assurance of the good things to be expected during the coming year. It opens with a description of the new Public Buildings of Philadelphia, written with marked ability, and copiously illustrated. "Undergraduate Life at Oxford," by Norman Pearson; an account of the great flour mills of Minneapolis, by F. G. Curtis, and the first of a series of papers on "Healthy Homes," by Felix L. Oswald, are all interesting and instructive articles. The opening chapters of "Sebia's Tangled Web," a short serial story by Lizzie W. Champney, is among the fiction in this number and will be found very attractive. There is the usual variety of short stories in the "Gossip," and the notices of new publications, principally holiday books, are numerous and discriminative.

The January Atlantic opens the new volume brilliantly. The place of honor is given to the first chapters of a striking serial story, "In War Time," a story of the war for the Union, by Dr. S. Weir Mitchell. Mr. Crawford's serial, "A Roman Singer," is continued and will run through several more numbers. Dr. Holmes has a poem, "At the Saturday Club." Rev. Dr. A. P. Peabody contributes an article on "The Study of Greek," apropos of the famous address of C. F. Adams, Jr. E. V. Smalley surveys "The Political Field" from an unpartisan standpoint; and there is an unusually full department of reviews, and a varied Contributors' Club. The Atlantic is so sure to be excellent every month that it can safely be commended to every intelligent reader. Houghton, Mifflin & Co., Boston.

Peterson's Magazine for January reaches us in advance. There are two beautiful steel engravings: "In the Orchard," after a picture by Millais, and "Lost on the Alps," by the hardly less famous Riviere. In addition there is a double size fashion-plate, engraved and printed from steel and colored by hand; an exquisite affair. "Peterson" is now the only magazine that gives these fashion plates. But the gem of the number is a colored pattern for a border for a curtain, or chair-stripe, etc., etc., perhaps the costliest single emblishment ever given in a magazine; as the publisher says, it would alone cost 50 cents at retail. The literary contents are all original, besides two novelets, one by Mrs. Ann S. Stevens, "Her Season in Washington," and another by the celebrated author of the "Second Life." The price of this popular lady's book is but two dollars per year, with great deductions to clubs. Specimens are sent gratis to those desiring to get up clubs. Address Chas. J. Peterson, 306 Chestnut street, Philadelphia, Pa.

The Art Amateur for January, consisting of sixty folio pages, is the largest and best number yet issued of this popular magazine. More than a hundred illustrations are given. There are two fascinating pages of illustrations of the matchless collection of Cosway miniatures, and interesting examples are given of the new very asthetic Haviland "gres" ceramic ware. Editorially, Ward's statue of Washington is criticised somewhat severely. Montezuma in "My Note-Book" exposes new frauds in the picture trade. Altogether the Art Amateur enters on its tenth volume fully sustaining its reputation as a practical family art magazine; $4 a year, 35c. single copy. Montague Marks publisher, New York.

Frank Leslie's Popular Monthly, remarkable for its cheapness and literary and artticis merit, commences its seventeenth volume with the January nnmber, and a more attractive one has never been issued by any of its contemporaries. The first of a series of articles is given by Evert A. Duyckinck, "New York; Past and Present"; Mrs. Ann S. Stephens contributes a charming Christmas story, "Half a Dollar," and Etta W. Pierce continues her most interesting serial, "A Dark Deed." There are short stories, descriptive articles, narratives, adventures and poems by popular writers—in fact, the 128 quarto pages are brilliant with literary and artistic gems. The price is only 25 cents a number, or $2.50 a year, postpaid. Address Mrs. Frank Leslie, Publisher, 53, 55 and 57 Park Place, New York.

The present year has produced a great mass of writings about Martin Luther, but nothing worthier or more interesting has appeared than an account in The Manhattan for January of "The Luther Monument at Worms," by J. Leonard Corning who considers it solely as a work of art, relating some new anecdotes concerning it. Another illustrated paper is on "Pompei, Past and Present," in which the text is well supplemented by delicate engravings of paintings depicting ancient Pompeian life. Seldom, if ever, has such a musician as Dr. Leopold Damrosch appeared in a magazine. But he has written some delicious songs and choruses for "The Doorkeeper," by Edith M. Thomas, a dainty New Year's masque, which Ben Jonson would not have been ashamed to father. The eminent lawyer, George Ticknor Curtis, in "Creation or Evolution?" lays the foundation for trying those questions by the rules of legal evidence. Edgar Fawcett's story of "Tinkling Cymbals" becomes with every part more deeply interesting. The entire number is of sterling merit, whether regarded from a literary or a pictorial point of view.

Rev. Petroleum V. Nasby (D. R. Locke), will travel through the Southern States during the Fall and Winter for the purpose of writing a series of letters to his paper, the Toledo Blade, his impressions of the great South. The million readers of the Blade who have read "Nasby in Exile," (Nasby's Letters from Europe), will appreciate how the subject will be handled. Everybody is invited to send for a Specimen Copy. See advertisement in another column.

The Springfield Republican has grown too large for its four cylinder press clothes, and has put in a new Hoe perfecting press, which takes the paper from a roll, prints both sides, cuts, pastes and folds the finished papers, turning them out at the rate of 12,000 an hour. The press was put in operation Tuesday morning, and the Republican now appears in a sheet 2 1-2 inches longer than formerly, and happy in the possession of as fine a piece of printing machinery as any of the dailies. The Republican is an enterprising, progressive and able newspaper, and well deserves its present prosperity.—Palmer Journal.

When you go to New York, go by the Stonington Line and you will avoid going around point Judith, escape seasickness, get on board the boat in season for an early supper, and after a full night's sleep arrive in New York in the early morning. Take the cars at the Boston and Providence Railroad Station on Columbus Avenue, near the foot of the common.

The Pullman Sleeping Car Line now in service between St. Louis and Galveston, which leaves St. Louis at 8.30 p. m., daily, via the Iron Mountain Route, will be greatly improved by the substitution of Pullman's latest Buffet Sleeping Cars. Five of these magnificent cars, the most elegant of the kind ever constructed, have just been completed especially for this line.

The postal note, which it was expected would come into common use, does not seem to meet with a great degree of favor with the public. Being made payable to the bearer, there is no way of recovering the amount if one is lost, and as for a few cents more the amount sent is guaranteed safe, the general verdict is that the postal note must go. A limited number only have been sold from the office here.

The Postmaster-General has instructed Postmasters to exchange upon application, three and six cent stamps and stamped envelopes issued since 1861, for those of other denominations at the face value. Stamped envelopes bearing printed cards and special requests are to be exchanged; also stamped envelopes that bear printed addresses.

A majority of the wise men of the American astronomical society, recently in session in Brooklyn, are of the opinion that our recent fiery sunsets were due to the probable fact that the earth is now passing through space "particularly rich in meteoric matter."

A gentleman learned in the origin of social customs, was asked what was the meaning of the custom of casting an old shoe after a newly married couple as they start on their trip. He said: "To indicate that the chances of matrimony are very slippery."

The Christmas Card, was the happy thought of somebody who saw that there were many cases where remembrances would be gratifying, when a gift could not be received. Year by year they grow more elaborate.

When the winter wind blows, take care of your nose, and wrap up your toes in warm woolen hose. This, we suppose, was written in prose, by some one who knows, the effect of cold snows.

If you go to new York by rail go via the Shore Line, taking the cars at the Boston and Providence station, Park Square, Boston.

JOHN P FERNALD, ALBERT VITTUM,
Editors and Publishers.

THIS YEAR will be an important one in the political world. The democrats have a working majority in Congress, and the new Speaker has already signalized his appointment by naming Morrison as the chairman of the committee on ways and means. Morrison is a pronounced free trader—so also are the majority of the new committee, and it is announced that a report in favor of large reductions in the tariff will be made. Already this simple fact is causing disturbance in the mercantile world. The democratic leaders tried this tariff reduction at the last presidential election and found that they were playing with fire. Another presidential election comes this year, and unless all signs fail, the reaction from democratic leadership has already begun, and their defeat will be again recorded as among another of their lost opportunities.

Massachusetts again wheels into line under Gov. Robinson, and if the campaign out of which he came victorious is an earnest of his success as an executive, the old commonwealth will see not only an effective but economic and wise administration. Gov. Robinson's first action in re-appointing as adjutant general one of Ex-Gov. Butler's staff, is to be highly commended. It shows victory over any party spirit, or party machinery. No governor ever entered the office under less obligations to party, than Geo. D. Robinson. His appointments—his administration. will, we believe, be for the best interests of the state independent of party, and with that we are with him unanimously.

THE GREAT demand for seats in the Boston Theatre during the present Opera season, especially for those in the dress and family circle at the lower prices, shows that there is a large number of musical people who are really interested in the peformances, but who cannot afford to pay the price demanded for the best seats. We are of the opinion that these people are really the most interested. There are in the vicinity of Boston a large number of young ladies and gentlemen, many of them students in the New England Conservatory of Music,—others studying music elsewhere, to whom these operas are a rare treat. Indeed, to those who are studying vocal music, it is an advantage to hear artists who can enforce their art by example. The opera is of value to them in their studies. And we venture the assertion that there are hundreds in attendance in the parquet of the Boston Theatre at $4.00 per seat, who are really bored by the performance. They care nothing for it, save that it is fashionable. It is an excellent opportunity for them to observe and be observed. While outside of the doors of the opera are many times that number who cannot afford even the cheapest price of admission, but to whom one performance would be worth more than the whole season of opera to these habitues who go only because it is "the thing to do."

The reformation of this high priced entertainment is entirely in the hands of the managers, who pay such extravagant salaries for the leading stars. It is announced that Nillson gets $3000 every night that she appears, and as she sings four or five times during this season in Boston, it will be seen that she receives for these two weeks here what would be counted by many people as a moderate fortune. Now Mme. Nillson is beyond question supreme in her art. But there is reason in all things. And such a salary for a single performance looks to us like throwing money away, especially when some of it comes out of the hard earnings of those who will deny themselves other things for the sake of hearing her sing. No such salaries are paid the minor peformers, and were it not for this single fact, the opera could be provided at a reasonable price.

Our plea is in behalf of those lovers of music—mostly students, who would hear opera, but cannot afford it. We should enjoy seeing the entire body of students at the New England Conservatory given the best seats in the Theatre at a mere nominal price for a single performance, at least. It would be a generous and noble thing for Mme. Nillson, or her managers, to do. She would be sure of an ovation such as the fashionable nightly auditors could never give her.

Union Post 50 G. A. R. turned out in goodly numbers, to attend the Camp fire of Post 99 of Danvers, at the Peabody Institute last Wednesday evening. Delegates were present from all the surrounding towns. After a very interesting exercise at the Insiitute, they marched to G. A. R. headquarters, where a collation was served, and story-telling, speeches and pipe smoking was freely indulged in. The Posts are doing their best to make these camp fires enjoyable and are succeeding admirably. They do much good in keeping up the interest in the orgauization

The Washington Union, E. A. U. held their annual meeting in Franklin Hall, and elected the following officers: Chancellor, Frank D. Hoag; Advocate, Geo. A. Whitney; President, Geo. B. Miller; Vice President, W. H. Bodge; Secretary, W. B. Farington; Treasurer, Geo. E. Lewis; Acct., James S. Paul; Aux., John M. Bradford; Chaplain, Richard E. Smith; Warden, John Ruth; Sentinel, N. M. Quint; Watchman, Starr C. Hewitt; Med. Examiner, Dr. H. K. Foster; Trustees, George F. Sanger, George A. Whitney, John M. Bradford, H. G. Briggs, George B. Miller.

Last Wednesday the beans contained in two glass jars at Wilmot's clothing house were counted. There had been offered as a prize, to the one who guessed the nearest to the number, an elegant upright piano, and a parlor suit. There were over 5000 guesses. It was singular that both prizes came to Peabody. Rudolph Myers, employed at the Danvers Bleachery, guessed 9373 and the number of beans was 9358, and received the piano. The jar for the parlor suit contained 10,205 1-2 beans and Mr. Benj. K. Davis living on Washington place guessed 10,240 and received the set.

The Boston Journal of this morning, in its sketches of the members of the Legislature, contains the following notice of Aaron F. Clark. It is probably correct with the exception that it is news, hereabouts, that he was selectman the past two years: "Aaron Fuller Clark, Democrat, lumber dealer, of Peabody, was born in Francestown, N. H., April 7, 1816, and was educated in the district schools. He has been a selectman the past two years, has been treasurer of the Congregational society fifteen years and was a member of the House last year, serving on the committee on insurance.

Fitch Poole Council, American Legion of Honor, met Friday evening at the residence of Dr. F. S. Worcester, on Foster street, and elected the following officers:—Commander, Samuel Symonds; Past Commander, F. S. Worcester; Vice Com., J. M. Hayes; Secretary, H. A. Harrington; Treasurer, Edward P. Barrett; Collector, Geo. Randall; Orator, G. M. Foster; Guide, Nathan Lakeman; Outside Sentinel, Otis Brown; Warden, W. H. Fellows; Chaplain, Sylvanus Chadwick; Medical Examiner, Dr. F. S. Worcester. The lodge numbers at present about 43 members in good standing.

It is announced in the advertisement of the tea and coffee store in Boston which gives a prize in every package, that Frank C. Ferguson had received a diamond ring. Frank has not got it yet, but a friend in the neighborhood of Boston, who bought the prize package, writes him that it would take a microscope to discover the diamond. Our foreman drew what was called a solid gold ring, but if it is worth over fifteen cents, we are ready to treat. From what we can learn of this prize business, we think it is a deliberate fraud on the public, and like all lotteries, the less our readers have to do with it the better they will be financially.

It is reported that there will be several changes in the location of business firms in town, among them that Isaac Hardy has given up his lower (Southwick) yard on Wallis street, and that yard will be conducted by Rufus H. Brown in connection with his large manufactory on Walnut street, which will be run by the new firm of Brown, Stanley & Brown, which includes R. H. Brown, Frank W. Stanley and Otis Brown. They have secured the services of Mr. Chas. W. Jenkins as foreman of the tan yard, a position he held some seven years ago under James M. Caller. It is further said they will run McClure's shop on Central street, which is owned by Brown and Stanley.

PEABODY.

Rev. Mr. Hudson exchanged with Rev. Mr. Stewart of Lynn last Sunday.

A committee has been elected to provide a new curtain for the stage in the chapel of the Unitarian church.

There will be a Paper Cap party in Upton's Hall, Thursday evening, Jan. 17th, under the auspices, we understand of members of the Murray club.

On Sunday evening, Jan. 13th, another Temperance Rally will be held in the new Town Hall. Hon. John B. Finch, of Nebraska, will be the speaker.

A leap year party under the management of Mrs. A. Price will be given in Upton's Hall, Tuesday evening, Jan. 8th. Mrs. Price will have the following ladies as aids; Mrs. L. B. Whipple, Mrs. E. N. Parker, Mrs. E. Dodge and Miss A. Tibbets.

Malden has a first-class steam laundry known as the National Steam Laundry. It is supplied with all modern machinery, including a large number of the celebrated Troy polishing machines. It is expected they will soon start an agency in Peabody.

The snow has fallen faster than people could take care of it. The mild weather or rain which has prevailed has caused floods, accidents and disasters. Fortunately in this favored part of the land nothing but trifling inconveniences have been experienced thus far.

One of the Indian ponies belonging to Mr. A. L. Ames was injured in the leg by an accident last Wednesday, the pole being placed too low, and collided with a snow bank, overturning the sleigh which was occupied by Mr. Ames' two children. No serious damage was done.

Mrs. Laura Dainty, the elocutionist, who read in the free course here one season, will appear soon upon the dramatic stage in a play written for her by the editor of the Chicago Inter-Ocean entitled "A Mountain Pink." She personates a little waif called "Sincerity Weeks.'

The Essex Statesman has appeared in its old form of four pages, and will be issued weekly, instead of semi-weekly. Mr. Litchman announces that the paper will be independent in politics, but never neutral, which means, we suppose, that it will continue to be a greenback paper.

The recent storms are causing a general complaint from owners of houses. In many cases the gutters have been filled with ice, the water from the melting snow has worked through the shingles and slates and in some cases has entered the house from the upper casings of the windows.

The Chelsea Telegraph and Pioneer enters this week upon its forty-first year. Although it is getting old, it has none of the old fogy ideas of some even younger papers. It is not following in the ruts, but is up to the times, entertaining and progressive. May its future be as bright as the present.

A case of desertion is reported from Tremont street. A man named Falkner was left by his wife a short time ago with five children, the oldest only ten years. The whereabouts of the mother is unknown. It is said the children were taken to the Methuen Alms House yesterday, the father being a native of that town.

The free evening school, held by direction of the Wallis trust fund, began in the Wallis schoolhouse last Monday evening. Mr. A. E. Wells is master, and the assistants are Isaac Drown, Chas. A. Weare and Mrs. A. E. Wells. About 60 were in attendance the first night, and 100 the second. The school is held four nights each week.

The Peabody Reporter have moved their office from the Warren National Bank Building to the rooms lately occupied by Mr. H. F. Lawrence on the corner of Chestnut and Lowell streets. With the better entrance obtained and more ample accommodations, Mr. McGrath will have room to better accommodate his rapidly growing business.

A musical vesper service was held in St. John's Church, last evening, at which the following selections were rendered under the direction of Charles A. Clark:—

Psalms,	Est
"Adeste"	arranged, Novello
Magnificat,	Est
Veni Creator,	Haydn
Salve Maria,	Tenor Solo and Chorus
Alma Redemptoris,	Wilcox
Salutaris, Alto Solo,	Stearn
Tantum Ergo,	Mozart

Mr. J. E. Clement removed from Centre Harbor, some weeks ago, the upright engine belonging to Mrs. Eliza Sutton. It was taken to the shop here and has had a thorough examination and been newly packed. It will be taken back by Mr. Clement sometime during the present week, set up and the machinery at Centre Harbor repaired.

John Scully, a man of about 50 years of age, became bewildered on his way from Beverly Farms to Salem, Saturday, and wandered about the streets in Salem until 5 o'clock Sunday morning, when he found refuge in the house of a friend. Dr. Goodell was called and found all his fingers and thumbs and both ears very badly frostbitten. He is the husband of Mrs. Lynch, mother of the noted Albino children.

A new idea was presented this year in the way of Christmas decorations—wreaths, crosses, anchors, etc., stamped out of thin metal, then colored green to imitate ivy, holly and other commonly used decorating plants. Little red berries were sprinkled in to give a more natural appearance. The hangings are said to be very natural. At any rate the possessor of them need not fear wilting or falling to pieces.

It is a good time for every one to call to mind any small bills they owe, and to go and pay them. It is pleasanter for all parties than waiting to be dunned or to dun. Besides, it gives the creditor the ability to pay his debts, and once on the way a few dollars may be the means of closing hundreds of accounts, to the gratification of as many individuals. No better season than the present to perform this duty.

At the meeting of the Unity Club last Monday evening, with Mrs. Culliton, the president of the club, Mr. H. F. Walker, read an essay on Mary Queen of Scots. Following the essay were poems and readings by Rev. Mr. Hudson and Misses Kittie E. Wiley and L. Maria Winchester. Music was also furnished by Mrs. Culliton on the piano, and by Messrs. Hudson and Ward of the Peabody Orchestra.

Not two of a kind, but two of the same name! A short time ago a sum of money amounting to $50 was given to an express man who runs between Boston and Peabody for a party named Timothy Holland. He searched out a man of the same name who claimed the money, and it was turned over to him; and report says he went on a glorious good time. The case is likely to be settled in the police court.

Attempts were made to burglarize several of the stores in "Dublin" last week. At the store of P. Mahoney they were unsuccessful; at James Martin's some $8 worth of goods were removed and also a quantity of cigars and tobacco at Jeffers' saloon on Walnut street. At Mrs. Lillis' they made so much noise that that lady awakened and obtained a fair description of the would be burglars, which she gave to the police.

James H. Thomas, for the last ten months Peabody correspondent and manager of the Salem Post, has severed his connection with that paper. Mr. Thomas has always been courteous and gentlemanly in his dealings with the public and has made many friends during his journalistic career. Mr. Thomas will probably canvas, for Meek & Fielding's new directory, and attend to his business of an insurance agent.

While several boys were coasting on Franklin street, yesterday forenoon, one dared the rest to slide under a train of cars being shifted from the main to a side track. Three went between the wheels of a bark car easily, but the train getting under headway, the fourth coaster struck the brake beam and was thrown off his sled, and fortunately clear of the wheels, while his sled line held the sled to the train, and when last seen it was bounding over the sleepers toward Lynnfield.

Charles Burrill, a morocco dresser, living in Salem, and in the employ of Alex. Clark, of this town, dropped dead in the Salem depot, yesterday noon, while waiting for the train to Peabody, which arrives here at one o'clock. He was unmarried and of quiet and retiring habits, and roomed on Charter street in Salem, coming to and from Peabody to his work. His age was about sixty, and it is reported that he was possessed of some property.

There was a large party in attendance at Upton's Hall, new years' eve, the occasion being the first party of the Atlantic Base Ball Association. About one hundred couples were present, and a pleasant evening was spent by those who were fortunate enough to attend. Robinson's band, of Boston, furnished the music—and it was highly appreciated. Much credit is due the gentlemanly managers in charge, for the success of the party.

About 10 o'clock last Friday night the neighbors in the vicinty of Walnut street, were startled by the cry of "police" from a certain resort on that street. From within the house came the noise of battle, sounding as if furniture and pictures were being smashed in a thousand pieces. Men and women were mixed up promiscuously in the fight. The approach of two men caused the warning, that the police were coming, and the light was instantly put out and quiet reigned.

Tickets for the Leap Year party of the Unity Club are in good demand and the indications are that it will be one of the social events of the season. It takes place at Upton's Hall next Wednesday evening. The lady managers are Mrs. Dr. Worcester and Miss L. Maria Winchester, of whom tickets can be obtained. The proceeds of the party are to go towards the Organ fund. A committee of the club have under advisement the performance of an Operetta later in the season for the same object. The next meeting of the Unity Club will be held at the house of Rev. J. W. Hudson.

James Ryan, of Peabody, was in Lynn, Friday, in search of his sister, Annie M. Ryan, who has, through the death of their father, which occured in England, four years ago, fallen heir to a snug little sum of money. Not being able to find her, Mr. Ryan caused an advertisement to be inserted in the Bee, the result of which was that the sister was found to be residing at 54 Sagamore street. Mrs. Ryan is the woman who was shot in the face a few years since by "Brick" Foye, who mistook her for his wife of whom he was intensely jealous and tried to murder. The victim of the shooting was rendered sightless in the left eye by the shot and is in indigent circumstances, being assisted by the city. She will receive $500 from her father's estate.—Bee.

The Original Nashville Students will appear in this town Friday evening, Jan. 11, 1884. This company of colored Jubilee Singers have the endorsement of Redpath's Lyceum Bureau, and sang in Plymouth Church, Brooklyn, Christmas night to a crowded house. They give the old and new plantation melodies, partly in costume. Popular prices will prevail—and every one will want to go.

GIFTS. You should go to Boston and see what Paine has in his immense Furniture Store suitable for Holiday Gifts and Bridal Presents. This stock is worth travelling hundreds of miles to see; but few museums or foreign fairs have as much to interest one as this place has. All the pieces for sale can be purchased at very low prices, one can save the railroad fare and have the pleasure of purchasing a present nowhere else to be found in America. Entrance to Warerooms 48 Canal Street, opposite Maine Depot, Boston.

RESOLUTIONS OF RESPECT.

WHEREAS, it has pleased Almighty God, in the mystery of his permissive providence, after a painful illness to remove from this world Mrs. Mary L. Foan a member of this Sunday School: therefore

RESOLVED, That we bow submissively to the afflictive dispensation which has taken from us a beloved member of our School, in the very flower of her young womanhood, and at the hour of her greatest usefulness.

RESOLVED, That we recognize gratefully, the gentle but deep and sincere piety of our sister, which was superior to her intense suffering, and triumphed over death, and her devotion to the interest of the Sunday School revealed not only in her presence when health would allow, but in various thoughtful and grateful acts, and that her memory as a sweet fragrance will be long cherished by this Sunday School, especially by the class of which she was a member.

RESOLVED, That we extend to our afflicted brother, the husband of the deceased, our heartfelt sympathies in this hour of his darkness and grief and assure him an interest in our prayers.

RESOLVED, That these resolutions be entered upon the Records of the School, and a copy of the same signed by the Superintendent, be sent to our afflicted Brother and fellow member, Lendall Foan. Signed,

W. A. BAKER, Supt.

HOME HAPPENINGS.

Last Thursday was Farmer's day in the town, the first Institute of the Essex Agricultural Society being held in the lower hall of our new town building. Ample acommodations were found, and the attendance at the morning session would have comfortably filled the old town hall. The new location, with its central acommodations, was the subject of much favorable remark by the farmers. It is certainly appropriate that the first Institute should be held within the limits of the old Danvers town. It has been a representative town in the Society. It has had the presidency of the Society twelve years; Gen. Sutton holding that office five years, and John W. Proctor seven: it has furnished a secretary forty-five years, John W. Proctor being in that position twenty-two years, and Charles P. Preston, the present incumbent twenty-three years: it has had the treasurership thirty-eight years, Andrew Nichols having been treasurer twelve years, and Gen. Sutton twenty-six. The subject of the morning session was "Fertilizers," and the discussion was opened by J.T.H. Gregory, of Marblehead. Mr. Gregory gave a detailed description of the different kinds of fertilizers in use by the farmers, and compared their value with barn yard manure. He expressed much confidence in the fertilizer manufactured by A. L. Ames, of this town. After Mr. Gregory had finished, the subject was taken up and remarks made by President Ware, of Marblehead, Geo. A. Tapley, of Revere, Aaron Low, of Essex, and others of promitence. The prevailing trend of the discussion was in favor of a special fertilizer. At one o'clock a recess was taken and dinner was served at Baldwin's Hotel, sixty-five tickets having been sold for the dinner.

The subject for the afternoon was "Field Culture of Roots and Vegetables," the subject being opened by President Ware, of Marblehead, James P. King, of this town, being called to the chair. Mr. Ware paid particular attention to the mode of culture of potatoes, onions, carrots and cabbage, and spoke in high praise of the Danvers onion, complimenting Mr. Daniel Buxton, one of its earliest cultivators. Discussion of the subject was further participated in by Jas. P. King, President Brown, of the New Hampshire society, G. A. Tapley, of Revere, J. Shedd Needham, and others. The next Institute will be held Jan. 16th, at Newburyport, the subject of which in the morning being announced as "Underdraining," with T. C. Thurlow, of West Newton, for essayist, and in the afternoon "The prospects of New England Farmers for the next ten years," to be opened by Warren Brown, of Hampton Falls, N. H.

The following is the programme for the week of prayer, January 7-12, 1884:

Monday, January 7 — Praise and thanksgiving for God's special providence, Christ's marked favor and the Holy Spirit's gracious work. Ps. ciii., 1-5; Josh. xxiii., 14.

Tuesday, January 8—Humiliation and confession for personal failings, for social vices as intemperance, for the secular spirit in the Church, for prevailing scepticism and religious indifference. Neh. 1., 6, 7; Luke xviii., 13, 14.

Wednesday, January 9—Prayer for Families and Instructors of Youth.—For parental fidelity in household training; for pious watchcare in schools and colleges; for spiritual influence in Christian associations of youth; and for early conversions in Sunday schools. II. Tim. 1., 5; iii., 17; Gen. xviii., 17-19.

Thursday, January 10—Prayer for the Church of Christ—For prayerful and laborious ministry; for consecration and co-operation in members; for early devotion in educated youths; and for the divine blessing in winning the worldly. John, xviii., 20,21; Gal. iii., 26-28.

Friday, January 11—Prayer for Nations— For legislators, that statutes may be conformed to divine law; for rulers that they may conscientiously administer government; for peace and conciliation among nations, and for popular integrity in the duties of citizens. Isaiah, ii., 2-4; Zachariah, viii., 20-23; Ephesians, ii., 11-22.

Saturday, January 12—Prayer for home and foreign missions—For missionaries that they may be sustained in trials and prove efficient in labors; for heathens, Mohammedans and Israelites, that they may be won to Christ. Matthew, xxviii., 16-20; Acts, xiii., 1-3; Galatians, i., 1-3, 15, 17, 22-24.

On Thursday of last week Rev. W. G. Sperry, of the South Church, preached the sermon at the installation of Rev. R. K. Kendall over the First Church in Boxford.

Rev. Comfort E. Barrows, D. D. who died at Newport, R. I., Dec. 26th, of pneumonia, was formerly pastor of the Baptist church in this town. He was the son of Comfort and Mela (Blake) Barrows; and was born in Attleboro, Mass., Dec. 11th, 1831. He graduated at Brown University, in the class of 1858, and at Newton Theological institution in the class of 1861. He was ordained pastor of the Baptist church here Dec. 25th, 1861, succeeding Rev. Mr. Keeley, who recommended and introduced him to the church here. His pastorate continued three years and three months, when he was succeeded by Rev. N. M. Williams. Jan. 1st, 1862, he married Miss Harriet Willard, daughter of Rev. Erastus Willard, for 21 years a missionary in France. In March, 1865, Dr. Barrows was called to the pastorate of the First Baptist church in Newport, R. I., where he remained until his death, nearly 19 years. Dr. Barrows was the author of several historical works, and also contributed to several of our leading reviews and papers. He was regarded as one of the ablest writers and clearest thinkers in the Baptist denomination. Mrs. Barrows died only last March, and Dr. Barrows in less than a year joins her in the eternal world. They leave no children. Dr. Barrows' funeral took place Tuesday, (yesterday) at the first Baptist church in Newport, where he had so long officiated, and was attended by all the clergymen of the city, and a large number of the Baptist clergymen from all parts of the state.

The "Union Signal" of Dec. 27th, says: "It is now six years since the National W. C. T. Union has been asking that a special day be devoted to temperance in the week of prayer. Because intemperance is a national evil, and the temperance reform seeks its removal, it has seemed most reasonable that the Christian people of the land bend their petitions to that end on one day of the seven, so religiously devoted to national thanksgiving, humiliation and prayer. The 8th of January is fixed by the General Assembly of the United Presbyterian Church, and also the National W. C. T. Union as the day of prayer for the temperance cause." In accordance with that suggestion, the Peabody Union will observe the day, next Tuesday, at their room, 18 Main street, commencing at 10 o'clock. Each hour the meeting will be led by different ladies, from 10 to 5 o'clock. All interested in the cause are invited to attend. A lunch will be served at noon to those who would like to remain.

The thirty-ninth annual meeting of the Mass. Teachers' Association was held Thursday, Friday and Saturday of last week in Boston. Thursday evening a lecture on Electric Lighting was given, also a lecture on Alaska. Friday forenoon the No Recess Question was presented and discussed; Mrs. Livermore gave an intensely interesting lecture on the question, "What can be done for Temperance in our Public Schools?" and the question, "Why do not more pupils attend our High Schools?" was discussed. In the afternoon the meeting was conducted in three sections, in which were presented, in a way at once interesting and practical, topics of interest respectively to teachers of high, grammar and primary schools. The topics presented Friday evening and Saturday forenoon were of general interest, the evening being made more attractive by a fine musical entertainment.

An intoxicated individual named Frank Kennedy, a resident of this town, attempted to board the 5.27 train from Boston last Thursday evening, and come near losing his life. The train had started to go to Danvers, when he attempted to board the rear end of the train, but was dashed to the ground, the step of the car striking him on the side of his face, bruising him considerable. He was picked up unconscious and taken to the police station and cared for. He is one of the party who broke into William Mitchell's shop in South Peabody some time ago, for which he served a year in the house of correction. He was arraigned in the police court the next morning for drunkenness, and received the usual fine of one dollar and cost. Not having that amount he went to Salem Jail for 10 days.

The second social party under the management of Wm. Farnham and Wm. Flanigan took place last evening at Upton's Hall. About sixty couple were on the floor when we looked in for a short time, and everybody looked happy. These parties are private and it is probable they will continue through the season.

Report tells of a rough and tumble fight at "Larry" Cuddire's saloon on Mill street last Saturday night, between the proprietor and Jack Barry, a well known slugger, in which Cuddire came off second best.

Gents' Winter Furnishings.

According to our usual custom on WEDNESDAY, JAN. 2nd, we shall inaugurate our great semi-annual Mark Down Sale of Men's, Youth's, Boy's, and Children's Heavy Winter Clothing and Men's Underwear.

Our unparalleled success and the large increase in our sales for 1883, has proved beyond a doubt that we give better clothing for the money, than any other dealer in Essex County, and the people know it. Our rule has always been to give every buyer full value.

We shall make our price so low on fine goods that it will be impossible for any dealers in Essex County to compete with us.

We give below a list of a few special bargains.

$8.00 and 10.00.

Men's and Young Men's heavy All Wool Plain and Fancy Mixed Overcoats. This lot represents some 25 different patterns, all handsome, stylish Goods which we have retailed all the season for $10.00, 12, 13.50 and 15; now marked down to $8 and 10.00 according to quality. They are bargains.

$5.00.

1 Lot of Men's extra heavy All Wool Steel Mixed Diagonal Overcoats. These garments would be considered bargains at $10.00 by some dealers, we shall close the lot at retail for only $5, which is less than the material cost. Don't forget the price, $5.00.

$12.00.

Men's and Young Men's All Wool Overcoats. This lot represents some ten or twelve different patterns which were considered bargains when sold at $15.00 and 16.50. In order to make a quick sale we have marked them down to $12.00.

$15.00 and 18.00.

Men's and Young Men's Fine All Wool Overcoats. This lot embraces some of the most desirable patterns manufactured this season, marked down from $18, 20 and 22, to 15.00 and 18.00, according to quality.

$20.00 and 25.00.

Men's and Young Men's Extra Fine Overcoats, manufactured from the finest domestic and foreign goods, many of them lined throughout with silk and satin. This lot embraces some 25 different patterns marked down from $25, 28 and 30 to 20 and 25.

BY THE LIGHT OF DAY.

PAST IMPOSSIBILITIES THE FACTS OF THE PRESENT—HELP IN THE NEW ERA.

"I remember when they were putting up the poles for the first telegraph line in the State of New York, and now look there!" exclaimed a citizen of the metropolis to his friend, as the two stood on the summit of the tall Equitable Building in Broadway. "The city is strung with wires like a harp, and electric communication is the daily miracle of the world. People no longer wonder and laugh at it as they did at Morse when he first suggested its possibility."

The age marches on and prejudice must give way. Nobody has a monopoly of truth. Even the conservative guild of physicians admit that the secrets of medicine are shared by all men. "I dressed his wound, and God healed him," said old Galen. Once that terrible disease, Rheumatism, was supposed to be a shifting, local ailment, now attacking the joints and now the muscles. To-day it is demonstrated to be a disease of the blood" Mrs. Henry Bogert, of No. 454 Atlantic Avenue, Brooklyn, N. Y., writes to Messrs. HISCOX & Co., of New York, proprietors of PARKER'S GINGER TONIC, that "she had been completely disabled from Rheumatism and pain in the back and limbs. She was advised to take the Tonic for Kidney disease. She did so, and her Rheumatism disappeared." The reason is simple. Diseased kidneys produce rheumatic symptoms. Cure them and you destroy Rheumatism. This is now admitted by all intelligent physicians. It is the new light thrown on their time-worn and mistaken theories.

PARKER'S GINGER TONIC, which is a combination of the best remedies for the blood known to science, is universally successful in combating this terribly complaint. Those who, like Mrs. Bogert, suffer from Kidney or Liver diseases or any complaint arising from impure blood, will find the TONIC a prompt and certain remedy. Prices, 50c. and $1. a bottle. The larger size the cheaper.

WARREN LELAND,

whom everybody knows as the successful manager of the Largest Hotel Enterprises

of America, says that while a passenger from New York on board a ship going around Cape Horn, in the early days of emigration to California, he learned that one of the officers of the vessel had cured himself, during the voyage, of an obstinate disease by the use of

Ayer's Sarsaparilla.

Since then Mr. LELAND has recommended AYER'S SARSAPARILLA in many similar cases, and he has never yet heard of its failure to effect a radical cure.

Some years ago one of Mr. LELAND'S farm laborers bruised his leg. Owing to the bad state of his blood, an ugly scrofulous swelling or lump appeared on the injured limb. Horrible itching of the skin, with burning and darting pains through the lump, made life almost intolerable. The leg became enormously enlarged, and running ulcers formed, discharging great quantities of extremely offensive matter. No treatment was of any avail until the man, by Mr. LELAND'S direction, was supplied with AYER'S SARSAPARILLA, which allayed the pain and irritation, healed the sores, removed the swelling, and completely restored the limb to use.

Mr. LELAND has personally used

for Rheumatism, with entire success; and, after careful observation, declares that, in his belief, there is no medicine in the world equal to it for the cure of Liver Disorders, Gout, the effects of high living, Salt Rheum, Sores, Eruptions, and all the various forms of blood diseases.

We have Mr. LELAND'S permission to invite all who may desire further evidence in regard to the extraordinary curative powers of AYER'S SARSAPARILLA to see him personally either at his mammoth Ocean Hotel, Long Branch, or at the popular Leland Hotel, Broadway, 27th and 28th Streets, New York.

Mr. LELAND'S extensive knowledge of the good done by this unequalled eradicator of blood poisons enables him to give inquirers much valuable information.

MADE ON PURPOSE.

ONE OF THOSE MISTAKES(?) WHICH ARE MORE FREQUENT THAN PROFITABLE.

"Why, my child, this is not BENSON'S CAPCINE POROUS PLASTER," said a father to his little daughter, after examining a package she had just brought from the drug store.

"Isn't it, Papa? I'm sorry, but I asked the man for Benson's—I know I did, and he took the twenty-five cents you gave me to pay for it with," exclaimed the child, positively. "Maybe the drug man made a mistake."

"I'll go 'round myself and see," was the gentleman's comment, as he donned his coat and hat.

"Why didn't you send me Benson's plaster, instead of this cheap and trashy thing?"

"Why, I,—I, thought that would suit you just as well—and—"

"You thought! you thought! What business had you to think? I don't pay you for thinking, but for filling my order," said the indignant caller, contemptuously, "There! take that thing back and give me my money, I'll get what I want elsewhere."

Miscellaneous.

A VERITABLE FAMILY MAN.—John Heffner, a German ragpicker, a resident of Reading, Pa., who was killed on the Pennsylvania railroad at Lancaster, had a remarkable history. He was 97 years old, and was born at Wortemburg, Germany. The remarkable thing about Heffner's life was the large number of children he had. He was married three times, and had a family of 42 children, only five of whom—all daughters, ranging in age from 6 to 25 years—survive. When 25 years old, in 1840, he married his first wife in Germany. She lived eight years, and became the mother of 17 children in that time, having twins in the first year of their marriage. The next year brought forth another pair of twins. Each succeeding year for four years thereafter, Mrs. Heffner became the mother of triplets. Then she died and was laid away in the village cemetery in Germany. The widower now had a family of 17 children. Three months thereafter a young lady took charge of the children, and, in the course of time, she became the second Mrs. Heffner. In February ,1849, the second wife presented Mr. Heffner with a boy, and on Christmas day of the same year the 19th child was added to the Heffner flock. The family was now larger than any other in that part of the country. When they gathered around the table the household had the appearance of an orphan asylum. Five years passed on, and Mr. Heffner's family was increased by the addition of 10 more children, a pair of twins being born every year for the next three years. Only one child was born in 1854. He came to this country with his family. In 1857 his wife died, having been married nine years. He was now the father of 32 children, 12 of whom had died, leaving 20 to be taken in charge by a widow whom he married in 1858. Mrs. Heffner No. 3 had one child by a previous marriage. She became the mother of nine more in 10 years by single births. None of the first set of 17 children survive; two of the 15 of the second wife still live, and three of the third wife. In a period of 28 years he became the father af 42 children. The old man had long since forgotten the names of his numerous progeny.

MADISON SQUARE THEATRE.—It is not difficult to define the reason for the wonderful success of Bronson Howard's play of Young Mrs. Winthrop. Primarily, its success is due to the fact that its motif is based upon those passions of the human heart, which are part of the every day life of all men and women. Its purity of tone, its definiteness of purpose so plainly visible in the lesson which it teaches; its very simplicity; all these are factors which made the play the lasting success it has been. While all may not give the same reason for liking Young Mrs. Winthrop, which the young lady gave when asked this question, her reply being that it was delightful because "it made her cry and laugh all the way through the piece." Yet she no doubt speaks for hundreds of others. Let the author succeed in touching a responsive chord in the hearts of his listeners, and success will sooner or later crown his efforts.

This much being true of Young Mrs. Winthrop, applies as truthfully to all the other plays presented by the Madison Square management. People crowd to see them everywhere they are presented, because they unfold the joys and sorrows of the human heart. There is nothing so dear to all true men and women, nothing so closely allied to their better natures, as the influence of home. Herein, I think lies the secret of success of the Madison Square plays; their close alliance to home and fireside. The careful observer will notice how entirely free from exaggeration all the characters in Young Mrs. Winthrop, Esmeralda, Hazel Kirke and the rest of the Madison Square plays are.

All the effects sought after are obtained perfectly legitimately. Broader effects may be produced by caricature, but time robs them of their strength; absolute truthfulness to nature alone prevails for all time. The inherent desire in almost everyone to wish others to enjoy what they themselves have enjoyed, accounts in a great measure for the steady growth in numbers of the admirers of these dramas of the fireside. Though man at best is a selfish animal it is a part of his nature to point out to others, the good things obtainable in this life, especially if he can do so without any cost to himself. For this reason the supporters of such plays as Young Mrs. Winthrop will steadily increase. It is a noticeable fact that these plays have drawn to the theatre in all parts of the country a class of people who have hitherto been unaccustomed to attend theatrical performances of any kind. The same fidelity to the "spirit of the times" noticeable in the plays of Ben Johnson, Kotzebue and Goldsmith, may also be plainly traced in all the Madison Square plays. They are truthful pictures of our Nineteenth Century American society. Not confined to any one phase of the life of today, they touch upon all manners and conditions of life, presenting each in turn in the most artistic and effectiv way.

A strange sight would be a successful business man who does not advertise. But there must be truth and solid worth in the goods to back up the advertising. Everybody knows that it pays to trade with those who advertise. The firms that appear in this paper advertise nothing but what they are able to perform, and we here state boldly, and without fear of successful contradiction, that you will save money every time you buy of them.

This, in our own day, is the chosen time
In which St. Nicholas, the children's friend,
Is wont upon tall chimney tops to climb,
And through their sooty passages descend.
That, when the little eyes are closed in sleep,
He may discover stockings on the wall,
Within whose depths his hands delight to heap
The testimonials of his midnight call
Ah! blissful dreams whence rosy girls and boys
Awake with reappearance of the light,
To draw from these receptacles the toys
Which Santa Claus had placed there in the night;
When, with fond wishes for the gifts they sought,
The slumbers of their childhood were inspired,
And each rejoiced to find the saint had brought
The very objects which his heart desired.

Generals Dalton, Wales and Peach, authorized, by Gov. Butler for the purpose of selecting a military escort for the legislative procession, have, after carefully considering the points of excellence of the several companies in the various infantry organizations, made their decision, and they selected Company M, First Regiment, Captain Braley of Fall River, and Company D, of the Ninth, Capt. Mathew Callahan, of Boston. For the first time in many years the First Corps of Cadets will not officiate.

BEST BAKING POWDER.

INTERESTING TESTS MADE BY THE GOVERNMENT CHEMIST.

Dr. Edward G. Love, the present Analytical Chemist for the Government, has recently made some interesting experiments as to the comparative value of baking powders. Dr. Love's tests were made to determine what brands are the most economical to use, and as their capacity lies in their leavening power, tests were directed solely to ascertain the available gas of each powder. Dr. Love's report gives the following:

Name of the Baking Powders	Strength Cubic Inches Gas per each oz. of Powder.
"Royal", cream tartar powder.	127.4
"Patapsco", alum powder,	125.2*
"Rumford's", phosphate, fresh,	122.5*
"Rumford's", phosphate, old,	32.7*
"Hanford's None Such", fresh,	121.6
"Hanford's None Such", old,	84.35
"Redhead's",	117.0
"Charm", alum powder,	116.9*
"Amazon", alum powder,	111.9*
"Cleveland's", short weight 3-4 oz.	110.8
"Sea Foam",	107.9
"Czar".	106.8
"Dr. Price's"	102.6
"Snow Flake", Groff's St. Paul,	101.88
"Lewis's" Condensed,	98.2
"Congress", yeast,	97.5
"C. E. Andrews & Co's.", contains alum,	78.17*
"Hecker's",	92.5
"Gillets",	84 2
"Bulk,"	80.5

*In his report, the Government Chemist says: "I regard all alum powders as very unwholesome. Phosphate and Tartaric Acid powders liberate their gas too freely in process of baking, or under varying climatic changes suffer deterioration."

Dr. H. A. Mott, the former Government Chemist, after a careful and elaborate examination of the various Baking Powders of commerce, reported to the Government in favor of the Royal brand.

"When I goes a-shopping," says an old lady, "I allers asks for what I wants, and if they have it, and it is cheap, and can't be got for less, I most allers take it without clappering all day about it, as some people do."

AYER'S PILLS.

A large proportion of the diseases which cause human suffering result from derangement of the stomach, bowels, and liver. AYER'S CATHARTIC PILLS act directly upon these organs, and are especially designed to cure the diseases caused by their derangement, including Constipation, Indigestion, Dyspepsia, Headache, Dysentery, and a host of other ailments, for all of which they are a safe, sure, prompt, and pleasant remedy. The extensive use of these PILLS by eminent physicians in regular practice, shows unmistakably the estimation in which they are held by the medical profession.

These PILLS are compounded of vegetable substances only, and are absolutely free from mercury or any other injurious ingredient.

A Sufferer from Headache writes:

"AYER'S PILLS are invaluable to me, and are my constant companion. I have been a severe sufferer from Headache, and your PILLS are the only thing I could look to for relief. One dose will quickly move my bowels and free my head from pain. They are the most effective and the easiest physic I have ever found. It is a pleasure to me to speak in their praise, and I always do so when occasion offers.

W. L. PAGE, of W. L. Page & Bro."
Franklin St., Richmond, Va., June 3, 1882.

"I have used AYER'S PILLS in numberless instances as recommended by you, and have never known them to fail to accomplish the desired result. We constantly keep them on hand at our home, and prize them as a powerful, safe, and reliable family medicine. For DYSPEPSIA they are invaluable.

J. T. HAYES."
Mexia, Texas, June 17, 1882.

The Rev. FRANCIS B. HARLOWE, writing from Atlanta, Ga., says. "For some years past I have been subject to constipation, from which, in spite of the use of medicines of various kinds, I suffered increasing inconvenience, until some months ago I began taking AYER'S PILLS. They have entirely corrected the costive habit, and have vastly improved my general health."

AYER'S CATHARTIC PILLS correct irregularities of the bowels, stimulate the appetite and digestion, and by their prompt and thorough action give tone and vigor to the whole physical economy.

MR. AND MRS. NEWCOMB,

OF STATE ST., SPRINGFIELD, MASS. WHAT THEY SAY IN FAVOR OF A REAL HONEST THING—THEIR WORD AS GOOD AS GOLD.

Mrs. Newcomb is the wife of one of the employees in the United States Armory, Springfield, Mass. She says: "I have used Dr. Kennedy's FAVORITE REMEDY for Indigestion and Biliousness. My husband has also used it. We keep it in the house as a family medicine, and consider it the best ever made for the purpose recommended."

Dr. Kennedy is daily in receipt of letters from patients expressing similar sentiments as these expressed by Mrs. Newcomb, of State street. These letters are spontaneous and put in all varieties of phraseology, but invariably setting forth one thing—the value of Kennedy's FAVORITE REMEDY for many forms of disease. It may be just the thing you have been looking for. Is your Liver disordered? Have you Derangement of the Kidneys or Bladder associated with Constipation of the Bowels? If so, you want Kennedy's FAVORITE REMEDY. Dr. Kennedy practices Medicine and Surgery in all their Branches. Write and state your case. "Favorite Remedy" is fast becoming a trusted household friend in all cases of Female Weakness and diseases of the blood. One dollar a bottle. Your druggist has it.

MORTALITY AMONG TROOPS.

The historian of the Napoleonic wars has many threads to weave into his narrative, and the thread of sickness is apt to show, perhaps, less conspicuously than its importance deserves. But the historian of medicine and of epidemic diseases supplies his omissions: and it is indeed a ghastly narrative that he gives. The horrors of typhus and dysentery in the Russian campaign of 1812, and in such sieges as that of Torgau in the year following, are beyond all description. Nothing in the modern world for which the will of an individual can be held accountable ever came so near to realizing the monstrous imagination of Macbeth:

"Though the treasure
Of Nature's germens tumble all together,
Even till destruction sicken—"

Of the army numbering 500,000 that crossed the Vistula in the Spring of 1812 only some bands of stragglers found their way back, without arms, their clothes in rags, and spreading typhus as they went. The Third Army Corps, commanded by Ney, was 43,000 strong when it set out, and when it reentered Poland all that remained of it was a ragged group of some twenty persons surrounding the Marshall. One of these was the Surgeon de Kerckhove, who afterward wrote the medical history of the campaign. In Vilna, out of a total of 30,000 French prisoners, 25,000 died of typhus, and the disease carried off 8 000 of the poor Jews living in the town. In the Hospital of St. Ignatius an eye-witness is said to have seen one of the wards filled three times over with fifty typhus patients and three times emptied of fifty dead bodies. As a contrast to these unmitigated horrors let us take the proportions of sickness and mortality among the German troops in the Franco-German war. The Germans crossed the Rhine in the Summer and Autumn of 1870 to the number of 913,967. Of these there perished, from one cause or another, 44,890, including 17,572 who were killed in battle, 10,710 who died in hospital of their wounds, and 12,253 who died of sickness and pestilence. The relatively small amount of sickness in the campaign is referred to with just pride by Prof. Virchow, in an address from which we take the figures, and which we shall notice further. It will be better appreciated by comparing the figures for the Crimean war and for the American civil war. In the former the French lost in all 95,615 men; of these only 10,240 fell before the enemy. About the same number died of their wounds, and the enormous residue of 75,000 fell victims to camp sickness and pestilence. In the American civil war it is estimated that 97,000 deaths occurred in battle or subsequently from wounds received, and that 184,000 died of sickness. "What immeasurable suffering and pain!" exclaims Virchow. "What a sea of blood and tears is contained in these figures! How much, too, of defective practice, of prejudice, of erroneous opinion!" The lesson of these calamities, he shows, was not thrown away upon the citizens of the United States; their gigantic medical history of the war has been a mine of scientific information and of practical experience for the military surgery and hygiene of later times. When the Germans entered on the war with France, says Prof. Virchow, they had the well-digested experience of two recent campaigns of their own; they had also the inestimable experiences of the Americans, and, finally, they had German science—"wir hatten die deutsche Wissenschaft."

THE CAUSES OF BLUSHING.

The physiology of blushing has long presented a difficult problem to solve. Many unsatisfactory explanations have been given of the causes of that interesing phenomenon. The British Medical Journal lately received an inquiry as to the measures to be taken for the cure of a chronic tendency to blush, and one of its correspondents takes up the matter in a very practical way. Among other causes of blushing he gives prominence "to the wearing of too thick underclothing and especially of too thick socks." He adds that long-sleeved woolen sacks or jerseys are often a cause of blushing, and, in fact, warm clothing in general. He does not fail to remark that the blusher must choose in this matter between the risk of rheumatism and the annoyance of blushing. As collateral evidence in support of his views he says: "An aunt of mine had habitually a red nose from this cause alone, which disappeared when she took to thinner stockings."

Regarding the matter from a social standpoint, the writer says: "The best plan for an habitual blusher is to laugh and be very gushing, as, for instance, on meeting an acquaintance in the street, when he colors up; and he will then feel more at his ease than if he looks sheepish and reserved."

An obvious cause for blushing is over-sensitiveness and self-consciousness, which will wear away as the person becomes used to society and strengthens his character by adopting wise principles of thought and action. The physiological explanation of blushing given by the writer just quoted is that it is due to paralysis of the sympathetic circles of nerves surrounding the arteries, which, not contracting properly, allow a freer flow of blood to the surface.

COFFEE AND PISTOLS.

"Alfred Hardy" must, perforce, give Ireland the credit of inventing the phrase "coffee and pistols for two." The story is that an Irishman, ordering his dinner at a London coffee-house, was mocked by a fop, who amused himself by duplicating the Irishman's orders, using the best of good London accents until, at last, his dinner finished, in a richer brogue than he had before employed, Pat demanded "Coffee and pistols for two," and the joker departed without ceremony, and without waiting to see the order filled.

A word as to pie crust. A very nice crust can be made without butter or lard, if you have cream. Put into a good sized bowl a cup of thick sweet cream. Add sifted flour to it by degrees, not stirring it about, but chopping it in with the edge of the knife until thick enough to roll without sticking. This paste scorches very easily, and must also be baked as soon as possible after it is made.

"Look here, young man," said a Cambridge parent to his daughter's lover when the latter entered the parlor to make his first visit of the indoors season the other night; "look here, you burned up a good deal of coal and kerosene last winter and staying till 10 and 10 1-2 two or three nights a week. Now, I've no objection to your visits, as you are a respectable young man, but you've got to find your own fuel and lights this coming winter." I cannot afford to keep fires running and a lamp burning in this parlor all the winter." "All right sir," responded the young man, "I am willing to share the expense, but you should hardly ask me to bear the whole of it. Suppose you furnish the coal and I furnish the light. How would that do?" "All right," said the parent, as he turned to leave the room. "I'm willing to bear my share of the expense if you bear yours." "Let's see," said the clear-headed youth, as he sat down by his lady love. How much oil did we burn last winter, Sadie?" "Why, John," she replied, with a blush, "we didn't burn a lampful during the whole winter."—Somerville Journal.

There is expended annually for the relief of members nearly $2,000,000; 2,500 sick visited daily, 14 buried daily. Within the last fifty years, 1,200,000 have been admitted into the order, 1,500,000 members relieved, 139,000 widowed families relieved, and a total paid for relief in fifty years of $35,000,000. In the same period the receipts amounted to $94,000,000, and the total deposited in treasuries, $35,000,000. In 1882 the gain in membership was 18,000; estimated gain in 1883, 25,000.

NASBY'S PAPER.

THE TOLEDO WEEKLY BLADE.

Circulation 115,000.

This vast circulation is because the BLADE is a paper for the whole country. It is not thrown together, but every line of it is edited by competent hands. It is a complete epitome of the news of the week, and whosoever reads the BLADE carefully, needs nothing else to be well informed as to what the world is doing. Editorially the BLADE has made a proud record. It has an opinion on every thing that affects the people of the country, and it expresses it boldly, fearlessly, and forcibly. As good as the Blade has been in past years, we will make it better than ever in the year to come.

Among the features for the coming year will be the regular "Nasby Letters," two serials by Nasby, entitled "Nasby in Exile," and "Nasby in the South," a serial story by Ernest Warren, entitled, Court and Camp," a serial by John McElroy author of Andersonville, "Reminiscences of an Army Mule"; a serial written for the BLADE by an Austrian nobleman; besides our regular departments, "Household," "Answers to Correspondents," "Camp Fire," etc., etc. We publish all the news, and latest corrected markets.

Politically the BLADE will continue an exponent of true Republicanism, believing that the best interests of the country demand the continuance of its control in the hands of the party that represents the highest and most advanced ideas.

THE RUM POWER.

The BLADE will fight this monster iniquity with all the power it possesses, and in every way possible. The BLADE holds the liquor traffic to be a greater curse than slavery, and a thousand times more dangerous to the country.

We ask the co-operation of every well-wisher of the Republic that our work may be effective. We ask every Republican in the United States to assist in extending the circulation of the BLADE, especially among those of the Republican party who believe as we do in the necessity of Pulverizing the Rum Power. We want the BLADE in as many families as possible this winter, that it may be read before the excitement of a political campaign, giving it time for its truths to take root in the minds of its readers.

THE WEEKLY BLADE, $1.00 a year, postpaid, to EVERYBODY. Those preferring, may receive the BLADE, THREE MONTHS, by remitting 30 cents, or clubs of three months trial subscribers, of not less than four, 25 cents each.

OUR GREAT ART OFFER.

A $10.00 Steel Engraving for $1.00. Write us for a specimen copy of the WEEKLY BLADE, which will give full particulars of this, the greatest offer ever made by any publisher. We send specimen copies of the BLADE free to any address. We want as many addresses as possible to send Specimen Copies to. Write a postal card asking for a specimen for yourself, and send us the names of all your neighbors. We want to send out a half million copies within the next month. Don't be modest as to the number.

THE SUN.

NEW YORK, 1884.

About sixty million copies of THE SUN have gone out of our establishment during the last twelve months.

If you were to paste end to end all the columns of all THE SUNS printed and sold last year, you would get a continuous strip of interesting information common sense wisdom, sound doctrine, and sane wit long enough to reach from Printing House square to the top of Mount Copernicus in the moon, then back to Printing House square, and then three-quarters of the way back to the moon again.

But THE SUN is written for the inhabitants of this earth; this same strip of intelligence would girdle the earth twenty-seven or twenty-eight times.

If every buyer of a copy of THE SUN during the past year has spent only one hour over it, and his wife or his grandfather has spent another hour, this newspaper in 1883 has afforded the human race thirteen thousand years of steady reading night and day.

It is only by little calculations like these that you can form any idea of the circulation of the most popular of American newspapers, or of its influence on the opinions and actions of American men and women.

THE SUN is, and will continue to be, a newspaper which tells the truth without fear of consequences, which gets at the facts no matter how much the process costs, which presents the news of all the world without waste of words and in the most readable shape, which is working with all its heart for the cause of honest government, and which therefore believes that the Republican party must go, and must go in this coming year of our Lord, 1884.

If you know THE SUN, you like it already and you will read it with accustomed diligence and profit during what is sure to be the most interesting year in its history. If you do not yet know THE SUN, it is high time to get into the sunshine.

TERMS TO MAIL SUBSCRIBERS.

The several editions of THE SUN are sent by mail, postpaid as follows:

DAILY—50 cents a month, $6 a year; with Sunday editions, $7.

SUNDAY—Eight pages. This edition furnishes the current news of the world, special articles of exceptional interest to everybody, and literary reviews of new books of the highest merit. $1 a year.

WEEKLY—$1 a year. Eight pages of the best matter of the daily issues; an Agricultural Department of unequalled value, special market reports, and literary, scientific, and domestic intelligence make THE WEEKLY SUN the newspaper for the farmer's household. To clubs of ten with $10, an extra copy free.

NEW ENGLAND ONE PRICE SHOE HOUSE.

DRAMATIC AND MUSICAL.

The success of Abbey's Opera Company, now performing at the Boston, seems to be unprecedented. There is a large demand for seats especially the low priced ones. The orchestra and choruses are trained musicians from the operatic stage of Europe, and it is said Abbey's success in New York was largely owing to the fact that he holds out no promises to the public which he is unable to fulfil. Jan. 7th, John McCullough opens in Virginia.

"Esmeralda," is brought out at the Park this week. Mr. Ben Maginley plays Old Rogers, and the company includes Louise Dillon, Joseph Wheelock, Kate Denin Wilson and Mr. and Mrs. Charles Walcot, with others of note in the Madison Square army. All the original scenery, with its elaborate detail, will be seen, and, by a new and ingenious device, the transfer from the North Carolina kitchen to the Paris studio will be made in less than half a minute.

"Confusion," a farcical comedy that met with a great deal of success in England, and has been played in this country several times to appreciative audiences, is the Globe attraction of the week. Mr. Henry E. Dixey, Mr. Henry St. Maur, Miss Sadie Martinot, Miss Maria Savis and Miss Vernona Jarbeau are to appear in the piece. Preceding "Confusion" there will be a farce, in the course of which Mr. Dixey will give imitations of Irving and other celebrities, and Florence Gerald is to "take off the fair Ellen."

Haverly's Mastodon Minstrels will hold the boards next Monday night at Mechanic Hall. This means a good minstrel show and lots of fun.

There is so much to please and interest in the reigning lyric attraction at the Bijou that success is assured. In spite of competition "The Beggar Student" is well patronized, and its best numbers are nightly applauded most heartily. It is sure of a long run, and the audiences are as enthusiastic as on the first night of its production.

Mr. Abbey's interests at the Boston during the Irving engagement and the coming opera, are attentively cared for by Mr. Marcus Mayer.

"Confusion" has made such a hit at the Globe that it is probable it will be continued longer than the fortnight originally assigned to it.

John McCullough's annual engagement at the Boston is always anticipated with pleasure. The actor is in excellent health and is doing noble work. His company is unusually strong. Opening in "Virginius," the great tragedian will appear in a round of his famous impersonations, and the usual meed of success may be anticipated for the artist. Mr. Joseph Haworth and Mr. Mark Price will come with Mr. McCullough. They are both sterling actors.

The annual benefit of Boston Lodge, Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks, will take place to-morrow afternoon at one o'clock. Their benefits are looked forward to with much pleasure by the theatre going public, as giving one of the finest performances in the season.

Manager Shoeffel will hereafter be more of a Bostonian than he has been heretofore this season, as he will now devote most of his time to the affairs of the Park Theatre here.

"The Rajah" will soon be brought to Boston with a great Madison Square cast.

Miss Henrietta Beebe, soprano of Dr. Howard's church in New York, is said to have a salary of $1500, the largest paid to any lady in the city.

Mr. Edward Kendall has been kindly released from his contract to appear in "The Two Orphans" by manager Chas. A. Stevenson. He joins Mr. and Mrs. Geo. S. Knight on New Year's for the balance of the season, being engaged to play Dick Treely in "Otto" and other Juvenile roles. The company in Otto will appear at Mechanic Hall, Salem, under the management of Moulton & Johnson. Seats are already for sale at Ropes' drug store.

SPARKS.

Hose four have put a horse, sleigh and harness into their house for the use of engineer Pierce in answering to an alarm. The horse is kept harnessed and standing in the floor at all times. He is in good condition, a little high for want of exercise and too high feeding. The horse was furnished by the Foan brothers, the sleigh by Starr C. Hewitt, and the harness by other members of the company.

Quite a lively little blaze was discovered in Mrs. J. W. McLean's house on Sawyer street, last Saturday afternoon, by Mrs. Miller, wife of the foreman of the H. & L. She smelled smoke, as of burning cloth, and began to look for it, soon discovering it in a closet used for clothing. Like a true fireman's wife, instead of getting frightened and fainting, she started for water and soon had it extinguished with only a small loss of some clothing and a straw hat. Probably the fire was caused by children playing with matches.

Abel Proctor H. & L. company received, last week, a letter from Thomas E. Proctor, announcing that he had given them $100 to refurnish and fresco their room. The company held a meeting Friday evening and extended a vote of thanks to Mr. Proctor for his generous present, and also appointed a committee to get estimates on the cost of the proposed improvements. The company are going to have as fine a looking room as can be fitted up for the money.

Engine meetings next Monday night!

Torrent Hose Company will hold their third party in their Engine House, Friday evening, January 11th.

The committee under whose charge the Hook & Ladder room is being fitted up, are Joseph H. Miller, Thomas E. Wilson and James E. Millea. Work was begun on the painting by Wm. Blaney yesterday.

The painting and frescoing of the room of Steamer 1 is finished and is without doubt the finest piece of work of the kind in town. The centre piece, blue ground with gold and silver scrolls and stars, dados, panels, lines and borders, with vines and flowers in fancy colors; a wide frieze with four medallions extends around the walls at the top, the walls being tinted in neutral colors. The frieze is brought out prominently by a narrow gilt moulding at the bottom. The whole gives the room a very rich appearance. The carpet will be put down and the new furniture moved in this week, and then the company will be pleased to show their room to any one. Blaney did the work, and he has eclipsed all his other efforts in this job.

The whip is changed once more and Steamer one is on duty for the month of January.

Janitor Smart took charge of the engine house yesterday morning and immediately commenced to clean up, going over the apparatus and washing the floors. Charlie has been in the Peabody department for nearly 12 years, having served in Hose 1 and Steamers 1 and 2, and as fireman of Steamer 1 for nearly two years of that time. The firemen think that they have got the "right man in the right place."

Some of the boys of Hose 4, say that the horse and sleigh in their house, was for the benefit of the other engineers to see if they could get to a fire a little earlier. ZERO.

SOUTH PEABODY.

Messrs. Batchelder, Beede and Newhall have been cutting ice on the Crowningshield Pond, the past week, about nine inches thick.

Caskin Bros. have put a furnace into the church the past week, that works to a charm.

The Ladies' Aid Society met at the house of Caleb Shillaber, on Lynn street, last Friday evening, and after the usual business was finished, the members sat down to an old fashioned baked bean supper, which they did ample justice.

The heavy snow of the past week broke down the shed in the rear of Mrs. David Putnam's on Lynn street.

The ice on Brown's and Spring ponds is about eight inches thick.

Mr. Gustavus Williams is having his barn painted by his brother.

Master Bert Brown has been home from school during the holidays.

There will be a lecture at the church vestry to-morrow night by a Mr. Kimball of Andover.

The ice and snow this week caused "the wicked to stand on slippery places," and quite a number of our citizens have already tumbled to the fact.

The So. Peabody table at the Grand Army Fair will be in charge of Mrs. W. W. Reed, assisted by Mrs. Edward Meacom, and others named last week.

A horse owned by Robert Brown, broke through the ice in the rear of the pound, and was rescued with difficulty last Friday.

To-morrow evening at So. Peabody, Rev. Joseph Kimball, of Andover, will deliver a lecture in the vestry of the new church. Subject: Glimpses of other people. The lecture is highly spoken of, and should be well attended. Admission is only 10 cents.

The reports are that the prospect for a good ice crop was never better at this time of year than it is at present. The cold has made an excellent foundation, the ice in the ponds being from four to six inches thick, and a short period only of tolerably cold weather will be needed to thicken it enough to cut.

The first Oratorio given in Salem by the Oratorio Society this season was a pronounced success. Nearly every seat in the hall had been sold in advance, and the weather seemed to have little effect upon its patrons; they were determined to brave all obstacles. Peabody was well represented, both in the chorus and audience. The Oratorio Society is under new management this year.. Mr. William Aggee being president and George A. Shepard secretary. By their personal efforts and activity, the membership has largely increased, and the chorus on the evening was unusually fine. The presentation of Elijah, which was this week selected, was equal in all respects to the Handel & Haydn Society of Boston, the orchestra being a portion of Mr. Henschel's Symphony Orchestra, and the soloists being the best talent that could be obtained. The reputation of the society in the choral parts is well known: the voices are younger and fresher than its older rival in Boston, and the Oratorio was given with a readiness and promptness of attack which showed at once familiarity with the score. Much interest centered in the appearance of Miss E. C. Hamlin, who was formerly of Albany, N. Y., and who made her debut in Oratorio in this vicinity at the Worcester Musical Festival and was soloist at the Christmas Oratorio in Boston. Miss Hamlin justified the expectations of her friends; and the Boston Advertiser speaks thus frankly of her singing: Her natural vocal power, and the good command over it acquired by judicious training, made her work in her more dramatic solos, quite impressive, notwithstanding her faults of enunciation, and a certain immaturity of style that is inconsistent with great breadth of expression. Her style at present often seems cold, formal, and colorless, particularly in the more heroic of her solos in this work, but greater freedom and warmth may reasonably be expected to come with added experience. Mrs. G. E. Merrill, of Salem, who has often been heard with pleasure, took the contralto solos. Mr. A. E. Pennell, of Portland, sang the tenor parts with much effectiveness, and the part of Elijah was sung by Georg Henschel. The incidental solo and concerted work by the members of the society was well done, Miss Grace F. Dalton coming in for a large share of praise.

The second Raymond excursion to California started from the Fitchburg depot in Boston, at 1.15 p. m., last Thursday, in a special train of Pullman cars. The party numbered 137 persons, and will be under the charge of Mr. I. A. Whitcomb until they reach California. Everything under Mr. Raymond's management now runs with such smoothness that a conductor seems almost superfluous. Only one change of cars is made during the trip across the Continent—and that at Chicago, where the party rested over the Sabbath.

That the cloak department of Almy Bigelow & Webber, in Salem, is extensively patronized by our ladies goes without saying, and just here it is proper to refer them to the new advertisement in this issue, which we think fully explains itself.

The exhibition at the Wallis school yesterday afternoon, by the scholars of that school, was given before a large number of the parents and friends of the pupils. The exercises opened by the march of the scholars with Prof. C. R. Bill at the piano. Mr. Geo. F. Barnes was master of ceremonies, and had arranged the following program: Piano solo, "Coming thro' the Rye" by Miss Patterson. Reading "The Sportsman's Shot," by Miss Emily Cronan. Piano Solo, Master Herman Barnes. Violin Solo, Master Chas. Hodgkins. Declamation, "Cruelty to Horses," Master James Osgood. Piano solo, Miss Lillie Spillane. Exercises—part reading, recitations and singing; subject "Kindness to Animals." written by Geo. T. Angell, being a history of the formation and works of the Bands of Mercy in this country and Europe, parts taken by the whole school. It was very interesting and instructive. Reading, "Birds of Killingworth," by Misses Warner, Pierce and Cronin. Musical exercises under the direction of Prof. Bill. Violin solo, Master Chas. Carroll. Banjo solo, Master George Osborn. Master John Eagan was to have given a piano solo, but a sore finger prevented. The violin and banjo solos by Masters Carroll and Osborn were loudly applauded. The exercises of the day showed the thorough manner in which they had been taught in those branches.

The installation and entertainment to take place in the Institute next Monday evening, promises to attract a large audience, and be one of the affairs of the season. Tickets have been freely given by the comrades of Post 50 and the committee of arrangements. Past Dept. Com. J. G. B. Adams, assisted by James F. Meech late Asst. Adj. Gen. of the Dept. of Mass., will install the officers, after which an entertainment will be given, which will include brief addresses by Comrade Adams and others; singing by Mrs. Benj. F. Upton, of "The Star Spangled Banner," Miss Edith Randall, C. E. LeGrande of the Grand Army Quartette of Salem; Masters Hazen Quint, violinist and John Eagan, pianist, will grace the occasion with music. Comrade Wm. Yeaton, of Chelsea, has promised to be present, and he is said to be a whole entertainment himself. The Peabody Orchestral Club, composed of several of our young men, will lend their aid. Messrs. Seaman and Norris of Salem, who have attained quite a reputation as specialty artists, will be included. Miss Nellie Bartlett will accompany on the piano. The Post will march into the Institute a little after half past seven, with drum and fife, and occupy seats which will be reserved for them. After the exercises in the Institute, the Comrades of the Post, with those assisting, will have a collation in the Grand Army rooms, when the usual speeches, songs and smoke incident to such gatherings will undoubtedly occur.

We are pained to learn that Joseph Poor, one of our aged and respected citizens, was taken quite ill last Monday evening. He remains in a sort of stupor, recognizing friends but unable to converse to any extent. Mr. Poor is nearly 80 years of age, and much anxiety is naturally felt for his recovery.

Edward Trask is fitting up the basement of the building under B. F. Hutchinson's for a provision store. He intends to open Saturday of this week. We wish him success.

Mrs. Martha Meader, living in the house known as the "old ladies' home" on Washington street, was given a pleasant surprise last Monday evening in the shape of a pound party by members of the Baptist Society. A neat sum of money, besides a bountiful supply of provisions and groceries, was given the lady.

Possibly our readers may not know that the annual Hamburg sales of W. B. Gifford & Co., of Lynn, are equal in every respect to those of the mammoth stores in Boston. So we advise them to take a look at their stock, the sale of which began yesterday, instead of going to Boston. There has never been such a display in Lynn before, and the ladies will, we are very sure, not miss the treat of securing some of their choicest patterns.

Read John P. Peabody's new advertisement. It is a novelty in its way.

Our genial postmaster was surprised by the young lady members of his Sabbath School class, Monday evening, who presented him with an elegant inkstand.

The Nashville Jubilee Singers are first class in every respect. They appear Jan. 7th in the Star Course in Tremont Temple, Boston, and will appear in Peabody for one night only, Friday, Jan. 11.

Frank Cousins will close his Bee Hive to-morrow to take account of stock and mark down his goods. And when he re-opens Friday morning, there will be big bargains for our readers.

Do you want your piano tuned, or do you want to rent or buy one, or any kind of musical instrument? If so, we can cordially recommend E. V. Emilio, under Mechanic Hall, Salem. You will be sure of courteous treatment, and you can rely upon what he tells you about an instrument.

The Naumkeag Clothing Company of Salem, as is usual at this season, announce their semi-annual closing out sale. Their advertisement in this issue explains matters, but a visit to their store explains itself. Some of the prices made on overcoats would seem incredible coming from any other than Mr. Gallup—but our readers know that he can back it up every time.

Diaries are a great help, and they will be found of practical utility to almost everybody. Mr. Ives has a complete line, and Messrs. Merrill & Mackintire have all kinds. We advise all to procure a diary and to keep it written up every day, so far as practicable. It will be interesting reading a year from now.

J. Frank Boynton, the manager of Wilmot's Clothing House in Salem, again comes to the front with Waterbury watches. Every purchaser of $10 worth of clothing at this establishment will be entitled to one of those stem winders free of charge. And they don't pay for the watch when they buy their clothing, either.

A BEAUTIFUL GIFT.—The Rock Island Route has issued a new and most comprehensive cook book, of 128 pages, filled with new and valuable receipts from the best caterers of this and other countries. No housewife can afford to be without it; and though worth one dollar, it will be sent to any address, post paid, upon receipt of ten cents in stamps. As they will go like hot cakes, send at once to E. St. John, G. T. & P. A., Chicago, Illinois.

NEWPORT, R. I., Nov. 12, 1883.

J. D. & J. W. EATON, Dear Sirs: Enclosed please find check for amount of bill for CRAWFORD RANGE and Ware. It arrived last Friday noon, and we had it set up and a fire in it before four o'clock. We are more than pleased with it. All our cooking was done Saturday morning. It usually takes all day to do it. My wife thinks she shall take to cooking again herself, as it is real fun to cook with such a Range as the CRAWFORD. Hoping you may sell a great many more of them, and every purchaser be as well pleased as we are. I remain yours, very truly,

(For the Peabody PRESS.)

Far Better.

BY H. BONAR.

O, safe at home, where the dark tempter roams not;
How have I envied thy far happier lot:
Already resting where the evil comes not,
The tear, the toil, the woe, the sin forgot.

O, safe in port, where the rough billow breaks not,
Where the wild sea-moan saddens thee no more;
Where the remorseless stroke of tempest shakes not;
When, when shall I, too, gain that tranquil shore.

O, bright, amid the brightness all eternal,
When shall I breathe with thee, the pur-
er air,
Air of a land whose clime is ever vernal,
A land without a serpent or a snare.

Away, above these scenes of guilt and folly,
Beyond this desert's heat and dreariness,
Safe in the city of the ever holy,
Let me make haste to join thy earlier
bliss.

Another battle fought, and oh, not lost,— Tells of the ending of this fight and thrall,
Another ridge of time's lone moorland
cross'd,
Gives nearer prospect of the jasper wall.

Just gone within the veil, where I shall follow,
Not far before me, hardly out of sight,—
I, down beneath thee in this cloudy hollow,
And thou above me on yon sunny height.

Gone to begin a new and happier story,
Thy bitterer tale of earth now told and done,
These outer shadows for that inner glory,
Exchanged for ever.—O thrice blessed one.

O, freed from fetters of this lonesome prison,
How I shall greet thee in that day of days
When He who died, yea rather who is risen,
Shall these frail frames from dust and darkness raise.

(For the Peabody PRESS.)

Yule.

The guests are gone—the feast removed,
The Yule-log burneth low;
I sit in a dreamy reverie,
Enwrapt in a long ago.
Why do I find in my silent room
A comfort so sadly sweet?
Such a restful quiet from duties done,
Relief from the friends I greet?

Listen! I would words could paint for you
The picture that here I see
In the smouldering embers upon my hearth,
In its vivid reality!
You sit and wonder I speak with cheer
From the depths of a lonely heart;—
Lonely?—yes, but intensely calm,
In living its own sweet part.

From out the chaos of thought arise
Memories of that day,
When my blue-eyed boy crept to my arms,
Awearied with his play,
And begged for a story, "please mamma,"
With his sweet face pressed to mine.
A baby kiss and dimpled arms
Around my neck entwined.

Then I told him of God's bright home above;
Of the shepherds—the midnight watch,
Of the Christ child, his lowly birth,
His home 'neath the humble thatch;
How he placed his hands on the little ones
And gathered them to his arms,
Of his mighty love and "Forbid them not,"
His entry 'mid waving palms.

Of His cruel death—the lonely grave,
The stone that was placed thereon,
The weeping Marys—the angels bright
That watched beside his tomb;
How the dear God his only son
To the children of earth had given,
How he sent the angels to move the stone,
And the ascension up to Heaven.

"Yes,—but mamma, when I shall die
Will God send bright angels down
To watch at my grave with you, and
Will they roll away the stone?
Because you see, I can't go if they don't,
'Tis too heavy for me alone!"
"God be praised—yes!" I answered him;
While a great throb pulsed o'er me,
For the words of my darling fell on my heart

Come Near to Me.

BY ELLA WHEELER.

Come near to me. I need thy glorious presence
Through the dense darkness of this troubled hour.
Shine on my soul and fill it with the essence
Of thy pervading and uplifting power.
Come near, come near to me.

Come nearer yet. I have no strength to reach Thee.
My soul is like a bird with broken wings.
Lean down from Thy fair heights of peace and teach me
The balm Thy touch to mortal beings brings.
Lean down, Oh, God, lean down.

Come near. And yet, if those eternal places
Hold greater tasks to occupy Thy hands,
Send Thy blest angels whose celestial faces
Smile sometimes on us from the spirit lands.
Send one, send one to me.

I must have help. I am so weak and broken
I cannot help myself—I know not how.
That moral force of which so much is spoken
Will not sustain and fortify me now—
I must, I must have help.

Some outside aid, some strength from spirit sources
We all must have, in hours like this, or die.
To One, to all of those mysterious forces
Which men call God, I lift my voice and cry,
Come near, come near to me,
Like a voice from a shoreless sea.

* * * * * * *

"I know his face is hid
Under the casket lid;
Closed are his eyes; cold is his forehead fair;
My hand that marble felt,
O'er it in prayer I knelt;
Yet my heart whispers that—he is not here."

* * * * * * *

And the memories that come as I gaze in the coals,
Sadly sweet have grown,
For God in His infinite love from heart,
Has rolled us away the stone.

Selected Story.

In the Firelight.

'Miss Vance at home?' asked the gentleman at the door.

'Yes, sir; walk in, please. Miss Vance is in the library,' said the correct-looking footman—who appeared to have just stepped out of one of Gray Parker's pictures—as the gentleman divested himself of his top coat.

'Very well, don't wait; I'll announce myself.' And as the footman vanished down the back stairs, Mr. Paul Ravissie crossed the hall and opened the library door.

A very pleasant room it was to enter when the night world outside was white with snow—a large, bay-windowed room, with a lofty ceiling, where obese cupids disported themselves in Olympian disregard of the laws of gravitation, with deep-toned walls and richly embroidered hangings.

But the beauty of the room centered in the fire-place, where, amid splendid brasses and blue tiles, glowed a great wood fire. Such a jolly, companionable fire it was. Being the only light in the room, it flickered and shone and reflected itself in the dark, polished floor, strewn with Daghestan rugs; delicious ideas in chairs; bijouterie tables, and beautiful tall jars, up which dragons writhed horribly, evidently insanely intent upon making a meal of the cat-tails and peacock feathers with which they were filled. It shone on the golden-toned pictures on the wall, and the brass-framed mirrors, and on the long shelves of calf-bound books. But all its warm heart was poured out upon the little creature curled up on the great, white woolly rug, and who was leaning over the fender, trying to read by its wavering light. It shone on her golden hair and soft eyes, it sparkled in the diamonds at her ears, glittered in the narrow bangles like threads of gold at her white wrists, turned her cheeks and lips a deep, soft, velvety crimson, and even cast a rosy glow over the polished shoulders that shone through her laces.

As Mr. Ravissie advanced into the room the fire flashed up a welcome to him, and burst into innumerable fires in the shape of sparks, in his honor.

Miss Vance dropped her book and looked up. 'It isn't you?' she said with a smile.

'Of course not; how could you suspect me of such a thing?' he answered, reproachfully. 'May I sit down beside you?'

'If you are good,' she replied, moving a corner of her skirt the smallest part of an inch.

'Deign to shake hands with a wanderer, and tell him how you have been,' he said, seating himself tailor-wise upon the rug, and possessing himself of her hand with undue empressment.

'I've not been well,' with great languor, and drawing her hand away.

'Is it possible? My dear Barbara what has been the matter?' solicitously.

'I don't quite know,' she said modestly, 'but I think it's toracle aneurism of the aorta.'

'Great heavens! The—Say that over and say it slow.'

'Well, I'm not sure that's it,' she answered hastily; 'but I read it in a newspaper this morning, and it sounded so dreadful I thought that must be the name of it.'

'Pray, what are the symptoms of this awful complaint? Would you mind telling me?'

'Why, I've regretted three germans in the last week, and to-night I dressed for Laura Green's card party, and then deeided at the last minute not to go. Now, you know, I can't be well if I act like that, can I?'

Mr. Ravissie glanced furtively at her. 'You don't think it could have been on account of—because I was away, you know?' he suggested, diffidently.

'Why, no, of course not! What an absurd idea!' she exclaimed, with depressing energy and promptness.

'No, I suppose not,' he answered meekly, and gazed meditatively in the fire.

Miss Vance felt the subject needed changing, so she demanded to be told instantly what was in the package Paul had brought in with him and laid upon the rug.

He passed the glossy, papered parcel to her in silence, and she, finding marrons glaces within, fell delightfully upon them.

'Did you have a good time in California?' she asked, crunching contentedly.

'Indeed, yes; put in an awfully jolly time; pleasured myself no end. Met all your friends, and lots of the fellows asked after you. By the way, Miss Vance, I've a trade for you.'

'Oh, you dear!' dropping her bonbons and coming close. 'Tell me this instant what it is, and who said it.'

It was not an easy thing to resist Barbara when she looked like that, She was the most absurdly, ridiculously small creature, who was always described as 'awfully cute,' and was sinfully lavish in the matter of good looks, so when she came close to one and gazed up with a smile in her eyes, her little red lips apart, and filled one's sense with faint, sweet odor of violets, candor compels the acknowledgment that Barbara generally got what she asked for.

But Mr. Ravissie only smiled a wise smile. 'Painful experience has taught me, Miss Vance, to put not my faith in midgets; this is a trade, please remember, and you'll just tell me one first; I can't trust you.'

'Oh, that! why, that's easy enough; Kate Burns says you dance like an archangel.'

Paul laughs aloud. 'My dear Barbara, you've told me that already five times in return for brand new ones, and it was an awful tarradiddle to commence with. I never danced with Kate Burns, nothing would induce me to; she galumphs horribly.'

'Well, she said it all the same,' asserts Barbara, with unblushing effrontery, 'and now you may as well tell me mine at once.'

'It was at a dinner at Miss Harlow's,' says Paul, clasping his knees and assuming an anecdotal manner; 'she has a pug, you know; a vicious, ill-tempered little beast. When we came into the sitting-room after dinner it jumped off a chair and rushed at Owen and me in a perfect fury, barking itself off its legs; its such a mite, that every one laughed at the rage it got itself into, and Miss Harlow asked what it reminded us of, and of course we all gave it up. 'Like Barbara Vance in a passion,' she said. Paul leans against a convenient ottoman and laughs consumedly at the recollection. But Miss Vance, after one bewildering look, rises in all the offended majesty of four feet nine, and seeks a chair of utter remoteness, and maintains a crushing silence.

After Mr. Ravissie had exhausted his hilarity, he became frightenedly aware that he had put his foot in it, and endeavored to retrieve his error.

'Why, Barbara, you haven't finished your candy!' but Miss Vance, plunged in profound reverie, gazed abstractedly at a china mandarin on a distant cabinet.

Paul, dreadfully alarmed, goes and kneels beside her chair and persists in taking one of her hands.

'Are you mad?' he asks. No answer.

'Barbara,' he says gravely, 'if a long life spent entirely in tears can atone for my heartless brutality, I will commence right away to make a 'dem'd damp body of myself.' She giggles a little at this in spite of herself, and Paul, immensely relieved, thinks it wise to follow up this concession. 'I came this evening to ask you to go to the Stuyvesant's german with me to-morrow night. Say yes, won't you?'

'I don't know,' she says coldly, not yet entirely mollified. 'Fred May asked me and I have promised.'

'Oh, bother Fred May, can't you throw him over this once? do, Barbara.'

'Why should I throw him over for you?' she asks frigidly.

Just here, it is grievous to relate, Mr. Ravissie loses his temper. 'Of course I have no right to ask it, nor any excuse for thrusting my unwelcome society upon you. I beg your pardon,' he says with elaborate wrath, and attempting to rise from his kneeling posture; but Barbara catches him by the sleeve! 'Don't be a goose, Paul,' and laughs in his face.

No one could be angry when Barbara laughed, it was such a merry, bubbling laugh. Paul does the most scandalous thing, he stops it midway by kissing her!—actually! and Barbara submitted gracefully; he does worse—he puts both arms around her, and the firelight dances jollily all over the walls and the china dragons, and Paul and Barbara, and gets off unlimited fireworks for their benefit; and, as Paul expresses it, 'everything is as comfortable as possible.'

Of course after these two acted in that manner they left nothing for me to say but that eminently satisfactory information that so delightfully finishes the fairy tales, 'and so they were married, and lived happy ever after.'

Secret Orders.

"Out in Burlington, where I live there was a woman, a neighbor of mine," said the fat man, "whose husband belonged to more lodges and societies, and fraternities, leagues, and orders, and Unions, and and clubs, and rites, and teams, and things than the both of them could count in a week. Why, the man used to take some of his meals at home, but he went to bed in regalia. And from force of habit used to call his wife 'Worshipful Mistress,' and his children 'Junior Wardens,' and 'Chief Tough Moguls,' and 'Most Worthy Bashi Bazouks,' and other and pagan titles. The man's children grew to regard the entire system of secret societies of the United States as their father. They had a vague idea that they were in some close degree blood connections of Solomon, and they told their Sunday school teacher that their grandfather worked on the tower of Babel, and they always spoke of Hiram Abiff as "Uncle Hiram;" and this man used to go down and pound the boiler and hold the end of the blanket and grease the pole and heat the pitch nights when there was a candidate to be assassinated; and he watered himself into a dropsy at Good Templar meeting, and fermented himself into a beer vat at Druids picnics, and ate himself into a chronic indigestion at Odd Fellows' suppers, and sat up at night with sick Grand Army comrades, and visited Masonic widows and comforted Knights of Honor orphans—females sixteen years and upwards—and danced himself into paralysis and got his eyes blacked at all sorts of balls, and had a good busy time of it, and was considered a capital fellow because he had to write S. O. G. F. W., and B. B. O. E., and E. O. D., after his name every time he wrote a letter or registered at a hotel.

"Well, one day there were several things going on all at once in our town. There was a grand convocation of Knights Templar and a public installation of Hope Lodge, No. 8,278, I. O. O. F., and a Druid picnic and a Hibernian Benevolent Society ball, and a fraternity symposium, and a Grand Army parade and camp-fire, and a special M. W. of the S. K. of A. O. U. W. Legion, 306 and two or three bazaars, and a masked parade of T. O. M's., and firemen's tournament and fight, and a base ball match and a regatta, and a croquet quarrel, and in an effort to attend them all in full regalia the man overdid himself, came home all tired out, told his wife he didn't feel very well, and went straight to bed.

"His family never saw the man again for six weeks. And the days were made busy and the nights were made noisy by all manner of committees wearing all manner of badges coming to enquire after the sick man and to sit up with him and bringing with them all manner of comforting things—gruel and jellies, and water ices, and tarpin soup, and peanuts and ice cream, and cake and pie, and watermelon, and tracts and flat flasks and new stories, and sandwiches and egg nog, and cigars and conundrums and jokes on the boys, and all sorts of doctors and homeopathists, allopaths, water cures, Swedish movement cures, eclectics, new school, old school, regulars, guerrillas, injun doctors, faith doctors, kneaders, slappers and healers.

"And the man got well! He had to," the fat man added, noticing the expression of incredulity that settled upon the countenances of the passengers; there were too many of him to die at once. While they were wrestling with one the rest of him would get the bulge on him, so he pulled through. And when he was quite well and all there, they had a grand union picnic for his benefit; to which all the societies to which he belonged were invited. The family naturally rejoiced at this, and supposed they would get front seats all the way, as they were closely connected with the circus. Instead of this, however, they were treated to a surprise.

"The procession formed with the man himself and three eminent brethren of vastly superior degrees in the first carriage. Then came more carriages containing eminent brethren from visiting lodges, every man with initials enough after his name to stock a railroad; the O. I. C. U. R. F. L. Y.; and the R. S. T. U. V. X. and the C. & C. A. L. L. U.; and the T. O. M. and the G. A. L. and J. U. G. under the seat. Then came a whole procession of chaplains, lodge chaplains, on foot swearing at the dust. And away off, two and a half miles away from the band, came the family, in the middle of the street, hoofing it.

When they finally got out at the picnic grounds, the members of the man's domestic household were again pleasantly surprised, being stopped at the gate by an outside sentinel, who clubbed them off to the right. There they found an inside guard who promptly chased them away to the left. There they ran into a boy seven years old, with white hair and red necktie, carrying a a clothes prop and bearing in his own official person the enormous and overbearing title of 'Royal and Thrice Puissant Knight of the Mighty Arm and Potent Keeper of the Way.' And when they got away from all that alive, they were finally 'shooed' away and waved off down the road and told to get out there and keep away or they'd get into trouble, by a little old man with bow legs, hair lip, a wart on his nose, a bald head and green goggles, who the affrighted, awe-stricken intruders afterward learned was his Most Goodness Gracious Nibs, the Four or Five Times Renowned and Most Awfully Magnificent and Resplendent Fly-up-the Creek to the Muldoon. A secret society is a sweet boon, but a man has to be kind of careful that it doesn't grow on him.

"Father," asked the young son of Deacon Squibbs, "what is the difference between a man that dyes wool on lambs and a Western editor?"

"Well, now, really, my son," beaming benignly on his offspring, "I'm not prepared to state. What is the difference?"

"Why, pa, one is a lamb dyer, and the other is a—"

"What? What? my son?"

"Western editor," continued the youth, rolling his tongue around in his cheek.—Ex.

SELLING

— AT

MANUFACTURER'S PRICES.

A DECIDED SUCCESS.

A great many firms in Lynn are puzzled at the large attendance and great success of our special sales, simply because these same firms have failed in their own efforts to attract attention and accomplish the same results. The reasons are plain, for we assert that our establishments can show many advantages over others. We give the following, which are convincing:

First.

Enormous stock. The immense stock of our wholesale house, together with our two retail stores, 84 Market street and 23 Market Square, make a stock to draw from five times larger than all the other shoe stores in Lynn combined.

Second.

Low Rents. While our competitors are handicapped by having to pay exorbitant rents, we with our three stores, have to pay rent only on one—a fact, the significance of which as bearing upon our ability to sell for less than others, will be apparent to all.

Third

Wholesale. Our wholesale trade, which now extends to every city and town of any importance in New England, obliges us to carry an immense stock and gives us an advantage in buying entirely beyond the reach of our competitors. For where they buy of the jobbers in small lots, we buy direct of the manufacturers, and that we can buy as low as the large Boston jobbers is abundantly attested by the fact that we are able to meet and compete with them on their own grounds and build up a wholesale trade which is constantly increasing.

Fourth.

One Price. Marked in plain figures on every pair of boots and shoes, guarantees low prices.—Equal treatment to all classes and shows at a glance the quality of the goods.

Fifth.

Truthful Representations. No misrepresentations are tolerated. Goods are sold for just what they are. Some stores adopt the "bait" plan, advertising great slaughter, immense bargains, etc. Call in half an hour after such stores open and in nearly every instance the salesman has the old story to tell you: "All gone;" "haven't your size;" "too late;" "very sorry, but we have had such a rush they are all out.—Can't we show you something else?" We have no such nonsense. It won't do.

Sixth.

Quick Sales and Small Profits. Quick sales are the life of a successful business. Small profits are sufficient when the business is done on live business principles. You save one profit by buying of the wholesaler.

Seventh.

Exchanging Goods or Refunding Money. When any dissatisfaction occurs because the selection does not please in every particular, the goods, if returned uninjured in a reasonable time, can be exchanged; and it matters not of whom it was selected, any salesman at leisure will pay careful attention to the customer. In case nothing is found to please, the cash will be cheerfully refunded.

Eighth.

Prompt Cash Payments. We are so conscious of the overwhelming advantages we possess both in buying and selling we have no hesitation in asserting that no prudent purchaser can afford to buy anything anywhere else until they have looked through our stock and got our prices. Ready money in our hands enables to buy goods in large quantities at figures that the average retailer knows nothing about. To-day we stand simply as the connecting link between the manufacturer and consumer.

We have an immense surplus stock which we are going to close out during this sale. In order to accomplish this purpose we know at the outset that it will be necessary to offer sufficient inducements which we are determined to. Consequently, in this instance as well as all others, we appeal directly to the interests of every purchaser, regarding that as decidedly more potent than volumes of positive assertions.

WE OBSERVE that many of our exchanges are noting the fact that Massachusetts and Rhode Island are the only States which elect all State officers and Legislatures every year, and we question whether it would not be better for our state to fall in with the custom of the other states in the Union. Last year, it will be remembered, our Legislature passed an act in favor of biennial elections for Governor, and for biennial sessions of the Legislature If the coming Legislature shall endorse this action, it will be submitted to the people of the state for their final decision.

The long excitement of frequent election campaigns, the interruption to business, and the constant employment of a horde of people who make politics their sole occupation, are some of the arguments in favor of the change. Those who oppose it are principally men, as far as we are aware, who are continually scrambling for some kind of public position, and who feel that their opportunity would be curtailed by a less frequent election of officers. One years' service of inefficient public servants, or one years' session of a poor Legislature, we admit, is enough for a State. But we take it for granted that Massachusetts, in the long run, will never be satisfied with this sort of service.

Yearly sessions tend also to a continual tinkering in legislation. This has been especially notable in the liquor laws of our State. No sooner had one law began to be fairly tested, than a change in some minor point has been made, but enough to alter the entire trend of its execution. This might be the case with biennial sessions, but it would not come as often. The opponents of biennials claim that it is an abridgment of the liberties of the people, who in their judgment should have frequent opportunity for voting. In consideration of the probable course of the Legislature the coming winter, it is well that the people should have the question fairly presented to them with a view to an intelligent vote should it come before them for their suffrages.

THE BUSINESS SITUATION.—It has been generally supposed that the year 1883 has been one of almost unmixed disaster. But the statistical records show that there has been neither stagnation nor panic; that the volume of business has been nearly as large as in any previous year; that a foreign commerce scarcely ever exceeded in magnitude has been attended with very favorable results to this country: that the railroads have done more business and realized larger earnings than ever before; that the payments through clearing houses outside of New York exceeded $14,042,000,000, an aggregate never reached before, though it might have been slightly exceeded in 1881 had all the clearing houses now in existence been in operation then; that the number of failures was swelled by the collapse of many unimportant concerns and the aggregate of liabilities by the fall of a few great speculators, but the average of liabilities for other failures was unusually small; and that the speculative dealings in some products were enormous—of oil, for instance, more than a hundred times the entire stock in the world having been sold at three cities during one year.

It cannot be said that these facts justify a gloomy view of the industrial and commercial situation. Labor must have been generally well employed, or the interchange of products could not have continued on so vast a scale. In fact a principal cause of industrial disorder has been the refusal of working people to bear a share of the sacrifices which the fall in prices involved. With cheaper food and clothing, the inevitable reduction in wages, which they have resisted unwisely and in vain, will leave them at least as well off as they were in 1881 or 1882. The profits of manufacturers and dealers, and the dividends of corporations, have been seriously reduced, but there is a wide difference between slender profits and ruin. The country has to wait, with some endurance and patience, for the re-adjustment of industries and branches of trade to changed conditions, but there is nothing to indicate that a recovery of business health may be long delayed.—N. Y. Tribune.

DRAMATIC AND MUSICAL.

Abbey's Opera Co. has come and gone at the Boston Theatre, giving place this week to the engagement of John McCullough, who is to appear this week in Virginius. He will remain at the Boston four weeks, during which time an opportunity will be given to see this eminent tragedian in his prominent roles. He will be supported by J. S. Haworth and Mark Price, and Miss Viola Allen, the daughter of C. Leslie Allen, well known to habitues of the Boston Theatre.

N. C. Goodwin, Jr., whose career on the stage has this season been attended by great prosperity, begins an engagement at the Park Theatre this week that promises success in all respects. That ingenious farcical comedy, "The Member for Slocum," in which the comedian is seen to excellent advantage, will be the play. Eliza Weathersby, who is a great favorite in Boston, Jennie Weathersby and a company carefully selected for the season are to appear. "My Uncle's Will" is to precede the comedy.

The favor accorded "Confusion" has led the management to continue that successful and briskly acted farcical piece on the Globe stage during the coming week. There is nothing new to say about the comedy or its performance, and it will probably receive, during the remainder of its career, the meed of hearty mirth. Mr. Dixey's imitations are given nightly previous to the concert and are much applauded.

The close of the opera will give our musical people an opportunity to visit the "Beggar Student" at the Bijou Theatre, which is in the height of a very successful run of prosperity. It has held its own for the past few weeks in the midst of a powerful musical attraction, which is good evidence of the favor with which it is received. There is scarcely a doubt that it will rival "Iolanthe" in its run at the Bijou.

"The Rajah," with the Madison Square company, follows the Goodwin engagement at the Park. It will be the first presentation of the drama in Boston.

John McCullough will be seen next week in "The Gladiator" and probably other grand tragic roles.

"The Silver King" is preparing at the Boston. It is a fine play and will no doubt be a grand success here in the spring.

Peabody was well represented at Mechanic Hall, last Thursday evening—the occasion being Otto as interpreted by those popular artists Mr. and Mrs. Geo. F. Knight.

Ovide Musine, a celebrated Belgian violinist, will make his first appearance in Boston at Chickering Hall, Wednesday evening, Jan. 16. He comes endorsed by the European press as one of the most eminent living violin virtuosos. His particular forte is said to be in brilliant technique. He will be assisted by Miss Lizzie Webb Cary, soprano, and Mr. Bruno O. Klein, a young composer and pianist, who also will be heard in Boston for the first time. The concert will be under the management of L. M. Ruben.

Pat Rooney and his well known combination will appear in Mechanic Hall, to-morrow evening, under the management of N. W. Andrews and Co. Seats at Newhall's confectionery store.

Friday evening Gus Williams, the well-known German dialect comedian, appears in "One of the Finest" at Mechanic hall in Salem.

THE EASTERN RAILROAD.—President Sewall, of the Eastern railroad, says that the coming summer the facilities for rapid travel by the Eastern and Maine Central roads will be far ahead of any that the public have yet enjoyed. One of the principal changes contemplated is in the running of the "Flying Yankee," a train which became very popular last season. Instead of leaving Boston at 12.30 p. m., as heretofore it is proposed that this train shall leave at 9 a. m., run through to Portland in three hours and arrive at Bangor at 4 p. m., and at Hancock Point, opposite Bar Harbor, Mt. Desert, (via the Mt. Desert branch of the Maine Central) at 7 p. m. From Hancock Point passengers will be swiftly conveyed across the bay to Bar Harbor. This will be a revolution in New England railroad travelling such as few people have believed would be seen for years to come. Many other changes and improvements are contemplated by Presidents Sewall of the Eastern road and Jackson of the Maine Central, and General Manager Tucker.

If faithfully used, Ayer's Sarsaparilla will remove the scrofulous taint in whatever form it may exist.

"Hello!" ejaculated a guardian to his pretty niece as he entered the parlor and saw her in the arms of a swain who had just popped the question and sealed it with a kiss, "what's the time of day now?" "I should think it was about half-past twelve," was the cool reply of the blushing damsel; "you see we are almost one."—Ex.

SECOND WEEK OF CONRAD'S

GREAT MARK-DOWN SALE.

From $10,000 to $15,000 worth of stock Must be sold regardless of the Cost of the goods.

It is impossible to enumerate all of our bargains. But it is sufficient to state that this is the greatest Mark-Down that we have ever inaugurated.

We take this opportunity to thank the Ladies of Salem and Essex County for their large attendance at "Our Great Mark-Down Sale," and we will say to those who were unable to attend our sale last week, that as amazing bargains will be offered this week.

D. CONRAD,

JOHN P FERNALD, ALBERT VITTUM,
Editors and Publishers.

It is probable that the inaugural address of Gov. Robinson will find as many readers as did the address of Ex-Gov. Butler, delivered the previous year. Gov. Robinson's has the merit of being briefer—which will certainly commend it to most citizens. A paper of the length of the last inaugural, had it not been Gen. Butler's, would have found few readers.

It is needless for us to say that the address has justified all that his friends expected. Even the Boston Globe speaks in commendatory terms of it. We desire to call attention to a few points which seem the most prominent.

Gov. Robinson shows in the same blunt manner in which he enforced it in the campaign, that the increased taxation in the state, the past year, was due to municipal action. While the state tax has been less than in 1882, the total tax shows an increase, and the figures show, furthermore, that nearly all the burden from taxation comes from the tax which each city or town raises for its necessities. "So long," says our Governor, "as the people vote large appropriations, in their city and town governments, whether prudently or otherwise, they need not complain of the consequent burden, or attribute their hardships to the extravagance of the Legislature or the inefficiency of the Executive."

The governor reminded the Legislature that the subject of biennial elections will doubtless be presented for their consideration, and is in favor of its submission to the people. He presents the subject in a very considerate manner, and disposes of the argument made that its adoption would be an abridgment of the liberties of the people in the following language: The chief executive officers of the towns—selectmen, overseers of the poor, road commissioners and school committee—may have, under existing law, a tenure of three years. County officers are elected to terms of three or five years. I am not aware that any complaint is made that by reason of such system and practice popular rights or security are endangered, or the people's trusts unfaithfully administered, or their moneys squandered.

His Excellency is in favor of an improvement in election laws, and compelling officers of registration, under heavy penalties, to perform their duties. He is also in favor of increasing the voting precincts in places where there is not a possibility of all voters exercising their privileges during the allotted time with reasonable ease. All of which is in the line of fairness and freedom in elections, and should be commended by men of whatever party. The subject of divorce and the rapid increase of the applicants to have their nuptial bonds severed, is treated with great wisdom, and the Legislature urged to take the iniatiatory steps towards establishing a uniformity in divorce laws through the country.

The views of Gov. Robinson on the liquor question are in accordance with his statements at the beginning of the campaign. He gives the statistics showing the vote of the State on the question of license, for the past two years, and states that unquestionably the sentiment of the State is in favor of the restriction and suppression of the liquor traffic. But he also recognizes what the radical temperance people seem slow to learn—a recognition of which will be the beginning of a real movement in the temperance cause, "that there is an honest difference of opinion as to the proper and practicable method of dealing by statute with the problem." This the temperance people, or the more radical of them, will not recognize. There is but one method and that is their way.

We commend the entire address to our readers. There are other matters of interest such as education, agriculture, our industrial schools, insolvency, etc., which our space forbids us to mention in detail. The closing words are the key to the inaugural, and to them the whole people of the State can say Amen?

Senators and Representatives: Called as we are, to serve the people in the most important concerns of government let us consider that we hold these places of honor and responsibility, not for personal distinction or for party advantage, but singly for the best welfare of the state and all its inhabitants.

IF ANY thing were needed to show Gov. Robinson's freedom from party lines in his recommendations to the Legislature, his attitude on the weekly payment of the laboring men, would settle it at once. He comes out squarely and unmistakably in its favor. He even goes so far as to answer in his inaugural, the objections which have been urged against it. "Any legislature," he says in effect, "is proper and right in behalf and for the relief of those—the humblest and poorest—who have no voice but their own to present their needs,—no power in combination with others to emphasize their opinions." What a contrast is here to the efforts of our late Governor to pose as a friend of the laboring man! Why, our Republican governor, and with him the bulk of the party in this State, is more of a friend of the laboring man, would do more towards making them independent citizens, than would the democratic party, despite its following of the laboring element.

The recommendation of Gov. Robinson on this question is doubtless as much of a surprise to his own party as to his political opponents. The agitation of the matter of weekly payments, and the passage of a law making such payments compulsory, has been chiefly confined to the Greenback-Labor party. This has been one of Editor Litchman's pet hobbies. How it must rejoice his heart to see the case so ably presented by the man he worked so hard to defeat!

There is much to be said in favor of weekly payments. The chief argument, we think, lies in the increased purchasing power given to the cash which the workmen receive. In some large corporations, where the employes are paid monthly, or semi-monthly, they are compelled to pay higher prices for the necessities of life, and in many cases to trade at a corporation store, which always has the reputation of charging exorbitant prices. There have been numerous instances where the laborer has not seen a cent of money from one year to another. The weekly payments would also relieve the laborer of trustee writ, as the amounts due would in many cases be too small to be levied upon, in accordance with the late law of the Legislature. This would make the merchants more careful in giving credit, and tend to bring trade nearer to a cash basis, which would certainly be better for both labor and capital.

As much, however, as we are in favor of weekly payments, and of any reasonable attempt at unanimity in this regard, we do not regard legislation as the wise method towards its enforcement. We believe it to be a question to be settled solely by the employers and employed. Any agitation in its favor, within proper limits, any endeavors towards inducing employers of large numbers of laborers, as well as corporations, to see the wisdom of such a step, or the advantage of its adoption, should be encouraged, and we should rejoice at the progress made in this direction. Legislation on this subject must only be in favor of a certain class. The laboring man is not the whole people and while his rights should be respected and his wrongs, if he has any, redressed, yet other citizens save him have rights also. An enforcement, by law, of the weekly payments would close some corporations, and some manufactories, and the laboring man, instead of having weekly payments, would have none at all. The advisability of a great question like this is one thing,—its compulsion by a law of the Legislature is another and quite a different thing.

The Salem Observer enters upon its sixty-second volume, and a new firm consisting of Mr. F. A. Fielden, G. F. Newcomb and J. D. H. Gauss, take the helm. Messrs. Pease and Traill retire. The Observer has our best wishes for the success of the new firm.

John P. Peabody's clearing out sale is now in progress. Price of his goods originally, is not of the slightest consequence to Mr. Peabody. The goods must go—and go they will, for Mr. Peabody knows no such word as fail.

PEABODY.

A paper cap party will be given Thursday evening, Jan. 17th, under the auspices of the Social committee of the Murray Association. Music by Cadet Band. Tickets can be obtained of Mr. A. H. Merrill and W. F. Sawyer.

One of our citizens who has kept a memorandum of the weather for the past year, says that there have been 273 fair days, 71 rainy days and 21 snow storms. This does not count the sprinkling of light snow, in the nights.

Owing to the excessive heating of the boiler in the machine shop of J. E. Clement & Co., work was suspended in the shop Saturday and Monday, until the pipes could be repaired. Work was resumed yesterday morning as usual.

The evening school at the Wallis numbers about 80, and as a general thing, few of the pupils attend with the intention of self improvement. Many come in merely to be where it is warm, and are very troublesome, and hard to govern.

Mr. Geo. H. Furbush, formerly employed at Bushby & Co.'s store, has been circulating a petition for his appointment as assistant at Thatcher Island light. It was signed by the Republican town committee and the citizens generally.

Boys made a disturbance at the free lecture last night. If the people sitting near such parties will only point them out to the police the nuisance will soon be checked. It is almost impossible to locate a disturbance in a darkened hall.

Two of the shade trees in the yard of the Peabody Institute have been cut down. They had become decayed by the use of tree protectors—the oil from which kills a good many trees. The trees were not very ornamental as they were deformed.

Mr. William H. Barnes, formerly foreman of the PRESS office, and stepson of Mr. John C. Blaney of Lynn, has, in company with a gentleman named Perry, purchased the Attleboro' Chronicle, the leading paper in that thriving town.

Calendars for 1884 are in great demand, and a number of youths have made an honest penny the past week in collecting all they can get and selling them for a small sum to those who do not like to take the trouble to hunt one up for themselves.

According to the almanacs the January thaw may be looked for with considerable confidence about this time. Generally in January of each year there occurs a soft spell, and is called, and has been from time immemorial, the January thaw.

There were two collisions last evening by the horse cars on the Square, owing to the brakes on the cars not holding. About five o'clock Conductor Buxton's car ran into the Lynn car, and at seven o'clock two Lynn cars collided in the same manner.

The South Danvers National Bank elected, at their meeting, yesterday, the old board of officers, as follows: President, William P. Clark, Cashier, Geo. M. Foster, Directors, Alfred A. Abbott, Jonathan King, Henry H Proctor, Horace Bushby; Book-keeper, A. W. Littlefield.

We are under obligations to O. B. Chadwick & Co. for a generous supply of calendars for the ensuing year. This firm represent the best insurance companies in the country, and a policy from this office ensures its possessor of courteous treatment and prompt payment in case of loss.

The Episcopal society held a New Year's party in Upton's Hall, last Wednesday evening. There was a "tree" for the children heavily laden with pretty presents. An excellent oyster supper was provided, Mr. Edgar Upton bearing the expense himself. About seventy were present.

The Naumkeag Street Railway Company chose the following officers on Saturday afternoon: President, Abner C. Goodell, Jr., clerk, Joseph Hickey. Directors, Abner C. Goodell, Jr., William Mack, Henry Wheatland, Nathan Nichols, Chas. Odell, C. C. G. Thornton, John M. Anderson.

A grand concert of war songs is to be given in the new Town Hall, Thursday evening, Jan. 24., under the direction of Elmore A. Pierce. Lotus Glee Club, the Columbia Brass Quartette, a local chorus, and a host of other attractions including Miss Etta Kileski, Soprano, will be added.

While removing a large stone on Tremont street last Friday, James Aulgh was using an iron bar for the purpose. The bar which was being used as a lever, slipped from his grasp and caught in his clothes, tearing them badly. Had he been a little nearer the result would have been more serious.

Last Thursday noon a boy was riding on the rear of a load of barrels, when the team stopped in front of a liquor saloon. The boy was thrown backward and his head wedged between two barrels. He was soon out of his uncomfortable position, but sustained several severe scratches about the face.

The weather has been such that few people in this section have seen the comet. It may be seen in clear weather about half way from the zenith to the horizon in the western sky. A glass of moderate power will enable a person to see the tail. The nucleus can be seen with the eye without the aid of a glass.

Quite a novel "turn out" was seen crossing the square one evening last week. It was a horse attached to a double runner on which were about a dozen ladies and gentlemen. Where they came from and where they were going no one seemed to know. They were well supplied with horns and other musical instruments.

Mr. O. B. Chadwick has accepted a position as special agent of the Northern Assurance Company of London, with headquarters at Peabody. His jurisdiction is Essex County, and his duties consist of the adjusting of losses by fire and a general superintendency of the agencies. A very responsible position for a young man.

The Nashville Students are a double quartette and a pianist—all originally slaves. Their rendering of negro melodies, religious and camp songs, is pronounced unapproachable. They are the only first class organization of the kind before the public. Beecher's congregation gave them a cordial reception Christmas night in Brooklyn.

The Peabody Press passed its quarter century last Tuesday, and if they make as much improvement in its appearance, and gain as much in its circulation in the next twenty-five years as in the past, it will be one of the foremost journals in the country.—Lynn Item.—Rather our twenty-fifth anniversary, Brother.

The committee of the Senate and House have been appointed by President Bruce and Speaker Marden, and it will be seen that our members fare well. Representative Clark is a member of the House committee on Finance; Senator Sparhawk is chairman of the Joint Committee on Fisheries, and a member of the Joint Committee on Prisons.

Miss Annie E. Borden, daughter of Mrs. Frank Somers on Foster street, was tendered a farewell surprise last Thursday evening, as she was about to resume her studies in St Mary's Academy at Manchester, N. H. During the evening Miss Borden was presented with a lovely amethyst ring. Refreshments and dancing were among the good things enjoyed.

At the annual meeting of the Universalist parish, Monday evening, the following officers were elected,—Moderator, John Pinder; Clerk, Amos Merrill; Treasurer, Frank C. Merrill; Standing Committee, William F. Wiley, William F. Walker, Cyrus T. Batchelder Alonzo K. Raddin, Joseph N. Burbeck. N. M. Quint and Amos Merrill. The meeting was adjourned for one week.

At a meeting of the School Committee Monday evening, Miss Minna B. Noyes, recently of Holbrook, Mass. was appointed first assistant in the High school. It was also decided to purchase seats and desks for the new school room in the Centre building and put them in at once. Many bills came before the meeting to be examined as is the case at this time of the year.

We call attention to the card of J. A. Roome & Co. in this issue. Mr. G. M Fassett, well known to our citizens from his service here in the employ of the Eastern R. R., has associated himself in business with Mr. Roome, and they will succeed to the carriage business of the late C. W. Brine. Carriage repairing and horse shoeing will be attended to, and the firm are deserving of a generous patronage.

Mr. J. Warren Upton, the Librarian of the Peabody Library has recently completed eight volumes of 380 pages each, of a supplement catalogue of the books dating from the issuing of the last supplement to the present time Each page was written off and then printed by one of those copying presses made of glue and gelatine. It represents a great deal of labor, and is very valuable to those taking books from the library.

A correspondent of the Cambridge Press gives the following account of a New Year's reception to Rev. O. F. Safford, who was some years since pastor of the Universalist church in this place: After all in turn had taken the much-loved pastor and wife by the hand, Arthur E. Dennison, Esq., in behalf of the parish, called them to the desk on which had been placed a beautiful marble clock with accompanying bronze movements, proceeded to address them in his own felicitous manner, with deep pathos, advising them of the 10 happy and useful years which they had spent, their interest and devotion to all the needs of the parish and this testimonial of the esteem in which they were held, admonishing them that the mechanism of the clock symbolized their labors past and those to be performed, each part being taken to point a moral or suggest an effort. The surprise of Mr. Safford was great, and emotion checked the usual spontaneous flow of expression, yet gratefully did he express his acceptance of the gift and the love which prompted it. On the piano were boquets of flowers from some of the parishoners, one handsome basket of the same bearing the name of Mrs. Safford. Hanging over the pastor's portrait was a landscape picture with these words "A Happy New Year, 1874—1884." The refreshment bell now called the party to the parlor, where that committee had filled tables groaning with the weight of the heavily laden baskets of cake and fruit, with supplementary dishes of ice cream and coffee. The tables were also trimmed with evergreen, as well as the walls of the room. The fine choir of the church added their notes of sweetness, enhancing, with the orchestral music, the pleasure of the evening. Thus, under the pleasantest auspices, commences the 11th year of the Rev. Mr. Safford's labors with this almost oldest parish of the city, and one of the most united and prosperous.

HOME HAPPENINGS.

"Now your glances, little maiden,

At the youth you hold most dear,
And you'll have a glad leap year.

The ninth lecture of the free course was delivered last evening by Wm. I. Marshall, subject, "Colorado." After a few preliminary remarks upon the geographical position of the state, by the aid of the stereopticon the lecturer immediately took his audience into Colorado, to the "Queen City of the Plains," Denver. This wonderful city which twenty years ago was a collection of miners' shanties, now has a population of 50,000. The Union depot alone cost $400,000 and the engines of ten different roads daily pull their trains into the city. Leadville is now a populous but unhealthy city, owing to the fumes of lead arising from its smelting works. Over $14,000,000 have been expended in this city alone, upon its mines. The beautiful parks of Colorado are the beds of ancient lakes and owing to the dryness of the atmosphere they are famous health resorts. Colorado has an area as large as that of New England and Ohio together and more than a third of this is prairie. The light peaks of the East are but passes in its mountains, which rise 14,000 feet above the sea. Many caves, second only to those of Kentucky, are found in its mountain passes, and oftentimes within a few hundred feet of the summits of its mountains. Railroads must be laid at the bottom of the gorges, in the mountainous regions, or to ascend the mountains at a grade of 300 feet to the mile, oftentimes. Over two million tons of coal are mined annually besides the immense yield of gold and silver. The lecture was very entertaining and was finished about nine o'clock.

Perhaps some of the older readers will remember John Wood, who at one time lived here, and with a family of five children emigrated to Deep River, Lake County, Indiana, in 1835, where he has remained until his death, which occurred December 1st. When he lived here he was associated in the most friendly relations with the late Franklin Osborn. He was born October 28, 1800. While a tanner by trade he devoted himself to milling and farming. He leaves behind him five sons and one daughter. In addition to these he leaves twenty-one grand children and five great grandchildren. Mr. Wood came from good revolutionary stock, his father, Moses Wood, was a soldier of the Revolution, and fought at Bunker Hill; and Mr. Wood, who was a distinguished Free Mason, was present and participated at the cornerstone laying of Bunker Hill Monument. He was instrumental in establishing several Masonic Lodges—one at Valparaiso, one at Crown Point, and was the first to aid one at Wheeler, Ind. He was a Master Mason in good standing, and a highly respected citizen. When in Peabody he owned the tannery which is now part of the old Southwick tannery on Wallis street and sold it to Mr. Obadiah Kimball.

Last week Sheriff Herrick forwarded commissions as deputies to the following: Charles W. Morrill, Amesbury; George S. Cole, Andover; Daniel J. Preston, Danvers; Ezra Perkins, Essex; Henry P. Noyes, Georgetown; George Lane and William Cronin, Gloucester; Phineas E. Davis, Frederick O. Raymond, Haverhill; Joseph Spiller, Ipswich; Alanson Briggs, Elmer A. Briggs, John P. Bradstreet, Lawrence; Edwin J. Wedbery, C. M. Merritt, Lynn; Francis A. Osgood, Marblehead; Charles E. Goss, Methuen; Charles L. Ayers, Newburyport; Daniel Potter, Samuel A. Johnson, Samuel R. Hathaway, Salem. It is said that Sheriff Herrick gave as his reason for not appointing a deputy here that none was needed. There has not been over half a dozen cases since the death of Mr. Upton, where a constable could not do the work. This is not taxing Salem's sheriffs very much.

The Selectmen have been in consultation with a party from out of town concerning the scenery of the new town hall, and as a result, the scenery will be re-arranged, placing the different scenes and the flys in the proper position on the stage and not having them all together as at present. Pulleys will be attached to each scene and fly, so that each can be pulled out of the way if need be. Hatchets will be provided for the firemen and in case of fire the scenes can be dropped to the floor of the stage by cutting the ropes and the fire more easily extinguished.

While cities and towns around us are on the verge of a water famine, Peabody is more fortunate. The recent rains have added three inches of water to Spring pond, and six inches at the reservoir.

Mr. J. W. Vaughn is about to move his business out of town, because the water at his factory has been shut off. Mr. V. states the case as follows: He returned from a Southern business trip and found in the office a notice that he had not paid his bill. He paid it immediately and was told by the clerk of the water board that there was 25 cents due for the notice. This he objected to paying, the clerk telling him it was optional with him, (the clerk) whether the charge for the summons was paid or not. Mr. V. said he would leave it to the board to settle. Shortly afterwards he was notified that the twenty-five cents was due. Thinking nothing more about it, as he had paid his water bill to the first of January, and supposing it would be put on the next bill, Mr. Vaughn continued about his business. Shortly afterwards he found that the board had shut off the water from his factory, and upon inquiring at the office of the water board was told that he must also pay two dollars for the shutting off of the water before it could be let on. He has the names of several parties who have had the twenty-five cents thrown off, and believes it is a spite on the part of the clerk, because of a fancied injury while the latter was postmaster.

Mr. B. F. Southwick addressed the Fruit Dealers Asso. recently of which he was president last year, at their meeting over Quincy Market, reviewing the work done in the first year of its existence, the reasons why it was formed, the growth of the foreign fruit trade at the port of Boston from as far back as the year 1835, when only 8000 boxes of foreign fruit arrived, since which time there has been a gradual increase until thirty loaded steamers had arrived during the past year. He stated that ninety firms with over $3,000,000 capital, held membership, including both importers and dealers. He also showed the benefits derived from the association to both buyer and seller.

The will of Franklin Osborn, Sr. has been probated at Salem. It leaves to his sons, Franklin Osborn, Jr, Joseph Osborn and John Osborn, his tan yard on Foster street, together with the currier's shop, and all other buildings, machinery, tools, etc., to be held in equal parts. To his daughters, Mary A. Osborn and Sarah P. Osborn, $3000 each, to be paid to them within three months of his death. The income of the entire residue of his property is to be paid to his wife, who is to have the use of the homestead during her lifetime free of charge. At the death of his wife, the property is to be divided among the children. A codicil makes the amount left to the daughters, $3500 instead of $3000.

The Peabody Ladies' Moral Reform Society met in the W. C. T. U. Room for their monthly meeting. It was voted to change the name, to be known as the Peabody Women's Friend Society. The next meeting will be held Tuesday, February 5th, at the same room. All that are interested in women's work are invited to be present whether they are members or not. Let us then bear this our new name in our hearts, to do the Masters work, uplifting the bowed down, and giving to them the hope of forgiveness and eternal life.

The Temperance Committee, who secured Gen. Swift last month, have been fortunate enough to engage the services of Hon. John B. Finch, of Nebraska, who will lecture next Sunday evening, Jan. 13th, at the new Town Hall. An enlarged orchestra, with a chorus choir, will furnish music for the occasion, which will without doubt exceed in interest the last meeting. The Band of Hope will also sing. A collection will be taken to defray expenses. We think no further suggestion is needed, to ensure a crowded house.

The following officers of Geo. Peabody Lodge, U. O. A. W., were installed last Wednesday night:—Worthy Master, George A. Goldthwait; Overseer, John McDonald; Foreman, Geo. H. Low; Recorder, William T. Strout; Receiver, John L. Pettey; Financier, A. M. Rowell; Guide, Daniel A. Goodrich; Inside Watch, Francis E. Mason; Outside Watch, Clarence Page; Medical Examiner, Dr. Weston; Trustees, A. B. Clark, Wm. H. Joll, Frank A. Berry. After the installation exercises a collation was partaken of.

The career of the Nashville Students who give an entertainment in Peabody Institute next Friday evening, has been a most extraordinary success, simply because it gives the only original negro performance now before the public. In this entertainment the company presents the negro as he appears in his meetings, in his home and on the plantation; and its music is so weird, so melodious, and so striking, that delighted audiences almost refuse to allow the members to leave the stage.

We understand that a concert will be given in the new Town Hall the 21st of February, by the school children of town. The chorus will consist of more than 500 voices.

Remember ladies, this is leap year, "Barkis is willing."

Gents' Winter Furnishings.

According to our usual custom on WEDNESDAY, JAN. 2nd, we shall inaugurate our great semi-annual Mark Down Sale of Men's, Youth's, Boy's, and Children's Heavy Winter Clothing and Men's Underwear.

Our unparalleled success and the large increase in our sales for 1883, has proved beyond a doubt that we give better clothing for the money, than any other dealer in Essex County, and the people know it. Our rule has always been to give every buyer full value.

We shall make our price so low on fine goods that it will be impossible for any dealers in Essex County to compete with us.

We give below a list of a few special bargains.

$8.00 and 10.00.

Men's and Young Men's heavy All Wool Plain and Fancy Mixed Overcoats. This lot represents some 25 different patterns, all handsome, stylish Goods which we have retailed all the season for $10.00, 12, 13.50 and 15; now marked down to $8 and 10.00 according to quality. They are bargains.

$5.00.

1 Lot of Men's extra heavy All Wool Steel Mixed Diagonal Overcoats. These garments would be considered bargains at $10.00 by some dealers, we shall close the lot at retail for only $5, which is less than the material cost. Don't forget the price, $5.00.

$12.00.

Men's and Young Men's All Wool Overcoats. This lot represents some ten or twelve different patterns which were considered bargains when sold at $15.00 and 16.50. In order to make a quick sale we have marked them down to $12.00.

$15.00 and 18.00.

Men's and Young Men's Fine All Wool Overcoats. This lot embraces some of the most desirable patterns manufactured this season, marked down from $18, 20 and 22, to 15.00 and 18.00, according to quality.

$20.00 and 25.00.

Men's and Young Men's Extra Fine Overcoats, manufactured from the finest domestic and foreign goods, many of them lined throughout with silk and satin. This lot embraces some 25 different patterns marked down from $25, 28 and 30 to 20 and 25.

$3.50.

50 Men's Extra Heavy and Extra Long Double-breasted All Wool Overcoats. The warmest Overcoat ever sold in Essex County for the money. Price only $3.50, about half price.

$2.00.

50 Men's Heavy Dark Steel Mixed Overcoats. Price only $2 worth $3.50.

Hundreds of Men's Extra Heavy Sleighing Ulsters, over 20 different patterns. Prices, $4.50, 5, 7, 8, 10, 12, 15, 18, 20 and 25.

We shall offer several hundreds men's and young men's Fancy Cassimere and Cheviot Suits for $5, 6, 8, 10, 12 and 15, marked down from $2 to 5, on each suit.

Men's Reefing Jackets, marked down to $2.50, 3.50, 5, 7, 8 and 10.00.

BY THE LIGHT OF DAY.

PAST IMPOSSIBILITIES THE FACTS OF THE PRESENT—HELP IN THE NEW ERA.

"I remember when they were putting up the poles for the first telegraph line in the State of New York, and now look there!" exclaimed a citizen of the metropolis to his friend, as the two stood on the summit of the tall Equitable Building in Broadway. "The city is strung with wires like a harp, and electric communication is the daily miracle of the world. People no longer wonder and laugh at it as they did at Morse when he first suggested its possibility."

The age marches on and prejudice must give way. Nobody has a monopoly of truth. Even the conservative guild of physicians admit that the secrets of medicine are shared by all men. "I dressed his wound, and God healed him," said old Galen. Once that terrible disease, Rheumatism, was supposed to be a shifting, local ailment, now attacking the joints and now the muscles. To-day it is demonstrated to be a disease of the blood."

Mrs. Henry Bogert, of No. 454 Atlantic Avenue, Brooklyn, N. Y., writes to Messrs. Hiscox & Co., of New York, proprietors of PARKER'S GINGER TONIC, that "she had been completely disabled from Rheumatism and pain in the back and limbs. She was advised to take the Tonic for Kidney disease. She did so, and her Rheumatism disappeared." The reason is simple. Diseased kidneys produce rheumatic symptoms. Cure them and you destroy Rheumatism. This is now admitted by all intelligent physicians. It is the new light thrown on their time-worn and mistaken theories.

PARKER'S GINGER TONIC, which is a combination of the best remedies for the blood known to science, is universally successful in combating this terribly complaint. Those who, like Mrs. Bogert suffer from Kidney or Liver diseases or any complaint arising from impure blood, will find the TONIC a prompt and certain remedy. Prices, 50c. and $1. a bottle. The larger size the cheaper.

WARREN LELAND,

whom everybody knows as the successful manager of the Largest Hotel Enterprises

of America, says that while a passenger from New York on board a ship going around Cape Horn, in the early days of emigration to California, he learned that one of the officers of the vessel had cured himself, during the voyage, of an obstinate disease by the use of

Ayer's Sarsaparilla.

Since then Mr. LELAND has recommended AYER'S SARSAPARILLA in many similar cases, and he has never yet heard of its failure to effect a radical cure.

Some years ago one of Mr. LELAND'S farm laborers bruised his leg. Owing to the bad state of his blood, an ugly scrofulous swelling or lump appeared on the injured limb. Horrible itching of the skin, with burning and darting pains through the lump, made life almost intolerable. The leg became enormously enlarged, and running ulcers formed, discharging great quantities of extremely offensive matter. No treatment was of any avail until the man, by Mr. LELAND'S direction, was supplied with AYER'S SARSAPARILLA, which allayed the pain and irritation, healed the sores, removed the swelling, and completely restored the limb to use.

Mr. LELAND has personally used

for Rheumatism, with entire success; and, after careful observation, declares that, in his belief, there is no medicine in the world equal to it for the cure of Liver Disorders, Gout, the effects of high living, Salt Rheum, Sores, Eruptions, and all the various forms of blood diseases.

We have Mr. LELAND'S permission to invite all who may desire further evidence in regard to the extraordinary curative powers of AYER'S SARSAPARILLA to see him personally either at his mammoth Ocean Hotel, Long Branch, or at the popular Leland Hotel, Broadway, 27th and 28th Streets, New York.

Mr. LELAND'S extensive knowledge of the good done by this unequalled eradicator of blood poisons enables him to give inquirers much valuable information.

HAY-FEVER

MADE ON PURPOSE.

ONE OF THOSE MISTAKES(?) WHICH ARE MORE FREQUENT THAN PROFITABLE.

"Why, my child, this is not BENSON'S CAPCINE POROUS PLASTER," said a father to his little daughter, after examining a package she had just brought from the drug store.

"Isn't it, Papa? I'm sorry, but I asked the man for Benson's—I know I did, and he took the twenty-five cents you gave me to pay for it with," exclaimed the child, positively. "Maybe the drug man made a mistake."

"I'll go 'round myself and see," was the gentleman's comment, as he donned his coat and hat.

"Why didn't you send me Benson's plaster, instead of this cheap and trashy thing?"

"Why, I,—I, thought that would suit you just as well—and—"

"You thought! you thought! What business had you to think? I don't pay you for thinking, but for filling my order," said the indignant caller, contemptuously, "There! take that thing back and give me my money, I'll get what I want elsewhere."

ON 30 DAYS' TRIAL.

THE VOLTAIC BELT CO., Marshall, Mich. will send DR. DYE'S CELEBRATED ELECTRO VOLTAIC BELTS and ELECTRIC APPLIANCES on trial for 30 days to men (young or old) who are afflicted with Nervous Debility, Lost Vitality, and kindred troubles, guaranteeing speedy and complete restoration of health and manly vigor. Address as above —N. B.—No risk is incurred, as 30 days' trial is allowed.

The Musical Record, edited by Dexter Smith and published by Oliver Ditson & Co., has for music in its January number: Answers, words by Dora Greenwell and music by Jaques Blumenthal; Somebody's Pride, written by Stanley Bolton, composed by Michael Watson; and Tendresse polka, from Gobbaerts. The subscription is $1 a year.

VICK'S FLORAL GUIDE.—Here it is again, brighter and better than ever; the cover alone, with its delicately tinted background and its dish of elegantly arranged flowers, would entitle it to a prominent place in every home. The book contains three beautiful colored plates, is full of illustrations, printed on the best of paper, and is filled with just such information as is required by the gardener, the farmer, and those growing plants, and every one needing seeds or plants. The price, only ten cents, can be deducted from the first order sent for goods. All parties any way interested in this subject should send at once to James Vick, Rochester, N.Y., for the floral guide.

The January number of the Young Ladies' Journal has been received from the International News Company of New York. This number is even in advance of the others, with all the latest styles of feminine wearing apparel, and hundreds of new novelties in fancy work. There is also the usual amount of choice reading matter, etc. The colored sheet and the large panorama of Paris fashions is excellent. For sale by the Peabody News Company.

The Charles A. Vogeler Co., of Baltimore, Md., have issued their second annual calendar. It contains humorous selections from leading humorists in America, and altogether it is a neatly gotten up affair. Of course the merits of St. Jacobs Oil are not forgotten in the issue, but it is not obtrusive. Any of our readers can obtain one of these books by addressing Supply Dept., Charles A. Vogeler Co. $20,000 GONE! SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.—The Chronicle publishes the following marvel: Capt. W. F. Swasey, the oldest pioneer of the coast, makes a statement of the intense suffering of his friend Col. D. W. Williamson, on Army officer of distinction, and an Ex-U. S. Consul, who was attacked in the winter of of 1861-2 with violent rheumatism. So great was his agony in after years, he became a helpless cripple, and after trying numberless remedies, the baths of other countries and spending a fortune of $20,000, the disease seemed to assume a more virulent type. Finally, he was persuaded to try St. Jacobs Oil, the great conqueror of pain. In a letter to the Chronicle he confirms Capt. Swasey's statement and adds: "I cheerfully give my unqualified attestation to the truthfulness of the statement, because I feel perfectly certain that a knowledge of my cure by St. Jacobs Oil, will prove the means of relieving hunbreds of sufferers,"

A young lover wants to know how high striped stockings come. They come just like the other kind. They are woven. If that isn't what he means, let him put a banana cover on the sidewalk, or watch the panorama at a street crossing on a rainy day.

With Ely's Cream Balm a child can be treated without pain or dread, and with perfect safety. Try the remedy. It cures Catarrh. Hay Fever and Colds in the Head. 50c. Apply into nostrils with the finger.

The restoration to health of our child we considered uncertain. When two weeks old she caught cold. For 18 month's was not able to breathe through her nostrils, became emaciated. Upon using Ely's Cream Balm her difficulty was removed; she breathes naturally. Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Smith, Owego, N. Y.

From Col. C. H. Mackey, 32d Iowa Infantry: I have derived more benefit from Ely's Cream Balm than anything else I have ever tried. I have now been using it for three months and am experiencing no trouble from Catarrh whatever. I have been a sufferer for twenty years. C. H. Mackey, Sigourney, Iowa, Feb. 22, 1882.

POMPEII.

In these deserted streets life suddenly stopped 1800 years ago. It is truth that the destruction was not instantaneous, and a great number of inhabitants saved their lives and even took away a good deal of their treasure. But enough was left to show us every detail of Roman life. The old world is set before us, with all its good and its evil, its glories and shame. We know what manner or men and women they must have been, and what their daily lives were like, almost as well as if we had actually dwelt among them.

These old Pompeiians were very modern. There is nothing new under the sun. They had folding-doors and hot-water urns; they put gratings to their windows, and made rockeries in their gardens; their steel-yards are exactly like those your cheese-monger uses to weigh his Cheddars and Glo'sters; their children had toys—bears, lions, pigs, cats, dogs — made of clay, and sometimes serving as jugs also. Poor children! poor mothers! How did they fare in those three days of darkness and dismay? People wrote on walls, and cut their names on seats, just as we do now. They kept birds in cages.

In Naples to-day, as you walk along the Chiaja, you may find yourself in the midst of a herd of goats, with bells around their necks, exactly like those in the museum. They gave tokens at the doors of their places of entertainments—the people in the gallery had pigeons made of a sort of terra cotta. They put lamps inside the holloweyes of the masks that adorned their fountains; they even made grottos of shells—vulgarity itself is ancient; they ate sausages, and hung up strings of onions; they had stands for public vehicles, and the schoolmaster used a birch on the dunces; they put stepping-stones across the roads, that the dainty young patrician gentlemen, and the pursy old senators might not soil their gilded sandals.

It was never cold enough for their pipes to burst, but they turned their water on and off with taps, and their cookshops had marble counters; they clapped their offenders into the stocks—two gladiators were kept there fifteen hundred years. When their crockery broke they rivited it. At Hercalaneum their is a huge wine jar half buried in the earth. It has been badly broken but is neatly rivited—with many rivets—and it no doubt held the wine as well as ever. Those rivets have lasted 1800 years! It is a strange thing to think about. What would the housewife have said if some one had told her that her cracked pot would outlast the Roman Empire?

A RARE CURIOSITY.

The Botanical Garden in Washington is possessed of a rare curiosty now in the flower kingdom. It is a Holy Ghost or Dove flower in bloom. This curiosity is from Panama, and blooms annually. The plant grows from a bulb about the size of one's hand, and springs up in a single stalk, which is the size of a pipe-stem, and resembling in color and general appearance a rush, and is about three and one-half feet high.

At the top of the stalk, and for a space of probably six inches along its sides near the top, the flowers are located. They are about two and one-half inches in circumference, white as snow, appearing rather like white wax or marble, and of the shape of a cup, with the mouth inclined outwardly. At the bottom of this cup-shaped blossom is the most lovely specimen of nature's art. It is the dove, which occupies a sitting posture, with wings extending upward, and exhibiting the first half of the dove.

In front of the dove is an altar, slightly sprinkled with diminutive dots of maroon coloring, and at this is the only color about the bloom. At the base of the stalk are three shoots, or long leaves, like the shoots of new corn. There are twenty-five of the cups on the stem, and the fragrance is very delicate and sweet. It is a great curiosity, and is attracting a large number of visitors. The dove specimen is kept in the greenhouse where the air plants are, which are nothing less than blocks of wood, kept in a temperature so hot and damp they are forced to grow and bloom, and these alone are worth seeing.

EVERY LITTLE MAKES A MICKLE

The collection of cigar-ends, in order to support an orphan house at Lahr, in the Duchy of Baden, has been sedulously going on for many years in Germany, and even German settlers on the other side of the Atlantic regularly send their contributions in kind to the benevolent proprietor of the Hinkende Bote, of Lahr, who was the originator of the scheme. His example has been followed on a less ambitious scale in other towns of his fatherland, and every year a number of poor children receive new suits of clothes or other gifts at Christmas time, the results of the sale of the collected cigar-ends. The Saxon Gewerbeverein, in Dresden, has started a somewhat similar scheme. It begs for worn-out or disused steel pens, and has a whole organization of collectors for making a big heap of these little articles, who work on the principle that "every little makes a mickle." The proceeds are expended upon the technical education of a number of poor lads. The steel used for pen making is so good that it finds a ready sale and a good price if it can be collected in any quantity. The organ of the Verein says that it is used chiefly for watch-springs, the finest knives, and the fabrication of ink.

The law of harvest is to reap more than you sow. Sow an act, and you reap a habit; sow a habit and you reap a character; sow a character, and you reap a destiny.

AYER'S Cherry Pectoral.

No other complaints are so insidious in their attack as those affecting the throat and lungs: none so trifled with by the majority of sufferers. The ordinary cough or cold, resulting perhaps from a trifling or unconscious exposure, is often but the beginning of a fatal sickness. AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL has well proven its efficacy in a forty years' fight with throat and lung diseases, and should be taken in all cases without delay.

A Terrible Cough Cured.

"In 1857 I took a severe cold, which affected my lungs. I had a terrible cough, and passed night after night without sleep. The doctors gave me up. I tried AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL, which relieved my lungs, induced sleep, and afforded me the rest necessary for the recovery of my strength. By the continued use of the PECTORAL a permanent cure was effected. I am now 62 years old, hale and hearty, and am satisfied your CHERRY PECTORAL saved me.

HORACE FAIRBROTHER."

Rockingham, Vt., July 15, 1882.

Croup.—A Mother's Tribute.

"While in the country last winter my little boy, three years old, was taken ill with croup; it seemed as if he would die from strangulation. One of the family suggested the use of AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL, a bottle of which was always kept in the house. This was tried in small and frequent doses, and to our delight in less than half an hour the little patient was breathing easily. The doctor said that the CHERRY PECTORAL had saved my darling's life. Can you wonder at our gratitude? Sincerely yours,

MRS. EMMA GEDNEY."

159 West 128th St., New York, May 16, 1882.

"I have used AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL in my family for several years, and do not hesitate to pronounce it the most effectual remedy for coughs and colds we have ever tried. A. J. CRANE."

Lake Crystal, Minn., March 13, 1882.

"I suffered for eight years from Bronchitis, and after trying many remedies with no success, I was cured by the use of AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL. JOSEPH WALDEN."

Byhalia, Miss., April 5, 1882.

"I cannot say enough in praise of AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL, believing as I do that but for its use I should long since have died from lung troubles E. BRAGDON."

Palestine, Texas, April 22, 1882.

No case of an affection of the throat or lungs exists which cannot be greatly relieved by the use of AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL, and it will always cure when the disease is not already beyond the control of medicine.

Mrs. Newcomb is the wife of one of the employees in the United States Armory, Springfield, Mass. She says: "I have used Dr. Kennedy's FAVORITE REMEDY for Indigestion and Biliousness. My husband has also used it. We keep it in the house as a family medicine, and consider it the best ever made for the purpose recommended."

Dr. Kennedy is daily in receipt of letters from patients expressing similar sentiments as these expressed by Mrs. Newcomb, of State street. These letters are spontaneous and put in all varieties of phraseology, but invariably setting forth one thing—the value of Kennedy's FAVORITE REMEDY for many forms of disease. It may be just the thing you have been looking for. Is your Liver disordered? Have you Derangement of the Kidneys or Bladder associated with Constipation of the Bowels? If so, you want Kennedy's FAVORITE REMEDY. Dr. Kennedy practices Medicine and Surgery in all their Branches. Write and state your case. Miscellaneous.

HE COULDN'T STAND THE SMELL.—An Irishman who was stopping at Saratoga the last season has a good story to tell concerning a well situated behind the hotel where he was stopping, which well was some twenty-five feet deep and full of gas. A young lady who happened to be looking into this well unfortunately dropped her diamond earring valued at $1,000. Distressed at her great loss, she immediately offered a reward of $150 to anybody who would recover the lost earring. Nobody would undertake the job but the aforesaid Irishman's brother, Mike. Upon hearing of this the Irishman rushed out and looked up his brother and said to him:

"Mike, do yez mane to till me ye'r gooin' down that will and soofocate yersilf?" "Go an' mind yer own bizness. I'm goin' after the $150 rewoord." He had already sent for a rope, so his brother had to superintend the job. Putting the rope around him, he said: "Mike, when ye find yersilf chokin' wid de gas till me, an' I'll haul yer up."

"All right," said Mike; and he began to lower him down. After getting him down five feet, he said: "Mike, can yer sthand the schmill?" "Lower away," said Mike. He had lowered him about fifteen feet. "Mike," said he, "kin yer sthand the schmill?" Then the answer came back.

"Yer son of a goon, if yer don't pull me up, I'll cut the rope!"

A CRIME AND A REVELATION.—The Brooklyn Eagle recently gave an account of a criminal assault, alleged to have been committed upon Julia Pidding, a girl of 16, by John Wilton, son of a restaurant-keeper near the navy yard. It appears that, when threatened with arrest, Wilton promised to marry the girl, but has since disappeared, and it is said that his parents are arranging to remove to Connecticut, where they formerly resided. In an interview Monday, Julia said that Wilton threatened if she made any trouble to serve her as he did Jennie Cramer. She states that Wilton frequently discussed the murder of Jennie Cramer with her; that he told her that he drove the wagon in which Jennie was carried to the beach; that she was unconscious, having been drugged by the Malley boys; that Jennie was choked, Wilton assisting, and that the Malley boys paid him $1,000 for his services. A warrant will be requested for Wilton's arrest.

HOW IT HAPPENED.—He was a bank teller. He had been sent off on a vacation, his books overhauled, and he had been found $9,000 short. The fact stared him in the face as he sat amidst the board of directors.

"Now then," said the president, "I presume you acknowledge the embezzlement?"

"I do."

"And how did you use the money?"

"In speculating."

"In what?"

"Well, I was bull in X, Y, Z railroad stocks, but there was too much against me. I didn't have a fair show to make anything."

"Why—how?"

"Well, while I was using $9,000 of the bank's money to bull the stocks, the cashier was putting up $20,000 to bear them, and so I lost all."—Wall Street News.

An English inventor has patented an ingenious device, consisting of a bar, by means of which the front wheels of two bicycles may be joined and driven tandem by two riders. The first advantage immediately apparent is that falling over the handles is quite impossible. A greatly increased pace is attainable, and this, with the augmented safety enables ascents and descents to be taken which previously caused dismounts to be made. The tandem can be quickly taken to pieces, and the two large wheels transformed into two separate machines.

"Your cheek is an awful temptation to me," he exclaimed, as he looked admiringly at her fresh young face. "Your cheek must be an awful burden to you," she replied, glancing at him suspiciously; and the fresh young man withdrew.

BUTLER'S FORGETFULNESS.—There was an Athenian who, when urged to learn a system of artificial memory, replied that he would give a talent or two of gold if anybody would teach him how to forget. Butler needs no such instruction. His "forgettiug" is better than his memory, as everybody can see by the droll attack of heterophemia which came over him last week when (as he says) he meant to say "Pond" and said "Stickney". But in fact there is no parallel between the case of Pond and Stickney, the former being a forger and the latter an embezzler or breaker of trust; and the argument of Butler against Hathaway applies to Stickney and has no connection with Pond. It is a case of forgetfulness combined w th malice. Butler wished to glorify himself and rap Gov. Long, and so blundered into the belief that his predecessor pardoned Stickney, and that he, the great, good and wise Butler, would not have done so.

Another case of forgetfulness is Butler's neglect to send the report of the state almshouse to Secretary Peirce for printing. He has had it in his hands ever since October 16, when Mr. Haggett, his own particular man on the state board, gave it to him, after signing it with the names of the three Butler members. He told the Secretary of State sometime in November that he would send it down for printing with some comments of his own: but he had not done so on Saturday. Meantime the board of health, lunacy and charity, which prepared the report, have had it printed as an appendix to their own general report, and it is already in Gov. Robinson's hands in that shape. This general report of the board has been delayed by Butler's holding on to the books of the outdoor poor department, so that it cannot be sent to Gov. Butler but must be addressed to Gov. Robinson, who will lay it before the Legislature sometime after the middle of January. It is said to be a volume of about 350 pages, and will give the first official statement about the expert analysis of adulterated food and drugs and watered milk, with a notice of the prosecutions against fraudulent doctors. The Boston dailies, except the Advertiser, of late have maintained a mysterious silence on this subject, which is one of great public interest, but the session of the Legislature will bring out the facts.

Butler forgot, by the way, to tell the people how much they had been cheated by the waterers of milk, the diluters of opium and quinine, and the manufacturers of glucose sugar and hogs-fat butter. He also forgot, while dilating on the enormities of the Philadelphia plate-glass insurance company, to tell his voters in Fall River how the democratic doctors were cheating them in the way of grave-yard insurance. A little less moralizing about the republican swindlers of Fall River and a little more attention to the democratic rascals would be ornamental and perhaps useful, to so sincere a friend of the people as the governor is who pardoned Stickney and then forgot all about it.—Springfield Republican.

With the country editor it is the same old grind week after week, month after month, and year after year, until he drops into his grave, "unwept, unhonored and unsung." And it is not much better with the editor in the city. Both travel hard roads, and all the difference is the latter sometimes rakes in a little more money during his toilsome journey than the former, and takes less kicks and cuffs. Neither is half appreciated or paid, but, alas, somebody must edit papers, and "such is life."—Woburn Journal.

Seems to us Brother Hobbs is getting a little down hearted. He has perhaps been "left" by a travelling minstrel troupe, or worried by some advertising fiend.—Wakefield Citizen and Banner.

A correspondent of the Boston Globe says that Springfield is the greatest place for Odd Fellows in Massachusetts, and, according to the reports of the Grand Lodge, there are more Odd Fellows there, in proportion to the population, than any town or city not excepting Lynn. There are three large lodges and one encampment, and a uniform degree camp to be instituted soon. This is the home of the famous De Soto Lodge, known all over the world wherever a lodge of Odd Fellows exists.

Father, how can I thus be bold to pray
That thou shalt grant me that or spare me this?
How should my ignorance not go astray,
How should my foolish lips not speak amiss
And ask for woe when fain they would ask bliss?
Just as Thou wilt is just what I would will:
Give me but this, the heart to be content,
And if my wish is thwarted to lie still,
Waiting till puzzle and till pain are spent,
And the sweet thing made plain which the Lord meant.

GREEN NOT IRELAND'S COLOR.

It is strange to be told that, after all, green is not the old national color of Ireland. The popular belief for centuries is in favor of emerald color. But the old books show that the popular belief is contrary to the fact. There was a Duke of Ireland in Richard II.'s time, Robert de Vere, Duke of Ireland and Marquis of Dublin, to whom the King granted a coat of augmentation, "azure, three crowns, or, with a border argent." In Edward IV.'s time the arms of Ireland were such a problem for the heralds that commissioners were sent to investigate and to report. The commissioners pronounced that the arms of that kingdom were three crowns in pale. A drawing in the British Museum settles the question. The drawing was made in the reign of Queen Elizabeth, or, at least, registered the colors as they existed in her reign. The national flag appears then to have been a harp or strings argent on an azure ground. Thus in early times the national flag was certainly blue. It may be that the color changed imperceptibly. There are blues that are almost green. Twenty years ago the Italian tricolor was brick red, white and olive green. These were the æsthetic tints in use at a time when Carlyle had not yet explained to us in a note how Richter invented the word "æsthetic" and what he meant by it. Now, any one who looks at the Italian flag floating over the House of Parliament in the Piazza in Rome will see that the red is bright carmine and the green is rank emerald.

It is a good rule to be deaf when a slanderer begins to talk.

It is wisdom to think, and folly to sit without thinking.

NASBY'S PAPER.

THE TOLEDO WEEKLY BLADE.

Circulation 115,000.

This vast circulation is because the BLADE is a paper for the whole country. It is not thrown together, but every line of it is edited by competent hands. It is a complete epitome of the news of the week, and whosoever reads the BLADE carefully, needs nothing else to be well informed as to what the world is doing. Editorially the BLADE has made a proud record. It has an opinion on every thing that affects the people of the country, and it expresses it boldly, fearlessly, and forcibly. As good as the Blade has been in past years, we will make it better than ever in the year to come.

Among the features for the coming year will be the regular "Nasby Letters," two serials by Nasby, entitled "Nasby in Exile," and "Nasby in the South," a serial story by Ernest Warren, entitled, Court and Camp," a serial by John McElroy author of Andersonville, "Reminiscences of an Army Mule"; a serial written for the BLADE by an Austrian nobleman; besides our regular departments, "Household," "Answers to Correspondents," "Camp Fire," etc., etc. We publish all the news, and latest corrected markets.

Politically the BLADE will continue an exponent of true Republicanism, believing that the best interests of the country demand the continuance of its control in the hands of the party that represents the highest and most advanced ideas.

THE RUM POWER.

The BLADE will fight this mahster iniquity with all the power it possesses, and in every way possible. The BLADE holds the liquor traffic to be a greater curse than slavery, and a thousand times more dangerous to the country.

We ask the co-operation of every well-wisher of the Republic that our work may be effective. We ask every Republican in the United States to assist in extending the circulation of the BLADE, especially among those of the Republican party who believe as we do in the necessity of Pulverizing the Rum Power. We want the BLADE in as many families as possible this winter, that it may be read before the excitement of a political campaign, giving it time for its truths to take root in the minds of its readers.

THE WEEKLY BLADE, $1.00 a year, postpaid, to EVERYBODY. Those preferring, may receive the BLADE, THREE MONTHS, by remitting 30 cents, or clubs of three months trial subscribers, of not less than four, 25 cents each.

OUR GREAT ART OFFER.

A $10.00 Steel Engraving for $1.00. Write us for a specimen copy of the WEEKLY BLADE, which will give full particulars of this, the greatest offer ever made by any publisher. We send specimen copies of the BLADE free to any address. We want as many addresses as possible to send Specimen Copies to. Write a postal card asking for a specimen for yourself, and send us the names of all your neighbors. We want to send out a half million copies within the next month. Don't be modest as to the number.

THE SUN.

NEW YORK, 1884.

About sixty million copies of THE SUN have gone out of our establishment during the last twelve months.

If you were to paste end to end all the columns of all THE SUNS printed and sold last year, you would get a continuous strip of interesting information common sense wisdom, sound doctrine, and sane wit long enough to reach from Printing House square to the top of Mount Copernicus in the moon, then back to Printing House square, and then three-quarters of the way back to the moon again.

But THE SUN is written for the inhabitants of this earth; this same strip of intelligence would girdle the earth twenty-seven or twenty-eight times.

If every buyer of a copy of THE SUN during the past year has spent only one hour over it, and his wife or his grandfather has spent another hour, this newspaper in 1883 has afforded the human race thirteen thousand years of steady reading night and day.

It is only by little calculations like these that you can form any idea of the circulation of the most popular of American newspapers, or of its influence on the opinions and actions of American men and women.

THE SUN is, and will continue to be, a newspaper which tells the truth without fear of consequences, which gets at the facts no matter how much the process costs, which presents the news of all the world without waste of words and in the most readable shape, which is working with all its heart for the cause of honest government, and which therefore believes that the Republican party must go, and must go in this coming year of our Lord, 1884.

If you know THE SUN, you like it already and you will read it with accustomed diligence and profit during what is sure to be the most interesting year in its history. If you do not yet know THE SUN, it is high time to get into the sunshine.

TERMS TO MAIL SUBSCRIBERS.

Hose three will hold a night cap party in their house next Friday night. A good time is guaranteed to all who attend.

The room of Steamer one is finished, and on Saturday the company went back into their quarters which are by all odds the finest anywhere in this vicinity. The chandelier has been newly bronzed, the new Brussels carpet put down, and the new stuffed furniture set in place. The carpet and a large rug in the centre of the room are from Almy, Bigelow & Webber of Salem, the furniture, consisting of six chairs, two sofas and two easy chairs, was furnished by Welch & Cummings, of Lynn, and it paid the company pretty well to carry their trade over there. The company now would like to get the room occupied by Driver Price for a smoking room, as it opens from theirs by folding doors. A good many friends of the company visited them Sunday and expressed their admiration of the work done.

The first coat of paint has been put on in the room of the H. & L., and as the staging is in the way, the company held their meeting Monday evening, in the room of Steamer one, that company having tendered them the use of it.

Foreman Cummings, of Steamer two, was on Sunday presented with a fine twelve pound daughter. He is pretty happy over the event, and is receiving congratulations from all the boys.

The Firemen's Herald came out last week with a new heading and printed on heavy tinted paper, and crammed full of fire news of interest to all firemen.

A fire was discovered on the roof of the currying shop of Pinder & Winchester last Monday evening between 5 and 6 o'clock by a woman who happened to be passing. She saw sparks dropping to the ground, and looking up saw the fire burning on the roof. The crew of the shop extinguished the blaze before it did any great damage.

Probably quite a number of our firemen, especially those who have been in the habit of attending the different firemen's musters where the Marlboro, engine companies were present, remember Assistant Engineer Chas. F. Witherbee, of the Marlboro department, who received injuries at a fire in that town on the 3d of December, which resulted in his death a few days later. He was directing a line of hose and wished it in a better position, and mounting a ladder, stepping out on an icy roof was thrown to the ground a distance of 25 feet, striking in a sitting position. He was at first supposed to be dead and was carried into a drug store where he revived. His first question on reviving was "Is the fire out?" Upon examination the extent of his injuries was found to be a severe concussion of the spine and a compound fracture of the left wrist, one of the bones protruding through the flesh. In a consultation held a few days later it was deemed necessary to amputate the broken limb. Hopes were entertained for his recovery, but on the 16th of Dec. the gallant fire laddie passed away, deeply lamented by all his brother firemen. His funeral took place on the 18th, and was attended by the fire department in a body, the lodge of K. of P., G. A. R., and Knights of Honor, all of which the deceased was a member. This accident is a specimen of the dangers to which all firemen are subjected, and is liable to occur at any time. A fireman, when he answers to an alarm of fire, does not know whether he will ever see his home and friends again or not, and for all the risks he runs, what does he get? Comparatively nothing. In this town the pay, $15 per year and poll tax, is not enough to pay for the wear and tear occasioned by one or two fires. We hope that the time is not far distant when the firemen will get a suitable remuneration for services rendered.

PEABODY.

A public installation of the officers of Union Post 50, G. A. R., took place in the Peabody Institute last Monday, in the presence of a goodly number of our citizens. Complimentary tickets had been distributed to members of the Post, and while the hall was full it was not uncomfortably so. Geo. Randall acted as master of ceremonies, which consisted of a variety entertainment following the installation services. Previous to the arrival of the Post to the places assigned for them in the hall, the Peabody Orchestral club gave several selections. Mr. Randall in introducing them, stated that they were only amateurs, and had volunteered their services for the Grand Army. The selections were well received by the audience, and the young men showed that they had given considerable practice towards fitting themselves to appear before a public assembly. Their tempo is worthy of imitation by orchestras making much louder pretentions, and they ought to receive the encouragement of our citizens. At the close of their selections, the members of the Post marched into the hall, and the installation services began. The divine blessing was invoked by Chaplain Neil Shaw, and the installing officers introduced. The services were well carried out by Past Com. J. G. B. Adams, of Lynn, and the newly elected and appointed officers were installed. The following is the list: Commander, William H. Hildreth; S. V. C., Wm. R. Armstrong; J. V. C., Wm. W. Reed; Adjutant, Geo. O. Peirce; Quartermaster, Wm. F. Sumner; Sergt., Charles C. Pike; Chaplain, Isaiah Chute; O. of D., C. J. Linehan, O. of G., Edward D. Morton; S, M., Wm H. Hall; Q. M. S., Edward Meacom. The exercises of the evening were then turned over by the Commander of the Post to Geo. Randall, who announced that Geo. H. Patch, Past Department Commander, was unavoidably absent. He therefore stated very briefly the object of the gathering, and trusted that the entertainment provided would prove acceptable to the audience, and introduced the Grand Army Quartette of Salem, with Jacob Young at the piano. Commander Adams followed with some stirring remarks, congratulating the Post upon its condition, and upon the support they have received from the citizens of the town. It is their duty to back up the Grand Army in their labors of charity. He remembered one of the bravest sons of Peabody, who left his father's home one of the earliest in the fight—came back and re-enlisted in the three years' regiments. With him he fought shoulder to shoulder. At Gettysburg this soldier stepped forward in the thickest of the fight saying, "I want 20 men to follow me—to go forward to capture a battery." The volunteers were forthcoming. He afterwards left his regiment but came back and lost his life at Spottsylvania. This man was Moses Shackley, (tremendous applause). No braver or nobler soul ever lived. Such as these the citizens should be proud to stand by. The comrades of the war never thought that they were to occupy their present position. At the camp fires, there was talk that when the war was ended, they were going to band together, and tell the story of the battles, and keep the fact in remembrance that they stood between the soul of the North and the rebels on the other side. But when the war was ended there is no man here who intended to band together. They would call no man Commander. But when the call came—and the widows of the brave defenders were suffering—the G. A. R. rallied in 1866 as they had previously in 1861, not against an armed foe, but the silent foe of hunger. How nobly has the G. A. R. in Massachusetts performed its work! They have expended over $600,000 in charity, and much more than this has been freely given, which will never be entered on the record book. They have taken more than 120 men from the alms houses and placed them in the Soldier's Home,—not paupers, but honored citizens. The boys are growing old. It should be an honor to the survivors of the war, as well as the citizens, to see to it that none of them go hungry to bed. At the close of Mr. Adams' remarks, Comrade Yeaton, of Chelsea, was introduced, who gave in a pleasing manner a selection from Mark Twain, and afterwards the well known Dutch parody on Barbara Frietchie. Master John Egan followed with selections on the piano. Master Egan was loudly encored, and shows remarkable proficiency for one so young. Comrade Le Grande, of Salem, then favored the audience with a comic song, after which Jas. F. Meech, late Asst. Adj. General of the Massachusetts Department, made a short address. He referred humorously to the impromptu, as it were, remarks of the chairman, which he said had probably been in type a week before, and referred to the Soldier's Home in Chelsea, and what it had done for the soldiers. He referred to the contributions here for its support, and extended a cordial invitation to all citizens to visit it. The speaker was present at the organization of this Post, when 140 had been mustered in in one evening. Was glad to know of its present prosperity, which he hoped would continue.

Comrade Yeaton was again introduced—this time playing a solo on the harmonica, after which the Star Spangled Banner was sung by Mrs. B. F. Upton, amid the hoisting of the flag during the last verse, which was the signal for loud applause. The arranged programme was now about half completed, and the chairman announced that while no offence would be taken should any desire to leave, he should be pleased to have all remain until the completion of the entertainment. Seaman and Norris, of Salem, then gave a variety performance lasting about half an hour, consisting of a performance on different musical instruments interspersed with jokes and funny sayings. Master Hazen Quint followed with a violin solo, which was well received by the audience, when Miss Edith Randall, of Quincy, sang Millard's "Waiting," and on recall "A Summer Shower."—The chairman now called on the commander of the Post, who briefly thanked the comrades for their full ranks—hoping to see a repetition of the numbers at every Monday night meeting.—He referred to the charities of the Post the past year: they had expended $900 in ministering to the needy. There had not been a time when there were not from one to ten sick and requiring the assistance of the Post. This charity fund had nearly run out. There were now six sick. They were to hold a Fair next month, and they asked the assistance of the citizens, promising them that contributions should only be distributed among those who were needy and deserving. To the soldiers and sailors not members of the G.A.R. he urged uniting themselves with the Post. You know not what it is to be a soldier until you join the G. A. R.—After joining you would consider that the last ten years had been wasted. Mr. Randall announced that it was proposed to hold a grand Camp Fire in the new Town Hall, sometime during next month, where all would have an opportunity to attend. Comrade LeGrande sang some more comic songs. Comrade Yeaton gave a very amusing song, with imitations, which brought down the house, and he was obliged to return again and again. A selection by the Grand Army Quartette closed the entertainment, after which the Post and invited guests adjourned to the Grand Army Hall, where a supper of hot baked beans and coffee was discussed with evident relish. Then followed stories, cigars and congratulations, and among the "wee sma' hours" the comrades dispersed to their homes.

The many friends of Miss Laura E. Mace, the well known reader, will be pleased to learn that the success which has uniformly attended her efforts during the past seasons is more than equaled this year. Miss Mace is connected with the Lowell Commercial college as teacher of elocution, and has classes in Nashua, Peabody, Somerville, Boston and Lowell. The citizens of Lowell have a great interest in the success of Miss Mace, as it was in this city that her first achievement was won, and many of our young folks have been pupils under her instruction. The reputation which she has won as a teacher is enviable, and has been acquired by patient, faithful labor. We heartily endorse the foregoing from the Lowell Courier. Miss Mace has three large classes and several private scholars in Nashua and if her success is half as gratifying to herself as to her pupils and their friends she must be indeed a happy woman. She is a talented, patient and painstaking teacher and therefore deserves the success and compliments which she everywhere receives. A class in elecution under Miss Mace's instruction is being formed here, and any of our readers desiring information relative to terms, &c. can obtain the same at the store of B. F. Stevens.

Holten Lodge 104, I. O. O. F., installed their officers last evening. District Deputy Grand Master Mayor Wm. M. Hill, of Salem, and suite, consisting of Past Grands Archie Hill, Frank Cousins, S. S. Littlefield, Jos. N. Peterson, W. F. Sawyer and Upton. The following are the elected and appointed officers, installed: N. G., Geo. H. Manning; V. G., John O. Buxton; Rec. Sec'y., E. I. Kimball, Per. Sec'y., C. A. Sanger; Treas., G. F. Sanger; R. S. N. G., W. F. Sawyer; L. S. N. G., Horace K. Foster; R. S. V. G., Jesse F. Barrett; L. S. V. G., Frank Edgerly; R. S. S., William Gun; L. S. S., John Saunders; Chaplain, W. A. Saunders; I.G., F. W. Carlton; O. G., D. Goodrich. After the installation the visiting brothers spoke on the "good of the order," and congratulated the lodge on their success. The reports of the finance committee showed the Lodge to be in excellent condition, with a membership of 147 and about $4000 in the treasury. The Lodge has been instituted about six years. After the installation a supper was served in Upton's Hall.

Mr. J. C. Keazer met with quite a severe accident last Saturday night by running into a railroad frog in Wyoma, tipping the sleigh over and throwing him out cutting his head quite severely.

Orlando F. Newhall has been elected Superintendent of the Sabbath school of the church here.

Rev. Joseph Kimball of Andover, Mass, gave a very instructive and entertaining lecture in the vestry of the Rockville church, last Thursday evening. The theme was "Glimpses at other People," and with Mr. Kimball's aid his audience were permitted to see those who by their worth or worthlessness enforced his subject. The lecture was "Right Living", thoroughly enjoyed by all present, and the thanks of the Society are due to the Lecturer for his services which were so generously given.

Mr. John Green of Lynn, and Miss Mary French, daughter of Augustus French, were united in marriage, Saturday, Dec. 22d.

W.E.Reed, the sexton of the church here, has resigned his position, and has been presented by Rev. Mr. Colwell, in behalf of the society, with an elegant illustrated Oxford teacher's Bible and the illustrated hymn by Wesley, "Jesus lover of my Soul."

Mr. Wm. Tudbury has taken the position as sexton at the new church in the place of Mr. Reed, resigned.

After patient waiting and watching, Mrs. Frank Newhall, of Lynnfield, was rewarded last Wednesday, by securing the thief who has been taking money from her rooms for the past few months. It seems that Mrs. Newhall took a girl from the Home for Little Wanderers and used her like one of her own children. Lately, she became suspicious of the child, and determined to watch her, and last Wednesday the girl asked to go to Salem, and after she had gone, Mrs. Newhall went to the girl's room, and there she found one hundred dollars that the girl had taken at different times. When she came home she was confronted by Mrs. Newhall when she confessed to the stealing of the money. Mrs. Newhall sent to Boston for an officer of the institution to come and take her away, which he did the next day.

Rev. C. C. Carpenter, formerly pastor of the church here, has sent us the Annual Record of the church in Mt. Vernon, N. H., over which he is now pastor. By it we learn that the total membership of the church there Jan. 1 1884 was 151; the removals during the year, were by death five, by dismission four, by discipline one; the marriages during the year by the pastor were four in number. The average Sabbath congregations for the year 1883 was 143; at Sabbath School 88; at weekly prayer meeting 25.

WEST PEABODY.

At a meeting of the West Peabody Farmers' Club, last Friday evening, Mr. James P. King gave a talk on farming fifty years ago. In reference to carrying produce to market, Mr. King said that the farmers of Vermont and New Hampshire used to wait for sleighing and all come together, sometimes making a procession a quarter of a mile in length. He described a visit which he had made at a later period for some purchases, and of the genuine hospitality which characterized the New England farmers of that period. It was the intention of the speaker to make his purchases and get away, but the farmer would not allow this—compelling him to remain over night and inspect his crops. Mr. King spoke of the mode of living—of the old fashioned fire places, ten feet long, around which whole families could gather, and where they used bark logs too large for one person to lift. In ploughing, farmers used two yokes of oxen—and it was a rare thing for a farmer at that time to own more than one horse. He described the old wooden plough lined with sheet iron, the process of mowing with the scythe, the style of hoe then used, which was at least a third larger than that now in common use, the planting of corn and pototoes in rows, the hand rake as contrasted with modern implements, and many other things, including the price of poultry which was then 6 1-4 cents per pound. He spoke, also, of the progress that had been made in the production of milk. Fifty years ago only one milkman went into what is now the town of Peabody. The Gardner farm milk route was established much longer ago, but that went into Salem. There were remarks by J. S. Needham, Hon. N. A. Horton, of the Salem Gazette and others.

Rev. Mr. Colwell has been re-elected Superintendent of the Sabbath School in this section of the town.

Last night as Bowman Viles was riding to the Institute lecture his sleigh capsized near Geo. J. Walton's, on Lowell street, breaking both shafts. He obtained a pung of Mr. Walton and continued to the Square.

Typographical errors will occur. One of our exchanges speaks of the West Peabody Farmers' Club meeting in School House Hell. The place is no doubt warm enough, with the stirring oratory of some of those who participate, but it is too bad to have the Farmer's Club meet in so warm a place.

The homestead of the late George Brown, at West Peabody, was sold at public auction Saturday, to William Southwick for $300.

The Original Nashvilie Students who are to appear in Peabody Institute Friday evening, come with the endorsement of Redpath's bureau, and the flattering reception in Boston in Geo. A. Foxcroft's Star course at Tremont Temple. A program of unusual excellence will be presented and we can heartily commend it to the patronage of our citizens.

It is reported that a certain business firm, who a short time ago reduced the pay of the men a dollar a week, is about to make another reduction. This is very unfortunate. The number of laboring men thrown out of employment during this winter by the stoppage of factories is alarming. Thousands of workmen have been turned out in idleness, with no support for their families, while the wages of others have been greatly reduced, or the hours of work cut down. It is to be hoped that there will soon be a change for the better.

PENALTY FOR SIN.—Jan. 1, Edward Draper for obstructing sidewalk was fined $4.93.

2, Cornelius Ronan a vagrant, was sent to the House of Correction for four months.

7, John Carroll for drunkenness, sent to Ipswich for three months.

David Lynch, for assault, $9.83. Sent to Salem jail.

Fred Mortimer, for being drunk, was fined $5.83.

The present term at the State Normal school in Salem will close with exercises of graduation on Tuesday, Jan. 22. Essays will be read by Misses M. Ada Brown, of West Peabody, Harriet P. Burbank, of Salem, Lilian Butters, of Island Pond, Vt., F. Clark, of Roxbury, N. H., Hannah C. Ham, of Tamworth Iron Works, N. H., Helen L. Knapp, of Wakefield; the valedictory by Miss Hattie Tucker, and the poem by Miss Caroline L. Wilder of Columbia, S. C. The salutatorian is Miss Jennie C. Davis, of Annisquam.

The recent rise in insurance rates will call many new companies into the state. The underwriters have had a hard time of it for the past year or two, but it would not be surprising if they had overshot the mark in the new schedule. Good times will bring lower rates of insurance.

NEWPORT, R. I., Nov. 12, 1883.

J. D. & J. W. EATON, Dear Sirs: Enclosed please find check for amount of bill for CRAWFORD RANGE and Ware. It arrived last Friday noon, and we had it set up and a fire in it before four o'clock. We are more than pleased with it. All our cooking was done Saturday morning. It usually takes all day to do it. My wife thinks she shall take to cooking again herself, as it is real fun to cook with such a Range as the CRAWFORD. Hoping you may sell a great many more of them, and every purchaser be as well pleased as we are. I remain yours, very truly,

WORDS OF KINDNESS.

Words of kindness, how they cheer us!
How they lift the soul above:
Tender angels, ever near us,
Are these blessed words of love:
Always speak them,
Words of kindness and of love.

Words of kindness, how they help us!
When our eyes are filled with tears,
Bidding all the heavy laden
Cast away their anxious fears;
Always speak them,
Words of love and words of cheer.

What can make the earth a heaven,
But these little words of love;
Telling men of sins forgiven,
Pointing to a home above;
Always speak them,
Words of cheer and words of love.

THE STEEPLE BELL.

The steeple bell is ringing,
Is ringing loud and clear.
Its melody is bringing
Our loved ones far and near.
'Tis ringing, 'tis ringing
In tones so full of cheer.

And every Sabbath morning
We hear the steeple bell
Ring out o'er hill and valley
The sound we love so well.
We hear it, we hear it,
The sound we love so well.

Alike in pleasant weather
Or when the loud winds roar,
To call our friends together
We hear the bell once more.
We hear it, we hear it,
We hear the bell once more.

Selected Story.

A Chance Word.

BY SUSAN COOLIDGE.

Myra Sidney was sitting in the window of her little parlor watching the slow rising of a storm over the opposite sky. Even city streets have their opportunities. This street in which Miss Sidney dwelt was in the outskirts of a suburb, where building plots were still generously measured. It ran along the ridge of a slope, and Miss Sidney's house had the further advantage of standing opposite a group of vacant lots beyond which, above the roofs and chimneys on the lower streets, a line of blue hills was visible, topped with woods and dappled with cloud shadows.

Many an autumn sunset had she watched from her front windows; many a soft spring rain and whirling snow-storm. To some natures there are both companionship and compensation in the changeful aspects of nature. Myra was one of these. She would not have exchanged her little house with its wide view for another, however magnificent, whose boundaries are brick walls alone; and sky and sun and hill made for the leisure moments of her busy life a perpetual and unwearying feast.

The room in which Miss Sidney sat expressed its owner as rooms will, whether meant to do so or not. In no respect of size or shape did it differ from No. 11 on one side or No. 13 on the other, yet its aspect was anything rather than common-place. The prevailing tint on the wall and floor was a soft olive, which made a background for brighter colored things; for the old Indian shawl which did duty as a portiere; for a couple of deep-hued Eastern rugs; for pictures of various kinds and values, and a sprinkling of bric-a-brac, odd rather than valuable, but so chosen as to be in thorough harmony with its surroundings.

Everything had a use. No pitfalls yawned for unwary guests in the shape of minute tables, Queen Anne or other wise, laden with trumpery biscuit or Sevres, and ready to upset with a touch.

A couple of short old-fashioned sofas flanked the fire-place on either side, two or three easy-chairs and a firm-set low table, laden with books and periodicals, completed a sort of circle where ten or a dozen persons could group themselves round the blaze. Miss Sidney herself, slight, vivid, simply dressed but without an ungraceful point or fold, was in accordance with her room.

The clock struck seven. The black cloud had crept to the zenith, and now a strong gust of wind swept from beneath it, bringing on its wings the first drops of rain. Miss Sidney rose and shut the window. At that moment the door-bell rang.

"It's two girls with a parcel, Miss Myra," said Esther, the parlor maid. "They'd like to speak with you they say."

Miss Sidney went out into her little entry. The girls about the same age, were of the unmistakable shop-girl type. "You are from Snow & Asher's, I think?" she said, in her courteous voice.

"Yes'm. Mr. Snow said he wasn't sure which of the under-waists it was that you took, so he sent both kinds, and you will try 'em on please?"

"Certainly. Are you to wait for them?"

"Yes'm."

Miss Sidney made what haste she could, but before she returned the rain was falling in torrents. "You must wait till it slackens," she said. "You'll be very wet if you don't. Have you far to go?"

"She has," replied one of the girls, with an embarrassed giggle. "I'm pretty near by, and the horse-car runs just in front of the door. But Cary has to walk quite a way, and her shoes is thin, too. She'd better wait, I guess but I must go, any way."

Miss Sidney glanced at the shoes—cheap, paper-soled boots, with a dusty velvet bow sowed on the toe of each, and she, too, concluded that by all means "Cary" must wait. "Come in here," she said, leading the way into the parlor. Esther had now lighted the lamp. A little fire sparkled on the hearth, Myra drew an easy-chair close to it. "Sit down and have a thorough warming," she said. "It is a chilly evening."

"Yes'm."

The girl thrust the velvet-bowed boots, which gaped for lack of buttons, out to the fire, and, half from embarrassment, held up a hand to shade her face. It was a small hand with an ambiguous red gem on the forefinger. The nails were all bitten to the quick, Miss Sidney observed.

The face shaded by the hand was not unpretty. The brown eyes had a straight-forward, honest glance, the mouth was rather sweet, there was that delicacy of modeling, just bordering on fragility, which gives to the early youth of so many American women a fleeting charm. It was a face which softly banded hair and a low knot would suit; but, with the bad taste of her class, "Cary" had adopted the style of coiffure which become her least. All the front hair was an unkempt tangle of "bang." At the back was a mass of jute switches braided and surmounted with a gilt comb and on top of the erection was perched a straw hat lined with blue and ornamented with a bedraggled cock's tail. The dress, of cheap material, was blue, also, and was frilled and flounced into a caricature of the prevailing fashion. A ruffle of soiled lace surrounded the girl's neck, beneath which over a not overclean muslin tie, hung a small locket of yellow metal—very yellow. Bangles clinked round the slender wrists. Beneath the puffed and ruffled skirt a shabby petticoat of gray cotton peeped out.

Though the weather was chill, the girl wore no wrap. Miss Sidney noted these details in half the time it has taken to describe them, and stirred with a pity which was half indignation, said "My child, how could you think of coming out on such a day as this without a shawl?"

"I haven't any shawl."

"Well, a jacket, then."

"I haven't any jacket, either, that matches this dress," glancing complacently down at the beruffled skirt.

"But you would rather wear a jacket that didn't match your dress than catch a cold, wouldn't you?"

"Y-e-s," admitted the girl, in rather an unwilling tone. "But the only one I've got is purple and it looks horrid with this blue." Noting dissent in her companion's face, she added: "We poor girls can't have a wrap for every dress, like rich ladies do."

"No," said Miss Sydney, gently, "I know it. I never attempt to have a different wrap for each dress I wear. I can't afford it, either."

"Cary" stared. "How queer," she began, then changed it to, "But you and us are quite different, ma'am."

There was something wistful in the face, which touched Myra Sydney. "It will be time wasted, I dare say," she said to herself, "Still I should like, just for once, to argue out the dress question with a girl like this. She is one of a great class, and, poor things, they are so dreadfully foolish and ignorant." She made no immediate reply to her companion, but rose and rang the bell. "I am going to give you a cup of tea," she said. "Hark, how it rains! You can't go yet, and you will be less likely to take cold when you do go, if you start well warmed. Besides I want to have you stay. I should like to have a little talk over this question of dress which is so interesting to all of us women." She smiled brightly as her guest, who, as if dazzled, watched the entrance of the tray, with its bubbling kettle, its plates of thin bread and butter crisp, dainty cakes; watched Myra measure the tea, warm the pot of gay Japanese ware, and when the brew was ready, fill the thin-lipped cups, and drop in sugar and cream.

"How nice!" she said, with a sigh of satisfaction. Her heart opened under the new unwonted kindness and comfort, and Miss Sydney had little difficulty in learning what she wished to know. Cary Thompson was the girl's name. She had lived "at home" till two years ago. Did she like the city? Yes, she said she liked it well enough, but it was not much like home to board. She and another girl that worked at Snow & Asher's had a room together out in Farewell street. They had pretty good times when they were not too full of work, but in the busy season they stayed so late at the store that they didn't want anything when they got home, except to go straight to bed. They got seven dollars a week, more when there was extra work to do.

"Can you lay up anything out of that?" asked Miss Sidney.

"No ma'am, not a cent; at least I don't. There's some girls in the store that do, but they've got sick friends to save for."

"Now," said Miss Sidney, having thus felt her way, "to go back to the jacket question. I can't at all afford to have one for every suit."

"Can't you, ma'am? What do you do then?"

"I buy one jacket which will do with everything I wear."

"But that isn't a suit," said Cary, doubtfully.

"No, but it isn't absolutely necessary that everything should be a suit?"

"The girls in our store think so much of suits"—in a puzzled tone of self-defence.

"I know some people have a fancy for them, and they are very pretty sometimes. But don't you see they must cost a great deal of money, and working people, you and myself, for instance, ought to manage more carefully?"

"Do you work, ma'am?"

"To be sure I do. You look surprised. Ah, you think that because I have a little home of my own and live in a pretty room I must be a fine lady with nothing to do. That's a mistake of yours. I work nearly as many hours a day as you do, and earn the greater part of my income, and I have to consult economy to keep my home and make it pleasant.

"I wish you'd tell me how you do, ma'am."

"I will, though I'm not in the habit of talking quite so freely about my affairs, but I'll tell you, because it may give you an idea of how to manage better for yourself. In the first place I keep to two or three colors. I have a black gown or two, and an olive-brown, and some lighter ones, white or pale yellow. Now with any of these the same bonnet will do. The one I am wearing now is black with a little jet and pale yellow, and it goes perfectly with all my dresses, and so does my cashmere jacket and my parasol and gloves, which are yellow also. Don't you see there is an economy in this, and that if I had a purple dress and a blue one and a brown, I should want a different bonnet for each and different gloves and parasol?"

"Why, yes, it does seem so," said Cary, drawing a long breath. "I'd like to try it myself, but I don't suppose I'd know how—"

"Would you mind if I should tell you what I think?"

"No'm, I'd thank you."

"It seems to me that the chief trouble with shop girls is that they care more for being 'stylish,' than for being either neat or pretty. A young girl can look her best in a simple dress if it is becoming and well put on."

"That's what mother used to say. And Mark, he always liked me best in a white bib apron. To be sure he never saw me in city clothes"—she stopped, blushing.

"Is Mark your brother?" asked Myra. Then she smiled at her stupidity, for such a deep blush as mantled Cary's cheek is seldom evoked by the mention of a brother.

"No'm, he's only a—friend. His folks and mine lived opposite."

"In Gilmanton, and he's a farmer?"

"His father farms, and Mark works for him, but his time is out in the spring, and then he calculates to set up for himself."

"Does he ever come to the city?"

"No, not once I was here, but he speaks some of coming down along toward spring, and that's one reason I like to look as stylish as I can, so's not to be different from the rest when Mark comes."

"I think in his place I should prefer you to be different," said Miss Sidney, decidedly. "Now, Cary, don't be offended; what the girls aim at is to look like the ladies who come to the shop, isn't it?—'stylish' as you would say?"

"Yes, I s'pose it is," admitted Cary.

"Well, then, I must tell you the plain truth, you utterly fail in your attempt. Nobody would mistake a girl, dressed as you are at this moment, for a lady; nobody—but"—disregarding the deep flush on her companion's cheeks—"if I went into a shop, and saw there a young lady as pretty and as delicately made as you are, Cary, with hair as smooth as satin, and a simple gown that fitted exactly, and a collar and cuffs as white as snow, and perhaps a black silk apron or a white one, and with neat shoes and nice stockings, if I saw a girl dressed like that, with nothing costly, nothing that any girl cannot have, but everything fresh and neat and pretty, I should say to myself, there is a shop girl with the true instincts of a lady. And Cary—don't think me impertinent—if Mark came to town and saw a girl like that among the crowd of over-dressed ones at Snow & Asher's, I think the contrast would strike him as it would me—agreeably."

Miss Sidney paused, half frightened at her own daring. Cary looked steadily into the fire without speaking. The rain had ceased. Myra rose and threw back the blind, revealing the moon struggling through thin edges of cloud. Cary followed her to the window. Her cheeks were a deep red, but there was a frank and grateful look in her eyes as she said: "I must be going now, ma'am. You've been ever so good to let me stay. I shan't forget it, and—I guess you're about right."

"I wonder if I said the right thing or have done the least good?" queried Miss Sidney as she watched her guest depart.

It was some weeks before she had occasion to again visit Snow & Asher's, and she had half forgotten the little incident, when one day, entering the shop in quest of something, her attention was attracted by a face which beamed with sudden smiles at the sight of her. It was indeed Cary, but such a different Cary from the draggled vision of the wet evening! She still wore the blue dress but the flounces had been ripped off and the front was hidden with a black silk apron. The tangle of hair was smothed like ordinary waves, a white collar with a knot of blue ribbon was around her throat; one of the objectionable rings had disappeared, and so had the yellow locket. So changed and so much prettier was the little maiden that Miss Sidney scarcely knew her, till blush and smile pointed her out.

She waited on her customer with assiduity, and under cover of a box of ruffles they exchanged confidences. Did Miss Sidney think she looked better? She was so glad. The girls had laughed at her at first, but not so much now, and her room-mate, Ellen Morris had gotten herself an apron like hers. Miss Sidney left the shop with pleased amusement in her heart. She meant to go often, to keep a little hold on Cary, but circumstances took her off to Florida, soon afterwards, and it was late in April before she returned.

"That girl from Snow & Asher's was here to see you about a week ago, ma'am," said Esther, the evening after her arrival. "I told her you were expected Tuesday, and she said she would come again to-day, for she wanted to see you particular, and she was going away. There she is now."

Cary indeed it was, with a steady, manly-looking young fellow by her side.

"It is Mark, Miss Sidney," she said, by way of introduction. Later, when Mark had walked over to the window to see the view, she explained further in a rapid undertone, "He came down two months ago, while you were away, ma'am. I came out to tell you, but you was gone, and—day after to-morrow I'm going back with him to Gilmanton. I told him he must bring me out to-night, for I couldn't leave without saying good-by to you."

"You are going to be married?"

"Yes"—with a happy look—"to-morrow morning. And oh, Miss Sidney, what do you think Mark says? He says if he'd found me looking like the rest of the girls in the store, with false hair and jewelry and that, he'd never in the world have asked me at all. And I did look just like that, you know. It was what you said that rainy night that made me change, and except for that nothing would have happened that has, and I shouldn't be the girl I am"—

"Bread on the waters," thought Myra, as a little later she watched the lovers walk down the street. "Such a little crumb, and such wide waters, yet it has come back! How impossible it seems, or would seem, if one did not have to believe what we call chances and accidents are God's opportunities, by which he allows us to lend a helping hand in His work, not quite understanding what we do, but knowing that guided by Him the smallest things end sometimes in great results.—Boston Congregationalist.

Does a girl give a kiss
For the sake of the kiss,
Or kiss for the bliss she bestows?
Does a man take a smile
For the sake of the smile,
Or smile to get rid of his woes?

HORSFORD BUCKWHEATS.—Take one and one-half pints buckwheat flour, one handful Indian meal, one teaspoonful salt and one measure each of the acid and soda (or two heaping teaspoonfuls acid and one moderately heaping teaspoonful soda) of Horsford's Bread Preparation; mix thoroughly while dry. Then add two tablespoonfuls molasses and cold water enough to make a thin batter. Do not add molasses and water until ready to cook.

When a woman smiles from ear to ear it's real mean to say her mouth goes back on her.

"Yes," said the father, "I like to have my girl have a beau on the score of economy. If she didn't some of the family would occupy the parlor and burn the gas."

Mr. David T. Winter has just obtained a patent on the device for preventing breaking the arm, to be attached to splitting machines, as noticed some time ago in the PRESS, and he proposes to form a company to manufacture and apply these attachments. He has assigned his patent in trust to Mr. A. A. Messer, the well known leather manufacturer, to hold for the benefit of the Association, and the company will organize in the course of a few days. Many persons in town have already subscribed for shares, of which eleven hundred will be issued, at $5 each, the company to receive a portion of the cash paid in and the balance to go to Mr. Winter in compensation for his patent. Shares can be obtained by applying to Mr. Winter or to Mr. F. G. Preston, who have the blank applications. We have been informed that several orders are now waiting to be filled as soon as the company is organized. The expense of the attachment is fifty dollars, and with the large number of splitting machines now in use (24,000 in this country,) and that number rapidly increasing, the results of the manufacture must be very considerable. Probably the company will pay ten per cent, or more, the first year, as there is no machinery of any kind to be purchased, the attachments being made to order for the company and applied by the agent of the Association, who will receive a moderate compensation. Mr. Winter's attachment is a very simple device, cannot break nor get out of order, and does not interfere in any way with the splitter to which it is applied. It has some important advantages which will be readily seen by a practical carrier, aside from its utility as a limb and almost, we may say, a life preserver. Those who know Mr. Winter can well imagine, but none but those who have actually witnessed the operation of the attachment applied to the machine, can form an adequate conception of its marvelous utility and convenience.

The brilliant hues that precede the sun's rising and follow its setting seem to be a regular part of the daily programme, and with the planets furnish a good excuse for sky-gazing. And, by the way, those planets will make a very interesting study during the present month. This is the period of Jupiter's greatest brightness, and he is also now longest visible to us, rising when the sun sets and setting when the sun rises. It is morning star till Jan. 19, and afterwards evening star till August 7. Venus is evening star through January and can be seen for two hours after sunset. Her increase in size and brilliancy can easily be noted by any careful observer during the winter months. During the whole of January both Jupiter and Venus are above the horizon together, and at the end of the month will be close together in the western sky. Venus sets at 3 30 p. m., Jan. 1, and on the 31st at eight p. m. Saturn is also an evening star during the month, remaining up till 4 p. m. during the greater portion of January.

The foreign exhibitors at the Boston fair are fairly boiling over about the mismanagement and extortion they have been subject to. They say that there was no head to the affair, and that the officials countermanded each other's orders recklessly; one man declares that he was not allowed to unpack his own goods, but was charged by the officials five times as much for this service as it cost to make the goods; another one had to pay 5 per cent commission of his sales to the management; another was assigned a dark section and then was charged $140 for the electric lights put in for his benefit, etc., etc. The exhibitors have all lost money and feel as if they had indeed been to Jericho and fallen among thieves.—Springfield Republican.

The Essex Agricultural Society will hold a Farmers' Institute at City Hall, Newburyport, on Wednesday, Jan. 16, at 9.30 a. m. Subject for discussion in forenoon: "Drainage of Lands," opened by T. C. Thurlow, Esq., of West Newbury. Afternoon, "The prospects of farmers in New England for the next ten years," by Hon. Warren Brown, of Hampton Falls, N. H.

Ella Wheeler writes: "She touches my cheek and I quiver—I tremble with exquisite pains; She sighs—like an overcharged river, my blood rushes on through my veins; She smiles—and in mad tiger fashion, as a she-tiger fondles her own, I clasp her with fierceness and passion, And kiss her with shudder and groan." My conscience!

The Metropolitan hotel at New York has reduced from $3.50 to $3 per day on the ground that the prices of commodities are low and that its patronage, largely merchants and their wives, expect a reduction. The movement gives other hotel proprietors some uneasiness.

Simpson says that when he asked the girl who is now his wife to marry him she said: "I don't mind," and she never has minded.

SELLING

BOOTS AND SHOES

— AT —

MANUFACTURER'S PRICES.

A DECIDED SUCCESS.

A great many firms in Lynn are puzzled at the large attendance and great success of our special sales, simply because these same firms have failed in their own efforts to attract attention and accomplish the same results. The reasons are plain, for we assert that our establishments can show many advantages over others. We give the following, which are convincing:

First.

Enormous stock. The immense stock of our wholesale house, together with our two retail stores, 84 Market street and 23 Market Square, make a stock to draw from five times larger than all the other shoe stores in Lynn combined.

Second.

Low Rents. While our competitors are handicapped by having to pay exorbitant rents, we with our three stores, have to pay rent only on one—a fact, the significance of which as bearing upon our ability to sell for less than others, will be apparent to all.

Third

Wholesale. Our wholesale trade, which now extends to every city and town of any importance in New England, obliges us to carry an immense stock and gives us an advantage in buying entirely beyond the reach of our competitors. For where they buy of the jobbers in small lots, we buy direct of the manufacturers, and that we can buy as low as the large Boston jobbers is abundantly attested by the fact that we are able to meet and compete with them on their own grounds and build up a wholesale trade which is constantly increasing.

Fourth.

One Price. Marked in plain figures on every pair of boots and shoes, guarantees low prices.—Equal treatment to all classes and shows at a glance the quality of the goods.

Fifth.

Truthful Representations. No misrepresentations are tolerated. Goods are sold for just what they are. Some stores adopt the "bait" plan, advertising great slaughter, immense bargains, etc. Call in half an hour after such stores open and in nearly every instance the salesman has the old story to tell you: "All gone;" "haven't your size;" "too late;" "very sorry, but we have had such a rush they are all out.—Can't we show you something else?" We have no such nonsense. It won't do.

Sixth.

Quick Sales and Small Profits. Quick sales are the life of a successful business. Small profits are sufficient when the business is done on live business principles. You save one profit by buying of the wholesaler.

Seventh.

Exchanging Goods or Refunding Money. When any dissatisfaction occurs because the selection does not please in every particular, the goods, if returned uninjured in a reasonable time, can be exchanged; and it matters not of whom it was selected, any salesman at leisure will pay careful attention to the customer. In case nothing is found to please, the cash will be cheerfully refunded.

Eighth.

Prompt Cash Payments. We are so conscious of the overwhelming advantages we possess both in buying and selling we have no hesitation in asserting that no prudent purchaser can afford to buy anything anywhere else until they have looked through our stock and got our prices. Ready money in our hands enables us to buy goods in large quantities at figures that the average retailer knows nothing about. To-day we stand simply as the connecting link between the manufacturer and consumer.

We have an immense surplus stock which we are going to close out during this sale. In order to accomplish this purpose we know at the outset that it will be necessary to offer sufficient inducements which we are determined to do. Consequently, in this instance as well as all others, we appeal directly to the interests of every purchaser, regarding that as decidedly more potent than volumes of positive assertions.

ADVERTISERS WON'T PATRONIZE DEMOCRATIC PAPERS.—Howard, the veteran correspondent of the Sunday Herald, whose New York letters to that paper are worth what it costs every Sunday, devotes a recent communication to the leading newspapers of the metropolis, and in it says that while the Republican Tribune and Times, and the independent Sun and Herald have made their owners and editors immensely rich, no Democratic paper in New York has ever been a pecuniary success. The World and other Democratic sheets have had considerable circulation and much influence, but have never made any money, and most of them have sunk it by the million. This, in a city which always has been and is a Democratic stronghold, is a remarkable fact. Mr. Howard explains it by saying that advertisers, to whom publishers must look for the greater part of their income, will not patronize Democratic papers. Many of these advertisers are Democrats, but they advertise to get patronage, and this, it seems, they do not think is possible to secure, from Democratic readers. A very similar state of things exists in all other large eastern cities While the Herald, Journal, Transcript and Advertiser, of Boston, have been making money faster than their owners could spend it, the Globe has sunk nearly a million in trying to gain a foothold, and even the old respectable and reliable Post has gathered its income more from its readers than its advertisers. In Worcester the Spy has grown rich, while its Democratic rivals have followed in quick succession to bankruptcy; and in Providence, Portland and Hartford, advertisers have left Democratic Journals to starve, while they have made Republican publishers rich, simply because they put their money where it will do them the most good. A circulation of ten or twenty thousand among people who have no money to spend or who have no use for the articles in which advertisers deal, is of no account to the man who has goods to sell. In other words: the character of a paper is of vastly more consequence to its advertising patrons than its circulation; though a paper to give value received must have both character and circulation.

Zelda Seguin, while in Omaha, Sept. 29, with the Abbott opera company, had a most wonderful experience. She dreamed that she was in a railroad car near Utica, N. Y. She knew it was in that locality, having passed over it so often. As the train flew along, she thought she saw the different points in the scenery, commenting upon them from time to time to a young lady who sat in the same seat with her. The young lady was a close friend, and in the dream Mrs. Seguin thought it perfectly natural that they should be traveling together. She heard somebody say "Diefendort Hill." That part of the dream she remembers with special distinctness. Then she saw her girl companion's face turn to that very peculiar shade of white which terror alone can produce, saw the same ghastly rigidity of muscle spread over the faces of the other passengers, and simultaneously felt a shock which instantly expanded into a grating, grinding, horrible jar that seemed to splinter the very rocks beneath the earth. Then all was suddenly blotted out in one vast engulfment of darkness. Out of this Mrs. Seguin seemed to rise in this mysterious way in which we are all extricated from dilemmas in dreams, until she could look down upon the wreck from the air above it. She saw the two engines locked in each other's embrace, twisted, belching, groaning as though in mortal agony; saw, also, the cars which were thrown from the track, damaged and crippled like great animals, and withal saw in one of them the friend who had sat beside her but a moment before. She was now lying motionless in that dreadful mass of debris, her face deathlike, and her form motionless. There the dream stopped. She told it the next morning, as it was still fresh in her mind on waking up, but did not, of course, think that it had any significance. What was her surprise within three days to read of the accident that occurred on the first of October on the West Shore Road; and later to learn that the same young friend who had sat beside her in the dream had really been aboard the wrecked train and had been injured.

Once before Zelda Seguin had a remarkable dream in regard to a public event which soon after happened. Three nights before Jim Fisk was shot she dreamed she was walking up Broadway, and the entire street was draped in mourning. The shutters of every store were closed, and in white letters on every one was the name of "Jim Fisk." She turned into another street, and it was the same. Everywhere there was mourning and the name of Jim Fisk in white letters. This dream she told next morning to her friends and on the third day thereafter was shocked beyond expression to learn that Fisk had been shot. Yet she had never seen him.—Omaha Bee.

DRAMATIC AND MUSICAL.

At the Boston Theatre, "Virginius" has proved so potent an attraction that it will be continued through the second week of Mr. McCullough's engagement. This actor's noble personation of the Roman father has never been seen to better advantage, and the play has not been more excellently presented here in many years—if at all—not only as regards the leading role, but also in respect to the support, which is finely rendered by Miss Viola Allen, Mr. Joseph Haworth, Mr. M. Price and other members of the large and well directed company. The audiences have thus far been large and enthusiastic, and there has not been a performance at which Mr. McCullough has not received at least a half-dozen calls before the curtain.

At the Globe Theatre, Mr. John Stetson's Fifth Avenue company present for the first time in Boston, a new comedy entitled "The Glass of Fashion," which has been received with great favor in New York, Philadelphia and Chicago. The cast will be as follows: Col. Trevanion, Mr. Herbert Kelcey; Prince Borowske, Mr. Lewis Morrison; John Macadam, Mr. Frank Mordaunt; Hon. Tom Stanhope, Mr. Fred Ross; Mr. Prior Jenkyn, Mr. John E. Ince; Mrs. Trevanion, Miss Sara Jewett; Lady Coombe, Macadam's wife, Miss Octavia Allen; Peg O'Reilly, Mrs. Trevanion's sister, Miss Stella Boniface. The comedy is mounted with entirely new scenery, painted expressly for the production.

At the Bijou Theatre "The Beggar Student" is in the sixth week of a very successful run which will continue until other engagements compel its withdrawal.

This week at the Park Theatre N. C. Goodwin and company perform for the first time on any stage "Those Bells," with Mrs. N. C. Goodwin, Emie and Jennie Weathersbee in the cast. Hobbies will also be produced, during which Mr. Goodwin will give imitations of celebrated actors.

Thatcher, Primrose & West's minstrels will play a week in the Boston Theatre, beginning on Jan. 28.

Miss Margaret Mather, who has concluded a very successful engagement in Brooklyn, will appear this week in Providence. She will play for three weeks at the Boston Theatre, opening on Feb. 4 in "Romeo and Juliet."

"The Silver King" will probably be produced at the Boston Theatre March 18. Mr. Getz is already at work on new scenery for the play.

Mr. Harry Brown, the original Prince Lorenzo in the "Mascot," and Miss Lillie West will soon appear at the Bijou Theatre.

The rehearsals of Mr. Boyeson's play, "The Alpine Rose, are proceeding actively at the Madison Square Theatre, and the production will take place in ten days.

The Sunday Herald has the following complimentary notice of James H. Rock, the well known Lynn manager:

A Worcester newspaper man states that a Mr. Wilkinson of that borough is the only gentleman in New England, outside of Boston and Providence, who is a legitimate amusement manager—one who devotes all his time to the securing and playing of attractions, etc. This is a rash statement, to say the least. There are several in this vicinity, among whom is James F. Rock. He is about as active and energetic in the amusement business as any one outside of the metropolitan managers. Besides controlling Music Hall, in Lynn, he has had the Bijou opera company through New England and New York state this season, has managed the Ideal opera company at various "stands" and run the best entertainment course the city of Worcester ever had, judging by the comments of various papers there. He has also been interested in numerous other dramatic and musical ventures, and by another season, his field may be considerably extended.

The amusement field in Salem is pretty well covered this week, and our readers will have an abundant opportunity for choice. This evening N. W. Andrews will present Palmer & Daly's company in Vacation, which is said to be the most laughable play on the road. Friday evening the Howard Star Specialty company play a return engagement under the management of Moulton & Johnson; and Saturday matinee and evening Barlow Wilson & Co's best and only minstrels.

There was a good attendance from this town Thursday and Friday evenings to see Pat Rooney and Gus Williams. The houses both evenings would have been slim without their patronage.

The Peabody Press.

JOHN P FERNALD, ALBERT VITTUM,
Editors and Publishers.

THE CAMBRIDGE Press does not propose to be bluffed on the question of putting salt on the horse railroad tracks. Last year an attempt was made to prevent the use of salt by the companies in Cambridge, an effort which was earnestly resisted by the Press. This year it comes to the front again and this paper in its last issue shows very conclusively that the claimed injury to horses by the use of salt is the veriest nonsense, that the testimony before the Legislative committee is all in this direction, and as the matter is of some interest wherever there is a line of horse railroad, we quote from the closing paragraph of its editorial: The truth is, that while a little salt is sometimes sprinkled on the rails, (and less on the space between them), there is not enough to do the slightest harm to man or beast. This fact has been abundantly demonstrated before at least two committees of different legislatures, and it can be demonstrated again. But the cry of Salt! Salt!! Salt!!! is too good a one to be abandoned, and so it is kept up by certain persons for effect on the public mind. There is nothing in it whatever. The owners and managers of at least 6,000 or 8,000 horses in Boston and vicinity are ready to come forward any day, and testify that no horse was ever injured by salt; and as to human beings it has never yet been proved that one solitary individual was ever made ill by it. These are facts, and it is about time that they were widely known and properly appreciated. This deceptive clamor about salt has lasted long enough, and we should like to see the legislature take the matter up and settle it. We have no fear of the result, believing as we do that salt saves and does not destroy.

WE PRESENT to our readers this week a reasonably full abstract of the remarks of Hon. John B. Finch, at the temperance meeting Sunday evening. We hope the address will be read and pondered upon. There are many points which he made in reference to the government and the educational qualification of voters, which are pertinent on any occasion and at any time. His application of them was, of course, an apt one to his subject.

But aside from the temperance issue, it is well that all our citizens should realize that money spent in education is the cheapest dollar they ever paid. It is not only a fact that under our public school system the youth of this country are educated at less expense than under any other, but they are better educated. The people should therefore look with aversion upon any attempt to reduce the amounts raised for this purpose, or to turn the trend of our school system into other channels. For in the education of the youth is the hope of our country. An educated voter can be relied upon, in most cases, to vote for measures and men which will subserve the best public weal; the ignorant voter can be easily bribed—and his vote is often cast from policy. The plea of Mr. Finch, again, for the choice of men of the highest moral and intellectual attainments—in opposition to ignorance—on the ground that men who are swerved by passion, ignorance, or evil will make those subject to them suffer, is worthy of thought and consideration. The danger to our republic is that such men shall obtain power—and be allowed to retain it. Education, then, in its highest sense, is the strong support of our government. Not only the education of text books, but that which comes from the best and purest moral culture—this it is which will make our government strong—and its laws wise and easily enforced. There is also truth in the application of this principle by Mr. Finch to the subject of temperance. The man who becomes the slave of this appetite, whose ignorance and passion get the better of him—this man not only cannot govern himself but is not fit to govern others. It is such men over whom political demagogues have their greatest power. The man whose conscience is not seared by the influences which come in the wake of frequent indulgence of the wine cup, is his own master. He cannot be bribed—or his vote bought by the highest bidder. To make our voters such men, should be the aim of education, and it should receive the support of all who love the principles of the government under which they live.

WE THINK the action of the Board of Selectmen, in renting the new town hall to the Temperance committee on Sunday evenings, for twelve dollars, while the price to any one else is forty dollars, is open to just criticism. Not that we think the hall should not be let to such an organization for the purposes of moral instruction or charity, at a less rate than is paid by a private individual who hires the hall for his own emolument. But why should there be such discrimination in favor of these temperance lectures? A few weeks since our Grand Army Post were to give a public installation of their officers, supplemented by an entertainment. They wanted the public to attend. They did not propose to charge a price of admission, not even to take up a collection. They would bear the entire burden of the expense. This entertainment, as is well known, was held in the Peabody Institute. Why? Because they could not afford the price of our large hall. If they could have hired it for the same price the temperance people are paying, they would have done so willingly. It is true the object of the entertainment was not charity, possibly not moral instruction. But the object of the Grand Army of the Republic is charity, and by this meeting it was the purpose of the Post to bring home to our people the needs of the organization, and acquaint them somewhat with its inner workings. It was a worthy object, and should have been entitled to the same favor as the temperance people. The same is true of any charitable or social organization in town.

Again, if the town can afford to let the hall for $12 00 and not suffer loss, don't it strike our readers that $40.00 is a little steep for other occasions? Mr. Haskell said the temperance entertainments paid. Let him pay $40.00 for the hall, and trust to the collection to re-imburse him, and we trow he will be more charitable to those who have attempted to amuse the people by different entertainments since our hall was opened. The hall is the property of the people; their money paid for it. And if by reason of an extravagant profit set upon the hall, they are unable to see it open for their entertainment because no manager will take the risk of the expense among our limited population—if such, we say, is the case, the people of this town will have something to say in the matter, and in a way that their rights will be respected. It is just that a profit should be realized for the wear and tear of the hall; it is just that those who hire the hall with the expectation of realizing money out of it should pay this profit—not the charitable and other organizations of the town. But the difference is very great between $12 and $40. Either one is too cheap or the other too dear.

THE item in the PRESS last week in relation to Mr. Vaughn's moving his business out of town because of trouble with the water board has caused much comment. The Salem News immediately went into a discussion of Mr. Vaughn's business ability, past, present and future, probably because his printing is done at the "other office." But strange as this may seem this did not alter the facts in the case, viz.: Had the water board a right to shut off the water from Mr. Vaughn's factory? We believe they had not, because the clerk receipted Mr. Vaughn's bill, and by so doing he acknowledged the claims of the board against Mr. Vaughn settled. The only course for the board to pursue is to let the water on and not involve the town in an expensive law suit which could have only one result.

Courtis & Breare, book-binders, over the Transcript office, are now busily engaged upon the annual seed catalogue for 1884 of James J. H. Gregory of Marblehead, whose immense business calls for an annual issue of one hundred and twenty-five thousand books. The scene at the bindery is one of intense activity, the catalogues being turned out at the rate of five thousand a day. The entire catalogue is printed in excellent style and with great expedition at the office of the Marblehead Messenger.—Lynn Transcript.

The League of Essex County Wheelmen has a membership of 148, two of whom belong outside the county limits. Lawrence has 40, Lynn 27, Salem 25, Beverly 14, Marblehead 9, North Andover 6, Haverhill 5, Andover, Gloucester and Peabody 3 each; Amesbury, Georgetown, Merrimac, Ipswich and South Groveland 2 each; Methuen 1.

The evening school at the Wallis district is now fully running, the pupils ages ranging from 12 to 40 years or thereabouts. During the first sessions the hoodlums made much trouble by spitting tobacco juice on the floor and into the desks, but the offenders have been weeded out and those remaining study hard and try to learn.

The sloop Lizzie, Capt Welch, arrived Friday forenoon with a load of lumber for J. & J. V. Hanson of Danvers. The cargo was discharged at Preston's wharf, Beverly, and carted to Danvers, as it was impossible to get up the river on account of the ice. Another vessel with iron for the rolling mill has been waiting by Beverly bridge for two weeks to get up.

About this time of the year the average young man or woman skates into a hole in the pond or river and either gets drowned or receives a very cold bath which results in a fever. It is also the time when the double-runner glides with great velocity down hill and collides with a big tree and causes the death of a few boys and girls. Fun is fun, even if there is homicide in it.

The Lynn Transcript has entered upon its nineteenth volume with every prospect of continued success. The announcement has been made (which will be very gratifying to the readers of that excellent paper) that Mr. Abel G. Courtis, one of its founders, and formerly editor of that paper, will, shortly connect himself with the Transcript as associate editor.

At the meeting of the West Peabody Farmers' Club, last Friday evening, there was an essay by Master Walter Southwick on Poultry; a reading by Miss Eva Farwell, "Wild Flowers," by Miss Ingraham upon Domestic duties, and selections by the Chorus Club. It was a very interesting and enjoyable meeting. At the next meeting "Small Fruits" will be discussed by J. Shed Needham and D. A. Small.

The Nashville Students appeared in the Peabody Institute last Friday evening, to not a large audience. It is to be regretted that more of our people could not have heard them. Those who were there, however, manifested their approbation by frequent and enthusiastic applause. It was in all respects a first class entertainment, and should they ever return here we think the Institute will be crowded.

Looking over the files of the PRESS it was noticed that the larger part of the criminal business for the year was caused by old offenders. A glance back shows that by far the greatest proportion of the drunks who are fined, with the exception of out-of-town parties, are "old timers" and have appeared before the court so often that it becomes second nature to them. But still there was a goodly number of first offences.

Peabody Camp at Marblehead Neck has changed its name. Messrs. Merritt, Hathaway and Isburg, the owners, have made a partition of the property and have decided that henceforth the village be named Hathaway's Point. The coming spring extensive improvements will probably be made, new roads will be cut and several neat cottages will be erected. Five new buildings are already in course of construction.

A bankruptcy convention meets in Washington to-day, to take into consideration the various bills and amendments, which have been presented to Congress. The result of their deliberations will be presented to a sub-committee from the judiciary committee of the House. About 200 delegates will be in attendance, among whom we notice the name of Thomas E. Proctor of this town, representing the Merchants Club of Boston.

The total number of money orders issued at the Peabody Post office, for the year 1883, was 919 domestic, and 86 foreign, amounting with fees to $12,777.32. The number of orders paid was 263, amounting to $4886.46. From Sept. 1st to Dec. 31st there were issued 233 postal notes, amounting with fees to $569.37; there was paid 52 postal notes amounting to $143 78. The total number of letters and packages registered for the year was 1099.

It ought to be somebody's business to see that the crowd standing in the doorway of the new Town Hall, last Sunday evening, be prevented from disturbing people in the rear seats of the hall. Every seat was taken—and these people were compelled to stand. But they should be quiet—or not be allowed to remain in the hall. People who sat in the rear seats were unable to hear on account of the loud talking of those standing in the entrance and the hall way. This disturbance was kept up nearly the entire evening.

Sunday night an attempt was made to break into the ice chest at J. B. Thomas' slaughter house. Three windows between which the hot and cold air circulates, were broken out. Suspicion rested on a party named Florence Crowley, who was seen loafing around the place by neighbors. This morning in the police court, Crowley was arraigned on the charge of breaking glass, and several witnesses testified to seeing him about the place, and also to seeing blood on his hands. He was fined $15 and costs.

The assembly and prize dance of the Morocco Dressers of this town, held at Upton's Hall last Monday night, was a success in every respect. There was a large attendance. The Salem Band Orchestra furnished the music. During the evening John Farrell entertained the company with vocal music. Great interest centered in the prize dance, which took place after the intermission. Miss Maggie Kerwin won the album and Phillip Carbray the five dollar gold piece. Both are of Peabody. Shortly after one the party broke up.

The weather has been comfortably cold out at Detroit, Minn., the home of Mr. Geo. W. Grant, who is on a visit here. The Record, printed in that town, of Jan. 5th, says "Spirit thermometers indicated 55 degrees below zero yesterday morning, but that is nothing. Up here in Minnesota the atmosphere is so very clear and dry that one does not feel the cold. Just like a spring morning, and were it not for the fact that we hear it remarked seventeen hundred times a day that 'it is pretty cold,' one would never imagine such a thing. This is a great country, up here in the banana belt."

The Unity Club held its regular meeting last Monday evening at the parsonage with about 80 members present. After the report of the secretary, the question of new drapery for the stage in the chapel wss brought before the meeting and a committee chosen. A report of the Leap year party committee was read showing a net of about $25 in the treasurer's hands. It was voted to give a concert in a short time to take the place of an operetta which had been talked of. An able essay upon Daniel Webster was read by Mr. Arthur Littlefield, based upon a review of a work recently published by Harvey. An entertainment was next in order and was highly appreciated. The next meeting will be held with Mrs. J. P. Fernald.

Everybody has read of a cyclone. But to see one is a novelty in this region. Boynton, the manager at Wilmot's, announces one in the clothing trade, and we recommend to our readers a visit to his store, and see its effects.

FURNITURE. The next time you visit Boston, do not fail to spend a few hours at Paine's Ware rooms and Manufactory, on Canal Street, opposite the Boston and Maine Depot. They do an immense business in all kinds of Furniture, Draperies, Curtains and Lambrequins. Doing a strict Cash business, they take no risk, and sell their goods at prices much under the market. They own the largest building for Furniture Manufacturing in the city, and employ first-class men in all the departments. The Salerooms are 150 ft. by 50 ft.; lighted by electricity all day, and connected by steam elevators. The manufacturing department is in the same building, so that customers can see just how they make and finish their work. Numerous visitors are coming and going all the time.

HOME HAPPENINGS.

Tuesday, January 8 was observed as a day of prayer for the temperance cause, at the W. C. T. U. room, in accordance with the call from the National Union. There were present members of unions from Salem, Danversport and Newton. In the absence of the President, Miss Floyd opened the meeting by reading of scripture from Isaiah 51, and prayer. She also read an article on the late decennial anniversary of the women's crusade in Ohio, showing the astonishing results that have grown out of that movement. Appropriate passages of scripture were repeated, followed by prayer from the secretary. The record of the meeting held last year, during the week of prayer, was read, and the Band of Hope, which was formed last September, was spoken of as an outgrowth of that meeting. Mrs. Gardner closed with prayer. After an enjoyable social lunch, the afternoon meeting opened with increased attendance. Mrs. Snow, from Newton, gave a bible reading from Esther, 5:6—"What is thy petition? it shall be granted thee." The one petition of the true church—the real bride of Christ—should be that this lost world may be saved. She is waiting and watching with him through the long night of this world's agony. She is waiting for the destruction of the liquor traffic. Her petition is being fulfilled. Mrs. Gardner followed as leader, calling for prayer, which was responded to by Mrs. Valentine of Salem and Mrs. Oakes, of Danversport. Rev. Mr. Sperry then came in and expressed his hearty sympathy with the cause, and the encouragement to be drawn from the hopeful signs of the times. Public sentiment, he felt, was wakening in the right direction. He followed his remarks with prayer. As the darkness of night approached, it was necessary to bring to a close this very interesting season, which was but one link in the long chain of prayer that ascended to Heaven from all parts of our country.

Take courage, temperance workers
You shall not suffer wreck,
While up to God the people's prayers
Are rising from your deck.

Mr. Charles Brooks, one of our veteran tanners and curriers, died at his residence on English street last Monday night. Mr. Brooks has been in feeble health for the past ten years; at times he has rallied and been seen on our streets, always in the best of spirits and much less despondent than his friends and family. Mr. Brooks was born in Eliott, Me., where he learned the trade of tanner and currier with John Hill, of that place He came to this town in the summer of 1842. He had previously worked at his trade a short time in Salem, returning to New Hampshire, when he came back to this town, since which time he has been a resident here. He worked some three or four years with Stephen Fernald and Hiram Plumer, (Fernald & Plumer) and on the dissolution of that firm, with Mr. Plumer on Grove street. Here he remained until about 1856 when he went into business with A. A. Messer, forming the firm of Brooks & Messer. They built the shop now occupied by Mr. Messer in 1859. Mr. Brooks retired from the firm in 1869, since which time he has been engaged in no active business. Mr. Brooks has been a great sufferer during his long illness, but he has been patient through it all, always genial in his disposition, and happy in his intercourse with his family and friends. By his prudence and economy he had accumulated a sufficient competence to support him during his illness, as well as his family after his death. He was an attendant of the Universalist church and was a Democrat in politics. He leaves a widow, a son, Charles H., and daughter, Mrs. Geo. A. Whitney. His funeral will take place from his late residence to-morrow (Thursday) afternoon at 2:15. His age was 72 years, 5 mos, 9 days.

A private letter received from Mr. John M. Tobey in California, speaks of his success. It is difficult to realize that while we are experiencing the cold of a northern winter, he is in the midst of blooming flowers and luxuriant vegetation, with June weather.

Next Thursday evening at the town hall, their will be a grand temperance meeting to be addressed by members of the Lynn Reform Club. Dr. Norman, the colored preacher, will be present. Good singing and speaking will be in order. The public are invited.

The demand for flowers is a growing one, and is constantly increasing. A few years ago the sales were confined principally to Boston, but now the demand is everywhere. Mr. J. M. Ward at his Endicott street green houses has a supply that is not excelled in the cities.

The concert of war songs to be given in the new hall, Thursday evening of next week, promises to be an unusually pleasant occasion. A general public interest has been awakened. Many who did not go to the last concert of war songs are anxious to attend this, while the excellent talent which will take part irresistibly attracts all lovers of good music. The Lotus club has made a specialty of war songs, and in these are probably unexcelled. Mr. Flockton is recognized as almost if not the best drummer in this section of the country, and his stirring rendering of the old army calls never fails to awaken great enthusiasm. Miss Kileski, who is to sing, comes as a comparative stranger, but some of our people who have heard her are warm in their commendation of her voice and style. The Columbian Brass Quartette is an organization which is reported as fully qualified to do its part in company with the rest of the program, so that as a vivid reminder of old times, as a musical entertainment and as a pleasant gathering of our people, it looks as though Messrs. Randall and Hildreth will find that their labors will be successful. Tickets are already on sale at Spaulding's.

Geo. Parsons Gilman's lecture on Paris, which was announced for last evening, was not delivered, through some misunderstanding, and a lecture on Scotland and Old England was given in its place. In opening, Mr. Gilman took his audience up the Clyde into Glasgow. From that famous city he visited the homes of Burns and Scott, and views descriptive of Tam O'Shanter's Ride, and the Lady of the Lake were thrown upon the screen. The lecturer then passed over the route so familiar to tourists in Scotland and England, presenting views intimately connected with history. Old castles were visited, as were also several of the more important Scottish ruins. The latter part of the lecture was devoted to England, old and new, and many excellent illustrations of the city's monuments and public buildings were produced. Many of the views were already well known to the audience, and at least a part of them were disappointed in the change of subject. On the whole, the lecture was entertaining and instructive.

Last week we gave, at the request of Mr. Vaughn, his reasons for moving his business out of town, viz., his trouble with the water board. This week we as freely give the statement of Mr. Ward, the Clerk of the board. Mr. Vaughn was summoned, and as he did not pay the summons, the water was shut off on the third day of January, after his water bill had run out on the first of the month. The case was brought before the Water Board and the Clerk was instructed to carry out the rules to the letter. Mr. Vaughn was notified by the Clerk that the water would be shut off unless he complied with the rules. In regard to the statement that the 25 cents had been thrown off in several cases, the clerk says that the cases referred to were new takers, who knew nothing about the rule in regard to a summons, and as they had not received their bills, which were sent through the post office and returned after the fifteen days, the fine was thrown off.

The leap year reception of the ladies of the Unity Club in Upton's Hall last Wednesday evening, was a success socially and financially. Nearly one hundred and seventy-five tickets were sold—the ladies managing all the details inviting the gentlemen, escorting them to the floor and supper room, and in every way carrying out the idea of a leap year party. There were many guests from out of town, including Miss Eva Denning and J. F. Brown, 2d, of Marblehead, Mr. and Mrs. A. B. Cross of Salem, Mrs. Dresser of Boston, and many others. The Salem Cadet Band furnished the music, and a supper of cake, ice cream and coffee was served about ten o'clock. The proceeds of the party, about thirty dollars, will be devoted to the Organ fund. Miss L. Maria Winchester officiated as floor manager, and it is not too much to say that to her and her efficient corps of aids, much of the success of the party is due.

Parts of injectors, some new and some second hand, have been missed by Mr. Geo. H. Little at his factory for some time. Wanting certain parts of the injector his foreman went to the Naumkeag foundry in Salem, to order some recently, when he discovered some of the missing parts among a lot of junk, which had been sold the foundry by Mr. Daniel Rahilly of this town. Mr. R. says he bought the junk in good faith of a responsible party, and that he keeps a record of all material bought, and it is not difficult for Mr. Little to obtain all the information he desires by consulting him.

Chas. H. Hastings, the genial young manager of the Lynn Item, came over to Peabody last Monday evening, and missing the ten o'clock horse car, made good time walking home. One hour and thirty five minutes—Yet Chas. is not a professional pedestrian.

Will be received next week.

CLOAKS GOING.

Cloaks are going, and we are certainly not surprised, for the simple reason that Cloaks never were reduced as much the last of January as ours are now.

Ladies who have had the kindness to honor us with their presence at our ANNUAL REMNANT SALE, have pronounced them the very greatest of bargains. We shall continue this great Remnant Sale until all are closed out, and it will take a very short time to do so.

Remember, Annual Linen Housekeeping Goods Sale commences THURSDAY, Jan. 3d, with almost an entire New Stock.

GREAT SEMI-ANNUAL

MARK-DOWN SALE

— OF —

HEAVY

WINTER OVERCOATS.

ULSTERS, SUITS AND PANTALOONS

— FOR —

Men's Boys' and Children's wear,

— AND —

Gents' Winter Furnishings.

According to our usual custom on WEDNESDAY, JAN. 2nd, we shall inaugurate our great semi-annual Mark Down Sale of Men's, Youth's, Boy's, and Children's Heavy Winter Clothing and Men's Underwear.

Our unparalleled success and the large increase in our sales for 1883, has proved beyond a doubt that we give better clothing for the money, than any other dealer in Essex County, and the people know it. Our rule has always been to give every buyer full value.

We shall make our price so low on fine goods that it will be impossible for any dealers in Essex County to compete with us.

We give below a list of a few special bargains.

$8.00 and 10.00.

Men's and Young Men's heavy All Wool Plain and Fancy Mixed Overcoats. This lot represents some 25 different patterns, all handsome, stylish Goods which we have retailed all the season for $10.00, 12, 13.50 and 15; now marked down to $8 and 10.00 according to quality. They are bargains.

$5.00.

1 Lot of Men's extra heavy All Wool Steel Mixed Diagonal Overcoats. These garments would be considered bargains at $10.00 by some dealers, we shall close the lot at retail for only $5, which is less than the material cost. Don't forget the price, $5.00.

$12.00.

Men's and Young Men's All Wool Overcoats. This lot represents some ten or twelve different patterns which were considered bargains when sold at $15.00 and 16.50. In order to make a quick sale we have marked them down to $12.00.

$15.00 and 18.00.

Men's and Young Men's Fine All Wool Overcoats. This lot embraces some of the most desirable patterns manufactured this season, marked down from $18, 20 and 22, to 15.00 and 18.00, according to quality.

$20.00 and 25.00.

Men's and Young Men's Extra Fine Overcoats, manufactured from the finest domestic and foreign goods, many of them lined throughout with silk and satin. This lot embraces some 25 different patterns marked down from $25, 28 and 30 to 20 and 25.

$3.50.

50 Men's Extra Heavy and Extra Long Double-breasted All Wool Overcoats. The warmest Overcoat ever sold in Essex County for the money. Price only $3.50, about half price.

$2.00.

50 Men's Heavy Dark Steel Mixed Overcoats. Price only $2 worth $3.50.

Hundreds of Men's Extra Heavy Sleighing Ulsters, over 20 different patterns. Prices, $4.50, 5, 7, 8, 10, 12, 15, 18, 20 and 25.

We shall offer several hundreds men's and young men's Fancy Cassimere and Cheviot Suits for $5, 6, 8, 10, 12 and 15, marked down from $2 to 5, on each suit.

Men's Reefing Jackets, marked down to $2.50, 3.50, 5, 7, 8 and 10.00.

Hundreds of Men's All Wool Pants for $1.50, 1.75, 2.50, 3, 3.50, 4 and 4.50.

250 Boy's Overcoats, ages 10 to 17 years. Prices $2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10 and 12. These garments have been marked down from 20 to 30 per cent.

275 Children's Overcoats, ages 4 to 11 years. Prices, $1.25, 2, 2.50, 3, 3.50 4, 5, 6, 7, 8. These have been marked down from 20 to 30 per cent.

275 Children's All Wool Suits, ages 4 to 11 years. Marked down from $6, 8, and 9, to 4 and 5 per suit. Parents should not fail to call and examine these suits as they are wonderful bargains.

UNDERFLANNELS.

We have only space to quote one special bargain in underflannels, although we have them by the dozens. 60 doz. Gent's Heavy Ribbed Shirts and Drawers, (shirts double breasted), well worth $1 each—we have marked down to 50c. each, just one half their value. This is the biggest bargain ever offered in Underwear and no one should fail to examine it.

THE LIGHT OF DAY.

PAST IMPOSSIBILITIES THE FACTS OF THE PRESENT—HELP IN THE NEW ERA.

"I remember when they were putting up the poles for the first telegraph line in the State of New York, and now look there!" exclaimed a citizen of the metropolis to his friend, as the two stood on the summit of the tall Equitable Building in Broadway. "The city is strung with wires like a harp, and electric communication is the daily miracle of the world. People no longer wonder and laugh at it as they did at Morse when he first suggested its possibility."

The age marches on and prejudice must give way. Nobody has a monopoly of truth. Even the conservative guild of physicians admit that the secrets of medicine are shared by all men. "I dressed his wound, and God healed him," said old Galen. Once that terrible disease, Rheumatism, was supposed to be a shifting, local ailment, now attacking the joints and now the muscles. To-day it is demonstrated to be a disease of the blood."

Mrs. Henry Bogert, of No. 454 Atlantic Avenue, Brooklyn, N. Y., writes to Messrs. HISCOX & Co., of New York, proprietors of PARKER'S GINGER TONIC, that "she had been completely disabled from Rheumatism and pain in the back and limbs. She was advised to take the Tonic for Kidney disease. She did so, and her Rheumatism disappeared." The reason is simple. Diseased kidneys produce rheumatic symptoms. Cure them and you destroy Rheumatism. This is now admitted by all intelligent physicians. It is the new light thrown on their time-worn and mistaken theories.

PARKER'S GINGER TONIC, which is a combination of the best remedies for the blood known to science, is universally successful in combating this terribly complaint. Those who, like Mrs. Bogert, suffer from Kidney or Liver diseases or any complaint arising from impure blood, will find the TONIC a prompt and certain remedy. Prices, 50c. and $1. a bottle. The larger size the cheaper.

KING'S EVIL

Was the name formerly given to Scrofula because of a superstition that it could be cured by a king's touch. The world is wiser now, and knows that can only be cured by a thorough purification of the blood. If this is neglected, the disease perpetuates its taint through generation after generation. Among its earlier symptomatic developments are Eczema, Cutaneous Eruptions, Tumors, Boils, Carbuncles, Erysipelas, Purulent Ulcers, Nervous and Physical Collapse, etc. If allowed to continue, Rheumatism, Scrofulous Catarrh, Kidney and Liver Diseases, Tubercular Consumption, and various other dangerous or fatal maladies, are produced by it.

SCROFULA

Ayer's Sarsaparilla

Is the only powerful and always reliable blood-purifying medicine. It is so effectual an alterative that it eradicates from the system Hereditary Scrofula, and the kindred poisons of contagious diseases and mercury. At the same time it enriches and vitalizes the blood, restoring healthful action to the vital organs and rejuvenating the entire system. This great

Regenerative Medicine

Is composed of the genuine Honduras Sarsaparilla, with Yellow Dock, Stillingia, the Iodides of Potassium and Iron, and other ingredients of great potency, carefully and scientifically compounded. Its formula is generally known to the medical profession, and the best physicians constantly prescribe AYER'S SARSAPARILLA as an

Absolute Cure

For all diseases caused by the vitiation of the blood. It is concentrated to the highest practicable degree, far beyond any other preparation for which like effects are claimed, and is therefore the cheapest, as well as the best blood purifying medicine, in the world.

MADE ON PURPOSE.

ONE OF THOSE MISTAKES(?) WHICH ARE MORE FREQUENT THAN PROFITABLE.

"Why, my child, this is not BENSON'S CAPCINE POROUS PLASTER," said a father to his little daughter, after examining a package she had just brought from the drug store.

"Isn't it, Papa? I'm sorry, but I asked the man for Benson's—I know I did, and he took the twenty-five cents you gave me to pay for it with," exclaimed the child, positively. "Maybe the drug man made a mistake."

"I'll go 'round myself and see," was the gentleman's comment, as he donned his coat and hat.

"Why didn't you send me Benson's plaster, instead of this cheap and trashy thing?"

"Why, I,—I, thought that would suit you just as well—and—"

"You thought! you thought! What business had you to think? I don't pay you for thinking, but for filling my order," said the indignant caller, contemptuously, "There! take that thing back and give me my money, I'll get what I want elsewhere."

ON 30 DAYS' TRIAL.

THE VOLTAIC BELT CO., Marshall, Mich. will send DR. DYE'S CELEBRATED ELECTRO VOLTAIC BELTS and ELECTRIC APPLIANCES on trial for 30 days to men (young or old) who are afflicted with Nervous Debility, Lost Vitality, and kindred troubles, guaranteeing speedy and complete restoration of health and manly vgor. Address as above.—N. B.—No risk is incurred, as 30 days' trial is allowed.

Book Notices.

The February number of Frank Leslie's Sunday Magazine is even more than usually attractive with artistic and literary gems. The editor (T. De Witt Talmage, D. D.), has an exceedingly interesting article, "Wonders of the Century;" the Rev. E. Barrass contributes "Methodism in Canada," with nineteen portraits and other illustrations. There are short stories, essays and poems, by Elizabeth Winter, and other favorite writers. "The Home Pulpit" has a sermon by Dr. Talmage, "A Tight Grip." The price is 25 cents; $2.50 a year, postpaid. Address Mrs. Frank Leslie, Publisher, 53, 55 and 57 Park Place, N. Y.

The February number of DEMOREST'S MONTHLY is both instructive and entertaining. The serial by Mrs. Champney is continued, and shorter stories are contributed by Eleanor Kirk, Hope Ledyard, Carlotta Perry, and Miss E. B. Cheesborough. Among the readable articles are "The Yellowstone National Park," "The French Shakespeare," "The Mediæval History of the Passion Play." Jenny June contributes "Life in New York," "The Pompeiian Maiden," a fine steel engraving, forms the frontispiece, and there are other admirable illustrations.

One of the most readable weekly literary papers is the Yankee Blade of Boston. It is in convenient form, nicely prinied and contains a large quantity of interesting miscellany, stories, poems, etc.

She leaned her head upon his shoulder and said in her most insinuating tones. "Charlie dear, I've heard so much about dudes I want you to get me one." Charlie laughed at her innocence, but resolved to humor it. "Would you not prefer a French dude?" he asked. "I think not," she said, squirming coyly. "How would a German dude suit?" "I don't think it would suit at all. I don't understand German." "Well, what shall it be, then?" It was her turn to smile, as she said with an arch look: "A Yankee dude'll do."

A new idea embraced in Ely's Cream Balm. Catarrh is cured by causing discharge and cleansing, not by drying up. The applicaton is easy and agreeable. Price 50 cents.

Apply into nostrils with finger.

I was troubled with chronic Catarrh and gathering in the head, was very deaf at times, had discharges from my ears, and was unable to breath through the nose. Before the second bottle of Ely's Cream Balm was exhausted I was cured, and to-day enjoy sound health. C. J. CORBIN, 923 Chestnut street, Field Manager Philadelphia Pub. House, Pa.

We recommend Ely's Cream Balm where a cure for Catarrh is called for, and consider that we are doing the public a favor by making its virtues known to those afflicted with this loathsome disease, for which in most cases it is a perfect cure. PECK BROS., Druggists, Grand Rapids, Mich.

The beautifully printed programme of the Montreal Winter Carnival, together with an invitation to be present, has been received. The grand sports will begin on Monday, Feb. 4th, and close Saturday, Feb. 9th. The carnival is held under the auspices of a committee of citizens, the sports being under the immediate direction of committees from the various athletic clubs. The grand fancy dress carnival will be held on Thursday, Feb. 7th. Special excursion trains have been arranged, and no one who can go should fail to do so.

THEY MUST ADVERTISE.—There was a man in town who thought him wondrous wise. He swore by all the fabled gods he'd never advertise. His goods were advertised ere long, and thereby hangs a tale—the ad. was set in nonpareil and headed "Sheriff Sale."—Boston Journal.

Mr. I. Carpenter, 463 Fourth avenue, New York, after running a gauntlet of eight years' rheumatism, used St. Jacobs Oil, the great pain reliever, by which he was entirely cured and has had no return of the complaint.

An exchange gives a lot of advice "How to catch a husband." The simplest way to catch him is to leave him alone with the good looking maid-servant and then come upon him unawares.

Ayer's Hair Vigor prevents the hair from turning gray, and restores gray hair to its original color. Try it.

A prominent optician says that the dotted veils worn by ladies do a great damage to the eyes. A lady with perfectly healthy eyes and strong optical nerves cannot stand the strain of them for a very long time.

A GLIMPSE OF SALT LAKE CITY.

Salt Lake City is prettily laid out with wide streets at right angles, many large stores well built, and doing a good business, while the residence portion contains very many fine houses with lawns tastefully laid out, and a great variety of fruit and shade trees; and all this has been reclaimed from a sage-brush plain, by perseverance and a plentiful supply of water, distributed by a system of irrigation. We were there at the time of a Mormon conference, and so had the opportunity of going to the "conference house"—church, it would be called anywhere else—and saw five hundred or more of the brothers and sisters, principally the latter, assembled there, and also heard President Taylor, Brigham Young—son of old Brigham—and one or two others, pray for the advancement of their institution and annihilation of their enemies and oppressors. And here let me state my impression of the average Mormon. They are a set of people drawn mostly from the lower classes of foreigners, and utterly devoid of personal beauty or even average good looks, and, as a whole, showing great lack of mental powers. Of course, the leaders are exceptions to this last remark.

We next examined the tabernacle, but only outside, as no gentile would be allowed therein if it could be prevented. The new temple was the next object of interest. It is only half completed, although the foundation was laid twenty-five years ago. It is to be a grand, massive structure of native stone, nearly white, but lacking many elements of beauty. We then drove to the warm sulphur springs, about three miles from town; also to all places of interest in the town, while the driver filled us with anecdotes about the inhabitants. The "Beehive," where Brigham used to keep his numerous wives, was visited, though, without the association and the bee-hive on top, one would never look at it the second time. It is a barrack-like, two-and-a-half-story, yellow adobe building, nor is the one next to it, surmounted by a lion, in which old Brigham used to live, any more attractive. Since his death, streets have been cut through these grounds, where formerly the unregenerated were never allowed to pass.

When we reached the "bench land," or plateau, toward which the city has grown from its original location lower down the mountain, we had a beautiful bird's-eye view of the whole valley, with the city directly under us. Imagine such hills or mountains as those surrounding the Profile House stretching out into, as far as the eye can reach, a continuous barrier around this basin, even the Salt Lake itself being partially hidden by its own mountainous islands, which, in the distance give to it the appearance of a river, and themselves as part of the great chain of the valley. The city, with its many stores and dwellings, orchards and fine shade trees, both on the streets and in the inclosures, lies at our feet, while afar as the eye can reach are farms, with their fields of grain, etc., in the many colors of nature's patchwork, intersected by the railroads converging at Salt Lake City. When we were there the snows of the two days previous had been rain in the valley, brightening everything, while on the mountain-tops it had remained white and unmelted, furnishing a beautiful contrast to the green of the plateau, and the brilliant colors of the autumn leaves on every hillside. Altogether the impression was one of beauty and grandeur, which will long continue in my memory.

THE WORKINGS OF CONSCIENCE.

Confined in prison on a charge of murder, is a man of somnambulistic habits, who nightly re-enacts, in dreams, the tragedy which has cost him liberty and life. At midnight he arises from his couch in a stealthy and noiseless manner, creeps out to the door and scrutinizes the hall, or as much of it as can be seen through the door, and also every corner of his narrow apartment, as if intent upon satisfying himself that no one is in the vicinity. He then proceeds to take a cotton shirt and fills the body of it with the covering of the bed, also stuffing the arms full. He places this in one corner on a chair, and puts upon the top of it a hat. Then with noiseless tread walks over to where a broom is kept and grasps it as if it were a gun, creeps with cat-like tread upon the figure in the chair. The manœuvre consumes considerable time, the "sleeper" apparently acting as if he was engaged in picking his way through brush or low timber. Having arrived at a point from which a good view can be commanded, he coolly and deliberately raises the broom at right angels to his shoulder. After taking a long aim he goes through the same motion that one would in firing a gun. He then approaches the chair, picks up the "dummy," and carries it to the remote corner of the cell. He then goes down on all fours, and goes through the motion of digging with his hands. Having dug until the hole is large enough he places the stuffed shirt in it and carefully covers it up, stamping the floor of the cell as if he was pressing down uneven ground. He then scatters over it an armful of leaves, which he goes through the process of gathering from the different portions of his cell. The work concluded to his satisfaction, the sleep-walker conceals the broom under his bed, as if hiding a gun. He then washes his hands, examines his clothes carefully, as if to see if there is any blood upon them, and resorts again to his couch to sleep quietly until morning. The prisoner, when informed of this strange freak in his waking moments, denies all knowledge of the occurrence.

AYER'S Hair Vigor

restores, with the gloss and freshness of youth, faded or gray hair to a natural, rich brown color, or deep black, as may be desired. Its use will not or red hair may be darkened, thin hair thickened, and baldness often, though not always, cured.

It checks falling of the hair, and stimulates a weak and sickly growth to vigor. It prevents and cures scurf and dandruff, and heals nearly every disease peculiar to the scalp. As a Lasting Hair Dressing, the VIGOR is unequalled; it contains neither oil nor dye, renders the hair soft, glossy, and silken in appearance, and imparts a delicate, agreeable, and lasting perfume.

MR. C. P. BRICHER writes from Kirby, O., July 3, 1882: "Last fall my hair commenced falling out, and in a short time I became nearly bald. I used part of a bottle of AYER'S HAIR VIGOR, which stopped the falling of the hair, and started a new growth. I have now a full head of hair growing vigorously, and am convinced that but for the use of your preparation I should have been entirely bald."

J. W. BOWEN, proprietor of the McArthur (Ohio) Enquirer, says: "AYER'S HAIR VIGOR is a most excellent preparation for the hair. I speak of it from my own experience. Its use promotes the growth of new hair, and leaves it glossy and soft. The VIGOR is also a sure cure for dandruff. Not without my knowledge has the preparation ever failed to give entire satisfaction."

MR. ANGUS FAIRBAIRN, leader of the celebrated "Fairbairn family" of Scottish Vocalists, writes from Boston, Mass., Feb. 6, 1880: "Ever since my hair began to give signs of the change which hereditary tendency alone will produce, I have used AYER'S HAIR VIGOR, and I do not believe I could maintain my natural appearance so perfectly without it. I have recommended it to my friends, and I feel every one who uses it owes it to the public."

MRS. C. A. PRESCOTT, writing from Elm Street, Worcester, Mass., April 11, 1882, says: "I have been using your VIGOR for the hair, and find it to be very popular, and I must say, giving good results. On using AYER'S HAIR VIGOR my hair commenced to grow, and new growth is perfect, and is soon as good as ever. It is also very beautiful and soft, and as good as any dressing I have ever used. I have also used your CHERRY PECTORAL, and it is the best medicine I ever took for coughs and colds. I recommend it to all my friends, and always keep it in the house."

We never furnished such strong testimonials to the efficacy of any Hair Vigor. It needs but a trial to convince the most skeptical of its value.

OF STATE ST., SPRINGFIELD, MASS. WHAT THEY SAY IN FAVOR OF A REAL HONEST THING—THEIR WORD AS GOOD AS GOLD.

Mrs. Newcomb is the wife of one of the employees in the United States Armory, Springfield, Mass. She says: "I have used Dr. Kennedy's FAVORITE REMEDY for Indigestion and Biliousness. My husband has also used it. We keep it in the house as a family medicine, and consider it the best ever made for the purpose recommended."

Dr. Kennedy is daily in receipt of letters from patients expressing similar sentiments as these expressed by Mrs. Newcomb, of State street. These letters are spontaneous and put in all varieties of phraseology, but invariably setting forth one thing—the value of Kennedy's FAVORITE REMEDY for many forms of disease. It may be just the thing you have been looking for. Is your Liver disordered? Have you Derangement of the Kidneys or Bladder associated with Constipation of the Bowels? If so, you want Kennedy's FAVORITE REMEDY. Dr. Kennedy practices Medicine and Surgery in all their Branches. Write and state your case. "Favorite Remedy" is fast becoming a trusted household friend in all cases of Female Weakness and diseases of the blood. One dollar a bottle. Your druggist has it.

HOW JAPANESE ARTISTS WORK.

The Japanese (says the Saturday Review) have a great advantage over European nations in being obliged from infancy to learn the use of a brush. Their alphabet is, in fact, a series of exercises in free-hand drawing. Not only is it composed of an immense number of complicated devices, but thousands of characters borrowed from the Chinese are in daily use. A boy who can write a letter has already unconsciously acquired the precision of touch of a trained European artist. In writing the paper is laid on the left hand instead of a desk, as is the custom also with the Arabs. Facilities of motion is thus acquired alike for shoulder, elbow and wrist. Then, too, the paper is of a peculiar quality, which at once absorbs the ink, and it requires great precision of touch to produce an even outline. The early training and practice account for the marvelous dexterity which shows itself in the commonest and roughest piece of decoration. There is always a certain freedom of touch rarely acquired by our best artists. Dr. Dresser gives an interesting account of a treat prepared for him by Sir Henry Parkes. Five of the most celebrated native draughtsmen were invited to the embassy for the purpose of practically exhibiting their method of working. In the middle of the room was spread a breadth of felt, on which was placed a piece of paper held down by weights. Each competitor had a long, slender piece of charcoal in a bamboo holder; some broad, flat brushes, made of deer's hair, and round ones made of vegetable fibre. On a slab was a quantity of Indian ink. The first artist came forward, bowed and knelt down before his paper, considering it attentively for a minute or two. He then made a few almost imperceptible dots with the charcoal point and with a flat brush full of Indian ink formed a large irregular mass in the centre, and with a smaller brush a few feathers and the end of the pendent branch. Then, beginning at the top of the paper, he worked downward, and in a quarter of an hour produced an admirable representation of a cock and hens and the branch of a tree. The body of the hen was skilfully left out in the painting, so that it was formed merely of the uncolored paper, but against the dark background; and with a few touches to indicate feathers it was entirely satisfactory and thoroughly decorative.

A flower painter next made his bow and knelt down. He too began with a few dots to guide him in the disposal of his masses. Taking a large brush full of green pigment, he made one leaf with each sweep, varying the shades in the different leaves, but each leaf being of an even color. With another brush he formed a peony flower, shading it by merely putting a little water on quickly before the red was absorbed. The colors of his palette were indigo, gamboge, crimson, lake and red earth. The Japanese attach much importance to the art of composition, and always carefully arrange in their mind's eye before beginning any design exactly how they will produce balance without uniformity. One of the fair sex next tried her skill. She was flower-painter to the Empress, and chose as her subject a simple little plant resembling our winter aconite. It was represented as done up for sale with the root and a piece of paper round it. The fourth competitor took one of his broad, flat brushes, dipped it in water and squeezed it nearly dry. He then made it take the form of a crescent and dipped the middle part in a dark solution of Indian ink, leaving the outside of a lighter shade. A few hairs were separated at one side and dipped in the darkest shade. By a dexterous movement the artist produced at a stroke the shaded body of a duck and an outline. Afterward he added the neck, head, feet and tail-feathers, and a flying duck was the result. Another expert used his brush in a similar manner, producing a train of rats and a background. The bodies of the rats were left out as in the case of the hen, but there was no doubt what animals they were intended for, though the delineation was done in this apparently haphazard manner. It is wonderful how the Japanese can make their animals live and move. Their birds really peck or fly or strike their prey. The fishes swim and wag their tails. The insects creep or eat or sun themselves. There is no mistaking what they are intended to be doing.

ORIGIN OF THE NAME OF DEADWOOD.

The origin of the name of Deadwood is not generally known, yet it none the less illustrates the waggery of undertakers, as that is the most considerate name for the trick. A certain man lost his wife and ordered a first class funeral. Everything went on in the best of style until the coffin was lowered into the grave, when, owing to the smallness of the hole or awkardness of the attendants, a piece of the coffin was chipped off. A friend picked it up and handed it to the afflicted husband as a relic of his wife. Months elapsed before the bill was presented; it was a first class one if the funeral was not. Not paid, the undertaker sued. The defendant produced the piece of the coffin, exclaiming: "I've got the dead wood on you. It's not rosewood, as you have charged, but pine." Hence the word from which the celebrated city in the Black Hills is named.

SHORTHAND.

Isaac Pitman invented shorthand in 1837 in 1854 Graham published his "Reporters' Manual;" in 1866 Munson issue his "Complete Phonographer." Munson's system is the latest of the three practical systems of shorthand.

Industry is the companion of honor and honesty.

HISTORY OF MAD-STONES.

An inquiry into the history of these stones made by one who has devoted much study to the subject of hydrophobia shows that they are not very numerous. He said: "There are about a dozen of them in the United States. Many thousands of intelligent people are ready to trust them in preference to all other remedies. Many thousands have trusted them, and I shall be happy to refer you to cases in which they have been successfully used.

"There are two theories as to their origin. One is that they are chemically formed in the stomach of the deer, after the manner of calculi in the bladder and kidneys. Another, and I think more plausible, and supported by their history and appearance, is that they are mineral products. Both kinds may exist, however.

"There is a tradition among the owners of these gems, more valuable than the Koh-i-noor, that they are found in Italy on the shores of the Mediterranean. Some have come from Germany, others from South America. In India similar stones are kept in the temples of the priests for the benefit of persons bitten by venomous serpents and are called by them snake-stones.

"Over 200 years ago they were spoken of by the French medical authorities. Prideaux, an old French medical authority, says of their discovery that the best and most reliable information is that the madstone was discovered many years ago in Switzerland by some young men herding stock. One of them was bitten on the hand by a poisonous reptile. A porous stone, which they were throwing for amusement, was laid on the swollen and painful spot. To their amazement, it afforded immediate relief. This led to the discovery of a number of similar stones, which have been scattered all over the world. This adds one more to the accidental discoveries which have benefited the world."

A DEVICE AGAINST BORES.

An invention for protection from bores has been devised by a gentleman of literary habits in this city, which may safely be recommended to those who are afflicted by the attentions of these well-known pests of society. He has his study in the top of one of our public buildings, and nearly every day a prominent representative of the genus bore climbs up the stairs and knocks at his door, and after entering he sits himself down and smokes the literary man's cigars, and discourses second-hand opinions to him during the greater part of the day. The literary man has been for a long time casting about for a remedy, and at last he said: "My dear Jones, I want to tell you something in confidence. I am frightfully troubled by people dropping in on me whom I don't wish to see, and so I am going to keep my door locked hereafter. Now, of course, there are some whom I am always delighted to have call, and you, my dear Jones"—slapping him on the back—"as I don't need to tell you, are one of them. So I am going to arrange a private signal with those whom I shall always be glad to admit to my room, and I want you, when you come, to knock thus, two slow raps and three quick ones—see?—and then I shall know who is there." Jones commended the idea as peculiarly ingenious, and has since faithfully acted upon it, but was heard the other day to remark very innocently that it was denoted odd, but of late it was very seldom that he could find his literary friend at home.

A TALL RABBIT.

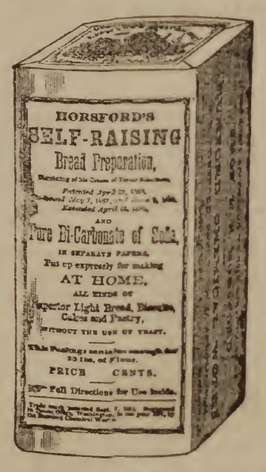
Excepting the Irishman's hare, which was no hare at all, but a donkey, the polar hare is the largest of the long-eared tribe. It equals the fox in size and will sometimes reach the height of a man's knee. The golden eagle and the snowy owl are both particularly fond of the pretty creature, but it is a fondness which the hare has no desire to encourage; and therefore, when it spies one of those great birds sailing through the air, with its sharp eyes searching about for something to devour, it instantly sinks upon the snow as motionless as if dead, and thanks to the whiteness of its fur, it can hardly be distinguished from the material it rests upon.

THE KITCHEN.

No lady of the highest talent or accomplishment need feel that she demeans herself by giving her most earnest attention to the beauty and comfort of her home and the most careful ordering of everything connected with the kitchen department. Low down as foolish ideas of gentility have been accustomed to place that department, it has much more to do with the comfort or discomfort, the peace and happiness or the discord and evil temper of the whole family, than can be gained from elegant or fashionable parties, and all that etiquette demands in fashionable life.

SMOKERS' IDIOSYNCRASIES.

Inveterate smokers do funny things. Carlyle smoked up the chimney with a degree of thoughtfulness for the feelings of others not universal in his conduct, and the famous Bishop Burnet, who, like many another author, found composition facilitated by puffings of the seductive weed, disliking the interruption of removing his pipe constantly while he was writing, in order to combine the two operations with due comfort to himself, bored a hole through the broad brim of his hat, and, putting his long pipe through it, puffed and wrote, and wrote and puffed with the most philosophical calm.



Fright, not hydrophobia, recently killed a young New Yorker who was bitten by a healthy dog in the morning and died of nervous exhaustion in the evening.

THE ATLANTIC MONTHLY

For 1884.

The conductors of The Atlantic Monthly indicate herewith a few of the noteworthy features for 1884, and need not assure its readers that it will continue, as it has been beyond question, the foremost of American magazines, in all features and varieties of literary excellence.

MR. CRAWFORD'S SERIAL STORY
"A Roman Singer"

Will run through the first six numbers of the volume for 1884. This story has attracted marked attention by its vigor and freshness.

OLIVER WENDELL HOLMES

Will write exclusively for The Atlantic during 1884. The mere announcement of frequent contributions by him is more welcome than almost any other announcement could be.

DR. WEIR MITCHELL

Has written for The Atlantic a striking serial story, entitled "In War Time." This will begin in January.

HENRY JAMES

Will contribute several Short Stories and sketches of Continental travel.

W. D. HOWELL'S

Will furnish several papers of European travel.

CHARLES DUDLEY WARNER

Will contribute Essays on literary and social topics.

THE CONTRIBUTORS' CLUB

Will continue to be one of the most agreeable features of The Atlantic.

NASBY'S PAPER.

THE TOLEDO WEEKLY BLADE.

Circulation 115,000.

This vast circulation is because the BLADE is a paper for the whole country. It is not thrown together, but every line of it is edited by competent hands. It is a complete epitome of the news of the week, and whosoever reads the BLADE carefully, needs nothing else to be well informed as to what the world is doing. Editorially the BLADE has made a proud record. It has an opinion on every thing that affects the people of the country, and it expresses it boldly, fearlessly, and forcibly. As good as the Blade has been in past years, we will make it better than ever in the year to come. among the features for the coming year will be the regular "Nasby Letters," two serials by Nasby, entitled "Nasby in Exile," and "Nasby in the South," a serial story by Ernest Warren, entitled, Court and Camp," a serial by John McElroy author of Andersonville, "Reminiscences of an Army Mule"; a serial written for the BLADE by an Austrian nobleman; besides our regular departments, "Household," "Answers to Correspondents," "Camp Fire," etc., etc. We publish all the news, and latest corrected markets.

Politically the BLADE will continue an exponent of true Republicanism, believing that the best interests of the country demand the continuance of its control in the hands of the party that represents the highest and most advanced ideas.

THE RUM POWER.

The BLADE will fight this monster iniquity with all the power it possesses, and in every way possible. The BLADE holds the liquor traffic to be a greater curse than slavery, and a thousand times more dangerous to the country.

We ask the co-operation of every well-wisher of the Republic that our work may be effective. We ask every Republican in the United States to assist in extending the circulation of the BLADE, especially among those of the Republican party who believe as we do in the necessity of Pulverizing the Rum Power. We want the BLADE in as many families as possible this winter, that it may be read before the excitement of a political campaign, giving it time for its truths to take root in the minds of its readers.

THE WEEKLY BLADE, $1.00 a year, postpaid, to EVERYBODY. Those preferring, may receive the BLADE, THREE MONTHS, by remitting 30 cents, or clubs of three months trial subscribers, of not less than four, 25 cents each.

OUR GREAT ART OFFER.

A $10.00 Steel Engraving for $1.00. Write us for a specimen copy of the WEEKLY BLADE, which will give full particulars of this, the greatest offer ever made by any publisher. We send specimen copies of the BLADE free to any address. We want as many addresses as possible to send Specimen Copies to. Write a postal card asking for a specimen for yourself, and send us the names of all your neighbors. We want to send out a half million copies within the next month. Don't be modest as to the number.

THE SUN.

NEW YORK, 1884.

About sixty million copies of THE SUN have gone out of our establishment during the last twelve months.

If you were to paste end to end all the columns of all THE SUNS printed and sold last year, you would get a continuous strip of interesting information common sense wisdom, sound doctrine, and sane wit long enough to reach from Printing House square to the top of Mount Copernicus in the moon, then back to Printing House square, and then three-quarters of the way back to the moon again.

But THE SUN is written for the inhabitants of this earth; this same strip of intelligence would girdle the earth twenty-seven or twenty-eight times.

If every buyer of a copy of THE SUN during the past year has spent only one hour over it, and his wife or his grandfather has spent another hour, this newspaper in 1883 has afforded the human race thirteen thousand years of steady reading night and day.

It is only by little calculations like these that you can form any idea of the circulation of the most popular of American newspapers, or of its influence on the opinions and actions of American men and women.

THE SUN is, and will continue to be, a newspaper which tells the truth without fear of consequences, which gets at the facts no matter how much the process costs, which presents the news of all the world without waste of words and in the most readable shape, which is working with all its heart for the cause of honest government, and which therefore believes that the Republican party must go, and must go in this coming year of our Lord, 1884.

If you know THE SUN, you like it already and you will read it with accustomed diligence and credit during what is sure to be the most interesting year in its history. If you do not yet know THE SUN, it is high time to get into the sunshine.

The new carriage for Hose 4 will be ready for delivery next Monday, from the works of G. M. Bowditch. The contract for the new carriage for Hose 3, was closed last Wednesday, by Engineer Lord, as the committee under whose charge it is to be built, and the carriage will be built by G. M. Cogswell, to be the same design as the carriages of Hose 1 and 4 and will probably be finished about the last of April.

The Engineers held their regular meeting last Wednesday evening, approved a few bills, and adjourned for two weeks, that being the last meeting in the financial year.

The night cap party of Hose 3 last Friday, was such a success that the company decided to run a necktie party on the evening of the 25th. There were about 35 couple present. The ladies furnished the night caps, some of them very fancy and rather large for comfort, each lady furnishing two, one for herself, and the other was thrown into the middle of the hall, and a grand scramble was made by the gents, each gent getting a cap to dance with the lady wearing the mate. The music was very good being furnished by the Danvers Quadrille Band. We saw quite a number of the dancers sit down on the floor; one young man in particular, who is well known around the Square, while attempting to swing a lady weighing about twice as much as he did, found that "he had bitten off more than he could chew," and sat down in the middle of the floor to rest and ponder on his failure. Everything passed off pleasantly, the party breaking up between 1 and 2 o'clock with the quadrille "Shoot the night cap."

The pung that Hose 3 have had in their house is probably the only one in the department that is ornamented in so lavish a style, without regard to cost. One side has figures of two firemen, a line of hose attached to a hydrant and other fancy work carved on it. It has a variety of names, among them being Chas. H. Hooper, Hose company, Steamer 1 and Active Hose Six.

The Hose reels have again been put in service as the sleighing is so bad.

The boys were a little excited Sunday evening about 6 o'clock, by a brilliant reflection in the sky in the direction of Beverly. Some of them got a lantern and went to the roof of the engine house and said that they could see it very plain and that it was in Beverly. But the morning papers settled it. It was the large box factory and lumber yard of Bennett Griffin & Son of Gloucester.

Ryan Brothers of Roxbury district, have just delivered to the Portsmouth Fire Department, a skeleton truck, to be run by a pair of horses.

The committee on the Union Ball of the three ones and a two, held a meeting Monday evening in the room of steamer 2, and voted to hire Harvey Blunt, of Boston, as caterer, in place of Van Vranken of Salem.

Some of the ladies around town, are at work getting up a leap party at some future time, for the firemen.

A meeting of the Firemen's Relief Association has been called for Thursday evening, Jan. 24th, probably to be held in Temperance hall if it can be obtained for that night. What the object in calling the meeting is we do not know, unless it is to hurry matters on the business of incorporation, but that is something that lies in the hands of the committee appointed for that purpose. The committee might join in on the call and then the case could be settled by the election of officers.

Chas. H. Smart was appointed janitor of the room of Steamer No. 1 at their meeting last Monday night. He might take charge of all the company rooms as he will probably have some little time on his hands, after getting all things running smooth.

[illegible] the city [illegible] was $2232 ap- [illegible]

tickets to the G. A. R. fair has been received from Braxmar, of New York, and is a very handsome affair. The design is taken from his book of designs, and is made up from several styles. It consists of a circle enclosing the firemen's emblems surmounted by an eagle; at the bottom of the circle is a small hat front, the whole being mounted on a wreath and sun-burst. This is pendant from a scroll in the shape of a length of hose with pipe attached. On the back is the inscription of how and by whom won. It is one of the finest pieces of work we have seen in many a day. The cost is about $36 and will be a prize to some one.

There has been a decided change in the appearance of things at the brick engine house; all the apparatus shines so that one can see their face in it, the floors oiled and not a speck of dust or dirt to be seen. ZERO.

The grand concert of war songs to be given under the local management of William Hildreth and George Randall, on the 24th, promises to be one of the best and most attractive entertainments given this winter. A great many people who remember the numerous thrilling melodies with their stirring words which were sung by the glee clubs at the "war meetings" and by the boys and girls at home, as well as by the boys in camp, will have old scenes recalled and old pleasures revived, and those whose memories do not go back will enjoy a pleasing entertainment.

The following officers have been elected by the Peabody Mutual Benefit Association for the following year: President, Patrick Butler; vice president, Dennis Linnehan; secretary, James H. Thomas; treasurer, John Murray; directors, Patrick H. O'Connor, James E. Millea, Wm. Marrs, Peter J. Donnelly, Patrick Murphy, Jeremiah Bresnahan, Martin Brophy, Patrick Cassidy, Bartholomew Sullivan, Charles McKey, Caleb Kerby. The receipts during the year were $1034.75, of which $918 had been paid in death benefit claims. The number of deaths was five and the balance in the treasury is $208.18.

Under the auspices of the Salem Oratorio Society, there will be a Symphony Concert in Mechanic Hall, next Wednesday evening, by the celebrated orchestra under the leadership of Georg Henschel. It is needless to remind our musical readers of the merits of this organization—and when it is known that Mrs. Henschel is to be the soloist—also Mr. Bernhard Listemann, it will be seen that a rare treat is in store for our people. Tickets with reserved seats can be obtained at 75 cts. at the drug store of Geo. F. Ropes & Co. in Salem. Admission tickets will be fifty cents. Peabody will without doubt be well represented.

At St. John's Catholic church, last Sunday, Rev. Father Masterson, the pastor, reported the financial condition of the church as follows: The total receipts were $9400, of which $4000 was from pew rents, over $2000 from the general collection, about $1100 from church debt collections, $300 by the will of the late Julia Delaney, a private donation of $400 from a lady who did not want her name made public, and the balance from other sources. The total expenditures were rising $9300, of which nearly $3000 were paid for work on the new spire and the balance for the running expenses of the church. The present debt is $14,000, a decrease of $2100 from that of last year.

The Salem Schubert Club have in preparation an entertainment and supper in Plummer Hall, Tuesday, Jan. 29th. Tea will be served at 6:30 o'clock, after which there will be representations of scenes in the vicinity of Salem in colonial times. The tickets are limited.

Travelers by the Fall River line who have heretofore gone elsewhere on the withdrawal of the "Bristol" and "Providence" and the placing of the winter boats in commission, and regular patrons who have stood by the line in winter as well as in summer, will be glad to learn that the business of the company has increased to such a degree as to necessitate the placing of the "Bristol" and "Providence" on the route for the winter months. These large and powerful vessels will be found in splendid condition for the service, and passengers can depend upon prompt and reliable movement. Beginning with January, Sunday trips by the steamers of this line will be discontinued until spring.

PENALTY FOR SIN.—Jan. 11, Brien Manning of Lynn, for drunkenness, was fined $5.83 and in default was committed to Salem jail.

14, Jeremiah Bresham, for drunkenness, second offence, was fined $9.83. Thomas F. Heeney, same offence, was committed to the House of Correction for two months.

16, Joseph Doherty, simple drunk, was fined $5.83. Florence Crowley for

PEABODY.

The second temperance lecture was delivered in the new Town Hall last Sunday evening to an audience that filled every nook and corner of the vast hall. There is certainly one occasion when the hall can be filled—viz., at a free show on a Sunday night. The exercises began with a selection by an orchestra and a chorus of mixed voices—members of the different choirs in town—under the baton of Wm. P. Clark, Esq. Rev. Mr. Hudson read selections from Scripture, and prayer was offered by Rev. Mr. Sperry. The Band of Hope, who were present to the number of about one hundred, sang a temperance song, under the leadership of J. K. Cole, Esq. A collection was then taken up, Mr. Haskell stating that the collection last time amounted to $42, while their expenses were $37. He stated that the cheap shows which had been given in this hall, not only had not attracted the people, but had not paid. They were surprised that an entertainment such as they were giving the large audience that evening had paid. After another song by the Band of Hope, Mr. Haskell introduced the speaker of the evening, Hon. John B. Finch, of Nebraska. He began his remarks in a pleasant way, remarking on the number of young people in the audience. His own state was a state governed by young men. To stand before a Nebraska audience is to stand before an audience of young men and young women. He was glad therefore to speak as a young man to young men on this subject of intemperance. This was not a temperance address in the ordinary sense; the time for such had passed. He could not comprehend how a young man of strength and muscle could work all day at his trade, or in the shop, and take the wages that it had taken muscle and strength to earn and go into a grog shop of a Saturday night and trade it off to a lazy lout who had been loafing all the week. He could not understand how a boy could take the money he ought to spend for books and spend it in the grog shop. And when he had spent his last cent, and asked the man whom he had helped to support, to trust him for a drink, he will kick him into the gutter. The speaker wanted a friend who would help him in trouble. The strong man can get along without help. But in time of weakness we should look for protection. There is not a man who does not know that while he spends money in a grog shop he will be welcomed with smiles as long as he is respectable; when his respectability is gone, and his money is gone, there is no one who will abuse him as the rumseller. The young man should not buy watches, fast horses and fine houses for the liquor seller. Every boy ought to have sense enough not to do that.

The issue is the relation of the dram shop system to the material prosperity of the State—whether bar rooms ought to be allowed in any state or town. It is a plain question for the people to decide. The day is coming when its merits must be determined—and the truth or falsity of the charge against the dram shops discovered. He would not speak against the grog shops or liquor seller because they were so called. He had no greater opposition to them than to a minister or teacher as such, if both affect society the same way. Society tries men for their acts—and by the record they make for themselves. In the West they had the record of the East to help them. There was the free school system. They had adopted it on its Eastern record. So with the Sabbath School and Church. They were under obligations to the East—and had wrought these institutions into their Western homes. They had proved welcome. When it came to the dram shop, the question was asked what was its record, and should it be admitted? They said it was not fit to live, and on that issue the battle had been fought. There was no malice on the part of the temperance men. When these states were organized as a republic the dram shop was taken from the monarchical form of government and organized on the same plan as the dry goods store, or the grocery. As late as 1812 in this State, a large proportion of the owners of dram shops were deacons of churches. As late as 1835 in Rhode Island no one asserted that the running of distilleries was not a pious industry. As late as 1806 a regular minister in Hartford was the owner of a distillery. At the birth of our government there was no prejudice against this. It was considered just as moral—just as respectable as to sell wool. Is it true now, and if not, why not? Is the liquor seller admitted to our families as a friend? We all know that there is a difference. Now the pulpit far and near is the battery from which is poured weekly the red hot shot against this traffic.

One hundred years ago liquor bottles were seen on nearly all our tables. Is it true now? And if not, why not? If the sale of alcohol had been a blessing, would there be any more opposition [illegible] Indiana.

The dram shop is a social outcast. The men who engage in it accept the accursed penalty for the sake of the money to be obtained from its sale. The dram shop is the enemy of every institution—and degrades manhood. There is not a white page in its history. The liquor dealers are responsible for the agitation against the dram shop. But for the outrages committed on society through its influence no temperance man would assail it. Society has an organic right to defend itself. The state has a right to defend itself against any conditions which threaten the destruction of its life. The only question to be asked is the state justified. The state must have a right to put down the dram shops or be a humbug. The speaker illustrated the point by the draft in the time of our civil war. The government said come—it had a right to protect itself. This is simply a question of fact, not of sentiment. The question is not between the temperance talker and the liquor seller. The effect of his business is the only question. Not his character but the record he has made. The people are the jury. He is legally entitled to the same protection as any other citizen so long as his record is the same. If the decision is that the dram shop is a blessing—if it is the friend of our country, it is our duty to pray for it and support it. If it is a curse there is no reason why it should exist. There is no dividing line. He had been asked why he was opposed to beer selling here, while in Germany it is sold with the same results,—yet it is under control. The question was pertinent. Is there any greater danger here than in Germany? In Germany if a man becomes wholly bad and riotous through drink, who will take care of him? The government. Who is the government? The Emperor and a standing army—deriving their power from God. The people are subject to him—and he can make them behave themselves and the government is protected. In America under the same conditions who is to take care of those who are bad? You say the government, as before. Who is the government? The people. But the people are drunk. The American government has demolished the old monarchical idea of protection — and made the only hope in the intelligence of the people. It is not tyranny if a prohibitory law is passed. It is passed by the people. This is the theory of American government—a government made by the people—in Europe the government is for the people.

The speaker here illustrated government by an incident of a man who became very angry with him—and went to his stables and severely beat his horses. Men who cannot govern themselves are not fit to govern. When you deposit the power of government in the hands of ignorance, or lust, or passion, the animal or persons subject to that power will suffer. Look at the difference between England under Mary, and England under Victoria. This is true in all governments. The only hope of our republic is that the men who hold power shall be moral and intelligent. The men over 21 are the government—less than 1-5 of the whole population. In their hands is absolute political power. There is nothing that their votes may not do. The women and children are dependent for life and liberty upon the whim of that 1-5 of the population. What a plea is here, that it is necessary for the protection of our government, that the people shall be intelligent and good. A state that will vote for license ought to be impeached. Money spent for education is the cheapest tax a man can pay. What is it for? To protect the government, because educated citizens are good citizens. It is cheaper to pay the minister and teacher of the young, than to pay the policeman. The speaker here instituted a comparison in Omaha, between the free schools there and the grog shops, producing much merriment. Ignorance and debauchery, traceable directly to the liquor saloons, are the cause of the corrupt ballot box. You do not find corruption and bribery in the country towns. There the people are educated. It is found in the slums of the larger cities. A slum the speaker defined as a licensed grog shop gone to seed. What will you do to get rid of this evil? The speaker once believed in license, because he thought it the best way; when young and green he had been called to enforce the law in his own state. He thought a liquor seller who violated the law was just the same as any other offender. He had voted for license and he prosecuted the liquor dealers and had them convicted. He then learned that it was impossible to license a grog shop and make the owner behave himself according to law. There is not a licensed liquor seller in your town who does not sell liquor to minors, and to drunken people, and you know it. They do not intend to obey the law. Mr. Finch closed with an earnest appeal to the citizens of Peabody to vote for Constitutional prohibition.

It is said the umbrella is not an article which was contemplated as coming within the provisions of the commandment which forbids larceny. But a man of versatile and restless genius, evidently a heretic to the belief, has invented an umbrella that cannot be purloined. There is a detachable handle by the withdrawal of which the ribs are securely locked together, and no two handles fit the same umbrella.

Timothy Brine in attempting to cross the bridge over the South Reading track at the square, fell between the riders and into the water. Being under the influence of liquor he lay in the icy water several minutes before he attempted to climb to the banks, and get out. He was discovered by one of his friends and assisted to the track. And when last seen he was reeling toward Dublin.

Poet's Corner.

My Romance.

BY F. D. S.

She didn't like me when we met—
But turned away and pouted;
'Twas very cool, I own, to get
At first a snub so final, yet
I clung to hope, and doubted.

Strange as it seems, a few short weeks,
Confirmed my sanguine guesses;
I came to understand her freaks,
And even dared to kiss her cheeks
And stroke her golden tresses.

So time went on, and as we grew
To know each other better,
She bravely learned to kiss me, too;
And when she strangely tried to woo,
Somehow I used to let her.

The privilege still yet is mine
With kiss her lips to smother;
Still round my neck she likes to twine,
Her soft, white arms. I'll drop a line,
I guess, and ask her mother.

* * * * * * *

This rhyme produces envy—strife,
Within your reason, maybe;
So let me take a leaf from life;
Her mother is my darling wife,
And she my blessed baby.

The Matinee.

BY WALLINGFORD.

Mother, I've had a splendid time—it was just like a fairy dream.
Such a beautiful place, such glorious fun, such a lovely "Naiad Queen."
We had elegant seats in the balcony—the center—the very front row,
And could see every one in the audience, of course we liked that, you know.

The scenes were perfectly gorgeous; there were demons, fairies and kings,
A prince and his faithful squire, and hosts of elegant things.
The dancing was really lovely—such grace expression and ease,
Oh, I love the ballet!—Mother, why do you frown? Is it really so naughty, please?

And, mother, before the act was through, on the opposite side to pa,
A real handsome fellow was winking at me; now, wasn't he horrid, mamma?
I smiled and put up my programme, for he did look so awfully "squee,"
And would you believe it, mamma dear, he smiled and bowed to me!

I looked at the play after that, ma; I was all of a flutter, you know,
He was splendid! I couldn't be angry, for all that he winked at me so.
And, mother, before the act was through, papa left on a South End car,
And this one came over and took pa's seat; now, wasn't he cheeky, ma?

He begged my pardon, smiled, and said he really couldn't see
The play at all from where he sat, and so he came over to me.
He lent me his opera-glass, ma, and fixed it to suit my eyes,
And said he came from Chicago—a "C. T." really, a prize.

He was just at attentive as could be; he told me about the play,
And wrote on my fan, "with pleasure," he said, his name—the usual way,
And, mamma, after the play was through, and the drop curtain fell at last,
He escorted me down to the entrance, and, lo, it was raining fast!

He got me a carriage at once, ma, and bade me adieu in the rain;
I thanked him, and said I really hoped I should see him some time again.
I wanted to ask him to call—oh, so dreadfully, ma, you don't know!—
But I thought if I did, perhaps you'd say that it wasn't quite a propos.

So I didn't, but just as I drove away, he smiled, and raising his hat
Said something awful pretty—oh, mamma, I can't tell you that!
I gave him my glove as a souvenir, which he folded away in his breast,
A moment later we turned the curve, and mamma, you know the rest.

Selected Story.

The Widow's Son.

BY NONAME.
(From the Yankee Blade.)

"Telegram."

I looked up from my sewing with a start.

"A message for you, ma'am," and the boy handed it to me.

I hastily tore open the envelope and read: "I am in great distress. Come to me at once. Aunt Hester."

I held the telegram in my hand for a moment or two, and slowly read it again.

It was from my aunt who lived in B., a little town twenty miles distant.

"What can be the matter?" I asked myself. "Something of no little moment must have happened, or she would never have sent me this."

I turned and looked at the clock. It was almost ten. In a short time the train would leave for B. If I would obey the summons, "Come at once," I must hasten and go on that train. Without stopping another moment, I dropped the slip of paper on the table near and hastened up to my chamber. Gathering quickly what things I would need I hastily thrust them into a bag, and in a short time was ready, and hurried away to the depot.

As I sat in the cars my mind was busy with the wildest conjectures as to what could be the cause of my aunt's distress; and it was with a sigh of relief that I at last stepped out in the depot in the town of B.

There were no conveyances, such as a public carriage, in B. Fortunately the distance was not great. I did not mind the dust of the roads, but hastened on to the pretty cottage known as Rose Cottage—it took this name from the countless number of roses that grew all over it—my aunt's home.

When I had gone about one-half the distance that I had to traverse I came to the centre of the town, and every now and then I met or saw a little group of people conversing in low tones.

As I went onward, I caught a fragment of conversation between two men who walked a short distance from me down the road:

"It is very strange," said the first speaker, a stout, middle-aged man, "that nobody saw him after he left his home to go to work."

"Yes; the murderer must have laid his plans well," said the other, "or there would be somebody that could give some information."

"But nobody knows whether he was killed, or not," said the stout man looking at the other.

"He must be. He would not go away without letting his mother or his sweetheart know of his whereabouts."

"That's true. But there is no proof that he has been murdered."

"His mother takes it hard, they say."

"Yes, so I hear. She is old; and he was her only child and support."

The two men passed down a by-street and I quickened my step, wondering of whom they were speaking. Some one, evidently a young man had disappeared from the town, or been murdered.

I forgot the fragment of conversation as soon as I came in sight of my aunt's house. I ran lightly up the walk, letting the gate slam behind me. But before I could reach the door it opened, and Rose Prescott, the affianced of Arthur, my aunt's son, opened the door.

Her eyes bore traces of recent weeping, and her face was very pale. She came toward me with outstretched arms and throwing herself upon my breast, cried:

"O Grace! Arthur is gone; and we know not what has become of him."

"Arthur!" I exclaimed. "Gone! and you know not where. Why, what do you mean, Rose?" Before she could reply, the conversation of the two men flashed upon my mind, and I cried: "He is not dead; murdered?"

Rose shook her head sadly, and sobbed:

"We know not."

I led the weeping girl into the house, where my aunt, pale and sorrowful, sat.

"O, Grace, I am so glad you are come," she cried, the moment she caught sight of me.

"Dear aunt, what does all this mean, what has happened to Arthur?"

"O, Grace," she wept, "Arthur went to work last Thursday morning the same as usual, and he has not returned. We know not what has befallen him. We fear that he has been murdered."

I could only gaze into my aunt's tear-stained face in silence. For a full moment I stood thus. Then I asked:

"Had Arthur enemies, a rival?" I turned to Rose as I spoke.

Rose looked in my face, and slowly shook her head.

"It is strange," I said.

I tried to cheer them, and inspire within them a more hopeful spirit. Days went by, but they brought no tidings of the loved one.

The town was in a state of great excitement over Arthur's disappearance. Everybody knew Widow Archibald's son. He had many friends, for he was handsome, manly and noble. He was a mason, by trade, and was employed at the time of his strange disappearance by Edgar Sinclaire, a wealthy young man, who was building a fine mansion.

Mr. Sinclaire was engaged to a wealthy lady, and was to be married as soon as the mansion was completed.

Most of the friends and neighbors suspected foul play and did all they could to clear up the mystery that concealed the fate of Arthur.

Some one suggested that the river near be searched. The suggestion was acted upon, and the river was dragged, but his body was not found in it; then they beat the woods, till not a foot of it remained unsearched, but all in vain.

Among those who heard of the strange disappearance of Arthur, was a young man, by the name of Wilbur. He and Arthur had spent many hours in each other's company, and knowing his friend's quiet and home loving character, Wilbur was not a little puzzled, and could not, like the rest, account for his strange disappearance.

Several weeks went by, and the people had settled down again into the dull routine of every-day-life, when they were surprised by the report that Edgar Sinclaire's mansion, which was now completed, was for sale, and that he had purchased a fine dwelling, and had settled down in it.

Many were the comments made at this. Some said it had cost heavily to build, and that he had failed; others expressed the opinion that he had never been as rich as people had been led to think him.

Arthur's friend, Wilbur, heard like the rest, and on the afternoon following the report, he came to me, and looking in my face said very earnestly:

"Miss Marchmont, it struck me this morning that I might help in clearing away the cloud that hides from us Arthur's fate. The suspense, the uncertainty are killing his aged mother, and breaking poor Rose's heart! I have for some time past thought deeply about his strange disappearance, and I confess I have grave doubts about his being alive, and I come to you this morning, Miss Marchmont, to reveal to you a plan, which I think, if I can carry it out with a little help from you, will throw some light on the matter."

He paused, still looking earnestly at me.

I had known Mr. Wilbur but a short time, only since the day on which I had come in answer to the dispatch; and I wondered not a little as to how I could assist him.

He read my thoughts, for he said:

"You wonder a little, that I, who am almost a stranger, should come to you for help. It would not do for me to go to Rose, or even to his mother. If I failed in bringing to light the fate of Arthur, I should but add to their grief. It is needless, perhaps, for me to state, that it is the love and friendship that bound Arthur and myself together, with the sympathy I feel for you all, that leads me to attemt the unraveling of the mystery."

I thought a moment before replying; and then said:

"You are right. It would not do to ask their help. If I can render you any, I will gladly do so."

"I made no mistake coming to you," he said; "and now you shall hear my plans. I will unfold them to you."

Then he told me his plans and how I could assist him.

I listened with profound attention, until he paused; then laying my hand upon his arm, said earnestly:

"I will help you. It is but little that you ask me to do."

A few more words passed between us, and he left the house.

I sat thinking for some time after he had gone; then arose and went into the adjoining room where my aunt sat.

The hours passed, and evening came.

A short time before the hour for retiring I heard a low whistle. I looked at my aunt. She sat dozing in her chair and did not hear it. I arose softly from my seat, and, going into the next room, took a bundle from the table, and, opening the door, went out into the night.

I saw the form of a man a short distance from me, and, going towards him asked, for I could not see his face in the dark:

"Is it you, Mr. Wilbur?"

"Yes, Miss Marchmont."

I held out the bundle to him.

"All that you require is in this bundle," I said.

He took the bundle, a few more words were said, and a moment later he disappeared in the darkness.

Several days passed.

I heard once from Mr. Wilbur. His plans were working well.

The dull town was again dozing, when one bright and sunny morning—I shall never forget it; the roses were in full bloom then; my aunt's pretty cottage was a perfect bower of bloom; the roses clambered up the sides and festooned the door, twined around the windows and trailed down into the path, ladening the air with their sweet perfume—it was aroused and stirred up to a terrible pitch of excitement by Edgar Sinclaire, who rushed frantically into the police station, declaring himself guilty of the murder of Arthur.

I was the first in the house to learn of the man's confession.

Mr. Sargent, chief of the police, told me a few hours later:

"He confessed to me that he killed Arthur. 'I killed Arthur Archibald,' he cried. 'I buried him between the walls of the mansion. He haunts me. Day and night I have no peace. He is ever appearing before me with that awful face. Heaven forgive me, but I did not mean to kill him. He made me angry, and I struck him harder than I meant to.'"

We locked the wretched man in a cell, and a squad of policemen, armed with the necessary implements, started at once for the mansion to find the body of the murdered man.

On arriving at the mansion they entered the beautiful hall, and passed to the chamber where the owner said he had committed the crime.

The officers went to work at once and tore down the wall, the plastering and laths of which entombed the mouldering remains of the widow's son. Silently and with bated breath they worked, prepared to meet the horrible sight that should greet their vision.

Down below in the street and all around the mansion and over the grounds swarmed the horrified and curious people. And many were the anathemas that they showered upon the guilty man in the station near by.

The officers worked away and finally pushed the last pile of plastering and laths aside.

Then they looked in one another's faces. Before them lay the wall in ruins. But no bones of the murdered man were found, not a shred of his clothing or the slightest trace of anything to indicate that he had been buried there.

"The body is not here," said one of the officers looking at the others.

All shook their heads.

"No, the body is not here," said one of the officers nearest to the one who had just spoken. "Sinclaire must be mad."

"Shouldn't wonder," said a third officer.

"He's made a fool of himself, and of us, too, I think," growled another.

"Something's wrong, somewhere," said the officer who spoke first; and, stooping, he picked up his tools and went, followed by the rest, down the broad staircase of the mansion.

Later, Mr. Sinclaire reaffirmed what he had before confessed to me. He had killed Arthur Archibald and thrown his body between the unfinished walls, and afterwards, late at night, when the town was silent in slumber, gone to the mansion and finished the wall, thus concealing the crime.

"And now, Miss Marchmont," added Mr. Sargent, shaking his head, "the mystery is greater than ever."

The general opinion was that Mr. Sinclaire was insane; and the anathemas which were poured so lavishly upon him were now changed to pity.

It was the evening of this strangely eventful day, and my aunt, Rose and I were in the sitting-room. Rose was on the point of leaving us to go to her home, when I thought I heard a step in the entry, and on looking up saw a tall, delicate looking man enter. He went straight to my aunt and, with a smile, held out both hands to her.

My aunt looked at the bold stranger in astonishment.

For a moment the man stood silent and then asked in tones that sent a thrill through my heart.

"Am I so changed, mother, that you no longer know me?"

My aunt looked in a dazed and bewildered way in his face and gasped:

"Arthur, my son!" and fell upon his breast.

Rose screamed, and flew to his side.

"Oh, Arthur! Arthur! we thought you were murdered," she sobbed and clung to the arm he put around her, as if fearful he would again disappear and be lost.

For a moment I was forgotten their joy was so great. Then my aunt and Rose turned and looked at me with smiling, happy faces, but with silent tongues.

It was enough; I saw they could not speak. And indeed I could not say anything myself. But Arthur turned, too, and saw me, and with outstretched hands drew me nearer.

As I looked up in his face, I was struck with its extreme pallor, and saw at once that he had been sick.

"You have been ill, Arthur," I said.

"Yes," he answered, "I have been sick, very sick."

His mother and Rose now looked closely at him.

He passed his hand over his brow.

"I am still a little weak," he said, "but I shall soon be strong again."

And then he told us how he had gone to work on that unlucky morning, and how Mr. Sinclaire had in a fit of anger struck him down at his feet with a heavy stick of timber, and how, on returning to conciousness, he found himself in a space in one of the unfinished walls; half-dazed, he had crawled out, and gone down and out into the night, staggering on and on, he knew not where, until he fell, insensible, in the road. He knew nothing more for weeks; when one day he found himself in a bed in a strange room; and later he learned from the kind people around him, that he had been sick a long time, and that they had found him on a lonely road, a number of miles from B—; they carefully nursed him through a dangerous fever and aided him to return home. He had learned of the events that had taken place within the last twenty-four hours, and on concluding said:

"And now, mother, we must let that unhappy man know the first thing to-morrow morning, that he is not as he supposes, a murderer. Poor wretch! he has been punished enough."

The next morning Arthur went with his friend Wilbur to the police station, and made known the innocence of Edgar Sinclaire.

Mr. Sinclaire could hardly believe, at first, that Arthur really stood before him in the flesh, and when he realized it fully, he became as weak as an infant and well-nigh swooned.

He insisted afterward, though all laughed at him, that Arthur's ghost had pursued him day and night.

Arthur smiled when he heard him.

"You do not believe me," said Sinclaire.

Arthur smiled again and was about to say something, when Mr. Wilbur, glancing at me with a peculiar smile, said:

"Mr. Sinclaire, I have a confession to make. I suspected from the first that you were in some way connected with Arthur's disappearance, and my suspicions became stronger when I learned you had changed your mind about dwelling in the mansion: I confess the horrible thought took possession of my mind that you had murdered Arthur. I determined to put you to a test, one I felt pretty sure you could not stand if you were guilty. I went to work, and with a little help from Miss Marchmont, who gave me Arthur's clothes, played the ghost."

Sinclaire said never a word. He was from that day till the day of his death, a better and a nobler man.

Arthur, the widow's son, was the hero of B——. He soon recovered his wonted health, and in a few months was married to beautiful Rose. And as for myself, well—I have promised Mr. Wilbur to become his bride when the roses bloom again.

The statistics relating to leather, that were published in our issue of the 3d inst., are so replete with instruction, that we have no doubt our readers pondered over them with keen interest. They show that the quantity of leather received in New York in 1883 was 200,000 sides less—we use round numbers—than in 1882, and in Boston there were 200,000 less sides, and 33,000 less bundles. This is the first time there has been any falling off in any one year from the preceding in New York since 1878, and in Boston since 1877. After the stimulus given to trade by the great movement and rise in 1879, the business increased with startling rapidity in both cities. There was 5 per cent. more leather received in New York in 1880 than in 1879, 20 per cent. more in 1881 than in 1880, and 20 per cent. more in 1882 than in 1881. The increase in Boston was not as large, relatively, but it was steady all the while. These two places may be taken as fair indices of the entire country. It seems to be pretty clear that the augmentation of production went on uninterruptedly in New York from 1879 to the beginning of 1883; that then the curtailment began, but the effects of it were not apparent until the 1st of July. About that time the turning point was reached. During the first half of 1883 280,000 sides more leather came forward than in the corresponding period of the preceding year, but in the last half, there were 480,000 less than in the last half of 1882.—Shoe and Leather Reporter.

One of the most reprehensible features of our graded school system is the fearful crowding of rooms in the primary grades. If there is any place where individual training is important, it is in a school-room of little children. Here are laid foundations of mental culture, also, on which the entire superstructure of school life must be reared. The difficulty is intensified by the practice of appointing as teacher in these crowded rooms, young girls, whose only experience is a service of a few weeks in a training school; often with no experience at all. The fact that fifty young children are placed in charge of one inexperienced teacher who is expected to lay the foundation for the educational training of a life time accounts for a great deal of failure farther up. We believe the limitation of the number of pupils in a primary school, to thirty, and the placing of only trained teachers on guard would do more for our public schools than all experimenting with improved methods of reform of any other description besides.—N. E. Journal of Education.

The attorney general decides that a postmaster, in order to be entitled to receive the compensation provided by the revised statutes for issuing and paying money orders, must personally perform the services required in the money order business in his office, in the sense that if the work is not physically executed by his hand, it must be executed under his immediate supervision, by a clerk employed by him for that purpose, and who is in no way employed by the post office department proper, or paid by the postal funds as distinguished from money order fudds.

CHEAP DOUGHNUTS.—Three cups sifted flour, one cup sugar, one-half teaspoonful cinnamon or any kind of spice, a very little salt, one measure each of acid and soda (or two heaping teaspoonfuls acid and one moderately heaping teaspoonful soda) of Horsford's Bread Preparation; sift all together; wet with milk, roll out thin, and fry in boiling lard. Make them pretty stiff or they will soak fat.

SELLING

BOOTS AND SHOES

— AT —

MANUFACTURER'S PRICES.

A DECIDED SUCCESS.

A great many firms in Lynn are puzzled at the large attendance and great success of our special sales, simply because these same firms have failed in their own efforts to attract attention and accomplish the same results. The reasons are plain, for we assert that our establishments can show many advantages over others. We give the following, which are convincing:

First.

Enormous stock. The immense stock of our wholesale house, together with our two retail stores, 84 Market street and 23 Market Square, make a stock to draw from five times larger than all the other shoe stores in Lynn combined.

Second.

Low Rents. While our competitors are handicapped by having to pay exorbitant rents, we with our three stores, have to pay rent only on one—a fact, the significance of which as bearing upon our ability to sell for less than others, will be apparent to all.

Third

Wholesale. Our wholesale trade, which now extends to every city and town of any importance in New England, obliges us to carry an immense stock and gives us an advantage in buying entirely beyond the reach of our competitors. For where they buy of the jobbers in small lots, we buy direct of the manufacturers, and that we can buy as low as the large Boston jobbers is abundantly attested by the fact that we are able to meet and compete with them on their own grounds and build up a wholesale trade which is constantly increasing.

Fourth.

One Price. Marked in plain figures on every pair of boots and shoes, guarantees low prices.—Equal treatment to all classes and shows at a glance the quality of the goods.

Fifth.

Truthful Representations. No misrepresentations are tolerated. Goods are sold for just what they are. Some stores adopt the "bait" plan, advertising great slaughter, immense bargains, etc. Call in half an hour after such stores open and in nearly every instance the salesman has the old story to tell you: "All gone;" "haven't your size;" "too late;" "very sorry, but we have had such a rush they are all out.—Can't we show you something else?" We have no such nonsense. It won't do.

Sixth.

Quick Sales and Small Profits. Quick sales are the life of a successful business. Small profits are sufficient when the business is done on live business principles. You save one profit by buying of the wholesaler.

Seventh.

Exchanging Goods or Refunding Money. When any dissatisfaction occurs because the selection does not please in every particular, the goods, if returned uninjured in a reasonable time, can be exchanged; and it matters not of whom it was selected, any salesman at leisure will pay careful attention to the customer. In case nothing is found to please, the cash will be cheerfully refunded.

Eighth.

Prompt Cash Payments. We are so conscious of the overwhelming advantages we possess both in buying and selling we have no hesitation in asserting that no prudent purchaser can afford to buy anything anywhere else until they have looked through our stock and got our prices. Ready money in our hands enables us to buy goods in large quantities at figures that the average retailer knows nothing about. To-day we stand simply as the connecting link between the manufacturer and consumer.

We have an immense surplus stock which we are going to close out during this sale. In order to accomplish this purpose we know at the outset that it will be necessary to offer sufficient inducements which we are determined to do. Consequently, in this instance as well as all others, we appeal directly to the interests of every purchaser, regarding that as decidedly more potent than volumes of positive assertions.

DRAMATIC AND MUSICAL.

John McCullough brings his brilliant engagement at the Boston Theatre to a close this week. He is to appear in a round of his best-liked impersonations, and will meet, no doubt, with continued generous appreciation. Wednesday and Friday nights the actor will be seen in his fine impersonation of Othello. The play for Thursday evening and Saturday afternoon is "Julius Cæsar," with the star as Brutus. The closing performance of the week, and of the McCullough engagement, will be "Richard III." Thatcher, Primrose & West's minstrel army, who have won great success everywhere, come to the Boston on the 28th for a week's stay. Their great engagement here last season was one of the biggest "burnt cork" triumphs in the annals of the Hub. "Romeo and Juliet," which will be presented in elegant fashion, will be the attraction for the opening week of Margaret Mather's engagement at the Boston Theatre, opening February 4.

The latest success of the Madison Square is to be presented at the Park this week—"The Rajah." Mr. Young's drama, still in course of its brilliant career in New York, is being produced with the original elegant scenery and unique effects, including a real running brook, into which one of the characters falls and is ducked in genuine fashion. "The Rajah," as acted by the present company, has gained many warm commendations. Mr. H. M. Pitt plays the title-role, and the cast includes a large number of favorite players. "The Rajah," as a Madison Square novelty, is certain to comand general attention.

Confusion comes back to the Globe this week, by general desire, and with a different cast. Before the comedy Sara Jewett and Lewis Morrison will appear in "Old Love Letters."

The course of "The Beggar Student" at the Bijou will shortly close. Several changes in cast are in contemplation for the last nights of its representation, which meanwhile is so good as to merit hearty plaudits from very large audiences. Mr. Harry Brown, an old favorite hero in "Mascot" days at the Gaiety, plays Ollendorff. Milloecker's opera is a delightful work. The company enter into their work with a great deal of spirit, and Mr. Neuendorff's excellent stage management secures, for all the situations, the best possible effects. Musically considered, "The Beggar Student" is certainly immensely superior to most of the comic operas of the German school. Milloecker is a master in varied composition. His solos are very fine, the chorus waltz movements effective, and the finales to the acts quite "grand opera" in method and style. During the remaining weeks of "The Beggar Student" at the Bijou audiences should be in attendance that fairly tax the seating capacity of the pretty theatre. The popularity of Suppe's "Trip to Africa," in its original version, as performed at the New York Thalia Theatre, has been such that the audiences have filled the auditorium for four weeks, large parties of patrons coming down from uptown to witness the performances. The opera is full of bright, pleasing numbers, the situations are of the most amusing kind, and the opportunities for spectacular effects afford admirable opportunities for the scenic artist and costumer. The opera follows the "Beggar Student" at the Bijou in Boston some time in February, and is to be mounted in the most expensive style, with many novelties in stage effects.

During the Mather season at the Boston, the gifted actress will impersonate Julia in "The Hunchback," for the first time in Boston. Her repertory will include, also, "Leah, the Forsaken" (in which Miss Mather has won highest praise), "The Lady of Lyons" and "As You Like It."

Miss Enid Leslie, who created the sprightly little role of Emilia in the "Rajah," at the Madison Square Theatre, New York, has been taken from the New York cast to play the part at the Park Theatre, Boston. Miss Leslie is a little English actress, and came to the Madison Square Theatre two years ago, and immediately installed herself as a favorite.

The Callender colored minstrels, who, under the management of Messrs. Gustav and Charles Frohman, were the leading feature of the recent minstrel festival in Cincinnati, will appear at the Howard on Feb. 4. The Hyers sisters—Annie and Madah—well known on the concert stage, have been engaged to appear with the minstrels in Boston.

Signor Brocolini, who appeared here in Virginia, is engaged for the production of Princess Ida at New York.

The Howard Specialty Company and Barlow Wilson & Co's Minstrels played to fair houses in Mechanic Hall, Salem, last week—both under the management of Moulton & Johnson. Friday, of this week, J. H. Wallack will play the "Bandit King." Next Monday Mr. and Mrs. N. C. Goodwin and the Weathersbys will appear, and Mr. Goodwin's imitations of celebrated actors will be given. Tuesday evening Tony Denier's Humpty Dumpty will be the attraction.

Miscellaneous.

Why refer to the decline of Northern Pacific? Why not look at the whole list of stocks? Wabash sold at 96 3-4 little more than two years ago; now it is at 18 3-4. Denver has dropped 49 points within two years. New York Central has declined 26 points, from 138, within the same time. Lake Shore has been 24 points higher than it is now. Chicago, Burlington and Quincy sold at 193; now it is down to 121. Texas Pacific has slipped from 73 5-8 to 17 1-2; Louisville and Nashville is down 55 points; Lackawanna has lost 33 points; Central Pacific has fallen 32 points; New Jersey Central 13 points; Canada Southern 33 points; Union Pacific 48 points, and Western Union 21 points since it had $15,000,000 of water injected into it. All these changes have taken place within two years.—Rufus Hatch.

O. S. Butler, Georgetown, essay—Management and training of the Family Horse, 1st premium, $15; Gilbert Conant, Ipswich, essay—History and Cultivation of the Potato, 2d premium, $10; Benj. P. Ware, Marblehead, essay—Historical Sketch of the Essex Agricultural Society, 3d premium, $8.

O. S. Butler, Georgetown, report on comparative value of food for cattle, 1st premium, $10; Thomas C. Thurlow, West Newbury, report on underdraining lands, 2d premium, $8; Asa T. Newhall, Lynn, report on root crops, 3d premium, $6.

A neat puzzle is as follows: Tell your neighbor to think of any number he pleases, but not to tell you what it is. Tell him then to double it. When he has done that, let him add an even number to it, which you yourself must give him. After doing this he must halve the whole, then from what is left take away the number he first thought of. When he has arrived so far, if his calculations have all been made correctly, you will be able to give him the exact remainder, which will simply be the half of the even number you told him to add to his own.—Ex.

The Clinton Semi-Weekly Times has concluded that is not a popular form for a local paper and hereafter will be issued but once a week. The Times' exaperiment has been watched with a great deal of interest by publishers of newspapers, and while all will be disappointed at the failure of the Times to make its semi pay, its return to weekly form seems to give emphasis to the fact that there is no successful medium between the weekly and the daily.—Palmer Journal.

Joseph A. Stein, No. 22 Central Avenue, Lynn, has issued a very handsome Calendar, with views of Sliding Rock, Lynn Beach, and High Rock, Lynn, which are very attractive and pretty. No lady could object to one of them for her parlor,—in fact everybody who has seen them is anxious to trade with Mr. Stein, who, by the way, carries an elegant line of Gents', Boys and Youth's Shoes, at popular prices.

Salem harbor has been frozen over and presented an animated appearance nearly all of last week. Large numbers of eelers improved the opportunity to catch a "string" of those slippery fellows and a number of good ones was taken. A good many skaters also enjoyed the glassy surface, the portion of the harbor not affected by the flow of the tide, making a fine skating place.

T. Bailey Aldrich says that if he were a young man, obliged to live by contributions to various publications, he would go to New York; but if he were a literary man of long established tastes and work, engaged in writing some long thought-of book or some important history, he would prefer Boston as a place of residence.

OUT IN ARIZONA. Hon. A. W. Sheldon, Associate Justice, Supreme Bench of Arizona Territory, writes as follows: "It affords me great pleasure to say, from my personal observation, and you know the scope of such has been very extended, that St. Jacobs Oil is the great and wonderful conqueror of pain, the sovereign cure for all bodily aches and pains, and I cheerfully bear this testimony."

It is suggested that the Congressmen who would compel the Government to receive back the trade dollar at full face value should be watched. This depreciated silver coin is not in the hands of the people, but has been bought up on a speculation, and some Congressmen are interested in the little spec.

"But, Sylvia," said Hattie, "if you climb that fence Mr. Tawmus, who is over there, will see your stockings." And Sylvia repled: "I thought of that."—Boston Post.

The Peabody Press.

JOHN P FERNALD, ALBERT VITTUM,
Editors and Publishers.

THE WOBURN Advertiser is out with a stirring editorial in favor of non-partisan nominations for the offices of that town. This is a brave thing for that paper to do; its editor being a life-long democrat, and the town of Woburn being more of a democratic town than is Peabody at the present time. But the course of democratic power does not run smooth in Woburn. Rival factions have been contending for the supremacy. This is getting to be the case in Boston and other large democratic cities. In this county, the labor party, which is not the democratic party, is an important factor. United with the democratic party in the last election, in their allegiance to Gen. Butler, they carried the county by a small majority. And even then the Labor party got the lion's share of the loaves and fishes. But when the emergency of an honest government—a non-partisan government, has presented itself, as was the case in Boston, causing the triumphant election of Gen. Martin, the blind followers of party have been routed, showing that there is a ground upon which all good citizens can stand—independent of party, and seeking only the best good of the city or town wherein they reside. This is the issue which we hope will be presented to the citizens of our own town at the March election. The attitude of the PRESS under the present management, has steadily been in favor of the best men—without regard to party affiliations. Upon this ground we stand today. County and state politics and town politics are to us an entirely different affair.

Our town has made many improvements during the last decade. Those improvements must be supplemented by others in coming years. The growing increase of population—necessitating larger school accommodations—the advent of high service water, with its burdens and cares and responsibility, as well as lasting benefit to the community, the larger and better town hall accommodations — yielding a building whose management for the best good of the town and the citizens thereof requires judgment, energy and experience—all these are demands upon the town and its voters which must be met.

It is meet, therefore, that the officers of the town, and of all its departments should be the best men, not of one party, but of all parties. The continual growler is not the best man. The man who talks the loudest of great changes that are needed—who would overturn everything to make that change—is not the best man. The man whose ideas are far over the heads of the citizens of the town, who is opposed to genuine progress which means the material prosperity of the town its manufactures and labor—and above all who is destitute of public spirit, which means the growth of the town in enterprise and thrift—is not the best man. In the words of Mark Allen of the Woburn Advertiser, before alluded to, "What we want is a strong and united effort by Democrats, Republicans, Temperance men and all others who have the good of the town at heart, to elect men to office who shall look well after the interests of the itizens without stopping to inquire whether what they may do shall be for the interests of one party or the other. We want men as town officers that can stand upon their own individuality as men, without the fear of the party lash before their eyes."

A CASE has recently occurred in Cambridge which calls attention again to the system of "cramming" which is in vogue in the public schools in that vicinity. The physician in attendance was courageous enough to give the primary cause of the death of the young miss to which reference is made. The fault in this case was traceable directly to the rank system. If she were absent a day, she would spoil the record of the class. So great was the importance of this in the eyes of the teacher, that she was urged to be present at all events, even if she could do nothing after she arrived there. But this was not all. The stimulus of a good record, and the fancied disgrace of a poor one, to an ambitious young girl is capable of doing an infinite amount of mischief. And if the girl were sent to school which ill, she was sure to work. This was the case here. And between the terms of the school there were reviews to be gone over, and books of history to be read for comparison. Brain fever was the result, from which, after a short illness, the girl died. It is of little use to say that without the stimulus of a good record nothing could be accomplished. The scholars that feel the effects of the system are the ones who are the brightest in the class. They are always the readiest to do the extra work. Those who care more for health than excessive study—or perhaps are not inclined to very studious habits—will look out for plenty of exercise at all events. This exercise the others will not take—and it is just that which is needed and even more, because the harder the brain works the more exercise is needful for health.

It is time that parents and teachers recognize the paramount necessity of health on the part of the young ladies of this generation. With now and then an exception the boys will take care of themselves. They will not leave their base ball, or their skating to study out of school hours. If they do study at all, it is after these sports are finished—and if they do cheat nature of a few hours of sleep, it is compensated for by the exercise which they have taken. On the contrary the girls are put to the piano practice, or needle work if they have any time—time that should be spent out of doors. This is true, not only of the school girl, but the female population throughout the state. There is too little exercise out of doors—too much of confinement in doors.

IT IS hard to believe that some one has not blundered in the loss of life attendant upon the wreck of the Columbus. Gay Head light is known by all mariners, and the promontory, although dangerous, is among one of the most frequented of summer resorts in that vicinity. Every rock is known, and few places can be so accurately described—so accurately that it would seem the merest novice in navigation should have steered clear of the rocks. It is not well, however, to pass judgment upon any one. A higher power has already done that. It is more than likely that the sad event was due to a combination of circumstances beyond the power of man to avert. This, however, does not lessen the pain at the loss of the loved ones—a loss which seems more terrible in a wintry night, and in the midst of a raging sea.

Mr. W. C. C. Moulton of Salem died last week of paralysis. He was well known in this vicinity, having been a large dealer in fancy goods and notions, on Essex street. His store at first was small, but his success in business induced him to enlarge, and at the time of his prosperity he had a good trade and a large stock on the corner of Essex and St. Peter street. The business was too confining for him, and he closed out his stock to Frank Cousins and engaged in the produce business—which took him more in the open air. His age was 44 years. He was a member of Essex Lodge, I. O. O. F., which attended his funeral Sunday in a body.

The Essex Agricultural Society hold the 25th Institute, at Town Hall, Bradford, on Friday, Feb. 1, '84, at 9.30, a. m. Subject, a. m., "The relation between the Seed-Grower and the Farmer," by J. J. H. Gregory. In the afternoon an address is expected from J. C. Greenough, president of the Massachusetts Agricultural College. All persons interested are invited to be present and take part in the discussions. Ladies are particularly invited to attend.

There ought to be a large attendance at the concert of war songs to be given to-morrow night in the new Opera House. Every soldier should be there. All friends of the soldier should be there. Every member of the G. A. R. should be there. Every friend of the G. A. R. should be there. And when we have said that, it means a full house.

Mr. Chas. S. Goulding, who is captain of the Salem Polo Club, has accepted a position as assistant at the Salem rink.

SPARKS.

At 11 minutes past nine o'clock last evening an alarm of fire was given from the whistles of Brown & Stanley, A. B. Clark and Richardson, Doyle & Co., for a fire in the currying shop of the latter named firm. The department rallied promptly, and in six minutes from the first alarm Hose 1 had a stream in one of the windows on the third floor, where the fire was burning the worst. Hose 4 soon followed and in a very short time all the department with the exception of Hose 5 were hard at work fighting one of the most stubborn fires that we have had in this town for some time. The fire broke out in the eastern end of the stuffing loft, which was packed full of leather and splits in stuff, and this with the oil saturated walls and floor, and the large quantities of oil and tallow, furnished food for the flames, which soon swept through the whole loft, breaking through the windows and threatening the whole structure, but the numerous streams of water, and the prompt work of the firemen soon had it all under control, and at 11 o'clock the boys were dismissed, only to be recalled again at one o'clock by the fires rekindling at the point where the ell and main building were joined. Hose 4 laid a line but did not wet it as the fire was extinguished with a hand hose. There were some thirty hands employed in the shop who will be thrown out of work for some two or three weeks. The loss on building, stock and machinery will foot up about $10,000 with an insurance of $41,050 in twenty-two different companies of which the agency of Chadwick & Co., has the following: On stock, Northern $2000, Royal $4000, Phœnix $2500. On building and machinery, Imperial $1000. The other companies are by out of town agencies. The cause of the fire was probably spontaneous combustion. The watchman had been in the loft a little while before and had seen no signs of fire, but when it did start it ran over the loft aided by the draft from the elevator which drove it into the attic.

There is considerable criticism going around this morning in regard to the management and the working of the firemen, which is both unjust and uncalled for, as all have worked hard, and under a good many disadvantages, it being slippery under foot, on the ladders, and the men were for the most part wet through at the first of it and their clothes froze on them. One thing they say is that a ladder should have been put up at the Western end of the building, and men sent in that way with a stream. These men are always ready to stand back and make suggestions, but how many of them would have taken a line and gone into the building in the face of the smoke from the burning oil and grease? It is all very well to talk from a safe distance, but the fact that the building remains standing, comparatively unhurt below the roof, is evidence enough that it was well handled, all croakers to the contrary notwithstanding.

Last Friday night the members of Hose 2 sat down to a supper at their house and a general good time followed; but we think that something in the chowder did not set well, as some of the boys were troubled with bad dreams and imagined that they heard an alarm of fire; so they struck their bell several times and started out in search of the blaze with their carriage. Some of them said that they took the alarm from the South Peabody bell, and so started in that direction, but they soon found out that all the fire "was in their eye." Mistakes will happen, and the boys of Hose 2 were not going to be left if there was a fire.

Hose 3 are going to try it again, this week, with one of their social times in their hose house. They will hold a necktie party Friday evening with the Danvers quadrille band to furnish the music. That they will keep up their record is known to all who have attended their previous parties.

A collation was furnished at the engine house after the fire by Richardson, Doyle & Co., and all the boys took hold as though they were hungry after their work.

Wm. H. Hildreth and his wife furnished the members of Hose 4 and Steamer 2 with a bountiful collation after the fire was out.

Hose 1 was the first out of the house on the first alarm.

Four thousand feet of hose was in use last night, and Janitor Smart will have a chance to show the boys that he is all his name implies.

The new carriage of Hose 4 arrived yesterday afternoon from Charlestown, and was taken right to its new quarters. It is on the same principle as the No. 1 carriage, painted carmine, striped with gold, and scrolls on the reel in gold and colors. It has a reel capable of carrying 1200 feet of hose, weighs about 1400 ponnds and is in all respects, except varnishing, a first class piece of work.

The following we clip from the Sunday Globe: Torrent Hose company 3, of Peabody, recently held a night cap party at their hose house, and it was reported that many of the elderly ladies of that town, sat up all night in consequence.

The first steam fire engine was used successfully in Cincinnati. It was the invention of Marco Lotta, employed in Greenwood's foundry. The volunteer fire department ridiculed it, but its first service was to save a row of warehouses filled with costly goods.

Two members of Hose 1 nearly got thrown from a ladder by the ladders slipping and turning on the ice. They only saved themselves by letting go the line of hose, and the ladder was turned back into position and the men got down from their shaky position.

Hose 2 on the second alarm started out with their carriage and made wonderful time for the hard wheeling, a small crowd and a heavy carriage.

Chief Littlefield received a letter from a town in Mich., Saturday, offering for sale a second hand hose cart, as it was known out there that the town was going to purchase carriages.

Bowditch & Cogswell have just built and shipped, in ten days from the receipt of the order, two hose reels for a town in Pennsylvania.

The Button Engine Works at Waterford, N. Y., have just finished and shipped to Cottage City, Martha's Vinyard, a new steam fire engine, hose carriage and 1500 feet of hose.

Meeting of the Firemen's Relief Association in Temperance hall on Thursday evening of this week.

F. H. Edgerly, of Steamer two, has been on the sick list for the past week.

The Hook & Ladder truck being built by Dole and Osgood for the city of Salem, will be finished in a very short time now, as it is being painted. It is on the same general principle as our trucks with some few improvements, and is a little heavier. Z.

NORTH PEABODY.

Mr. Calvin Pierce is remodeling the house and store lately purchased by Mr. Michael Kelly on Andover street into a tenement house for two families.

Last Friday a little daughter of Mr. Chichester, of Mount Pleasant, fell or slipped on the ice in the Felton school yard, knocking out two teeth and breaking a third, and otherwise injuring her.

Mr. Dougan, formerly in the employ of Mrs. Hazen Ayer, has removed the house of Mrs. Derby Loftus, on Andover street, and will conduct the butchering business.

Mr. Henry Wilkinson is at work in Haverhill this winter.

Mr. Edward Putnam, who has been ill for the last two or three months, is better and will soon resume work for Pike & Whipple.

Master D. Henry Whipple of the Peabody High School, who was awarded the double runner sled, named Naumkeag, by the Naumkeag Clothing Co., of Salem, for the best essay on the clothing business, received it last Monday, and immediately christened it on Osborn's Eminence (Felton's Hill), otherwise Ray's Height, the second trip landing a load of 12 in a snow bank at the foot of the hill, with the sled on top of them. No bones were broken and no harm was done. The sled is a decided success.

Wilmot's watches are going like hot cakes. The goods are bargains, and every purchaser to the amount of $10 gets a watch free.

Last Saturday evening, Chas. Hosmer, employed at T. E. Wilson's machine shop, was working at a lathe, and turning the gas burner to enable him to see his work, his coat and vest were set on fire nearly destroying them.

Information received by relatives here, brings out the fact that the Martin Brophy, who is missing from his boarding place in Charlestown, is not the one whose remains were recently found at East Kingston, N. H. The description was about the same except that the man found had lost several fingers while Brophy had not.

Last Monday evening about a score of masons of this town accepted an invitation of Liberty Lodge of Beverly, and visited that Lodge. The regular work of the order was carried out and an excellent collation provided. The brethren returned about midnight, in a special horse car chartered for the occasion.

With the advent of leap year it was thought that some, at least, of the young ladies in town would embrace with open arms the opportunities denied them during the past three years, but as yet the girls seem somewhat backward about coming forward. Even "our boy" says he is getting discouraged.

A committee of the Unity Club have in contemplation a first class concert, next month, to be given in the church. Arrangements are in progress for some fine talent, and with the assistance of the members of the club and committee a genuine treat may be expected. We hope to announce further particulars next week.

The hall in the new block of the Essex Club has been hired by the Spiritualists and their first social was held last Thursday evening in their new quarters. The hall is fitted up expressly for their use, and is very tastefully arranged. An oyster supper followed by dancing, was the programme for that evening.

Last Saturday William Keroe fell into a vat of hot liquor at the tannery of Richard Harrington on Walnut street. He was badly scalded.

The weight of humanity resting upon the supports of the town hall last Monday evening, was in the vicinity of 110 tons; thus assuring the safety of the building.

A remonstrance against biennial elections, signed by a large number of voters, was handed to Representative Clark, last Monday, to be presented to the Legislature.

The next legal holiday in this state will be the 152d anniversary of the birth of Geo. Washington, which falls on Feb. 22.

There will be another leap year party at Upton's Hall, Wednesday evening, Feb. 6.

Miss Sarah Magum and some of her associates are arranging for a leap year dance at Upton's Hall sometime next month.

Now is the time to buy Clothing. The Naumkeag have advertised a mark down sale of Winter Clothing. When they advertise a mark-down sale, you may depend upon it, the wool has got to fly as there is no humbug about their advertisements.

Lucas' annual sale of shop worn boots and shoes has begun. And he is prepared to show the public some genuine bargains for everyday wear, at an enormous sacrifice.

Remember that the Naumkeag Clothing Co. have inaugurated a mark down sale of clothing. This means business every time. In fact there don't seem to be any dull season with this firm.

Have you seen the large assortment of Hamburg edgings which Sawyer has? They are cheap, too.

Mr. James F. Almy, of Salem, spoke at a Constitutional prohibition convention held in the South church at Pittsfield, last Tuesday, taking strong ground against the liquor traffic.

L. Buck, the successor to L. R. Power, is having a good trade in his store, corner of Caller street. He keeps a good assortment of boots and shoes and his prices are right.

This is the last week of Conrad's closing out sale of seasonable goods. The bargains which his customers have found would be incomprehensible were not Mr. Conrad's facilities for securing such bargains known. Our readers will miss a great opportunity if they fail to visit his store during the progress of the sale.

A very pleasant and important social event occurred at the residence of the parents of one of the parties last Wednesday morning. It was the marriage of William A. Butler, Esq., a prominent and talented young attorney, son of the officiating clergyman, Rev. O. S. Butler, and Miss Sadie K., youngest daughter of one of our oldest, wealthiest and most prominent citizens, Samuel Plumer, Esq., the well-known veteran merchant tailor. The ceremony was performed in season for the newly made husband and wife to take the 11. 30 train for Boston, whither they went en route for New York and Washington on a bridal tour, accompanied by the best wishes of a large circle of friends.—Georgetown Advocate.

UPHOLSTERY, Draperies and Curtains, are imported, furnished and put up in the finest style, at very low prices, and at short notice by Paine's Furniture Co. of Boston. They send men all over the country to do this work. Samples of material, and designs are sent by mail, and skilled workmen are sent to take measures and estimate the cost. This firm has on hand an immense stock of the richest goods anywhere to be found, and at the lowest prices. It is surprising, the amount of goods they furnish, for so little money. When you go to Boston and wish to see the finest stock of Furniture, in all the new styles, visit Paine's on Canal street, opposite the Boston and Maine Depot.

HOME HAPPENINGS.

The Sunday Globe has the following complimentary notice of Holten Lodge, I. O. O. F., of this town:— On Thursday, January 29th, 1846, the following named brethren were the charter members: Jonathan Shove, Moses Tenney, Wm. H. Coffrain, George R. Carlton, William Calder, Charles Estes and William D. Northend, and the lodge was instituted. J. M. Southwick, Joseph Moore, John R. Poor, William S. Tullock, John M. C. Noyes, Jefferson Taylor, F. A. Merrill, Benjamin Wheeler and Thomas Hardy were elected and initiated, and the following officers elected and installed: Jonathan Shove, N. G.; M. Tenney, V. G.; George R. Carlton, R. S.; Wm. H. Coffrain, L. S. The late Francis Dane was proposed for membership the same night. The cash receipts were $90. The lodge met in the hall of Essex Lodge, July 6, 1847. The total receipts were reported as $752.35, and the expenditures $675.45, leaving a balance of $71.84 in the treasury, and the widow and orphan fund $63.48 Jonathan Shove was the first death reported in the lodge, September 4, 1847. The lodge struggled along until 1853, when it surrendered its charter and divided the funds, amounting to $964.66. Three of the members took cards the night of the separation and joined Fraternity Lodge of Salem—Charles Estes, Nathan Tuttle and James M. Southwick. They would not take part in the division, and Brothers Estes and Tuttle are in Fraternity Lodge now. February 22, 1878, the charter was revived, on petition of twenty-one brothers from different lodges, and W. F. Sawyer elected noble grand; Daniel B. Lord, Jr., V. G.; N. C. Patterson, R. S.; George E. Lewis, treasurer; S. S. Littlefield, P. S. They were installed the same night, and Brother Wm. M. Hill of Fraternity Lodge of Salem appointed district deputy. Fraternity Lodge of Salem made Holten Lodge a donation of $100. Twenty-two candidates were initiated. The receipts were $447, and on the second night $66; third night, $167.75. A. T. Osborn was the first death since the reorganization. He died April 12, 1880, having been a member two years. He was 25 years of age. The lodge to-day numbers 147 members, with $4000 in the treasury. William M. Hill has held the position of district deputy since the reorganization, and the lodge regards him as its father. No lodge in New England can show a better record for six years than Holten Lodge. Thirty-one members were added in 1883.

The entire machinery of the Auburndale Watch company was disposed of at auction, last Wednesday. The manufactory was located in the town of Weston. This large enterprise was started to manufacture the Auburndale watch, a rotary timekeeper, but was not found capable of competing with others now in the field. A great portion of the machines were made especially for the factory at a cost estimated at $50,000 and the amount realized by the sale was only about $6,000. The larger part of this machinery was purchased by Mr. Edgar Upton, of this town, and will be removed here. The company, of late, have only been manufacturing thermometers and horse-timers, a branch of the work we believe Mr. Upton intends to continue.

Lots of tramps have found lodgings at the police station of late. The next morning they are given a little gentle exercise in sweeping up and then are given a substantial breakfast of crackers and water, after which they depart usually cursing their ill luck. We don't believe the report that after that sumptuous fare they have called at private residences and asked for a bone or a slice of bread to take the taste out of their mouths. A man is a man even if he is a tramp and should be treated like a man. None of us know the unfortunate circumstances that made him what he is or we would be more charitable.

The paper cap party under the auspices of the Murray Club, of this town, was a very social affair. Old and young participated and there were over one hundred couples on the floor at the commencement of the dance. The Murray Club themselves were present in goodly numbers, besides many from out of town. Some fifty dollars were realized from the party, and the club are to be congratulated on their success. Another party under the same auspices will be given Thursday evening, Feb. 7th, and for which tickets are now out.

Mr. Richard Stevens of Townsend's express route has made good the amount of money obtained of him, by the party of the same name belonging, to Timothy Holland.

Those who predicted an open winter were quite correct. It is a very open winter—wide open.

There is a movement on foot to establish an Old Ladies' Home in this town. The following petition is being circulated by two benevolent ladies interested in the work and a thorough canvass of the town will be made. "We, the undersigned, in order to advance the interests of a home for Old Ladies in the town of Peabody, agree to form ourselves into a society for the purpose under rules for membership to be determined when the society shall be formed." The membership consists of an annual assessment of twenty-five cents, although larger sums are not refused. The Benevolent Society have at the present time $4000 which will go towards a building fund for that purpose. After the canvass has been made a meeting will be called and officers elected. It is a worthy object and should receive a hearty and cordial response from the public.

The Union Coffee Party at the New Opera House, next Tuesday evening, promises to be very successful. Large numbers of the tickets have been disposed of to the different labor organizations in this vicinity. There is a mistaken idea among the people in regard to this coffee party, many supposing that it was a movement on the part of the Democratic party for political purposes. As near as we can ascertain it is the movement of an organization known as the Knights of Labor which recognizes no party. Besides, several of our business men, it is said, have contributed money to make it a success.

A supplementary entertainment under the auspices of the lecture committee was given Monday evening by Nella F. Brown, the accomplished and popular elocutionist. The audience was no doubt the largest that has ever entered the building at one time. The hoodlum element was rather demonstrative as usual, and created quite a disturbance several times during the evening. Miss Brown fully sustained the reputation she has earned in readings in our former courses. Her scene from Marie Stuart was particularly well received. By request Money Musk was given with Miss Nellie Bartlett as accompanist.

Previous to the snow the frozen surface of the large ponds in this vicinity held their own in the matter of pleasure seekers. It costs dollars to enjoy the pleasures of sleighing, but only dimes to have hours of sport on the zipping steel of the skates's natural fields. It was a pretty sight to see the large number of skaters at a time, including among them numerous red cheeked ladies and rosy children, some skating, and some standing around the large bon-fire on the ice, and all having a royal good time.

The following letters remain at the Post Office:—R. W. Burnham, Mary Buckley, Annie Connors, H. G. Crockett, Daniel Crosbee, John J. Conelly, Patrick Canty, D. A. Casey, I. B. Dodge, Mrs. Dora Flagg, Hollengsworth & Whitney, Wm. Haskell, Stephen Howlett, Maggie E. Harris 2d. C. N. Ingalls, Isa Mc. Colgan, Annie Oldson, Henry Olberg, E. R. Perry, Mrs. Jno. Prince, Calvin Pierce, John Ryan, John Sheehane, Tim Sheehan, Chas. Sawer, Thomas T. Stone, Mrs. Saml. Wilkinson.

The temperance meeting at the town hall last Thursday evening, was largely attended. Mr. Neil Shaw, by whose efforts it was brought about, presided. Mr. Frank Flinn, President of the Reform Club of Lynn, assisted him. Addresses were made by Messrs. Shaw, Flinn, Burnham and others of the Reform Club and by Mr. J. P. King of this town. Several recitations and comic songs were given. A collection was taken up to defray expenses.

The Boston Journal recently gave a history of the various lottery schemes with headquarters at St. Stephens, N. B., and denounced them as elaborate swindles which the people of St. Stephen allowed to be carried on because money is brought into the place, and employment is given to some fifteen or twenty boys and girls who prepare the circulars for the mails. Quite a number of our people have been annoyed by mail matter from that same lottery.

Mr. French closed his course of illustrated lectures in Salem last week, when his theme, the Wonders of our West, gave him a grand opportunity to show magnificent pictures, and his eloquent descriptions were listened to with the closest attention. Mr. French's lectures are always instructive and entertaining, and his views are excellent specimens of art and are always thrown upon the screen clearly and distinctly.

We call attention to the advertisement in another column, of the Grand Fair of the Lasters' Protective Union, to be held in Lynn, in March. It will be seen that the amount of presents to be distributed to the holders of season tickets is the largest in aggregate of any fair ever holden in this vicinity, the Grand Cash Present being $2,000. Orders addressed to the Fair Committee for tickets will be promptly attended to.

The best way to cure the young men of staying late nights is to send the girls to bed early.

We have an impression that there will be many ringing affairs this leap year. The first we are called upon to itemize is that of Mr. John Hanrahan. Jack was always a surprising fellow, and we gladly em-brace the opportunity of chronicling that a large number of his Peabody and Salem friends assembled at his home on Mt. Vernon street, and presented him with a handsome seal gold ring, engraved with his initials and the date of presentation, Jan. 17, 1884. Mr. John Regan, of the Salem Register, made the presentation speech. Jack gracefully responded, acknowledging that they had "got the bulge" on him, and thanking them for their kindness in presenting such a valuable token of their esteem. After a bountiful collation, to which all sat down, the evening was pleasantly passed with singing, recitations, witticisms, etc. At a late hour the party returned home pleased with the manner in which they spent the evening.

The Salem and South Danvers Oil Company held its annual meeting at the Essex House last week, when the treasurer's report was read and accepted. The products of these works are not as profitable as they were in the early years of the enterprise, and there is now very little margin between the prices of crude and refined oils, though the patronage bestowed upon the works is as good as ever. The following Directors were chosen: Wm. H. Little, (Peabody), Daniel Varney, Charles H. Weston, N. A. Horton, W. B. Richardson (Peabody), James Braden, John Culliton. N. G. Simonds was chosen Clerk and Treasurer. At the close of the meeting the Directors met and chose Wm. H. Little as President. A dividend of two per cent has been declared.

A man giving his name as Chas. H. Watson, and claiming Albany, N. Y., as his home, had an attack of delirium tremens at the police station last Wednesday night. At times so intense was his suffering and so crazy was he, that he tore the clothes from his person, and but for the presence of Capt. Barnabee, he would have done himself injury.

The next meeting of the Unity club will be held with Mrs. J. P. Fernald, Tremont street. The "Invitation" a sheet edited by Mrs. Dr. Worcester will be read, and will contain original articles, contributed by different members. The latter portion of the evening will be devoted to amusements.

Robert E. Day, city editor of the Daily Palladium, New Haven, Ct., sends us a copy of his Whist Rhymes, giving all the essential points briefly and accurately. They will prove useful to experts or beginners. He sends them by mail for 6c., or they can be purchased of the newsdealers.

The elegant double-runner which the Naumkeag Clothing Company offered to the boy in Essex county writing the best essay on the clothing business, was on Wednesday awarded to D. Henry Whipple, of Peabody, the judges being Prof. D. B. Hagar, of the Normal School, and Mr. A. L. Goodrich of the High school.

The case of stealing junk from Mr. Geo. H. Little culminated in the arrest of Mr. Thomas Dunney, of whom Mr. Rahilly bought the junk. Dunney is engineer at Frank Tyler's shop, and the evidence showed that the parts sold were pieces of an old jet pump that had belonged to the premises. Dunney was discharged.

Mr. D. A. Caskin dropped in last Monday to bid us good bye previous to his departure for Minnesota. Mr. C's. health has been failing rapidly of late and when he left town he could not speak above a whisper. He will make his principal stop at Detroit. His many friends in this town will unite with us in wishing for his speedy recovery.

Some people are beginning to believe the new comet a humbug, but it isn't. It is as yet very difficult to discern it with the unassisted eye, but a small glass brings it into full view. It is in the northwest about forty-five degrees above the horizon just after sunset, and in a few weeks will form a brilliant spectacle.

Four large rodents were killed on Friday about four o'clock, at the old shop of John A. Lord Jr. & Co., on Wallis street, by a gamey little rat terrier, hardly bigger than the largest rat. The dog made a gallant fight and killed his natural enemies in less than five minutes. He was bitten on one leg but not badly.

Officer Sweeney is the last victim reported as drawing a diamond ring at the Boston tea and coffee store. What are all of our people going to do with so much valuable jewelry? If this thing keeps on we shall have a lot of professional burglars down upon us.

A young lady became very much alarmed last Thursday and reported the loss of $100 which she left in her room during a temporary absence. Afterward she found it just where she left it. She was more frightened than hurt.

Mr. Samuel Trask has had the interior of his model hardware store photographed.

THE LIGHT OF DAY.

PAST IMPOSSIBILITIES THE FACTS OF THE PRESENT—HELP IN THE NEW ERA.

"I remember when they were putting up the poles for the first telegraph line in the State of New York, and now look there!" exclaimed a citizen of the metropolis to his friend, as the two stood on the summit of the tall Equitable Building in Broadway. "The city is strung with wires like a harp, and electric communication is the daily miracle of the world. People no longer wonder and laugh at it as they did at Morse when he first suggested its possibility."

The age marches on and prejudice must give way. Nobody has a monopoly of truth. Even the conservative guild of phys cians admit that the secrets of medicine are shared by all men. "I dressed his wound, and God healed him," said old Galen. Once that terrible disease, Rheumatism, was supposed to be a shifting, local ailment, now attacking the joints and now the muscles To-day it is demonstrated to be a disease of the blood"

Mrs. Henry Bogert, of No. 454 Atlantic Avenue, Brooklyn, N. Y., writes to Messrs. HISCOX & Co., of New York, proprietors of PARKER'S GINGER TONIC, that "she had been completely disabled from Rheumatism and pain in the back and limbs. She was advised to take the Tonic for Kidney disease. She did so, and her Rheumatism disappeared." The reason is simple. Diseased kidneys produce rheumatic symptoms. Cure them and you destroy Rheumatism. This is now admitted by all intelligent physicians. It is the new light thrown on their time-worn and mistaken theories.

PARKER'S GINGER TONIC, which is a combination of the best remedies for the blood known to science, is universally successful in combating this terrible complaint. Those who, like Mrs. Bogert suffer from Kidney or Liver diseases or any complaint arising from impure blood, will find the TONIC a prompt and certain remedy. Prices 50c. and $1. a bottle. The larger size the cheaper.

AYER'S Cherry Pectoral.

No other complaints are so insidious in their attack as those affecting the throat and lungs: none so trifled with by the majority of sufferers. The ordinary cough or cold, resulting perhaps from a trifling or unconscious exposure, is often but the beginning of a fatal sickness. AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL has well proven its efficacy in a forty years' fight with throat and lung diseases, and should be taken in all cases without delay.

A Terrible Cough Cured.

"In 1857 I took a severe cold, which affected my lungs. I had a terrible cough, and passed night after night without sleep. The doctors gave me up. I tried AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL, which relieved my lungs, induced sleep, and afforded me the rest necessary for the recovery of my strength. By the continued use of the PECTORAL a permanent cure was effected. I am now 62 years old, hale and hearty, and am satisfied your CHERRY PECTORAL saved me.

HORACE FAIRBROTHER."

Rockingham, Vt., July 15, 1882.

Croup.—A Mother's Tribute.

"While in the country last winter my little boy, three years old, was taken ill with croup; it seemed as if he would die from strangulation. One of the family suggested the use of AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL, a bottle of which was always kept in the house. This was tried in small and frequent doses, and to our delight in less than half an hour the little patient was breathing easily. The doctor said that the CHERRY PECTORAL had saved my darling's life. Can you wonder at our gratitude? Sincerely yours,

MRS. EMMA GEDNEY."

159 West 128th St., New York, May 16, 1882.

"I have used AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL in my family for several years, and do not hesitate to pronounce it the most effectual remedy for coughs and colds we have ever tried. A. J. CRANE."

Lake Crystal, Minn., March 13, 1882.

"I suffered for eight years from Bronchitis, and after trying many remedies with no success, I was cured by the use of AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL. JOSEPH WALDEN."

Byhalia, Miss., April 5, 1882.

"I cannot say enough in praise of AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL, believing as I do that but for its use I should long since have died from lung troubles. E. BRAGDON."

Palestine, Texas, April 22, 1882.

No case of an affection of the throat or lungs exists which cannot be greatly relieved by the use of AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL, and it will always cure when the disease is not already beyond the control of medicine.

CATARRH

HAY-FEVER

ELY'S CREAM BALM, has gained an enviable reputation where ever known, displacing all other preparations. An article of undoubted merit.

CURES Cold in the Head AS NOT A LIQUID or SNUFF.

Apply by the finger into the nostrils.—When absorbed it effectually cleanses the nasal passages of virus, causing healthy secretions. It allays inflammation, protects the membranal linings of the head from additional colds, completely heals the sores and restores the sense of taste and smell. Beneficial results are realized by a few applications. A thorough treatment will cure. Send for circular. By mail, prepaid, 50c. —stamps received. Sold by all druggists.

MADE ON PURPOSE.

ONE OF THOSE MISTAKES(?) WHICH ARE MORE FREQUENT THAN PROFITABLE.

"Why, my child, this is not BENSON'S CAPCINE POROUS PLASTER," said a father to his little daughter, after examining a package she had just brought from the drug store.

"Isn't it, Papa? I'm sorry, but I asked the man for Benson's—I know I did, and he took the twenty-five cents you gave me to pay for it with," exclaimed the child, positively. "Maybe the drug man made a mistake."

"I'll go 'round myself and see," was the gentleman's comment, as he donned his coat and hat.

"Why didn't you send me Benson's plaster, instead of this cheap and trashy thing?"

"Why, I,—I, thought that would suit you just as well—and—"

"You thought! you thought! What business had you to think? I don't pay you for thinking, but for filling my order," said the indignant caller, contemptuously, "There! take that thing back and give me my money, I'll get what I want elsewhere."

ON 30 DAYS' TRIAL.

THE VOLTAIC BELT CO., Marshall, Mich. will send DR. DYE'S CELEBRATED ELECTRO VOLTAIC BELTS and ELECTRIC APPLIANCES on trial for 30 days to men (young or old) who are afflicted with Nervous Debility, Lost Vitality, and kindred troubles, guaranteeing speedy and complete restoration of health and manly vgor. Address as above.—N. B.—No risk is incurred, as 30 days' trial is allowed.

Book Notices.

Peterson's for February is received. The engravings are fine and reading matter of an interesting character, published by Charles J. Peterson 306 Chestnut street Philadelphia, subscription price two dollars a year. For sale by the Peabody News Co.

Ballou's Monthly for February contains a large instalment of William H. Thomes's instructive and amusing story of "On Land and Sea; or California in the Years 1843, '44, '45." The author of "The Gold Hunters" and "The Belle of Australia," never wrote anything better than this autobiography of a boy's life at sea, and the funny and serious adventures that he experienced on the passage around Cape Horn on his way to California in search for hides. It is a favorite household serial, and is instructive and useful. For sale everywhere. Thomes & Talbot, 23 Hawley street, Boston.

LIPPINCOTT'S MAGAZINE for February opens with a paper on "Old Germantown." The illustrations, from drawings by Pennell, are finely executed. Professor Horatio S. White gives a very pleasing account of "A Pilgrimage to Seseuheim," where Goethe, while a student at Strassburg, became enamored of the fair Frederika, whom he jilted and immortalized. "On a Glass Roof," by Rowland E. Robinson, is an amusing description of winter fishing in Vermont. The second instalment of "Sebia's Tangled Web," by Lizzie W. Champney, is very animated, and there is a strong thread of interest in the story. The miscellaneous departments are well filled, and the whole number is, as usual, "thoroughly readable."

WASHINGTON IRVING.—The writings of the most honored of American authors are at last made accessible to all readers, and in such varied and beautiful forms as to delight the most fastidious taste, and at prices so low as to be an astonishment to book-buyers, and a consternation to book-sellers, of whom the "Literary Revolution" makes no account. As examples, we have "The Legend of Sleepy Hollow" for three cents, "Wolfert's Roost" ten cents, "The Sketch Book" 20 cents,—these in paper binding but large type; in neat or elegant cloth or half Russia bindings, his "Choice Works" are published at prices varying from 30 to 45 cents, and his complete works (excepting "Life of Washington," in the superb Caxton Edition, six volumes, over 5,000 pages, choice typography, elegant binding, for only $5. Specimen pages or large descriptive catalogue are sent to any applicant on request, and orders over $5 in amount are filled to be paid for after arrival and examination, on reasonable evidence of good faith being given. Address John B. Alden, Publisher, 18 Vesey street, New York.

The retirement of Mr. Carl Schurz, a few weeks ago, from the editorship of one of the leading journals of New York, on the ground that irreconcilable differences of opinion existed between him and his associates with regard to the conflict of the Telegraph and Railroad men with their employers, has awakened curiosity in no ordinary degree; and hence when he defines his position upon the question at issue viz., "Corporations, their Employes and the Public, as he does in the North American Review for February, he is sure to command an attentive hearing. The Rev. M. J. Savage in pointing out sundry "Defects of the Public School System," advances certain views of the ends to be attained by State education which, if accepted, would very materially modify, and indeed entirely revolutionize the existing system. Finally an important question in hygiene, "Rival systems of Heating" is treated by Dr. A. N. Bell and Prof W. P. Trowbridge, who point out the advantages and disadvantages, from the standpoints of both economy and health, of the different methods in use for warming houses. Published at 30 Lafayette Place, New York, and for sale by booksellers generally.

A new idea embraced in Ely's Cream Balm. Catarrh is cured by causing discharge and cleansing, not by drying up. The applicaton is easy and agreeable. Price 50 cents.

Apply into nostrils with finger.

I was troubled with chronic Catarrh and gathering in the head, was very deaf at times, had discharges from my ears, and was unable to breath through the nose. Before the second bottle of Ely's Cream Balm was exhausted I was cured, and to-day enjoy sound health. C. J. CORBIN, 923 Chestnut street, Field Manager Philadelphia Pub. House, Pa.

We recommend Ely's Cream Balm where a cure for Catarrh is called for, and consider that we are doing the public a favor by making its virtues known to those afflicted with this loathsome disease, for which in most cases it is a perfect cure. PECK BROS., Druggists, Grand Rapids, Mich.

MORTALITY AMONG TROOPS.

The historian of the Napoleonic wars has many threads to weave into his narrative, and the thread of sickness is apt to show, perhaps, less conspicuously than its importance deserves. But the historian of medicine and of epidemic diseases supplies his omissions: and it is indeed a ghastly narrative that he gives. The horrors of typhus and dysentery in the Russian campaign of 1812, and in such sieges as that of Torgau in the year following, are beyond all description. Nothing in the modern world for which the will of an individual can be held accountable ever came so near to realizing the monstrous imagination of Macbeth:

"Though the treasure
Of Nature's germens tumble all together,
Even till destruction sicken—"

Of the army numbering 500,000 that crossed the Vistula in the Spring of 1812 only some bands of stragglers found their way back, without arms, their clothes in rags, and spreading typhus as they went. The Third Army Corps, commanded by Ney, was 43,000 strong when it set out, and when it reentered Poland all that remained of it was a ragged group of some twenty persons surrounding the Marshall. One of these was the Surgeon de Kerckhove, who afterward wrote the medical history of the campaign. In Vilna, out of a total of 30,000 French prisoners, 25,000 died of typhus, and the disease carried off 8 000 of the poor Jews living in the town. In the Hospital of St. Ignatius an eye-witness is said to have seen one of the wards filled three times over with fifty typhus patients and three times emptied of fifty dead bodies. As a contrast to these unmitigated horrors let us take the proportions of sickness and mortality among the German troops in the Franco-German war. The Germans crossed the Rhine in the Summer and Autumn of 1870 to the number of 913,967. Of these there perished, from one cause or another, 44,890, including 17,572 who were killed in battle, 10,710 who died in hospital of their wounds, and 12,253 who died of sickness and pestilence. The relatively small amount of sickness in the campaign is referred to with just pride by Prof. Virchow, in an address from which we take the figures, and which we shall notice further. It will be better appreciated by comparing the figures for the Crimean war and for the American civil war. In the former the French lost in all 95,615 men; of these only 10,240 fell before the enemy, about the same number died of their wounds, and the enormous residue of 75,000 fell victims to camp sickness and pestilence. In the American civil war it is estimated that 97,000 deaths occurred in battle or subsequently from wounds received, and that 184,000 died of sickness. "What immeasurable suffering and pain!" exclaims Virchow. "What a sea of blood and tears is contained in these figures! How much, too, of defective practice, of prejudice, of erroneous opinion!" The lesson of these calamities, he shows, was not thrown away upon the citizens of the United States; their gigantic medical history of the war has been a mine of scientific information and of practical experience for the military surgery and hygiene of later times. When the Germans entered on the war with France, says Prof. Virchow, they had the well-digested experience of two recent campaigns of their own; they had also the inestimable experiences of the Americans, and, finally, they had German science—"war hatten die deutsche Wissenschaft."

THE CAUSES OF BLUSHING.

The physiology of blushing has long presented a difficult problem to solve. Many unsatisfactory explanations have been given of the causes of that interesing phenomenon. The British Medical Journal lately received an inquiry as to the measures to be taken for the cure of a chronic tendency to blush, and one of its correspondents takes up the matter in a very practical way. Among other causes of blushing he gives prominence "to the wearing of too thick underclothing and especially of too thick socks." He adds that long-sleeved woolen sacks or jerseys are often a cause of blushing, and, in fact, warm clothing in general. He does not fail to remark that the blusher must choose in this matter between the risk of rheumatism and the annoyance of blushing. As collateral evidence in support of his views he says: "An aunt of mine had habitually a red nose from this cause alone, which disappeared when she took to thinner stockings."

Regarding the matter from a social standpoint, the writer says: "The best plan for an habitual blusher is to laugh and be very gushing, as, for instance, on meeting an acquaintance in the street, when he colors up; and he will then feel more at his ease than if he looks sheepish and reserved."

An obvious cause for blushing is over-sensitiveness and self-consciousness, which will wear away as the person becomes used to society and strengthens his character by adopting wise principles of thought and action. The physiological explanation of blushing given by the writer just quoted is that it is due to paralysis of the sympathetic circles of nerves surrounding the arteries, which, not contracting properly, allow a freer flow of blood to the surface.

COFFEE AND PISTOLS.

"Alfred Hardy" must, perforce, give Ireland the credit of inventing the phrase "coffee and pistols for two." The story is that an Irishman, ordering his dinner at a London coffee-house, was mocked by a fop, who amused himself by duplicating the Irishman's orders, using the best of good London accents until, at last, his dinner finished, in a richer brogue than he had before employed, Pat demanded "Coffee and pistols for two," and the joker departed without ceremony, and without waiting to see the order filled.

A MARVELOUS STORY

TOLD IN TWO LETTERS.

FROM THE SON: "28 Cedar St., New York, Oct. 28, 1882.

"Gentlemen: My father resides at Glover, Vt. He has been a great sufferer from Scrofula, and the inclosed letter will tell you what a marvelous effect has had in his case. I think his blood must have contained the humor for at least ten years; but it did not show, except in the form of a scrofulous sore on the wrist, until about five years ago. From a few spots which appeared at that time, it gradually spread so as to cover his entire body. I assure you he was terribly afflicted, and an object of pity, when he began using your medicine. Now, there are few men of his age who enjoy as good health as he has. I could easily name fifty persons who would testify to the facts in his case.

Ayer's Sarsaparilla

Yours truly, W. M. PHILLIPS."

FROM THE FATHER: "It is both a pleasure and a duty for me to state to you the benefit I have derived from the use of

Ayer's Sarsaparilla.

Six months ago I was completely covered with a terrible humor and scrofulous sores. The humor caused an incessant and intolerable itching, and the skin cracked so as to cause the blood to flow in many places whenever I moved. My sufferings were great, and my life a burden. I commenced the use of the SARSAPARILLA in April last, and have used it regularly since that time. My condition began to improve at once. The sores have all healed, and I feel perfectly well in every respect—being now able to do a good day's work, although 73 years of age. Many inquire what has wrought such a cure in my case, and I tell them, as I have here tried to tell you, AYER'S SARSAPARILLA. Glover, Vt., Oct. 21, 1882. Yours gratefully,

HIRAM PHILLIPS."

AYER'S SARSAPARILLA cures Scrofula and all Scrofulous Complaints, Erysipelas, Eczema, Ringworm, Blotches, Sores, Boils, Tumors, and Eruptions of the Skin. It clears the blood of all impurities, aids digestion, stimulates the action of the bowels, and thus restores vitality and strengthens the whole system.

MR. AND MRS. NEWCOMB,

OF STATE ST., SPRINGFIELD, MASS. WHAT THEY SAY IN FAVOR OF A REAL HONEST THING—THEIR WORD AS GOOD AS GOLD.

Mrs. Newcomb is the wife of one of the employees in the United States Armory, Springfield, Mass. She says: "I have used Dr. Kennedy's FAVORITE REMEDY for Indigestion and Biliousness. My husband has also used it. We keep it in the house as a family medicine, and consider it the best ever made for the purpose recommended."

Dr. Kennedy is daily in receipt of letters from patients expressing similar sentiments as these expressed by Mrs. Newcomb, of State street. These letters are spontaneous and put in all varieties of phraseology, but invariably setting forth one thing—the value of Kennedy's FAVORITE REMEDY for many forms of disease. It may be just the thing you have been looking for. Is your Liver disordered? Have you Derangement of the Kidneys or Bladder associated with Constipation of the Bowels? If so, you want Kennedy's FAVORITE REMEDY. Dr. Kennedy practices Medicine and Surgery in all their Branches. Write and state your case. "Favorite Remedy" is fast becoming a trusted household friend in all cases of Female Weakness and diseases of the blood. One dollar a bottle. Your druggist has it.

Miscellaneous.

PERPETUATING A NAME.

Says the Salt Lake Tribune; John Taylor, President of the polygamous church, it appears, is more anxious to perpetuate his name than he is of permitting the name of the late Brigham to be handed down to posterity. We are told the following incident of him: One of Brigham's sons who has been educated East and besides inheriting wealth, married a wealthy lady. He has taken considerable interest in educational matters, and some time since inaugurated the plan of purchasing the Bee Hive House for the purpose of converting it into an academy. To do this would require an outlay of about $30,000, half of which he proposed to provide out of his own means, and the other half he wanted the church to give. Of course it was to be a real church school, where the management and all instruction should be with the object of strengthening the latter day gospel. The proposition to donate $15,000 or $20,000 of the church funds for this purpose was received with favor by King John, until the question of a name for the institution came up. Young insisted that the academy should bear and perpetuate the name of Brigham Young, and that he would not enter into the enterprise at all except on that condition. King John would not consent to the name, and thus ended the scheme, and the owners of the property lost the sale. The Young family feel bitter over the action of Taylor, and express the opinion that if there had been a proposition to name it the John Taylor Academy, John would have entered heartily into the scheme and used the church funds lavishly.

A BEARD BENEATH THE SKIN.

A gentleman who formerly resided at Trenton, Tenn., told a Nashville American reporter of a strange freak of nature which came under his observation there a few years ago. There was a young man of the town who had long passed the period of maturity, and who had not a sign of a beard on any portion of his face. One day he noticed a small lump on his neck, a few inches below his chin. At first he paid little attention to it. The lump commenced growing, however, till finally it was larger than a large walnut, and closely resembled a wen. The young man went to a physician and asked him to relieve him of this disfiguring growth. The doctor concluded to try and remove it with a knife. On making an incision the doctor's knife encountered a spongy substance, which on examination proved to be nothing less than a closely matted and coiled mass of hair. It seems that the beard which should have been spread over the young man's face had concentrated in this one spot and grown beneath the skin. The hair was removed, and the opening soon healed, and the strange development became unnoticeable.

PIANO MAKING.

A piano passes through about a dozen hands in old-fashioned shops, and through thirty or forty in the monster establishments of later date where fifty or sixty instruments a week are turned out. The wages paid to workmen vary from ten to thirty dollars a week; the highest paid mechanic is the "tone adjuster," who gets from thirty-five to fifty dollars, and whose work is most delicate, difficult and important. A "kit" of tools sometimes costs as much as fifty dollars, but only when the owner is proficient in several branches. The majority of those employed are Germans, Danes and Swedes, native-born Americans being at a discount, as they will not work for the amount of wages the foreigners are satisfied with, and besides, as a rule, have not learned their trade so thoroughly. The present system of the subdivision of labor renders those who have learned their trade at one shop useless at another in case of a strike.

ARCHITECTURAL FICTIONS.

Says the London Atheneum: Viollet le Duc opposed those professors of the fine arts who see in Greek temples the traditions of a wooden construction, and he demonstrated the truth of his statement with curious felicity and acumen. Temples are logically constructed according to the "system of the lintel," and not mockeries of wood in stone. "That such imitations have occurred among the Hindoos, that they have influenced the architecture of the Assyrians and the inhabitants of Asia Minor, is possible, but to suppose it among the Western Greeks is to misunderstand their genius altogether." He compares the timber theory of the origin of Greek architecture with the equally preposterous notion which attributes the architecture of our Gothic churches to the forest avenues of Gaul and Germany. "Both are fictions, well adapted to amuse the fancy of dreamers, but very hurtful, or at least useless, when we are called upon to explain the derivations of an art to those whose vocation it is to practice it."

ON THE USE OF SPECTACLES.

No more mischievous mistake can well be made than the one which is involved in the prevalent idea that the use of spectacles should be put off as long as possible. This becomes evident at a glance as soon as it is understood that the case is one of incapacity of the lens of the eye to adapt itself to near vision in consequence of loss of accommodating power. The continued effort of the delicate mechanism of the eye to accomplish a task which is beyond the measure of its capacity must necessarily be attended with an injurious, as well as a painful strain. Squinting is one of the evil consequences which are apt to ensue if such fruitless efforts are long preserved in.

Originality is nothing but judicious imitation.

LOUIS PHILIPPE'S FLIGHT.

In the collection of Adolphe Cremieux's letters and sayings, recently published under the title of "En 1848," there is a passage giving some hitherto unpublished details of Louis Philippe's flight from the Tuileries. The passage runs as follows: "After several vain interviews with the King, Cremieux arrived once more at the Tuileries just as the mob was pouring into the Place de Caroussal and a butchery beginning. He was met by the Duc de Montpensier, who asked what had happened. 'I think all is lost, Monseigneur,' replied Cremieux. 'The people press forward, the troops are shooting at only one place close by. The King must try to save himself.' Louis Philippe had heard what was said, and when Cremieux approached was already changing his uniform for a black suit and had taken off his Order of the Legion of Honor. The Queen was present, and was soon joined by several ladies weeping, and dressed in mourning. The Duchess de Montpensier threw herself into her husband's arms, who requested Cremieux to lead her, but this was prevented by M. de Lastevrie, who came forward. The representative of the people, so soon to be a member of the Provisional Government, begged the royal family to hasten their preparations, and received a bitter reply from the Queen. 'You misjudge my impatience, madame,' said Cremieux; 'the danger in which the King stands is my excuse.' Four ladies, of whom one must have been the Duchess de Nemours, and each of whom had a child in her arms, were still in the room. Orders were issued for four carriages to wait in the Place de la Concorde. The King asked for his keys, and a bunch was brought; he took a large portfolio from the table, and the company entered a passage leading to the garden; Cremieux foremost with the Duc de Montpensier, then the King and Queen, and, lastly, the ladies and children. The Tuileries garden was reached through the Pavillon de l'Horloge. National Guards on foot and horseback silently saluted. 'Do you think we run any danger?' The Duc de Montpensier asked Cremieux, who, encouraging him, promised to accompany the party as far as St. Cloud. In the Place de la Concorde only one carriage was waiting, and was immediately entered by the Duchess de Nemours, with three other ladies and the children. 'What is to become of the King and Queen?' cried the Duc de Montpensier. The King, who only now became aware of the state of the case ran up to the carriage, tore open the door, and exclaimed: 'Get out, all of you.' The occupants at once obeyed, and Louis Philippe and the Queen hastily took their places. One of the ladies, probably the Duchess de Nemours and her child were thrust in after, and the King cried 'Drive on!' The coachman did not hear. Cremieux repeated the order, and the horses were driven off at a sharp trot. When Cremieux turned round the Place de la Concorde was almost empty. The Duc de Montpensier, who seemingly had found another carriage, had disappeared with the rest of the family. For a moment Cremieux remained standing quite amazed at the sudden solution of the difficulty, and then catching sight of the Palais Bourbon on the other side of the Seine, he remembered his next pressing duty. Shortly after he announced the flight of the royal family to the Chamber.

EARLY MARRIAGE.

Lady Sarah Cadogan, daughter of William, first Earl Cadogan, was married at the age of thirteen, to Charles, second Duke of Richmond, aged eighteen. It is said that this marriage was a bargain to cancel a gambling debt between their parents, Lady Sarah being a co-heiress. The young Lord March was brought from college and the little lady from her nursery for the ceremony, which took place at the Hague. The bride was amazed and silent, but the husband exclaimed, "Surely you are not going to marry me to that dowdy?" Married, however, he was, and his tutor then took him off to the Continent, and the bride went back to her mother. Three years after Lord March returned from his travels, but having such a disagreeable recollection of his wife was in no hurry to join her, and went the first evening to the theatre. There he saw a lady so beautiful that he asked who she was. "The reigning toast, Lady March," was the answer he got. He hastened to claim her, and their lifelong affection for each other is much commented upon by contemporaneous writers—indeed it was said that the Duchess, who only survived him a year, died of grief.

MEASURING BY THE EYE.

It is a most excellent practice for boys and girls to judge of the size and weight of common articles by the eye. Let some one hold up a cane and guess its length, and see how varied the answers will be. A country school master was in the habit of measuring a scholar's height, and having the other pupils mark the height on the wall. He would also mark off an inch, a foot, or a yard in some conspicuous place, and then see how near anybody could come to chalking the same length upon the black-board. If asked which was the taller, a barrel of flour or a three-year old child, how many would answer correctly? Weights can be learned by packages which are carried home from the store, and the tea table talk can be made interesting by guessing how much liquid the cups and pitchers will hold.

Herbert Spencer says Americans are so driven by business cares that they never stop to leisurely examine anything. Guess he never saw five or six hundred busy Americans standing around for two hours watching three men raising an office safe to a fourth-story window.

NASBY'S PAPER.

THE TOLEDO WEEKLY BLADE.

Circulation 115,000.

This vast circulation is because the BLADE is a paper for the whole country. It is not thrown together, but every line of it is edited by competent hands. It is a complete epitome of the news of the week, and whosoever reads the BLADE carefully, needs nothing else to be well informed as to what the world is doing. Editorially the BLADE has made a proud record. It has an opinion on every thing that affects the people of the country, and it expresses it boldly, fearlessly, and forcibly. As good as the Blade has been in past years, we will make it better than ever in the year to come, among the features for the coming year will be the regular "Nasby Letters," two serials by Nasby, entitled "Nasby in Exile," and "Nasby in the South," a serial story by Ernest Warren, entitled, Court and Camp," a serial by John McElroy author of Andersonville, "Reminiscences of an Army Mule"; a serial written for the BLADE by an Austrian nobleman; besides our regular departments, "Household," "Answers to Correspondents," "Camp Fire," etc., etc. We publish all the news, and latest corrected markets.

Politically the BLADE will continue an exponent of true Republicanism, believing that the best interests of the country demand the continuance of its control in the hands of the party that represents the highest and most advanced ideas.

THE RUM POWER.

The BLADE will fight this monster iniquity with all the power it possesses, and in every way possible. The BLADE holds the liquor traffic to be a greater curse than slavery, and a thousand times more dangerous to the country.

We ask the co-operation of every well-wisher of the Republic that our work may be effective. We ask every Republican in the United States to assist in extending the circulation of the BLADE, especially among those of the Republican party who believe as we do in the necessity of Pulverizing the Rum Power. We want the BLADE in as many families as possible this winter, that it may be read before the excitement of a political campaign, giving it time for its truths to take root in the minds of its readers.

THE WEEKLY BLADE, $1.00 a year, postpaid, to EVERYBODY. Those preferring, may receive the BLADE, THREE MONTHS, by remitting 30 cents, or clubs of three months trial subscribers, of not less than four, 25 cents each.

OUR GREAT ART OFFER.

A $10.00 Steel Engraving for $1.00. Write us for a speciman copy of the WEEKLY BLADE, which will give full particulars of this, the greatest offer ever made by any publisher. We send specimen copies of the BLADE free to any address. We want as many addresses as possible to send Specimen Copies to. Write a postal card asking for a specimen for yourself, and send us the names of all your neighbors. We want to send out a half million copies within the next month. Don't be modest as to the number.

THE SUN.

NEW YORK, 1884.

About sixty million copies of THE SUN have gone out of our establishment during the last twelve months.

If you were to paste end to end all the columns of all THE SUNS printed and sold last year, you would get a continuous strip of interesting information common sense wisdom, sound doctrine, and sane wit long enough to reach from Printing House square to the top of Mount Copernicus in the moon, then back to Printing House square, and then three-quarters of the way back to the moon again.

But THE SUN is written for the inhabitants of this earth; this same strip of intelligence would girdle the earth twenty-seven or twenty-eight times.

If every buyer of a copy of THE SUN during the past year has spent only one hour over it, and his wife or his grandfather has spent another hour, this newspaper in 1883 has afforded the human race thirteen thousand years of steady reading night and day.

It is only by little calculations like these that you can form any idea of the circulation of the most popular of American newspapers, or of its influence on the opinions and actions of American men and women.

THE SUN is, and will continue to be, a newspaper which tells the truth without fear of consequences, which gets at the facts no matter how much the process costs, which presents the news of all the world without waste of words and in the most readable shape, which is working with all its heart for the cause of honest government, and which therefore believes that the Republican party must go, and must go in this coming year of our Lord, 1884.

If you know THE SUN, you like it already and you will read it with accustomed diligence and profit during what is sure to be the most interesting year in its history. If you do not yet know THE SUN, it is high time to get into the sunshine.

MURRAY CLUB.

The tenth anniversary of the Murray Club connected with the Universalist Society, was observed in the church vestry on Monday evening, with a pleasing programme. Invitations were sent out to past members, many of whom were present, so that with present members and friends the exercises were greeted by a goodly sized audience. The entertainment was a little delayed on account of the strong desire of many to attend the reading in the Town Hall. At about half past eight the President, Mr. Charles S. Goldthwait, called the company to order and the programme followed. Mr. H. L. Grant and Miss Etta Noyes gave a very pleasing instrumental duet which was cordially received. Miss Alice H. Nelson and Mrs. George Nelson also favored with a duet acceptably rendered and strongly applauded. Mr. Frank W. Taggard, Mr. Edward Merrill, of Salem, Mrs. F. W. Sprague and Miss Ida Farnum, all sang excellently, Miss Farnum giving "Douglas, Douglas, tender and true," with fine effect. A large chorus gave "View de Land," and selections from "The haymakers" in an inspiring manner. Character impersonations were also given. Mrs. F. W. Sprague, as Josiah Allen's wife, was complete in costume and voice, and the selection which she read was capitally given and much enjoyed. President Goldthwait as Lord Dundreary, took the audience by storm and outdid even his usual good acting. Miss Alice Bartlett as a character in "Patience" was very appropriately dressed and recited her short selection in harmony with her assumed character. Remarks of welcome and encouragement were made by the pastor, Rev. Mr. Sprague, and by Mr. Goldthwait, and the following history of the association was read by Mr. F. C. Merrill:

During the winters of 1872 and 3 a class of young ladies, connected with the Universalist Sunday school in Peabody, met once a week at the houses of the several members for the purpose of Bible study; Mr. Amos Merrill was their teacher. In the beginning of the Fall of 1874 he suggested that there was opportunity for useful work among the older members of the Sunday School, and other young persons connected with the Parish, that could best be carried on through the instrumentality of an organization of which this class might be taken as the nucleus. This work was improvement in literary and musical culture, increase of mutual interest and friendliness among the members, encouragement of young people to assume responsibilities, and the experience they would gain from planning and carrying forward the work of the association would be of advantage to them when called to fill other more responsible positions in society at large.

A meeting was held Sept. 28, 1874, at which Mr. Merrill offered a set of By Laws containing a statement of the purposes of the organization and providing for the election of general officers and the appointment of Committees who should take charge of the various departments of work. The committees were named the Literary, Social, Dramatic and General Work Committees. Later a Musical Committee was added. Officers were chosen at this meeting and members of Committees appointed. At the next meeting the name "Murray Association" was selected, in honor of the first preacher of Universalism. It was voted that the regular meetings should be held on Monday evenings. Alternate Mondays were to be taken for the purpose of Bible Study and Literary entertainment. The committee on General Work met with the younger children of the Sunday School on Saturday afternoons in the vestry and commenced at once to make articles for a fair. Each one attending their meetings paid two cents into a fund established for the purchase of materials for work. The fair was held Dec. 18th and was very successful, the proceeds being about $130. The result was mainly due to the labors and management of Mrs. S. P. Smith, Miss Mary E. Bomer and other members of the General Work Committee.

The Literary efforts at the beginning were less varied than in later times, and readings were given of such a length that two or more evenings were occupied on one work. Scott's "Lady of the Lake" was first read and three evenings were required to complete it and two evenings were spent in reading Whittier's "Snow Bound.".

The Dramatic Committee was at work, and in March presented to the public the Drama "Still Waters Run Deep;" it was finely performed and was repeated in the Peabody Institute when the net receipts were about $100.

The season ended on the 25th of April. Until this time the meetings had been held in the vestry, which then was far from being the pleasant room it now is. The need of a room of less size and better adapted for small assemblages had already been felt and considered, and the parish at its annual meeting moved by the liberal offers of several members, voted to build an addition to contain a parlor and kitchen on the West side of the church, to be connected with the vestry. Accordingly the building was commenced during the summer vacation, and completed in readiness for the first meeting in Oct. 1875, and even since except upon occasions when an unusual number would be called together, the meetings have been held in the parlor. It answers nicely our requirements except in the matter of ventilation. To help meet the expense incurred by the parish in building this addition, it was voted at the first meeting to pay over the money in the Treasury of the Association, amounting to $276.89. During the same month the hand of death was for the first time laid on the Association, removing Miss Katie D. Gould, an active member.

The season of 75-6 was a busy one. Our first visit as an Association was paid to Mr. and Mrs. Warren Shaw, the members going together in barges to their house where a most enjoyable time was had. At this time was inaugurated a series of entertainments, to which the parish and Sunday school were invited. The vestry was generally filled. The one on April 15, when lantern pictures were exhibited and Mr. Shirley amused by recitations and songs is especially remembered.

The doings of the Association already mentioned indicate the character of its work throughout its existence. Under the direction of the Literary Committee several hundred selections in standard and miscellaneous prose and poetry have been read, giving the members some acquaintance with the writings of the more famous English and American authors. This Committee has not confined itself to providing one kind of literary food, but has varied its programme by offering original essays and biographical sketches, original papers, that of 1882 being particularly able and interesting, mock trials, character impersonations and illustrations. Under the last two heads are to be named the presentations of "Widow Bedott and Elder Sniffles" "Blue Beard," "Mother Goose," "The Hanging of the Crane," "Songs of Seven," and " Courtship of Miles Standish." Two pantomines have been exhibited, Christmas, 1876,"The King of the Cannibal Islands," and "Cinderella" Dec. 25, 1882. The labors of the Musical Committee have aided and supplemented the work of the Literary, a number of instrumental and vocal selections being given at each meeting, while some evenings have been entirely devoted to the performance of music. A considerable degree of talent has been displayed by members and their efforts either as vocalists or instrumentalists have afforded great pleasure. Much surprise has been felt at the skill with which the violin, banjo, harmonica, xylophone, bones, etc., as well as the piano have been played. Among the more notable productions of a musical character was one given by Miss Nelson and Mr. Taggard, entitled an "Hour of Fun." The Jubilee Concert under the direction of Mr. Clark, and "Carita the Gipsy," the words by Mr. Randall, the music selected by Miss Nelson and Mr. Taggard and directed by them, greatly assisted by Miss Bartlett as accompanist, which last two entertainments were given to the public, both meeting with great success, and being repeated. From their performance about $280 were obtained. Also selections have been given from the Cantata of the Haymakers.

The Presidents of the Association have been F. C. Merrill, 1874-5-6; A. H. Merrill, '77-8-9; C. F. Foss, '80; C. S. Goldthwait '81-2-3.

The Dramatic Committee has been active, doing much for the entertainment of the Association. Since Jan. 1, 1876, 14 public representations have been given under its direction, that have added largely to the financial receipts.

The Social Committee has distinguished itself more by its public than by its private efforts. A large number of social parties and dances have been held under its management, by which the association has been enriched several hundred dollars. These parties have generally been well attended and furnished harmless pleasure to the members and their friends. The Masquerade held a few years ago, and the Paper Cap party of last week, were especially attractive and quite profitable.

Although the primary objects for which the Association was organized, were self culture and entertainment, it has always displayed an unselfish disposition in its work and has engaged with zeal to provide entertainment for the remainder of the Parish and Sunday School, and the money that has been raised has been devoted to uses that would benefit the whole Parish. Since its organization it has paid to the Parish Treasury and directly, bills for furnishing rooms, $1029, $75 for Books for the S. S. library, $42 for stage scenery, $25 for pictures for the parlor, besides the expense of floral tributes to deceased members. It has also gone to expense at some of the Christmas entertainments provided for the Sunday School children, as on last Christmas eve, when an exhibitor of lantern views was employed and cake and ice cream furnished. The pleasure given others by these entertainments has, in turn, afforded happiness to the members. Many changes have occurred in the Association within 10 years. About 70 united during the first year including nearly all of the Sunday school teachers, who were regular attendants at the meetings. Now, but few who then met are to be seen at the meetings. Our hearts have been saddened by the death of eleven esteemed members, all of them of exemplary life and character. Forty-five have left town and five have joined other societies in town a total loss of sixty-one a heavy depletion of members for so small an organization. Yet the work of the Association has gone steadily on and to-day is as flourishing and vigorous, with as large a membership as ever. The present membership is fully 100.

The development of the social qualities of its members has in nowise been secondary to their growth in other directions. This field has been stimulated by the coming together at regular meetings, and the participation in rehearsals when engaged in preparation for any special work, and further by such occasions as the visit to Mr. Shaw's, before mentioned to Mr. Raddin's in '76, the sleigh ride to Chebacco, the visit of delegations from the Chapin Club, and Beverly society, and the ever to be remembered return visit to the Chapin Club last January, that to the Unity Club and some others. The many good times we have enjoyed as an association were in themselves sufficient to preserve the strong bond of union that has thus far held together this association. Yet it is not alone the good times that we have had, but it is largely owing to the unity of spirit that has at all times been manifested by the members, to which our successful life is due. Since this association was organized, others, similar, have been started in sister parishes, one or more being named for this one. The history of this association during the past decade shows its life to have been busy and fruitful. If the same interest is shown by such as shall be members during the next ten years, its future work may afford as much pleasure and be as helpful to the parish of which it is a part.

At the close of the prepared programme a brief season of social converse followed, and another mile stone was passed by this association, which we believe is destined to live long if it only continues the activity and enterprise it has manifested in the past.

SOUTH PEABODY.

For two weeks the proprietors of the ice houses in this section of the town have been very busy in getting in their harvest and packing it away. There are eight houses around Brown's pond, three belonging to Bradstreet & Julyn, Salem, three to H. N. Batchelder, one to C. W. Davis and one to Beede and Newhall. The buildings are about fifteen years old, and their interiors are in a much better state of preservation than their outside appearance would warrant. Messrs. Bradstreet and Julyn commenced work one week ago Monday, with 40 men, 6 horses and an 8 horse power engine, and have harvested 4,900 tons, having cut over 9 acres, which is an average cut of 500 tons to the acre. H. N. Batchelder has housed 1800 tons, besides 2000 tons which he is now cutting at Spring pond. Beede and Newhall will cut about 3,000 tons and Davis about 1000 tons. The ice is of excellent quality and averages 12 inches in thickness. When work was commenced several inches of the surface was found to be snow ice which was removed to get at the solid ice. After the snow had been removed and the ice ready to be cut, a straight line was marked across the pond, and parallel to it, another line 22 inches from it. This operation was continued until the surface to be cut had been marked over. Then lines were drawn crosswise 22 inches from each other, giving the ice the appearance of a gigantic checker-board. These lines were then grooved to a depth of 6 or 10 inches so that the ice might be easily detached from the main field, and floated into a canal which leads to the ice ways, over which the ice is hauled into the buildings. Four cakes are barred off at a time and by the aid of a horse pulley and rope lifted up the ways, from which they are slid into the buildings where men armed with pikes receive and dispose of them. The floors of the buildings are strewn with tan, and upon this bed the tiers are raised until the available space has been filled. Then the ice is covered with hay, often as many as six or eight tons being used. When hay has been used one season to cover ice it is unfit for the purpose the following winter, and is used as bedding in the stables. The houses are built after the manner of a barn and a second partition is raised about two feet from the outer wall. The space thus formed is filled with tan and in the houses at Brown's pond about 50 cords are required. This filling excludes all heat and moisture and keeps the temperature of the interior the same the year round. The storing of ice when an engine is used is a very different thing from the old-fashioned way of hoisting with a horse and rope. With the engine and endless chain the ice is taken from the canal in cakes weighing in the neighborhood of five tons and at the interval of about fifteen seconds, and keeps eight or ten men constantly poling it to the ways. With a horse and hooked rope the operation is tedious and requires time and patience. The other extreme is met with in summer when the ice is being delivered. Messrs. Bradstreet & Julyn will haul 500 tons to Salem to fill a house there, and will begin the first of the week. The ice area of Brown's pond is nearly 35 acres, and probably 30 acres of this has been cut.

Mr. Lewis Peabody and George P. Murray left town to-day,for Bennington Vt., to work at their trade in that place.

The Ladies Aid Society announce another concert at the vestry, Wednesday evening, Jan. 30, by members of St. Stephen's choir of Lynn, assisted by Miss Lucy Chandler and Miss Josie Felt, and Master Robbie Chandler, violinist. As the proceeds are to be devoted towards furnishing the auditorium of the new church, it is hoped there will be a full house.

A man named Griffin, while loafing around the ice houses near Brown's pond, recently slipped from a ladder falling about ten feet and injuring his wrist.

A. T. Merley an employe of George F. Day, ice dealer of this town, was at work at the run of ice house near Sluice pond, Thursday afternoon, when two large cakes of ice that were being sent up the run were thrown off the incline by a smaller piece underneath, and fell with great force. The block struck Merley on the leg, breaking the limb below the knee and jamming it in a shocking manner. Mr. Merley is 31 years old, and has a wife and four children dependent upon him. He is a paper hanger, and works at that trade in the summer.

Theodore Murray had his leg injured between two blocks of ice at Brown's pond recently, while harvesting ice.

Last Friday night as Charles W. Julyn's team was returning from Brown's pond with sixteen men, the whiffletree broke and the horses started to run, throwing the team against a wall and nearly over an embankment. No serious damage was done.

WEST PEABODY.

One day last week a year old daughter of James H. Stone, of West Peabody, picked up a shawl pin and swallowed it. The pin lodged in her throat and could not be removed. The child was taken to the Salem hospital and an incision made in its throat and the pin removed. She did not survive the operation.

Mr. Geo. W. Taylor, it is said, has purchased the King farm at West Peabody.

The West Peabody Farmers' Club assembled at School-House Hall, Friday evening, in good numbers. The meeting was opened by the Chorus Club. Mr. Ingraham said he had brought with him a pie made from Mr. Durkee's mammoth squash, and it was cut in thirty-two pieces. He said he had made 32 pies from the squash. J. S. Needham was the first speaker, on the subject of "small fruits;" his remarks were from practical experience. He was followed by D. H. Small, who showed himself a master of the subject, and urged the farmers to give more attention to the raising of small fruits. Rev. Willard Spaulding reviewed the remarks of various speakers, and his own were very interesting and instructive. The meeting closed with selections by the Chorus Club. The meeting next Friday evening will be devoted to a lecture on "butter-making, from ensilage-fed cows."

Mr. W. P. Upham has removed from his summer residence at West Peabody, to his home in Salem.

Mr. D. N. Stoddard, foreman of the farm of W. P. Upham at West Peabody, has resigned, to take effect in the spring. Some years ago Mr. Stoddard, in company with a man named Eaton, bought this farm, but being unsuccessful were unable to keep it. Mr. Eaton lost all he possessed and was for several years an inmate of our alms house. Less than a year ago he died.

" How cold is it?" asked a man who was waiting his turn to be shaved in Heylingberg's, Monday morning.

" Pretty cold," said I'at.

" True enough," said the man, " but that's not what I was after. Who knows anything about the thermometer?"

" I do," said every man in the room.

" At my house at six this morning," said Pat, " it was one degree below zero, and from the feeling of my wife's feet, I think it must have been very much lower during the night."

Poet's Corner.

My Neighbor and I.

Oh, I pity my neighbor over the way,
Who has nothing to do but to yawn all day,
No little hands to tumble her hair,
No little "nuisance" to vex her with care,
No little "torment" to worry and tease,
Nothing to do but consult her own ease.

Poor, rich neighbor, I am sorry for you—
Sorry because you "have nothing to do;"
Sorry, because as the days go by
You are restless and weary, you know not why,
And once in a while I can see the trace
Of many a tear on your proud, fair face.

You see, I am only a laborer's wife,
Doing my duty in the treadmill of life;
Joe, my husband, is off all day,
Fighting the giants of want away;
Baby and I are busy, too,
But we've plenty of time to be sorry for you

Baby's a nuisance, a plague, and a joy,
But then, you see, he's my own sweet boy;
I have no time for a groan or a sigh,
No time to be idle as the days go by;
My arms are full as the day is long,
Full as my heart with its happy song.

Poor, rich neighbor over the way,
Watching my baby and me at play;
What of your wealth if your heart is bare?
'Tis to love and be loved that makes life fair.
No neighbor mine, I can tell you true,
Indeed, I'd rather be I than you.

That Baby Over the Way.

As I've sat at my chamber window,
I've noticed again and again,
The sweetest of baby figures
At the opposite window pane.
Rosy cheeks, daintily dimpled,
Curls that, without any check,
Tumble and twist in confusion
With the corals about its neck.

Eyes—but to mention the color
I must wait for a nearer view,
Though I think I may state at a venture
They match with the ribbons of blue.
Feet with their tiny bronzed slippers,
And the dearest of wee, chubby fists;
And arms, in whose foldings of fatness
You must search for the little one's wrists.

Sometimes I throw kisses to baby,
And back come the kisses to me;
And the intricate games of "bo-peep"
In a source of infinite glee
That lights up the smiles and the dimples
So I think that I may truthfully say
That I have an established flirtation
With the baby over the way.

But how has that little one stolen
A march on my foolish old heart?
And why, as I watch those bright eyes,
Will the quick tear instinctively start?
Ah! because in the long ago years,
Ere time mingled my tresses with grey,
I, too, had a baby as lovely
As the little one over the way.

From the white robes and glistening curls,
From that vision of infantile joy,
Oh, sadly, so sadly, I turn
To all I have left of my boy;
To the baby clothes, yellow with age,
To the curls that once lay on his brow.
To the old-fashioned cradle—the nest
So drearily tenantless now.

The first grief comes back to me then,
The longing that cannot be told;
For the sight of the dear little face,
For my own sweet darling to hold.
And my arms ache with emptyness so
That I feel I am hardly content,
To wait for the summons to go
The way that my little one went.

And so for the sake of the joy
That long ago gladdened my heart,
For the light that once shone on my way,
So quickly, alas! to depart;
For the love I bore my darling.
All babies are dearer to-day;
And I think I must call on the mother
Of that baby over the way.

The Wife's New Story.

The story, ma'am! Why. really now, I havent much to say;
If you had come a year ago and then again to-day,
No need of any word to tell, for your own eyes could see
Just what the friends of Temperance have done for John and me.

A year ago I hadn't flour to make a batch of bread.
And many a night these little ones went hungry to their bed;
Just peep into the pantry, ma'am; there's sugar, flour and tea;—
That's what the friends of Temperance have done for John and me.

The pail that holds the butter, he used to fill with beer;
He hasn't spent a cent for drink for two months and a year;
He pays his debts, he's well and strong, and kind as man can be;—
That's what the friends of temperance have done for John and me.

He used to sneak along the streets, feeling so mean and low,
And always felt ashamed to meet the folks he used to know;
He looks the world now in the face, he steps off bold and free;—
That's what the friends of Temperance have done for John and me.

Why, at the shop, the other day, when a job of work was done,
The boss declared of all his men the steadiest one was John;
"I used to be the worst, my wife," John told me, and says he—
"That's what the friends of Temperance have done for you and me."

The children were afraid of him, his coming stopped their play.
Now, every night, when supper's done, and the table cleared away,
The boys will frolic round his chair, the baby climb his knee;—
That's what the friends of Temperance have done for John and me.

Oh, yes! the sad, sad times are gone, the sorrow and the pain;
The children have their father back, and I my John again.
Don't mind my crying, ma'am, indeed its just for joy to see
All that the friends of Temperance have done for John and me.

And mornings when he's gone to work, I kneel right down and say.
"Father in heaven, oh, help dear John to keep his pledge to-day!"
And every night, before I sleep, thank God on bended knee.
For what the friends of Temperance have done for John and me.

Selected Story.

The Lawyer's Secret.

It was in a luxuriously furnished room where a glowing grate threw genial light and warmth upon the occupants that General Langton, lawyer and millionaire, listened with bated breath and pallid cheeks to a low and melodious voice that told a story of a life.

The speaker, a beautiful woman of about thirty, yet ten years younger than Mr. Langton, reclined in a low cushioned chair, her attitude both speaking of the ease wealth gives, but her face was full of the deepest anguish as her lips recounted the story.

"You love me," she said gently, yet sadly, "and I love you as I never loved any one before, although I am a widow. That you know, but did not know my husband's name. By my uncle's last request I dropped it and took his with the property he had left me. Do not look at me tenderly, Gerald, do not shake my voice or my heart, for when you know who I am you will not repeat the offer you made me, and which heaven is my witness I tried to divert."

"Let your conscience be at rest there," said her listener in a grave, yet tender voice; "you have never given me one hope, Maude. By what instinct I knew that you loved me I can never tell. Something in your eyes—some tone of your voice betrayed you. If, as you say, something in your past life does separate us you have been no coquette to torment me with false hopes. But, Maude, tell me again, whatever stands between us, you love me?"

"I love you," she said gravely; "and it is because I love you that I will not let you link your honorable name with that of the wretch who was my husband. I was very young—not sixteen—when he came to make a visit to some friends living at Grassbank. Uncle Richard has a country seat near the village. J first met Alexander at a picnic, where he was the very life of the party; everybody's cavalier; courteous to all; full of wit and animation and service to all. I believe every girl on the grounds thought she had captivated him, his attentions were so well divided and yet so impressive to each one. He claimed to be no more than a salesman in a large wholesale house with a good salary, but he had the manners of a gentleman of education, and the most perfect beauty of face and form that I ever saw in a man. It was not long before it was evident he wished to win my love, and he had an easy task. Such love as a child of sixteen can give I gave him. He was the impersonation of every hero of poetry and fiction with whom my limited reading had made me familiar. School-girl like I had made an ideal hero, and fitted this, my first admirer with all his imaginary perfections.

From the first, Uncle Richard disliked him, pronouncing him false and shallow, and assuring me that my personal attractions had not won his heart; but the fact of my being an heiress to a large property had gained me the protestations in which I so firmly believed.

"It is a painful story to me now, Gerald. Let it suffice that I have lived in a world of pleasant dreams while Alexander remained at Grassbank. When he left me he carried my promise to be his wife at Christmas.

"I think if my money had depended on Uncle Richard, my marriage might have been prevented by his threatening to disinherit me, but both from my father and mother I had inherited money that made me independent in a pecuniary sense of his control or consent.

"Most grudgingly, however, uncle did consent, after searching inquiry about Alexander, resulting in no worse report than that his employers thought him fast, idle, and just the man to be a fortune hunter. Even then my dear uncle would have protected my fortune by settling it upon myself; but with the reckless generosity of extreme youth I refused to have this done. Never, I was firmly convinced would my adored Alexander wrong me in any way.

"For a year after the splendid wedding that made me Alexander's wife I was very happy. I was too ignorant of value to understand that we were living far beyond our income—enjoyed to the utmost the luxuries around me—the constant gayety that was in such strong contrast to the school routine from which I had been released.

"Then began a life of neglect, often of quarreling, when I objected to my husband's course of conduct—his drinking, his extravagance and his late hours. Still I found my own pleasures in society.

"It was four years after my marriage when I was thunderstruck by Alexander asking me to request a loan of money from Uncle Richard, with the information added that every penny of my property was gone.

"Since then I have known that a large portion of it was lost at the gaming table.

"Long before this I had lost all love for my husband. Respect had died out when I knew the dissipated life he was leading, and foolish as I was, could not continue to love a man whom I despised. I refused the errand and brought down a torrent of such great abuse that I really expected that Alexander would end by striking me.

"Day after day the request was renewed, but I would not yield. Upon my marriage, Uncle Richard had sold the city residence and taken a permanent abode at Grassbank, where, knowing my husband to be an unwelcome guest, I never visited him. I wrote occasionally, but the love of years, like that of a father and child, had been so sadly strained by my persistence in marrying Alexander that even our correspondence was languid and commonplace.

"I would not, therefore, write to him to ask a favor that I knew would not have been necessary without criminal recklessness of expenditure, and each refusal made my husband more furious. Then came an overwhelming blow. Alexander forged a check and drew £2,000 of Uncle Richard's money from the bank. I don't think my uncle would have prosecuted him had he guessed who was the forger; but he handed the whole matter over to the law as soon as it was discovered that the check was forged. It was then traced to Alexander, and at the same time it was found that he had robbed in the same way his former employers. He had given up all work upon his marriage; but when he found himself without money, his knowledge of the business enabled him to forge the name of Derkiss & Co. Even if Uncle Richard had spared him for my sake the other forgery would have entitled him to penal servitude. He was sentenced to seven years, and uncle took me home full of heavenly pity and forgiveness for the child who had treated him so ungratefully."

"Then your husband is in prison?" said Gerald, in a hard, strained voice.

"No, no, he is dead! He died within the first year. Uncle Richard saw the death in a paper, and sent the money for the burial. No, I am free; but, none the less, I am the widow of a convicted felon."

"But, none the less," quoted Gerald, "the woman I honor and love above all others, and hope still to make my wife."

It took, however, more than one interview, full of love's pleading, to win Maude from her resolution. She so honored her lover, and was so proud of his good name and the position he has attained by his talent, that her sensitive nature shrank from even the shadow of her misery upon his life.

But the victory was won at last, and the lawyer walked home one evening full of a proud, glad joy, for Maude had then promised to be his wife.

"If you are willing to take Alexander Hull's widow to be your wife," she said, "I will not oppose you any longer, for I love you with all my heart."

He had no thought but of that glad triumph when he turned up the gas in his office. He was in the habit of making a late visit there before going up to his bedroom, in case notes or messages were left for him. One lay there on this evening, a shabby looking envelope, but directed in a bold, handsome hand which he recognized at once.

He tore it open. After a few words of introduction, the note ran:

"You did the best you could on my trial, but the facts were too strong for you. I have now a last favor to ask of you. I die, as you know, at noon to-morrow. You, as my lawyer, can see me at any time. Will you come as you receive this, and win the gratitude of the man you know as JAMES FOX.',

"The man I know as James Fox" muttered the lawyer; "the smooth, plausible scoundrel who actually made me believe him innocent of the hideous murder for which he was convicted. I can find extenuation for some murders, but this cold-blooded assassination of an old man for money only was revolting. How he deceived me, though, for a time. And how he exulted over his success in doing so when he saw facts were too strong. Shall I go to him? I suppose I must. It is still very early."

It was not yet midnight when Gerald Langton was ushered into the cell of the man who, in a few short hours, was to meet the extreme penalty of the law for the worst of all crimes. Yet there was nothing revolting in the appearance of the criminal. His dress was neat, his hair carefully arranged, his moustache faultless, his hands white and refined looking. He rose from his seat on the bed as his lawyer entered the cell.

"I knew you would come," he said, courteously, "though you were offended at my want of frankness. Well, that is all over. You will not refuse the last request of a dying man, Mr. Langton?"

"Not if I can grant it," was the reply.

"This," said the murderer, "is not my first offence against the law. Some years ago I was sentenced to a term of years for forgery. By a strange accident I escaped the penalty. On the same day James Fox was sentenced to two years for petty larceny, and we were sent together to prison. James Fox—my companion, understand, not myself—was deranged, but his lawyers had not been able to save him, as his aberration was not always apparent. When we were entered upon the books of the prison, imagine my amazement when my fellow prisoner gave my name for his own. Like a flash I saw the advantage to be gained by the deception and allowed the error to pass. My companion committed suicide, and I escaped with two years' imprisonment instead of seven. But I feared recognition and went to Canada. There I lived by my wits until a year ago, when I returned to try and raise money from my wife, and thought that I saw an easier plan by committing the crime for which I die to-morrow. But I want to see my wife. I wronged her—I robbed her—but heaven is my witness, I love her. When I was in prison she dropped my name and took her own again. So it is not for Mrs. Alexander Hull you must ask, but for Mrs. Maud Temple."

Was the room reeling—the ceiling falling—the walls closing around him? Gerald Langton felt that they were, as the name fell upon his ears. Maud—his Maud—the wife of this cool villain who talked of his hideous crimes as if they were ordinary events? Well he knew that to carry this man's message was to separate himself from Maud forever. Never would she let him marry the widow of a murderer! Very rapidly all of the terrible facts passed one after the other, and he said: "If you love her why add a misery to her life? She may have lived down the old pain you have caused her; why for a selfish gratification, will you make her whole life a misery?"

"She is my wife. I would bid her farewell."

"She is not your wife. Your own crimes have released her from all allegiance to you."

"You know her?"

"Yes! I know what she has suffered, and beg of you to let her still believe you died years ago."

"She is happy."

"Scarcely that. Such wounds as hers never heal entirely, but it is cruelty to tear them open when they are quiet!"

"Has she married?"

"No! She is still your widow."

"It is hard to deny myself one more sight of her face and the hope I had that she would say she forgave me."

"Think of her, not yourself."

There was a long silence in the cell. Every throb of Gerald Langton's heart was pain to him, but Alexander Hull sat in moody silence; evidently reluctant to give up his wish.

At last he spoke.

"You have been very good to me. Tell me, now, if you have any personal reason for your request. Perhaps you love her?"

"I do!" was the reply. "She has promised to be my wife."

"Then it will be James Fox who is hanged to-morrow! I meant to give my real name, but I will carry my secret to my grave. It may be in another world that the little last self-denial will be a plea for me. Go now. You may trust me."

He kept his word, and Gerald Langton his secret.

When Maude, a few weeks later, became his wife, she little guessed the terrible ordeal which he had spared her, or the added disgrace that belonged to the name she had given up.—Exchange.

"No, Harry," she said, with a countenance full of love and determination beautifuly blended, "I cannot consent to be your wife this month or even next month. Perhaps I may in the gentle Spring time." "But why not sooner, dearest?" asked Henry, with a face full of anxiety. "Well, since you press me for my reason, dear Henry, I will tell you. The newspapers say there will be thirty-eight snows this Winter, and I want to enjoy some of the sleighing. I have noticed there isn't much sleighing for a girl after marriage, Henry." The wedding will not take place till April.

DRAMATIC AND MUSICAL.

With their usual good fortune, Thatcher, Primrose and West come just when everybody feels in the mood to enjoy a thoroughly fine minstrelsy entertainment. The troupe itself, larger and better than when it fulfilled the phenomenal "burnt cork" engagement at the Boston Theatre last season, will be welcomed this week by a great assemblage. George Thatcher, the unique and inimitably funny, and Primrose and West, who are so clever in their work, hove associated with them a great array of favorites in all the lines of Ethiopianism. A specially bright and taking programme has been arranged for the week at the Boston Theatre.

"The Rajah" remains at the Park Theatre during this week. As the reigning Madison Square attraction, the piece is well worth seeing. The scenes in which the Rajah's coolness and devotion are presented to view are very well drawn; and Mr. H. M. Pitt seems exactly the right man in the right place as Harold Wyncot. A prettier ward than Miss Rillie Deaves one would have to go far to find. Mr. Dominick Murray has made an excellent impression in the role of Cragin, for which he was especially engaged, beginning on Thursday evening. As for the fat boy, Buttons, he couldn't be more interesting than Mr. George Bruening makes him. The gentleman gains, in truth, the special success of "The Rajah."

The reigning production of "The Beggar Student" at the Bijou Theatre excels any other on the English stage. The completeness, its elegance of scenic setting and effects, and the uniform excellence of the representation have been noted by all who have heard the opera so finely brought out under Manager Tyler's direction. Mr. Harry Brown, who has been engaged to play the part of the redoubtable Ollendorff, has made a success with the public. Januschowsky, whose abundant spirit was never better exemplified than in this opera; Fessenden, whose singing seems more delightful than ever; pretty Miss Randall, whose Bronistava is such a piquant and attractive impersonation, are deservedly popular. These are the closing performances of "The Beggar Student," and the Bijou audiences should be as large as the dainty home of harmony can well accommodate.

Mr. Boyesen's new play, "The Alpine Roses," will succeed "The Rajah" at the Madison Square, N. Y. It will be staged with two acts representing a scene in the Alps, showing the home of the two roses, and the interior of their new home in Berlin, which are being built upon the double stage, and will remain set until the play is withdrawn. Messrs. Richard Mansfield, Thomas Whiffen, W. J. Lemoyne, Miss Georgia Cayvan, Mme. von Stamwitz and Miss Marie Burroughs will be in the cast.

The role of Julia in "The Hunchback" is to be played by Miss Mather for the first time in Boston during her forthcoming brilliant engagement.

Young Salvini and that excellent actor, Mr. Milnes Levick, are included in the Margaret Mather company this season.

The elegant paintings owned by Miss Margaret Mather—"Francesca da Rimini" and "The Death of Juliet"—will be placed on public exhibition at Horticultural Hall in Boston to which the public are invited free. They are magnificent, and have been admired by thousands in all the cities visited by the young and talented actress the present season. For the picture representing the tragedy of Verona Miss Mather posed as the central figure. These paintings are very valuable, and will be seen, no doubt, by multitudes during the four weeks' time allotted by Manager J. M. Hill for their exhibition in Boston. Over 30,000 people saw the paintings in Providence. Here they will be presented with all needed accesories, such as elegant and elaborate draperies (from C. W. Roeth & Co.), and the hall will be made a most attractive atelier for the occasion.

First actress—"I see you have managed to attract attention by having your diamonds stolen again." Second actress—"Oh, you think it was only an advertising dodge, do you? Well, I would have you know that it was nothing of the kind." First actress—"If I were going to try that game I should invent something new. Having diamonds stolen is rather ancient." Second actress—"Invent something new? Well, you might start a report that a burglar had broken into your room and run off with your new wig and false teeth."—Philadelphia Call.

Somebody says that the fewer feathers a woman has on her bonnet in this world the more she will have on her wings in the next. This sort of trimming for heaven seems like carrying the millinery business altogether too far.

SELLING

BOOTS AND SHOES

— AT —

MANUFACTURER'S PRICES.

A DECIDED SUCCESS.

many firms in Lynn are puzzled at the large attendance and great success of our special sales, simply because these same firms have failed in their own efforts to attract attention and accomplish the same results. The reasons are plain, for we assert that our establishments can show many advantages over others. We give the following, which are convincing:

First.

Enormous stock. The immense stock of our wholesale house, together with our two retail stores, 84 Market street and 23 Market Square, make a stock to draw from five times larger than all the other shoe stores in Lynn combined.

Second.

Low Rents. While our competitors are handicapped by having to pay exorbitant rents, we with our three stores, have to pay rent only on one—a fact, the significance of which as bearing upon our ability to sell for less than others, will be apparent to all.

Third

Wholesale. Our wholesale trade, which now extends to every city and town of any importance in New England, obliges us to carry an immense stock and gives us an advantage in buying entirely beyond the reach of our competitors. For where they buy of the jobbers in small lots, we buy direct of the manufacturers, and that we can buy as low as the large Boston jobbers is abundantly attested by the fact that we are able to meet and compete with them on their own grounds and build up a wholesale trade which is constantly increasing.

Fourth.

One Price. Marked in plain figures on every pair of boots and shoes, guarantees low prices.—Equal treatment to all classes and shows at a glance the quality of the goods.

Fifth.

Truthful Representations. No misrepresentations are tolerated. Goods are sold for just what they are. Some stores adopt the "bait" plan, advertising great slaughter, immense bargains, etc. Call in half an hour after such stores open and in nearly every instance the salesman has the old story to tell you: "All gone;" "haven't your size;" "too late;" "very sorry, but we have had such a rush they are all out.—Can't we show you something else?" We have no such nonsense. It won't do.

Sixth.

Quick Sales and Small Profits. Quick sales are the life of a successful business. Small profits are sufficient when the business is done on live business principles. You save one profit by buying of the wholesaler.

Seventh.

Exchanging Goods or Refunding Money. When any dissatisfaction occurs because the selection does not please in every particular, the goods, if returned uninjured in a reasonable time, can be exchanged; and it matters not of whom it was selected, any salesman at leisure will pay careful attention to the customer. In case nothing is found to please, the cash will be cheerfully refunded.

Eighth.

Prompt Cash Payments. We are so conscious of the overwhelming advantages we possess both in buying and selling we have no hesitation in asserting that no prudent purchaser can afford to buy anything anywhere else until they have looked through our stock and got our prices. Ready money in our hands enables us to buy goods in large quantities at figures that the average retailer knows nothing about. To-day we stand simply as the connecting link between the manufacturer and consumer.

We have an immense surplus stock which we are going to close out during this sale. In order to accomplish this purpose we know at the outset that it will be necessary to offer sufficient inducements which we are determined to do. Consequently, in this instance as well as all others, we appeal directly to the interests of every purchaser, regarding that as decidedly more potent than volumes of positive assertions.

TO THE PUBLIC!

We have always possessed the idea that the poor man's hard earned dollar should purchase just as much as a like amount of his wealthy neighbor.—WE BELIEVE IT. WE ACT UPON IT. Three years ago it was hard to convince customers that a firm in the FURNITURE business would or could make such a departure. WE DID, and our business to-day is a pleasing monument of its kindly reception by the people of Lynn, Swampscott, Saugus, Nahant, Marblehead, Peabody, Danvers, Lynnfield, Salem, &c., to whom we are more than thankful.

J. D. & J. W. EATON. Dear Sirs: Enclosed please find check for amount of bill for CRAWFORD RANGE and Ware. It arrived last Friday noon, and we had it set up and a fire in it before four o'clock. We are more than pleased with it. All our cooking was done Saturday morning. It usually takes all day to do it. My wife thinks she shall take to cooking again herself, as it is real fun to cook with such a Range as the CRAWFORD. Miscellaneous.

SIXTY FEET UNDER THE SEA.

"I was once a diver—not a wrecker, but a pearl diver—and hard business it was," recently observed the captain of a Spanish brig to a reporter of the California Times. "We worked off the Mexican and Panama coasts, principally on the Pacific side. Sometimes we worked alone, but generally on shares, and sometimes for pay. We went to the grounds in small sailing vessels, then we took to the small boats and covered as much ground as possible. Each man had a basket, a weight and a knife. For sharks? Yes, but it is a poor defence, for it is almost impossible to swing the arm with any force under water. The best weapon is a short spear. When you reach the ground you strip, put your feet in a big sinker, take the basket that has a rope for hoisting, drop over, and soon find yourself at the bottom.

"Then your business is to knock off as many oysters as you can and pile them into the basket before you lose your wind. It is a terrible strain, but I could stand it in those days for six minutes, and I have known some men who could stay down ten; but it is sure death in the long run. If the ground is well stocked you can get twenty or more shells, but it is all luck. When the basket is full it is hauled up, and after you come up for your wind down you go again, the sinker being hauled up with a small cord for that purpose. It was on one of these trips that I ran afoul of the animal that gave me a lasting fight. You will smile when I say it was only a star fish, but that it really was. I went down sixty feet with a rush, and landing on the edge of a big bunch of coral, swung offinto a kind of basin. The basket went ahead of me, and as I swung off to reach the bottom something seemed to spring up all around me, and I was in the arms of some kind of a monster that coiled about my body, arms and legs. I tried to scream, forgetting that I was in the water, and lost my wind.

"It was just as if the plant had sprouted under me and threw its vines and tendrils about me. There were thousands of them, coiling and writhing, and I thought I had landed in a nest of sea snakes. I gave the signal as soon as I could, and made a break upward, part of the creature clinging to me, while the rest, I could see, was dropping to pieces. They hauled me into the boat when I reached the surface, and pulled the main part of the animal from me. It was oval, about three feet across, and the five arms seemed to divide into thousands of others. I probably landed on top of that one, which at this time was the largest I had ever seen. I afterward saw the body of one that was washed ashore on the isthmus that must have had a spread of thirty-five feet. Their power of grasping is considerable, but touch them in a certain way and they throw off their arms in a regular shower, and are soon reduced to an oval body."

THE VENUS OF MILO.

In these deserted streets life suddenly stopped 1800 years ago. It is truth that the destruction was not instantaneous, and a great number of inhabitants saved their lives and even took away a good deal of their treasure. But enough was left to show us every detail of Roman life. The old world is set before us, with all its good and its evil, its glories and shame. We know what manner or men and women they must have been, and what their daily lives were like, almost as well as if we had actually dwelt among them.

These old Pompeiians were very modern. There is nothing new under the sun. They had folding-doors and hot-water urns; they put gratings to their windows, and made rockeries in their gardens; their steel-yards are exactly like those your cheese-monger uses to weigh his Cheddars and Glo'sters; their children had toys—bears, lions, pigs, cats, dogs — made of clay, and sometimes serving as jugs also. Poor children! poor mothers! How did they fare in those three days of darkness and dismay? People wrote on walls, and cut their names on seats, just as we do now. They kept birds in cages.

In Naples to-day, as you walk along the Chiaja, you may find yourself in the midst of a herd of goats, with bells around their necks, exactly like those in the museum. They gave tokens at the doors of their places of entertainments—the people in the gallery had pigeons made of a sort of terra cotta. They put lamps inside the holloweyes of the masks that adorned their fountains; they even made grottos of shells—vulgarity itself is ancient; they ate sausages, and hung up strings of onions; they had stands for public vehicles, and the schoolmaster used a birch on the dunces; they put stepping-stones across the roads, that the dainty young patrician gentlemen, and the pursy old senators might not soil their gilded sandals.

It was never cold enough for their pipes to burst, but they turned their water on and off with taps, and their cookshops had marble counters; they clapped their offenders into the stocks—two gladiators were kept there fifteen hundred years. When their crockery broke they rivited it. At Hercalaneum their is a huge wine jar half buried in the earth. It has been badly broken but is neatly rivited—with many rivets—and it no doubt held the wine as well as ever. Those rivets have lasted 1800 years! It is a strange thing to think about. What would the housewife have said if some one had told her that her cracked pot would outlast the Roman Empire?

The public worship wealth; always did and always will. Wealth is not happiness has been said and sung in all literature, but still people strive for it.

The weather must be getting nearly out of change.

LAWRENCE AND FUSELI.

Henry Fuseli was a Swiss by birth. He studied art in Italy, thinking to be an imitator of Michael Angelo. The close of his life was spent in England. As a painter he was bold and daring and possessed great inventive powers; but his imagination was very apt to outstrip his powers of accomplishment, the result of which was a lack of harmony and ease—in short, a sort of grotesqueness, which at times approached the horrible. In Cunningham's "Life of Sir Thomas Lawrence," occurs a paragraph concerning Fuseli which is worth transcribing. When Sir Thomas had finished his celebrated painting of "Satan gazing into the Abyss," and had placed it on exhibition, it was pronounced to be the grandest thing of the kind ever painted. The conception of Satan—the pose—in fact, his every look—was sublime—that is, with the sublimity of the awful. It nettled Fuseli to hear those encomiums. He had painted Satan several times, but had never received any such praise as was bestowed upon Lawrence. Meeting Sir Thomas one day in company, Fuseli said to him, "Aha, Sir Thomas, you cleverly borrowed your idea of Satan from me!" To which Lawrence at once replied, "Indeed and in truth, Fuseli, I did take that idea from you; but it was from your person, and not from your painting room! At the time when a number of us were assembled at Stockport, in Cheshire, you may remember, you stood upon a high rock overlooking the Bay of Bristol, gazing upon the sea, which rolled so magnificently at your feet. You became enraptured; and, while you were exclaiming, 'Grand! How grand, how terrific, how sublime the view!' you put yourself into one of the wildest of postures. I thought, as I looked upon you in that position, of Satan looking into the abyss, and I took out my note-book and a pencil, and caught down a rapid sketch of you. Here it is, he added, taking his book from his pocket and showing the sketch. And I do assure you, Fuseli, the posture of my Satan now was yours then.

POPULAR ERRORS.

"An odd and common error," said the microscopist, "is that every drop of water we drink is teeming with animal life. There never was a greater mistake. It is very rarely, indeed, in water, that any animalculæ are to be found. If a little bit of grass or shred of meat, or any other organic matter be left in water for two or three days, there they can be found. It is supposed that a peculiar kind of organism like eels can be found in vinegar. It may be that way back in the country where they make vinegar out of apples and not out of aquafortis, there may be some, but they don't seem to thrive in city vinegar. Another thing, people think that hairs are hollow. The hair is no more hollow than a fence post, and the coloring matter, instead of being filled in a tube, is mixed up in the cells of the hair. The mistake never would have occurred if it had been recollected that the hair is but a modification of the epidermis. Then there is another idea that the human skin is as full of pores as a sponge." The fallacy of this idea was demonstrated by the microscopist's taking a slice with a razor off his hand and putting it on a slide. The reporter was surprised to find that the pores were very scarce indeed, appearing to be about a fiftieth of an inch apart.

BEHIND THE SCENES.

Moody, the actor, was an avaricious man. He once lent money to Brereton, the actor; Brereton did not return it immediately, and Moody waited with some degree of patience. At length, the first time Moody met him, he looked earnestly at him and vented a kind of a noise between a sigh and a groan. He repeated this interjection whenever he met Brereton, who at length was so annoyed that he put his hand in his pocket and paid him. Moody took the money, and, with a gentler aspect, said, "Did I ask you for it, Billy?" Speaking of Sheridan, Moody once said, "I have the highest respect for Mr. Sheridan; I honor his talents, and would do anything to show my friendship for him but take his word." Quin said of Macklin, "If God writes a legible hand, that fellow is a villain." At another time Quin had the hardihood to say to Macklin himself, "Mr. Macklin, by the lines—I beg your pardon, sir—by the cordage of your face, you should be hanged." Macklin had three pauses in his acting—the first, moderate; the second, twice as long; but his last, or "grand pause," as he styled it, was so long that the prompter on one occasion, thinking his memory failed, repeated the cue, as it is technically called, several times, and at last so loud as to be heard by the audience. At length Macklin rushed from the stage and knocked him down, exclaiming, "The fellow interrupted me in my grand pause!"

WRITING AND READING.

A story used to be told of a clerk at the Custom House in former days whose duty it was to write cockets, or warrants as they are now called. He was so bad a penman that what he wrote was only read with the greatest difficulty. A day came when one of his documents was altogether illegible. No one could make out a single word of it. It was taken to him and he was asked to explain what it was he had written. He gazed at his own paper helplessly for some time, held it in different lights, but could make nothing of it. "Sir," said he at last, "I am the cocket-writer and not the cocket-reader."

"I wish I was a star," he said, smiling at his own poetic fancy. "I would rather you were a comet," she said, dreamily. His heart beat tumultuously. "And why?" he said, tenderly, at the same time taking her unresisting little hands in his own. "And why?" he repeated, imperiously. "Oh," she said, with a brooding earnestness that fell freezingly upon his soul, "because then you would come round only once every fifteen hundred years."

JOHN P FERNALD, ALBERT VITTUM,
Editors and Publishers.

NOT A little interest has been manifested in our town, upon the publication, in one of the Salem papers, of the report of the resident physician of the Salem Hospital, reflecting quite sharply upon this town. He says:

"There has been a marked increase in the number of free patients received from the town of Peabody, and as this town has been in no instance willing to recompense the hospital for any service rendered its poor, and in one instance actually refused to defray the expenses of one of its paupers who attempted suicide and was brought to the hospital by one of the town officials, it is extremely annoying to continually have cases sent that can hardly be refused admission when they arrive, but which could and should be cared for by the town itself. It should not be inferred that the hospital is, in severe surgical cases, unwilling to receive out-of-town patients, for it is always ready at such times, at the request of a physician or other proper person, to admit such cases as it thinks deserving, free of charge, but it does object to having another town thrust its paupers upon it, and then refuse point blank to share the expenses to any amount whatever."

This has called out a response from Geo. F. Sanger, the chairman of the Board, which is as follows:

In the severe criticism against the town of Peabody contained in the report of the Salem Hospital Corporation, published in your last issue, the Overseers of the Poor wish to correct some statements which are not warranted by the facts of the case. In regard to the person who attempted suicide, we deny that he was ever a town pauper, or was sent to the Hospital by order of the Board of Overseers. On the contrary he was taken at the expense of his brother who had previously been to the Hospital and made arrangements for his admittance there. When the matter was brought to the notice of the Chairman of the Board, (now deceased,) he informed the Hospital officials, or the Clerk of the Board of Overseers of the City of Salem, that the person had no settlement in the town, but was a State pauper. There our duty ended. The Overseers of a town, as is well known, have no authority to assume the expenses of State Paupers. In regard to the statement that "the town has been in no instance willing to recompense the Hospital for services rendered its poor," we answer that all bills for which the town is liable have been paid when presented. Clearly the writer did not inform himself of the facts before making the report.

Respectfully,
GEORGE F. SANGER,
Chairman of the Board of Overseers.
Peabody, Jan. 26, 1884.

Desiring to get at the facts regarding the complaint of the Hospital Authorities, and what our town was doing in the matter relative to sending persons there for treatment we called upon Dr. T. Lyman Perkins the, resident physician there, and the writer of the report. Dr. Perkins gave us very willingly the grounds upon which the complaint was made. The Salem Hospital is not a city affair—it is not under their control or management. It is an incorporated association, the articles being signed April 7th, 1873, by John Bertram and others, for "founding and maintaining a hospital in the City of Salem for the treatment of sick and disabled persons." Dr. Perkins understands that the Hospital is for the benefit of the people of Salem, who are admitted to its privileges without charge. Since its founding it has been supported by private benevolence and while in times past it has been short of funds to meet the demands made upon it, it is now, we understand, in a good financial condition. While the officers in charge consider that the privileges of the Hospital are for Salem, they are not unwilling to give aid in cases outside of that city; in fact, the matron is instructed to receive any person disabled by accident and needing immediate attention without asking any questions, and at any and all times of day or night. Since the opening of the Hospital there has been a considerable demand for care from people, either residents of Peabody, or otherwise, meeting with accidents here. Some of the cases have been paid for by the patients themselves or their friends, others have been taken at the request of our physicians and no pay expected therefor, and the remainder they have received no remuneration for. Dr. Perkins states that since the foundation of the Hospital there have been over thirty cases, representing about eleven hundred weeks of board, which, at the actual cost of $1.40 per week — the low figure at which it is reckoned—would amount to nearly $1500. These cases the Hospital have never received a cent for. The case referred to in the report was that of Michael Fenton, who they claim was brought to the Hospital in charge of a policeman of the town. Believing that the town had sent the officer, they sent a bill to our Overseers, who declined to pay it, on the ground that he was a State pauper. The trustees then notified the physicians of Peabody not to send any cases to the Hospital and that year none came. The next year a man came brought, as they say, by Dr. Frost, who pledged his word that the town would be responsible for payment. He was admitted by Dr. Coggin on the strength of such pledge. The Overseers of the Poor in Salem were notified that Peabody would be responsible and a letter was sent to our Board recounting the circumstances of his reception. This, Dr. Perkins says, was taken no notice of by the Board of Peabody, and the care of this case cost the Hospital $225. Such cases they represent are continually coming, and while they think the town of Peabody may not be legally holden, it ought morally to be willing to reimburse them —in other words, to help them out in some cases, especially while Peabody is so well represented. They say these cases are immediately taken to the Hospital, and got rid of as easily as possible. They think it is carried to excess, and it is for this reason, not because of their unwillingness to treat needy cases, that the report was made.

It will be seen that this does not agree in certain particulars, with the letter of Mr. Sanger, as above. In the case of Fenton, Mr. Sanger affirms that his brother went to the Hospital and made arrangements for his reception. This the Hospital authorities deny, and as they claim he was brought by a town official (a policeman), we called on John Ruth, who is the officer referred to. Mr. Ruth states that he was on duty about 10 P.M. on the night mentioned, and was ordered to Grove street, where he found Fenton in charge of Officer Jones, who desired him to accompany Fenton to the Hospital. Mr. Ruth states there was a team already in waiting, belonging to Smith & Manning, of Salem, and John Fenton, his brother, in charge of it. He understood that the brother had made the arrangements for his care, and believes this to be the case. In the other case referred to, as sent by Dr. Frost, that gentleman denies that he sent to the Hospital or ever pledged the town of Peabody for his support. He was called to the case, and considering that the Hospital would be the better place for his case, advised the friends to take him there. It was also represented to Dr. Frost that the man was able to pay for his care, but this is immaterial. Evidently the hospital authorities had the care misrepresented to them by some one, or were under the impression that Dr. Frost was the town physician at the time—which is not the case, as Dr. Frost never held that position.

Mr. Sanger, the chairman of our Board, states that in the case of Fenton, they could not legally pay for his care. He was not a town pauper but a state pauper. When they were notified of the case Salem was promptly so informed. Mr. Bancroft, now deceased, who was then chairman, never delayed in a case of this kind. He states that when the city of Salem, or the Hospital authorities, were so notified, it was their business to notify the State, and believes now that if they had taken this business-like course, they would have been in receipt of their pay for his care. Mr. Sanger regrets the misunderstanding and feeling which seems to be apparent on the part of the Hospital trustees. He says there is a business way of conducting the affairs of the poor department of this and every town, and as they clearly were in the right in reference to Fenton being a state pauper, the town would not uphold them in aiding him out of their funds, however much they might have been so disposed to do. He further states that the Hospital is not willing to take cases from Peabody, —that this feeling places our physicians in a delicate position which is often embarassing, because of the feeling on their part that their patients sometimes need hospital care.

We have gone thus fully into details that our readers may have both sides of the question, and judge for themselves how far it is right that Peabody should bear any burden for the support of those who are sent to the Hospital. Our town has considerable machinery, as is well known, and there is much liability to accident. It would seem that our citizens should be willing in a measure, to share some of the expense of the care of its citizens, even when not legally so bound. Yet it looks as if the Hospital authorities had been hasty and a little rash in some of their complaints, and while the report of the resident physician was simply a report to the Trustees and not to the public, it was evidently intended that the public should be aware of its contents.

In this connection several suggestions have been made with reference to the care of those who need hospital care. A communication is published elsewhere, suggesting the establishment in our town of a small home where the disabled can have such care as their needs require. Our physicians are favorably disposed towards it and one of them said to us, that he would give $500 towards it, besides a considerable portion of his time in attendance of cases where it was required. Another suggestion is made that the town pay for a bed at the Salem Hospital and make it free to any resident of the town who may be liable to be sent there. At all events we think good will come out of the little fusilade of Dr. Perkins—good that will be of benefit to those especially who need hospital care and are unable to pay for it.

ESSEX COUNTY FINANCES.—The statement of the treasurer of Essex county makes the following showing: Gross debt January 1, 1884, $297,533 95; net debt, $263,821.33. If the amount assessed to the towns on the Deer Island bridge is paid by July 1, as expected, the amount of indebtedness will be reduced about $60,000. The gross payments were $608,503.20. Some of the items are: County debt, $46,000; temporary loan, $265,000; interest, $16,404; cost of criminal prosecutions $36,557.65; cost of jurors, $16,323.66; officers in court, etc., $4,666.53; medical examiners and inquests, $1,470.11; indexing old and new records, $6,222; stationery, $1,467.24; water, fuel, light and care of court houses, $4,198.58; repairs and furnishing county building, $8,935.37; Essex Law Library Association, $2000; highways, $6322,63; Deer Island bridge, $39,058.86. Rock's bridge, $51,537.03; salaries county commissioners, $2950; salaries — sheriff, $1800; county treasurer, $1800; assistant district-attorney, $978.16; cities' and towns' unexpended balance of dog-tax (1882), $11,773; damage to sheep by dogs in 1882, $1374.65. The total receipts were $642,215 82. Among the items are: Cash on hand January 1, $4077.26; taxes for 1883 $205,000; loans $337,000; city of Haverhill for Groveland bridge $28,197.78; town of Groveland for same $5744; town of West Newbury for same $2610.92; fees from clerk of courts, $2892.71; dog licenses $14,427.45; outstanding notes due in 1884 $192,000; in 1885 $25,000; in 1886 $10,000; in 1888 $50,009. The amount to be refunded on dog licenses in $12,959.07; on highways and bridges $4,777.86; on criminal prosecutions $138.47; on fines due officers $651.17; on inquests $529; on damage done by dogs in 1883, $1228.38; interest $250.

The following is from the Taunton Gazette of the 16th inst: Rev. Mr. Hervey was formerly pastor of the Universalist church here, and he has the sympathy of his former parishioners here in the loss of his estimable wife. The funeral took place last Thursday, quite a number from this town attending. "The sympathy of a very large circle of friends will be extended to Rev. Mr. Hervey and sons in their hour of bereavement. Mrs. Hervey, who passed away yesterday, has borne a long and painful illness for many months, and although the fatal termination was not unexpected, the sundering of the ties is none the less grevous to bear."

J. E. Clement returned last week from Center Harbor, whither he had gone to set up the machinery on Mrs. Sutton's farm. Messrs. Flanigan and Lee accompanied him, and they brought home in the vicinity of one hundred as nice pickerel as we wish to see, besides some trout and other fish. They were good eating, too, as through the kindness of Mr. Clement we were provided with a fine dinner, and we can testify favorably to their quality.

We had a visit from Alderman Robt. W. Tabor, of New Bedford, last week, and he was much pleased with our hall accommodations, and the fire apparatus. He states that we are way ahead of the city of New Bedford in these respects.

The Essex County Teachers' Association will hold its meeting in Peabody about the first of April.

Rev. Mr. Hudson will preach next Sunday on the history and work of the Brahmo, Somaj of India.

SPARKS.

The Committee on Manufactures, of the Mass. legislature will report in favor of having a standard coupling all over the state. This was brought about by the Massachusetts State Fireman's Association, who have been trying for some time to get such a law passed. Most of the towns in this section use the same size of a coupling now, but it is only a few years ago, when a company answering to a call for assistance from a neighboring town, would find that they had either got to use a reducing coupling, if short of hose, or draw out and not work. The standard size is 2 1-2 inch coupling, and all the hose in this town is of that size.

Chief Staniford, Assistants Arnold and Luscomb, the Foreman of the H. & L., of the Salem Fire Department, and old Steve Roberts, the veteran driver of the Salem truck were in town last Friday afternoon, and visited the engine house, being shown around by Engineer Folsom. The visitors expressed themselves well pleased with the arrangement of things in the house. They came up to examine the new truck being built for the city by Messrs. Dole & Osgood.

Hose 3 held a grand neck tie party in their house last Friday night, with about twenty-five couples present. The music by the Danvers Quadrille band was very good and all hands enjoyed the occasion immensely. The dancing was kept up until nearly one o'clock. A leap year party will be held in the house, two weeks from last Friday night.

Waltham firemen are holding a series of meetings during the winter which might be also held with profit by our own firemen. At the last meeting, participated in by all the companies, the topic under consideration was "what kind of hose is best, leather, linen or cotton rubber-lined or rubber; and what are the best methods to protect hose from mildew and rot, or otherwise protect it so that it will wear well?" It was finally voted that cotton rubber-lined hose was the best. The firemen will, at their next meeting, discuss the question, "Hose wagons, or reels—which are the best?" It is easy to see how such discussions may be instructive to firemen, quicken their interest in every detail of their work and contribute to an esprit du corps.

Blaney has got the painting and frescoing of the H. & L. room done, and it is a very handsome piece of work. The center piece is in several fancy colors. At each end of the room the ceiling is frescoed in panels with vine borders. A heavy double border extends around the centre piece, one of lines with fancy flower pots as corner pieces, the other being a border of vines and flowers about 6 inches wide with gold corner pieces with the sunflower making a very handsome appearance. Around the walls a heavy border about 20 inches wide made up of dados and panels, with ferns and flowers in colors, the whole being set off with a rich gilt moulding. The chandelier has been bronzed, and the woodwork touched up and varnished, and when the company put down their new Brussels carpet and set their new furniture, they will have a room which will be a fit companion to the room of Steamer One, and one that the boys will be proud to show to any one. Now the town ought to fix up the walls and ceiling of the hall and stairway, as they are in great need of something being done to them.

A. M. Eaton of Wakefield one of the old firemen of that place, was in town on Monday, trying to purchase a hose reel for a hand engine, situated in the outskirts of that town. Engineer Folsom took him to the house of No. 5, and offered him one of the old jumpers, formerly run with the old Foster engine.

The coupling that the new law, if passed will make the standard, is the Roxbury, and there will be a fine of from $10 to $50, imposed for each violation of the law.

The members of Steamer Company No. 1, at their last meeting voted to send a letter of thanks to Gen. Eben Sutton, thanking him for the handsome present given to the company by him. The letter was sent this week and the following is a copy.

Peabody, Mass., Jan. 24, 1884.

Gen. Eben Sutton,

Dear Sir: The members of Gen. Sutton Steamer Co., No. 1, beg to acknowledge the receipt, at your hands, of a very elegant carpet, with which to adorn the room of the company. In tendering you their hearty thanks, they do so with a remembrance of the generous spirit that prompted it, and which they beg to assure you is appreciated by every member of the Company. The gift will be a constant and continual reminder of your kindness. Accept our best wishes for the continued prosperity and happiness of you and yours, and we remain

Very Respectfully Yours.

Wm. J. Roome, Foreman,
Geo. H. Carr, Clerk.

The reason one of our foremen did not turn out to the fire at Richardson & Doyle's last Tuesday night, was because he could not leave the baby, that important member of the family having taken that time for a general suction.

Meeting of the Relief Association to-morrow evening in Temperance Hall. The old association hold their meeting at 7.30, and at 8.00 the signers of the incorporation papers will hold their meeting for the election of officers and the adoption of a new set of by-laws. We think that the by-laws should be fixed so that any member who is sick or injured, whether it is caused by fire, duty or otherwise, should be allowed some benefit, for they certainly would need help as much then as they would if they got their injuries or sickness in doing fire service.

Both the steamer reels have had to be repaired since the fire. Z.

PEABODY.

The Essex Club will meet at Young's Hotel, Boston, Saturday, Feb. 24. Dinner at 1.30.

Geo. Stevens has in stock a large line of new valentines, and they will bear inspection. Call at his store and look them over.

A constitutional prohibition convention will be held in Tremont Temple, Boston, Tuesday, Feb. 10, at 10 A. M. and 2 P. M. All interested are invited. The call is signed by Rev. Daniel Dorchester as President, and Richard Eddy, D. D., as Secretary.

A double-runner belonging to a little son of David T. Winter, was stolen from his yard last Wednesday evening. Chief Peasley was notified and in less than twenty-four hours restored the stolen property to the little fellow and brought the culprit to justice.

A member of the school committee was present at the hearing of the parties arrested for disturbance of the evening school with a piece of cotton wool in one ear. When asked the reason for it he said it was so he could hear only one side of the evidence.

The following gentlemen were elected delegates to the State convention of the Mass. Dept. of the G. A. R., held in Boston tomorrow: C. T. Batchelder, John H. Tibbets, Timothy Lord and Commander William H. Hildreth. Alternates, Samuel P. Hart, Simon Baxton, William W. Reed.

There will be another temperance meeting in the town hall, under the management of Mr. Neil Shaw. Mrs. Barton of Lawrence a gifted and eloquent speaker will address the meeting. Mrs. Barton is the lady who so ably advocated the cause of temperance in the Green Room at the State House recently.

About forty couples were present at the social party of Farnham and Flanagan at Upton's Hall last evening, and a more social and pleasant party has not been held this winter. The next will be a benefit complimentary to the managers and will be held in the same place Monday evening, Feb. 11th. There will be a large party.

The relatives and friends of Mr. and Mrs. Fitzgibbons on English street, surprised them last Wednesday evening by rallying in force, taking everything by storm and doing as much in the way of making up a lively party as eighteen men and eighteen women possibly could. The evening's entertainment concluded with a bountiful collation.

"Basket suppers" are a popular church revenue amusement in many places just now. Each young lady prepares with her own hands, a supper for two, and packs it in a basket, rolling a slip of paper bearing her name inside one of the napkins. Each gentleman buys a basket, and shares the contents with the young lady whose name he finds within.

Monday morning a horse attached to a hay wagon, was left standing in front of Ed. Trask's store while the driver, Mr. Edward E. Boxwell, was inside. The horse became frightened at the cars and ran away, coming in contact with the post supporting the wire sign of the PRESS, and making a complete wreck of the wagon. The wagon was the property of Major Lewis Allen.

Tilden Grafton Abbott, the defaulting cashier of the Union Market National Bank, of Watertown, who has absconded with $31,000 of the funds of that institution, was well known to many of the young men in this town. He was a pupil in the Bowditch school for a year or more under Master Eaton. He was an apt scholar and a general favorite. He came from Reading to attend school here.

The annual meeting, winter re-union and dinner of the Massachusetts Press Association will be held in Boston on Tuesday, February 5th, at the Revere House. Business meeting for choice of officers etc., at 11 o'clock; social re-union at 12; dinner at 2. At 7.30, through the courtesy of the managers of the Boston Theatre, the association are invited to attend the performance there of Miss Margaret Mather.

The demand for them is constantly increasing and must continue to do so, for they are way ahead of any other invention of the kind.—Woburn Journal.

The fainting of three young ladies, who were carried out from the Delmonico ball-room one night last week, and laid upon a table in the dressing-room insensible and ghastly, goes to show painfully enough that even girls of 18, with strongest constitutions, cannot stand the fearful strain of continued midnight dissipation which this season's gayety has put upon them.

HOME HAPPENINGS.

A concert of war songs is not a new thing in Peabody, as the G. A. R. Post conducted one last summer; our citizens were not, therefore, unprepared for the character of the entertainment to which they were invited last Friday night. War songs have become of late very popular—partly on account of the revival of memories which the songs occasion, and also as an attraction to the younger generation who know nothing of the songs or their associations save as a matter of history. Those who attended the first concert were treated to a surprise last Friday night. Many of our best singers volunteered their services and under the direction of William P. Clark, rendered the songs in a spirited and intelligent manner. The chief attraction of the evening was the Lotus Club, a male quartette unknown to the most of the audience, but who won instant favor. They were encored again and again, and appeared very willing to gratify the repeated demand made upon them. In addition to this Club there was the Columbia Brass Quartette, who rendered several selections to the satisfaction of the audience, but in their attempts to accompany the chorus were not as successful. They were unable to keep time in "Marching through Georgia," and by being persistently behind the chorus nearly spoiled the effect of one of the grandest songs of the evening. Messrs. Flockton and Byford gave the different calls with bugle, drum and fife—and Mr. Flockton gave a drum solo which was an admirable performance. Miss Etta Kileski was the only lady vocalist, and in her opening selection "All hail! America," showed that she had a voice of wide compass and considerable power. She was recalled and gave "The Old Folks at Home." Later in the evening she sang the solo in the "Star Spangled Banner," amid the waving of flags and much enthusiasm. The entire performance was worthy of a larger house than appeared, and one which would give little encouragement to bring a good concert performance to our Hall, with its present expense, and the expense of first class artists. Mr. Elmore A. Pierce, manager of the Roberts Bureau, of Boston, had the direction of the concert, and appeared during the evening in a very effective reading of "Sheridan's ride." Mr. Pierce is an elocutionist of considerable experience and much success, and added not a little to the success of the whole entertainment. Messrs. Randall and Hildreth were the local managers, and they have decided to repeat the concert Friday evening of this week. The Lotus Club will sing some new pieces, Marie Marchington will appear in place of Miss Kileski, and the local chorus will again appear under Mr. Clark. We hope that a larger attendance will be noticeable, and as will be seen by advertisement, tickets are now on sale at Spaulding's. Admission tickets to the gallery will be sold this time for 25 cents,—the reserved seats 35 and 50, according to location, as before.

A serious insubordination arose among the pupils of the evening school last Friday evening. One of the larger boys had not been conducting himself as he ought, and Mr. Wells told him that he must leave the school. Some words passed and the boy refused to go from the building. Mr. Wells then went down stairs in search of Officer Pingree, leaving the room in charge of Mr. C. A. Weare and the lady assistants. As soon as the door closed upon Mr. Wells, C'Connor, one of the oldest pupils, rose and told the refractory pupil not to leave his seat and that if he was expelled they would all rush from the room. A large number of the boys then left their seats and made for the doors, but Mr. Weare told them that they could not go, and the young man was so determined that they sat down and remained quiet for a few minutes. When Mr. Wells returned with Mr. Pingree a grand rush ensued, but only one pupil escaped. Some insulting language was indulged in and after the arrest of the four ring leaders the lessons were continued without further trouble. The parties arrested came before Judge Merrill last Monday morning and owing to the absence of the trustee of the Wallis School fund, the case was continued till to-morrow morning.

This is mid-winter, and many kinds of business are slack, but people keep up a thinking about what they will do when the spring opens, if they live so long. It will not be many weeks, at farthest, before the backbone of winter is broken, and all should prepare for a season of activity and usefulness, when the winter season is passed. Plans can be laid now, if nothing more.

Sleighing parties have been having a "picnic" the past week.

Mr. Frank A. Bragdon has sold out his bakery on Lowell street, to Mr. Charles F. Hathaway of Cambridge. Mr. Hathaway is not a stranger with us. When the firm of Hale & Davis was started here, nine years ago, Mr. Hathaway was employed with them, in packing and shipping crackers. He made numerous friends who will be pleased to welcome him again among us. Mr. Bragdon, who retires from the business, has made many friends since locating here, and many will regret that other business will eventually call him to other fields. Mr. Bragdon while in business here, has retained an interest in a large flouring mill in the west and has acted as their principal selling agent in the east. That he may give more time to that business, he retires from the bakery here, which required too much time. We wish him the success for the future, that his enterprise and energy deserve.

Samuel Davis who had been in the employ of William A. Smith for sometime, died at his residence in Lynn, on Thursday evening, of consumption. Mr. Davis was a soldier in the late war, enlisted in Salem Aug. 22, 1862, serving thirty-four months, being discharged June 16, 1865, with the position of corporal. He enlisted in Co. B, 40th Mass. Volunteers, serving the campaign in Virginia, and was at the siege of Fort Sumpter. He leaves a widow and one daughter. His age is about 58 years. The deceased was a member of Union Post 50 G. A. R., of this town, and the Post attended his funeral in a body, being conveyed in special car to Lynn where his remains were interred in Pine Grove Cemetery.

An orchestra is talking of locating over our office. A brass band used to meet there a few years ago, and we were treated to a daily serenade; yes, every hour in the day, we were compelled to listen to its not very harmonious strains. One time in particular, we wish to speak of. It was forced from a bass viol. Whenever its plaintive strains were wafted to the ear of our office devil, he became paralyzed in his tracks, and remained silent—even unto the end. It is to be hoped that the new orchestra will not affect our present devil that way.

The case of Alex. Miller in the police court last Friday is a sad one. It was his third offence for drunkenness and he was sent to the house of correction for four months. Miller is an Englishman, a man of fine qualities, and a graduate of one of the leading colleges of his own country. Friends in town have put forth every effort to redeem him, but his appetite for strong drink seems to be beyond his control. He was employed by the Danvers Bleachery.

Mr. E. W. Grant, representing the Boston office of the Shoe and Leather Reporter was in town yesterday, delivering that valuable book the Shoe & Leather Annual, which is annually looked forward to. It is a complete directory of the Tanners, boot and shoe manufactorers, dealers in Boots and Shoes, Leather and Findings, Hides, Skins and Wool and Shoe Machinery of the United States, and principal ones of the Canadas and Europe.

Mrs. Humphrey Moynihan, who keeps a boarding house on Foster street had her husband arrested yesterday for turning her out of her bed at half past twelve o'clock at night, and putting her in the street and refusing her admittance to the house. The Judge fined him $10 and costs, from which he appealed. The husband is an old soldier and when not in drink is a peaceable and quiet citizen.

The Unity Club met Monday evening with Mrs. J. P. Fernald, with about 40 members present. After the regular business was discussed the "Invitation," edited by Mrs. Dr. Worcester, was read by that lady. The rest of the evening was devoted to music, vocal and instrumental, and an amusing entertainment under the management of Misses Winchester and Goulding.

A movement is on foot among some of our leading citizens to insert an article in the warrant for the next annual town meeting asking the town to maintain a bed at the Salem Hospital. Because there is so much machinery in use here the liability of accidents is many. We trust the article will be inserted and action taken by the town for that purpose.

The sleigh ride last Wednesday evening of Mr. Charles A Haskell's class in the Congregational Sunday school was a delightful affair. Smith & Manning's elegant boat sleigh, with four horses, carried the party on a trip through Lynn and Swampscott, and upon their return a bountiful supper awaited them at the residence of Mr. Haskell on Lowell street.

The several Friday evening prayer meetings will be closed a little earlier than usual next Friday evening, to allow members of the chorus to take part in the Concert of War Songs.

The senior class in the High school will not give a reception this year. Sensible!

The coffee party given at the new town house last evening by the different charitable organizations for the benefit of the men who were discharged, was a big success. The programme consisted ot a variety entertainment in the new Opera House, for the first part. Promptly at 8 o'clock, the exercises commenced by an overture by the Salem Cadet Orchestra, and then followed a long programme, which was heartily enjoyed by a large audience consisting of 1300 people at least. We have not space to speak of the particular merits of each performer, which included the Diamond Quartette, in solos, etc., Mr. Thomas Priest and Master Frank Priest in excellent club swinging, Miller & Hallisey, John Murphy, Morrill & Hutchings, Dan Gorman, M. Buckley, Eddy McLaughlin, Donovan & Phelan, Wallace & Wymond, W. H. O'Connor, Master John Ferrule, and the Whittenhagen Bros., all sustaining their well earned reputation. Thomas F. Murray sang a very pleasing ballad and M. H. Grady brought down the house in his "Equalization and realm of time." Dave Horrigan in his Dutch Songs was well received, and was presented with an elegant bouquet. Charles Downing a colored youth, in bone solos and imitations, equaled anything of the kind seen upon the professional stage. P. Tivnan in the song "Rolling home in the morning," received an encore. Cassidy and Kelley in character songs were good. Master John Egan the boy pianist was well received, and indicates a brilliant future before him. Nearly every piece on the programme was encored. The entertainment closed about 10.45 The company adjourned to the town hall where those who desired enjoyed a dance. The tables were set to accommodate one hundred and sixty-five people at a time in the basement, where hot coffee and pastry was served. The first to visit the supper room were those who had assisted and the members of the press. The dancing was kept up till three o'clock this morning. The whole affair was a grand success, and reflects credit upon the gentlemen having it in charge. The net receipts will not be far from $1000.

There will be a missionary concert at the Baptist church next Sunday evening at 7 o'clock. The subject of the evening will be "Christian Missions among the Jews." An address will be delivered by Rev. Dr. M. J. Dennis of the Jewish Mission in Boston. Dr. Dennis is a Hebrew by birth. While a young man he was converted to Christianity, and for 12 years labored in Jerusalem, under the auspices of the London Missionary society. Upon his return from Palestine he came to the United States, and has since been the pastor of churches in Cincinnati and other Western cities. Last winter he came east and established a mission among the Jews in Boston, where he is at present successfully laboring for their conversion. The address will be given in the main audience room of the church. The music has been especially arranged for the occasion. A cordial invitation is extended to all to come.

We publish in this issue by permission of Mr. Gallup of the Naumkeag Clothing Co. and by the kindness of Master Whipple, the prize essay which won for him the elegant double runner sled offered as a gift to the young man writing the best essay on the Clothing Business. We desire to say that not only the composition itself, but the punctuation, paragraphing and general style were taken into account by the judges, and the essay in our columns is, verbatim et literatim, a copy of the original manuscript, punctuation and all.

A private letter from Frank W. Poor, of Kansas City, Mo., says he has taken Fred Koehler who has been a clerk in the Lindell House as a partner, and that they will continue that business and are building another hotel at Excelsior Springs, a place some thirty-five miles from Kansas City. This hotel will be 250 feet long by 46 wide, with an L. 60x40 ft, and will contain 225 rooms, the kitchen being 60x40 ft. We are glad to note this enterprise of a former townsman.

The administration in the case of G. F. Choate vs. E. W. Jacobs, having failed, and the rescript having come down sustaining the finding of the Probate Court, that the bondsmen are holden for the full amount of the penalty for violation of the administrator's trust, the amount may have to be paid by the bondsmen. They are William P. Clark and C. Leonard Pierce. The whole amount is in the vicinity of $1000.

Mr. George W. Gray, of Beverly, has patented a very ingenious device for rolling goat and sheep skins. The journals of the roll are made hollow to allow a current of air to continually circulate through them which prevents any heating. The bearings are also lined with anti-friction metal. It is said that this machine has been run continuously for ten hours without any perceptible change in the temperature of the rolls. The machine is in use in this town, and is giving entire satisfaction.

THE LIGHT OF DAY.

PAST IMPOSSIBILITIES THE FACTS OF THE PRESENT—HELP IN THE NEW ERA.

"I remember when they were putting up the poles for the first telegraph line in the State of New York, and now look there!" exclaimed a citizen of the metropolis to his friend, as the two stood on the summit of the tall Equitable Building in Broadway. "The city is strung with wires like a harp, and electric communication is the daily miracle of the world. People no longer wonder and laugh at it as they did at Morse when he first suggested its possibility."

The age marches on and prejudice must give way. Nobody has a monopoly of truth. Even the conservative guild of physicians admit that the secrets of medicine are shared by all men. "I dressed his wound, and God healed him," said old Galen. Once that terrible disease, Rheumatism, was supposed to be a shifting, local ailment, now attacking the joints and now the muscles. To-day it is demonstrated to be a disease of the blood."

Mrs Henry Bogert, of No. 454 Atlantic Avenue, Brooklyn, N. Y., writes to Messrs. Hiscox & Co., of New York, proprietors of Parker's Ginger Tonic, that "she had been completely discharged from Rheumatism and pain in the back and hips. She was advised to take the Tonic for Kidney disease. She did so, and her Rheumatism disappeared." The reason is simple. Diseased kidneys produce rheumatic symptoms. Cure them and you destroy Rheumatism. This is now admitted by all intelligent physicians. It is the new light thrown on their time worn and mistaken theories.

Parker's Ginger Tonic, which is a combination of the best remedies for the blood known to science, is by its all successful in combating this terrible complaint. Those who, like Mrs Bogert, suffer from Kidney or Liver disease or any complaint arising from impure blood, will find the Tonic a prompt and certain remedy. Prices 50c. and $1 a bottle. The larger size the cheaper.

WARREN LELAND,

whom everybody knows as the successful manager of the Largest Hotel Enterprises

of America, says that while a passenger from New York on board a ship going around Cape Horn, in the early days of emigration to California, he learned that one of the officers of the vessel had cured himself, during the voyage, of an obstinate disease by the use of

Ayer's Sarsaparilla.

Since then Mr. Leland has recommended Ayer's Sarsaparilla in many similar cases, and he has never yet heard of its failure to effect a radical cure.

Some years ago one of Mr. Leland's farm laborers bruised his leg. Owing to the bad state of his blood, an ugly scrofulous swelling or lump appeared on the injured limb. Horrible itching of the skin, with burning and darting pains through the lump, made life almost intolerable. The leg became enormously enlarged, and running ulcers formed, discharging great quantities of extremely offensive matter. No treatment was of any avail until the man, by Mr. Leland's direction, was supplied with Ayer's Sarsaparilla, which allayed the pain and irritation, healed the sores, removed the swelling, and completely restored the limb to use.

Mr. Leland has personally used for Rheumatism, with entire success; and, after careful observation, declares that, in his belief, there is no medicine in the world equal to it for the cure of Liver Disorders, Gout, the effects of high living, Salt Rheum, Sores, Eruptions, and all the various forms of blood diseases.

We have Mr. Leland's permission to invite all who may desire further evidence in regard to the extraordinary curative powers of Ayer's Sarsaparilla to see him personally either at his mammoth Ocean Hotel, Long Branch, or at the popular Leland Hotel, Broadway, 27th and 28th Streets, New York.

Mr. Leland's extensive knowledge of the good done by this unequalled eradicator of blood poisons enables him to give inquirers much valuable information.

MADE ON PURPOSE.

ONE OF THOSE MISTAKES(?) WHICH ARE MORE FREQUENT THAN PROFITABLE.

"Why, my child, this is not BENSON'S CAPCINE POROUS PLASTER," said a father to his little daughter, after examining a package she had just brought from the drug store.

"Isn't it, Papa? I'm sorry, but I asked the man for Benson's—I know I did, and he took the twenty-five cents you gave me to pay for it with," exclaimed the child, positively. "Maybe the drug man made a mistake."

"I'll go 'round myself and see," was the gentleman's comment, as he donned his coat and hat.

"Why didn't you send me Benson's plaster, instead of this cheap and trashy thing?"

"Why, I,—I, thought that would suit you just as well—and—"

"You thought! you thought! What business had you to think? I don't pay you for thinking, but for filling my order," said the indignant caller, contemptuously, "There! take that thing back and give me my money, I'll get what I want elsewhere."

Harris' Seed Catalogue for 1884.—We are in receipt of a handsomely illustrated Catalogue of Farm, Garden and Flower Seeds, from Joseph Harris, Moreton Farm, Rochester, N. Y. It will be sent free to any reader who sends his or her name to Mr. Harris as above. Mr. Harris is a large farmer and seed grower and a well-known agricultural writer. He gives very full directions for cultivation that are well worth reading. Send for his catalogue. We have used his seeds for several years and can confidently recommend them. They are warranted fresh pure and good, or money refunded.

"Over the Ortler" is a thoroughly fresh and charming sketch of a mountain climb in the Tyrol, written by Frederick Courtlandt Penfield, and appearing in "Outing and the Wheelman" for February. The number is richly illustrated, and full of the out-door flavor which has made this magazine so popular. Price, 20 cents; $2 a year.

A very carefully prepared paper on the St. John's Region, in Florida, by John Ransom, of Jacksonville, richly illustrated by Moran, Smedley and Sylvester, occupies the leading place in "Outing and the Wheelman" for February, and is worth more than the price of the number, (20 cents) to all who are preparing to go South this winter. [Boston, $2 a year.]

Fritters.—Six eggs, one quart sweet milk, three cups flour, one measure each, of acid and soda (or two heaping teaspoonfuls acid and one moderately heaping teaspoonful soda) of Horsford's Bread Preparation sifted into the flour while dry and a little salt. Beat the whites and the yolks of the eggs separately. Stir the milk in with the yolks, then add the flour which has previously been mixed with the bread preparation, put in the salt, and finally the whites. Beat all together very hard and fry immediately.

The local paper is the best read paper in the world. All the city papers cannot supply the place of a home paper. No other contains the marriages and deaths, no other gives the time for the next ball, picnic or political meeting; no other discusses the affairs of the town and county, or gives in detail the local news which can be obtained from no other source. Everybody reads, and that is why the unpretentious local paper is the best read paper in the world.—N. Y. Tribune.

The windows of Upham's art store contain so many little gems, that it is hard to walk by without stopping to examine them. He has note paper with choice original Salem headings that are very attractive.

Mr. Peter Mallen, 212 W. Twenty-fourth street, New York, says that he suffered six years with rheumatism and found no relief until St. Jacobs Oil, the sovereign remedy, was applied, which cured him completely.

Merrill & Mackintire are wide awake young men, and their business attests to the fact that they know how to please the public.

Constitutional or scrofulous Catarrh, scrofulous Sore eyes, etc., surely cured by Ayer's Sarsaparilla.

DESTINY OF OLD HOUSES.

Many of us love old-fashioned houses, and they have a peculiar charm to poets and novelists. There is a fascination and romance even in the old-fashioned kitchen, with its spacious chimney corner, where, if you look up, you may see the stars; its capacious ovens and smokejack; with its straight-backed settle and sprawling chairs, and creaking table and pleasant smell of viands; the low ceilings and naked beams, the tall clock, the lustrous buffet, with all its glories of china; the landscape-papered wall; the out-of-the-way recesses where children love to hide; the store-closet with its treasures of sweets; and, above all, the mysterious garret, full of rich and rare and curious relics—how delightful it all seems in the reminiscence! We wonder how it would satisfy us now. The final destiny of many fine old houses it is not pleasant to contemplate. A large number of them are converted into shops and warerooms, being frequently lifted into the air and a basement introduced for business purposes, which, with its plate glass windows and iron columns, forms a singular contrast to the domestic looking structure above. To one who has been born and bred in a house thus elevated into obscurity, it is sad and strange to see a nice old sitting-room converted into a barber's shop and the dining-room into a dentist's place of business, and the upper chambers into a photographer's saloon. It is sadder still when a grand old mansion sinks to the low level of a common tenement house; the rich wall papers defiled with dirty stains; the ornamental stucco on the ceiling dropping off piece by piece; the marble mantel cherubs with their noses knocked off; the costly balusters carried away for fuel; every corner of the house crowded with dirty men and women and dirtier children; the outer walls defiled with slops; old hats and rags and paper stuffed into the broken window panes; the doors askew; the floors unsteady; horrible smells everywhere; clothes hung up to dry everywhere; and then to think what the house once was, and how nice everything once was, and who the people were that once lived there! It is the fashion now to build old houses, or rather, houses that are made to look as if they were old. In fact, old things of all sorts are in demand, and perhaps old men will be in requisition by and by, which would be a great relief to some of us.

GEORGE ELIOT'S GRAVE.

It is not true, as alleged in an American girl's note to the London Times, that George Eliot's grave is unknown at the cemetery where she lies and is unmarked. In a quiet little corner of Highgate Cemetery, one of the most picturesque spots of suburban London, the grave and the monument of George Eliot can be seen. Shortly before her death George Eliot made a tour through the midland counties of England, and on one occasion passed through one of those charmingly quaint and severly silent village churchyards, where time alone marks life and death so quietly and effectively. There a simple flagstone bore the suggestive and mysterious single inscription: "The Unknown." This attracted "the great authoress." Making inquiries she learned this was the spot where a cultured and disappointed woman lay at rest after living the life of an "unmarried wife," and being deserted by that very "humanity" George Eliot had so much praised in seductive chapters. Living out the remnant of this wordly existence in a retired corner of a village, and unknown and uncared for, this fair and frail one breathed her last in a tiny room, leaving a written request that she should be buried in the neighboring churchyard, and that her only epitaph should be "The Unknown." A small sum of money was found to defray the funeral expenses and put up the stone which gave "George Eliot" a serious view of life at home and abroad over and above "the humanities."

NVENTION OF AN ELECTRIC GUN.

One of the most interesting novelties at the Vienna International Exhibition is an electric gun. The powder is fired by means of a piece of platinum in the cartridge, and the electric current necessary for heating the platinum is obtained from a little accumulator, which must be worn in a belt specially devised for the purpose. Besides the accumulator and the belt, a glove and a shoulder strap are necessary. The glove is worn on the left hand, and is connected with one pole of the accumulator, the strap with the other. All this would, it must be confessed, be a rather formidable addition to a soldier's accoutrements and one is hardly surprised to hear that the inventors do not expect their patent to be immediately adopted in all the European armies. Meanwhile they point out that the electric gun affords several advantages besides the charm of novelty, which ought to commend it to the sportsman. In the first place, it is said to be very economical; and what new application of electricity is ever said to be anything else—at first? There is no great saving on the gun or the cartridges, but then only a quarter of the ordinary charge of powder is necessary. Moreover, the gun is economical of time and trouble. The cartridges serve many times over, and there is none of the bother of taking off the old caps. But the crowning merit which is claimed for the electric gun is that it is warranted never to "kick." If this warranty be really true, the application of electricity to sport ought not to be long delayed.

No way has been found for making heroism easy, even for the scholar. Labor, iron labor, is for him. The world was created as an audience for him; the atoms of which it is made are opportunities.

A FEW HINTS

FOR THE USE OF

AYER'S PILLS

Dose.—To move the bowels gently, 2 to 4 Pills; thoroughly, 4 to 6 Pills. Experience will decide the proper dose in each case.

For Constipation, or Costiveness, no remedy is so effective as Ayer's Pills. They insure regular daily action, and restore the bowels to a healthy condition.

For Indigestion, or Dyspepsia, Ayer's Pills are invaluable, and a sure cure.

Heart-burn, Loss of Appetite, Foul Stomach, Flatulency, Dizziness, Headache, Numbness, Nausea, are all relieved and cured by Ayer's Pills.

In Liver Complaint, Bilious Disorders, and Jaundice, Ayer's Pills should be given in doses large enough to excite the liver and bowels, and remove constipation. As a cleansing medicine in the Spring, these Pills are unequalled.

Worms, caused by a morbid condition of the bowels, are expelled by these Pills.

Eruptions, Skin Diseases, and Piles, the result of Indigestion or Constipation, are cured by the use of Ayer's Pills.

For Colds, take Ayer's Pills to open the pores, remove inflammatory secretions, and allay the fever.

For Diarrhœa and Dysentery, caused by sudden colds, indigestible food, etc., Ayer's Pills are the true remedy.

Rheumatism, Gout, Neuralgia, and Sciatica, often result from digestive derangement, or colds, and disappear on removing the cause by the use of Ayer's Pills.

Tumors, Dropsy, Kidney Complaints, and other disorders caused by debility or obstruction, are cured by Ayer's Pills.

Suppression, and Painful Menstruation, have a safe and ready remedy in

AYER'S PILLS.

Full directions, in various languages, accompany each package.

Miscellaneous.

IN THE BRAVE DAYS OF OLD.

A correspondent of the Chicago Inter-Ocean, writing from the ancient town of Yarmouth, Me., says: There are some good stories told about the old meeting house, of which nothing remains now but the vane, which some enthusiastic antiquarians have planted upon "the ledge," one of the hills of he town. It was the first church built in Maine. In those days every man carried his musket to church with him, and these were stacked outside the door, while the sentinels kept watch during service, and others were posted at different points through the town. One quiet Sabbath, while the preacher held forth upon the ruin of unbelievers and the congregation slumbered peacefully in their high-backed pews, a signal gun was heard from the Prince's Point Station. Another sharp report followed, and still another. The minister did not wait for the fifthly in his discourse, but dashed down the pulpit stairs and joined the excited multitutde outside. From their commanding situation they saw a strange craft sailing up Casco Bay. It carried no colors. They could see no men on its deck. After a hurried consultation it was decided to send an armed deputation to Prince's Point to find out the mission of the mysterious vessel. The women and children, with a few men for defence, remained on the hill, while the heroic band marched down to the point and awaited the arrival of the stranger. An hour passed and they returned. The bark was—a schooner from down the coast which had sailed up for timber! The Chronicle tells only the bare story, and with a grain of facetiousness, as if the humor was evident enough without any comments. It does not attempt to account either for the fall of the plastering in the same church at the very moment when the parson, a gloomy man with a sonorous voice and pessimistic views of life, was enlarging on the passage "Blow ye the trumpet! Babylon shall fall and become heaps," but simply says that "the people thought the end of the world had come, and did leave the meeting house in great distraction, injuring a woman seriously by trampling upon her in their haste to get out of the door."

SPIRIT CLOTHES.

Another problem that has puzzled philosophers is the clothes worn by spirits. Generally they appear "in the habit as they lived." Now, the skeptic is apt to say: "I can stand the ghost, but where does the ghost get his clothes?" M. d'Assier replies in point of fact, "From Poole and other artists." Clothes have their ghosts just as much as men have, and a ghost appears in the ghost of his clothes. M. d'Assier gets his evidence from the famous Seeress of Prevorst, a lady who had seen as many ghosts as Coleridge, but, unlike Coleridge, had not seen "too many to believe in them." The seeress "distinguished the fluidic images of all things." This is precisely the view of "primitive man," only primitive man calls the "fluidic images" souls or ghosts. "Fetichism," says Mr. McLennan, "assigns souls to all things." "The Khonds have a limited quantity of soul as tribal property, and they explain their custom of female infanticide by saying that the fewer their women are the more soul there will be for the men." How often do we hear a lady's friends say that she is "all soul." To return to the souls of objects; savages show their belief in them, by breaking the pots and other articles which they bury with the dead. The soul, or "fluidic image," of the pots is thus set free for the use of the "fluidic image," or soul of the deceased. Adopting this theory, M. d'Assier is enabled to solve another riddle in the manners of posthumous man. We have all heard of the poltergeist—the noisy bear-fighting ghost who fills the rooms with strange sounds of breaking glass and falling furniture. The glass, where those sounds are heard, is usually found not to be broken, and when the flying tables and chairs strike people they do not hurt them. "The person who is struck compares the sensation to that produced by a blow from a soft substance, like a ball of linen or cotton." The truth is that posthumous man is extremely addicted to the use of missile weapons. "Le projectile parait etre son arme favorite." But he does not toss about real glasses, tables, stones and chairs. He only throws their "fluidic images." The ghost of man knocks about the ghosts of objects. "The man from beyond the grave acts with stones as he does with clothes. He contents himself with detaching their fluidic images, which become, in his hands, invisible projectiles." Nothing can be more satisfactory.

POST OFFICE IN A KEG.

The simplest post office in the world is in the Magellan Straits, and has been established there for many years. It consists of a small cask, which is chained to the rocks of the extreme cape in the straits, opposite Terre del Fuego. Each passing ship sends a boat to open the cask and take letters out and place letters in it. The post office is self-acting, therefore; it is under the protection of all the navies of all nations, and up to the present time there is not a single case to report in which any abuse of the privilege it affords has taken place.

Poverty is hard, but debt is horrible. A man might as well have a smoky house and a scolding wife, which are said to be the two worst evils of our life.

Envy not the appearance or happiness in any man; for thou knowest not his secret griefs.

THE FLORIDA WAR.

About twenty miles from Live Oak, Florida, writes a correspondent of the Philadelphia Times, are the famous White Sulphur Springs, where waters bubble and play that are considered a specific for all diseases of a rheumatic nature. Here was the favorite resort of the noted chief, Osceola, but whether he was afflicted with pains and aches that made these visits compulsory is not known. This famous chief, who was a half-bread and whose English name was Powell, seems to have been a noble character. His orders were always strict against the killing of women and children. Often when he and his braves were lying in ambush near some frontier fort, merry parties of women and children, but now my braves are led by one"—referring to Wild Cat—"who will spare nothing that is white." His hostility xtended to males alone; he was humane and merciful to all others.

A romantic and pathetic incident is related of him in connection with his visits to these springs. During a lull in one of their various wars he had come here with his wife and child to rest and recuperate in the healing waters. Fearing no attack, as their was peace in the land, he made no effort at concealment and abondoned himself to those pleasures of home and family that even a redskin is capable of appreciating.

His presence, unarmed and unguarded, was discovered by a party of white hunters, and they determined to kill him. In defiance of all right and justice, they sneaked upon him while he was watching the playful gambols of his child, and poured upon the group a deadly volley of buckshot. Osceola was unhurt, and bounding into the bushes, escaped, but his wife and child were instantly killed. This cruel act changed his kindly nature to gall and wormwood, and thereafter his life was marked by a trail of blood. He refused all terms, and waged bitter and relentless war to the end.

NOVEL USE OF GREENBACKS.

"What becomes of all the greenbacks and bank-notes after they have served their few years of usefulness?" is a frequent query. A bank-note has its life just the same as all other things useful. What an interesting story the travels of a greenback, from the moment it leaves the press until it returns to the macerating machine would make! The average life of a bank-note is about three years, perhaps a little longer. After serving its purpose as currency it is metamorphosed into rabbits, birds and other figures. The process of the destruction of the notes is an interesting one.

The readers will often see in the daily papers a paragraph something like this: "National bank-notes received for redemption to-day, five hundred thousand dollars," the next day these notes are carried to the Bureau of Engraving and Printing and placed in a machine containing immense knives, which chop the notes into fragments. This operation is conducted under the supervision of three officers of the Treasury Department, especially detailed for this business. No one is allowed to be present at this daily maceration of the notes except the officials and the men who run the machine. They are compelled to remain in the room until each separate note is destroyed. They must account in detail afterwards to the Redemption Bureau for each note; and should one become lost or mislaid, and afterwards find its way into circulation, the result would be the immediate discharge of the three gentlemen who daily have in their custody from half a million to two or three million of notes and bonds. The shreds are reduced to pulp, and then by a patented process this mass is molded into figures of birds and animals and sold as mementoes to visitors. Oftentimes it will happen that one little object will be composed of what once was one hundred thousand dollars' worth of money.

TROPICAL VEGETATION IN CEYLON.

Herr Haeckel, in the "Letters of Indian Travel" which he published in the "Deutsche Rundschau," gives some glowing descriptions of the beautiful and curious forms of tropical vegetation which he met in the forests and jungles and gardens of Ceylon. Down in the valley away below him, as he journeyed by rail from Kandy to Peradenia, he observed in the jungles which alternate with the cultivated lands, towering above all the other trees, the giant stems of the talipat palm (Corypha umbraculifera), "queen among the palms of Ceylon." Its perfectly straight, white trunk resembles a slender marble pillar, and often rises to a height of more than 100 feet. Each one of the fan-shaped leaves of its stately crown covers a semicircle sixteen feet in diameter, or a surface 200 square feet. Numerous applications are made of the leaves, the most important, perhaps being for purposes of thatching. They formerly constituted the only substitute which the Singhalese had for paper, and are still used to a considerable extent for that purpose. The ancient puskola manuscript in the Buddhist cloisters were all written with iron styles on ola-paper, or narrow strips of talipat-leaves prepared by steeping and drying them. The talipat blooms but once in its life, generally between its fiftieth and eightieth year. The magnificant pyramid of flowers rises from the top immediately above the mass of foliage, to a height of thirty or forty feet, and is composed of millions of whitish yellow blossoms; and the tree dies as soon as the nuts are ripe.

Beware of making your moral staple consist of the negative virtures. It is good to abstain and teach others to abstain from all that is sinful or hurtful. But making a business of it tends to emaciation of character, unless one feeds largely also on the more nutritious diet of active, sympathetic benevolence.

NASBY'S PAPER.

THE TOLEDO WEEKLY BLADE.

Circulation 115,000.

This vast circulation is because the BLADE is a paper for the whole country. It is not thrown together, but every line of it is edited by competent hands. It is a complete epitome of the news of the week, and whosoever reads the BLADE carefully, needs nothing else to be well informed as to what the world is doing. Editorially the BLADE has made a proud record. It has an opinion on every thing that affects the people of the country, and it expresses it boldly, fearlessly, and forcibly. As good as the Blade has been in past years, we will make it better than ever in the year to come, among the features for the coming year will be the regular "Nasby Letters," two serials by Nasby, entitled "Nasby in Exile," and "Nasby in the South," a serial story by Ernest Warren, entitled, Court and Camp," a serial by John McElroy author of Andersonville, "Reminiscences of an Army Mule"; a serial written for the BLADE by an Austrian nobleman; besides our regular departments, "Household," "Answers to Correspondents," "Camp Fire," etc., etc. We publish all the news, and latest corrected markets.

Politically the BLADE will continue an exponent of true Republicanism, believing that the best interests of the country demand the continuance of its control in the hands of the party that represents the highest and most advanced ideas.

THE RUM POWER.

The BLADE will fight this monster iniquity with all the power it possesses, and in every way possible. The BLADE holds the liquor traffic to be a greater curse than slavery, and a thousand times more dangerous to the country.

We ask the co-operation of every well-wisher of the Republic that our work may be effective. We ask every Republican in the United States to assist in extending the circulation of the BLADE, especially among those of the Republican party who believe as we do in the necessity of Pulverizing the Rum Power. We want the BLADE in as many families as possible this winter, that it may be read before the excitement of a political campaign, giving it time for its truths to take root in the minds of its readers.

THE WEEKLY BLADE, $1.00 a year, postpaid, to EVERYBODY. Those preferring, may receive the BLADE, THREE MONTHS, by remitting 30 cents, or clubs of three months trial subscribers, of not less than four, 25 cents each.

OUR GREAT ART OFFER.

A $10.00 Steel Engraving for $1.00. Write us for a specimen copy of the WEEKLY BLADE, which will give full particulars of this, the greatest offer ever made by any publisher. We send specimen copies of the BLADE free to any address. We want as many addresses as possible to send Specimen Copies to. Write a postal card asking for a specimen for yourself, and send us the names of all your neighbors. We want to send out a half million copies within the next month. Don't be modest as to the number.

THE SUN.

NEW YORK, 1884.

About sixty million copies of THE SUN have gone out of our establishment during the last twelve months.

If you were to paste end to end all the columns of all THE SUNS printed and sold last year, you would get a continuous strip of interesting information common sense wisdom, sound doctrine, and sane wit long enough to reach from Printing House square to the top of Mount Copernicus in the moon, then back to Printing House square, and then three-quarters of the way back to the moon again.

But THE SUN is written for the inhabitants of this earth; this same strip of intelligence would girdle the earth twenty-seven or twenty-eight times.

If every buyer of a copy of THE SUN during the past year has spent only one hour over it, and his wife or his grandfather has spent another hour, this newspaper in 1883 has afforded the human race thirteen thousand years of steady reading night and day.

It is only by little calculations like these that you can form any idea of the circulation of the most popular of American newspapers, or of its influence on the opinions and actions of American men and women.

THE SUN is, and will continue to be, a newspaper which tells the truth without fear of consequences, which gets at the facts no matter how much the process costs, which presents the news of all the world without waste of words and in the most readable shape, which is working with all its heart for the cause of honest government, and which therefore believes that the Republican party must go, and must go in this coming year of our Lord, 1884.

If you know THE SUN, you like it already and you will read it with accustomed diligence and profit during what is sure to be the most interesting year in its history. If you do not yet know THE SUN, it is high time to get into the sunshine.

Clothing Business.

Look! Boys!! Look!!!

This double-runner given to the boy, under 17 yrs. of age, who writes the best composition on "Clothing Business."

The above was, in substance, the announcement made upon a placard placed in the window of the Naumkeag Clothing Co., Essex St., Salem.

About the first of Dec., 1883, the large show-window of the above named clothing company, received quite a transformation.

When the window was again thrown open to the view of the public, the most noticeable object within, was a large, handsome Double-runner, heavily nickel-plated, upholstered, and to all appearance a first class sled; especially did it seem so, when it was noticed that the retail price was one hundred (100) dollars.

At the commencement of this competition was a part of the notice placed on the sled; the remainder implied that the competitors were to be residents of Essex County, and not only must they be the authors, but the penmen of their compositions.

When an offer like the one just referred to, is made by such a reliable party, as the Naumkeag Clothing Co., the public may rest assured that the conditions of the statement will be justly fulfilled, as far as they are concerned.

* * * * * * * *

Let us go back to the time of our ancestors, and notice the successive changes in the manufacture and sale of clothing, from that period, forward, to the present day.

When our grand-parents were in their youth, the men and boys had no large clothing emporium to go to, but instead, after having carded, spun and woven the wool, that had been sheared from the backs of their sheep, they had a tailoress come to their homes, and fit and make their clothes.

Thus it went on, step by step, until clothing-stores were established.

Not fifty years ago the clothing-house was unknown, and the only articles of gentlemen's ready-made clothing that could be purchased, were Green Baize Jackets ond Overalls, and they had to be bought at the country store.

Soon after, brown linen dusters—worn then as thin coats—were added to the list; then socks, neckties, collars, etc., soon made their appearance on the counter.

Now-a-days, one can go to almost any large town, as well as to the city, and find one or more clothing establishments, where both men and boys can be supplied with a complete outfit at a moments notice.

One may well say, and truthfully too, that the wide-famed Naumkeag Clothing Co., stands near if not at the head of the list, notwithstanding the wordy advertisements and many inducements of their numerous competitors.

Three or four decades ago, the cost of clothing was greater than at present, owing partly, to the fact that the sewing had to be done by hand, while at present, the work being done mostly on machines, the cost, of course, is lessened.

Cotton goods, as a general thing, are less expensive than woolen goods, which have a great many processes to go through before they are ready for the manufacture of clothes.

When Columbus came to this continent, he found that cotton was the principal fabric composing the attire of the natives.

"About the year 1786, the growth of the cotton plant was begun in Ga.," and after 1793, the year in which Eli Whitney invented the cotton-gin,—a machine for separating the seeds of cotton from its fibre—the cultivation increased to a great extent.

For many years, cotton-growers in this country sent the raw material to England, receiving in return, the manufactured articles; but during the last decade, this state of affairs has been checked, owing to the erection of extensive factories on the soil where the plant was grown, which manufacture the raw material here, instead of having it done in a foreign land.

As "New England is the chief seat of the cotton industry of the U. S.," it is quite natural to suppose that the price of the necessary article would be as low, as in any section of the country.

Indeed it seems as though that was the case, when one remembers that a ready-made first-class business suit can be bought for comparatively nothing, at the Naumkeag Clothing Co's store.

The success of a house depends mainly, upon the uprightness and honesty with which it deals with its patrons.

Should a clothing dealer—or in fact, any person in business—misrepresent his goods to his customers, and also cheat him out of his money, it would be but a very short time before he would be patronized but little.

On the other hand, let a man be particular about his stock, have no cheating, and represent his goods just as they are, he will soon notice quite an increase in the number of his patrons.

Take for example, the Naumkeag Clothing Co,—a firm that has long since become famous for its square dealing.

Go into their spacious apartments, and you will see quite a large force of efficient salesmen, always ready to show any and all kinds of clothing that may be found upon their roomy counters.

Nor is this corps of salesmen there in vain, for go when you will, the store never lacks for a large share of patronage.

And how is this trade brought about, among so many competitors?

By referring to their motto,—"Square dealing,—One price—Courteous treatment,"—which they evidently keep in mind,—one can get a partial insight into their unquestionable success.

If all other Clothiers were as honorable as the above named company, it seems as though there would be a smaller number of dissappointed rivals, and perhaps less failures by those who had started in the "Clothing Business."

MESSRS. EDITORS,—The great and growing need of the town of Peabody to-day, is a small building, and a fund connected with it which can be used for hospital purposes. Most of the readers of the PRESS doubtless have noticed and read the comments in the Salem, and even in the Boston papers in regard to the caring for the patients from Peabody, who required, and indeed must have hospital care, and who have been treated at the Salem Hospital with one or two exceptions, however reluctantly it may have been done. Now it strikes me that a town as thrifty and as wealthy as our own, is not going begging in the larger neighboring cities for hospital accomodations for her sick and unfortunate citizens. A town like this with its ten thousand or more inhabitants can and ought to take care of and provide for its own sick. We may not have another like the late George Peabody in our midst, who will, or who could, favor us with princely gifts; and who will so help and provide for his fellow-townsmen, that even future generations will rise up and call him blessed, and whose name will be spoken with pride and gratitude; but have we not many who can of their abundance give something, and at least be instrumental in founding in our midst an institution which shall be a lasting monument to their generosity and good will, and a lasting benefit to the sick and suffering for many years to come? The Peabodys, Girards and Howards are rare in the world; but we have the lasting honor of having sent out one, who has blessed thousands of the poor and unfortunate of the earth; and have we not some left who will bless themselves, and their less fortunate fellow men, by assisting this worthy object with their wealth?

WEST PEABODY.

There was a fair audience present at the meeting of the West Peabody farmer's club, last Friday evening. Mr. J. E. Herrick was the principal speaker and his subject was "Ensilage, and its value for milch cows." He said he should recommend wood in the construction of silos instead of stone and cement as it was just as good and a great deal cheaper. The corn is just as well cut an inch long as shorter, as the cattle would eat it just as well as if cut shorter. For making milk or butter it is a valuable crop, as forty pounds of ensilage is equal to twenty pounds of English hay, and was a sufficient quantity for a cow that was giving a good flow of milk for a day's feed; and with ten quarts of grain added it would keep her in good condition. Several questions were asked Mr. Herrick during the evening' to all of which he gave the most satisfactory replies, showing he was speaking from experience. On motion of Rev. Mr. Spaulding, the club extended a vote of thanks to Mr. Herrick, for his very instructive lecture. The subject for the next meeting, "Farming ten years to come" will be opened by Mr. James P. King.

The Verde Antique Marble Company now actively working its quarry at Lynnfield Centre, sent into Boston recently the first installment of eight handsome blocks of marble to be sawed and polished, and then forwarded to take their places in the new, magnificent building of the Board of Trade at Chicago. Sup't Pratt has invented a new process for polishing marble, and opened an office of the Company at 62 Sudbury street, Boston.

Mr. Howard Emerson caught sixty-three pickerel at Humphrey's pond recently.

In MR. R. H. EDDY, of 76 State Street, Boston, inventors find a leading and most successful Solicitor of Patents; one whom long experience and perfect familiarity with the laws and technicalities relating to American and foreign patents, renders second to no living expert in his own particular line, and whom we have with pleasure, for a long series of years, unhesitatingly commended to all seeking patents in any part of the world. Our own patent laws are the most liberal of any country, but there is much to be considered before taking out a patent; the value of the invention, conflicting claims as to its patentability; the proper manner in which to present the application to the commissioner; desirability of securing foreign patents, etc. On all the points Mr. Eddy is eminently qualified to furnish the best of advice, being thoroughly conversant with the workings of the government office, posted as to patents already granted; and capable to advise on all points regarding patents, for which he has been so long and so successfully a solicitor.

The President has appointed H. D. Lyman, of Ohio, as second assistant postmaster general, in place of Mr. Elmer, resigned. Mr. Lyman has been clerk in the office of Elmer, and his selection by Postmaster Gresham, who recommended him, is a triumph of civil service reform.

The school committee have voted to join with Danvers and Lynn in petitioning the school commissioners to establish a truant school. There is but one school in the state and that in Hampden county. The law provides that if three cities or towns petition the school must be granted.

Our readers must not overlook the inside pages of the PRESS this week. There is a good war story, an article on the "No recess question," a complete list of the marriages in Peabody for 1883, the dramatic and musical column, etc., etc. Next week we will publish the births for the year 1883.

Mr. Thomas Woodfin is circulating a petition asking the Lynn horse railroad company to extend its tracks to Marblehead. The petition is being numerously signed, and Mr. Woodfin states that he meets but very few who refuse to sign it. It did not require a petition to have them extend their tracks to Peabody. They knew the field.

Now we know all about it. Joseph Wharton of Philadelphia has been investigating to ascertain the cause of the red sunsets by melting a quantity of snow and examining the dirt found in it. He finds this to be volcanic ashes of a glassy character, and he thinks he has established the fact that the upper regions of the atmosphere are full of these floating particles, which color the sunlight at evening.

The scholars of Miss Annie Learoyd's school on Park street, got up a pleasant entertainment for their teacher on Thursday afternoon, in the shape of a supper which was spread in the school-room after the close of school, and enjoyed by the happy company of little folks and their delighted school-marm. Another and no less enjoyable feature all around was the presentation to Miss Learoyd of a handsome toilet case by the school.—Danevrs Mirror.

At the last school committee meeting a boy was present whose mother will not permit him to attend school. Last Saturday night he slept in the station house because he was afraid to go home. His father is dead and his mother barely clothes and feeds him. The truant officer informed her that she must send the boy to school or be fined $20. The woman said she wanted to be rid of him and would like him sent to the reform school. The society for prevention of cruelty to children will be notified and the case looked into.

The Character representations of Colonial History by the Salem Schubert Club last week, were very successful financially. The number in attendance each night was only limited by the capacity of Plummer Hall, and the entire programme reflects great credit upon the committee having the affair in charge. The scales in which the Mint-master's daughter was weighed were made in 1679. Such a collection of ancient properties and costumes is a rare thing. The second concert of the Club will be given during this month, and will be of a miscellaneous character.

Mrs. Robbins' tea party which was held at Upton's Hall, last Wednesday evening, was another of those very pleasant and entertaining occasions for which a reputation has long ago been made. The supper was an excellent one, and the entertainment which followed was very fine. Miss Louise Osborn had charge of the tableaux, which evinced a deal of originality and a deal of patience. Mrs. Hannah S. Robbins, the lady under whose name the party was held, was present, and although 82 years of age, she enjoyed the evening as much as those younger. May she enjoy many more is the wish of all present.

The Selectmen acted last Saturday upon the petitions of Daniel H. Felton and 18 others, petitioning for the widening of Felton street, and one from Geo. C. Pierce and 28 others, asking for the laying out or three private ways in the vicinity of Holten and Pierpont street. The Selectmen will look over the streets and will give hearings on the cases on the afternoon of Feb. 14.

SOUTH PEABODY.

Mr. Augustus French has taken his family to Boston, as he has secured work at that place for himself and two boys.

An audience of two hundred and seventy-five people gathered at the church, last Wednesday night, to witness the entertainment given in that place for benefit of the buildng fund. About three car loads of people came from Lynn.

A large crowd of boys were skating on Upton's pond, last Sunday afternoon. Where are the police?

Miss Mary Tudbury removed into her new house last Friday, in the rear of Mr. Fred Wiggin's, on Lynn St.

At the meeting of Hose 5, last Monday night, C. A. Wiggin was elected clerk in place of Lewis Peabody, resigned.

Last Monday, Mr. Sylvanus Newhall, while about his duties at the Warren National Bank, slipped on a piece of snow and fell, striking his lame leg and injuring it so severely that he was conveyed to his home at So. Peabody. We trust it will confine him in the house only temporarily.

Charles S. Sanson while cutting ice at Craig's pond recently, was badly injured in the thigh by an ice hook.

In Olin's window, 61 Market srteet, Lynn, is a watch running on the new 24 hour time. Stop and look at it.

A flock of quail was seen near Cox's woods in Lynnfield, the other day, so weak from hunger and exhaustion that they could scarcely fly. Many of the farmers have scattered grain and corn about the fields for the half famished birds.

There is report of a lively "circus" at "Billy" Hayes' this forenoon. A Boston firm, through the agency of Farnham & Weare and officer Sweeney, attempted to take forcible possession of the groceries of a man named Butler who keeps a store at Billy Hayes' on which they had a claim. The premises were locked, and an expressman stood with a crow bar ready to force an entrance, and the small boy looked on and waited for the introductory overture to the circus procession, when the whole thing was spoiled by Billy's settling up and leaving for the square to swear out warrants against all parties concerned.

Caleb Shillaber and others, of South Peabody, have been losing hens for some time by dogs, and one day this week he had hens enough killed by these animals to fill a barrel. Mr. Shillaber made complaint to the Selectmen and steps will be taken to protect such property in that vicinity from depredation.

Poet's Corner.

The Reformer.

All grim and soiled and brown with tan
I saw a Strong One in his wrath,
Smiting the godless shrines of man
Along his path.

The church, beneath her trembling dome,
Essayed in vain her ghostly charm;
Wealth shook within his gilded home
With strange alarm.

Fraud from his secret chambers fled
Before the sunlight bursting in;
Sloth drew his pillow o'er his head
To drown the din.

Yet louder rang the Strong One's stroke,
Yet nearer flashed his axe's gleam;
Shuddering and sick of heart I woke,
As from a dream.

I looked: aside the dust cloud rolled,
The Master seemed the Builder, too;
Up, springing from the ruined Old
I saw the new.

'Twas but the ruin of the bad,
The wasting of the wrong and ill;
Whate'er of good the old time had
Was living still.

Take heart!—the Master builds again—
A charmed life old Goodness hath;
The tares may perish, but the grain
Is not for death.

Selected Story.

"Durin' the War."

BY JOAQUIN MILLER.

Grizzled and gray, dazed, indolent, looking as if he had missed the train in the progress of this life; as if the world had gone by and left him hopelessly behind—no Christmas turkey for him this year; not for the twenty years past, I reckon—the old Confederate soldier (who limped about awkwardly, for he had a lot of lead to carry) told me the story, the other day, in the Shenandoah. If it is untrue or dull, blame him, not me. I only give it as I got it.

General 'Jeb' Stuart was hanging on the Federal flank. His midnight camp was pitched on the hillside. Up the hill a little way lay a farm house; two or three hay stacks hung upon the hillside. The worn-out horses fed there and nodded their drowsy heads to the hay. All around on the ground under the trees in camp the troopers lay—black men, white men, brown men, men who were gray and old, little lads, boys who had seen a dozen battles and hardly yet as many years, a mixed and a motley lot; ragged, wretched, hungry. They lay on their bellies before the fire, munching roasted corn, gnawing it off the cob greedily, husking it, roasting it, rolling it in the ashes on the coals, singeing it in the blazing fire of old Virginia fence-rails. Now and then a shot rang out in the clear still night, away where the tired pickets met too closely for peace, and now and then better disposed men on the picket lines, or more favored and fortunate, met together and reached each other on their bayonets tobacco and old ragged newspapers in a sort of exchange of prisoners of war. The moon rode high and white in the great blue sea above, and all the stars of heaven looked down in pity and in peace.

Then a song burst out. The black men were singing louder, sweeter, with more pathos and memories of home than the white men. It was a sad, grotesque, weird and unique picture. Suddenly Stuart stood in the midst of the ragged and uproarious lot.

'Discipline! Look here, Sergeant Zeb. I want discipline or death. Discipline I say! Do you expect me to fight battles and win victories with a howling mob like this, and the enemy right here waiting to recoil on us the moment we give him a chance? Discipline I say! Hang your blacks and shoot your whites; or have discipline!'

Silence in a second! And the long, lean men and the sleeping lads pulled themselves together and tried to look and act like soldiers, while the blacks, at the suggestion of their being hung up, melted back from fitful embers into the night, as if they were a part of it.

Then the weary, bearded chief threw himself on a heap of saddles at hand and forgot his sternness, as he looked about over the wretched group of poor fellows gathered there for a little rest under the oaks.

'Boys, I'm hungry, hungry as a wolf. What have you got to eat?"

A dozen men sprang up, a half-dozen young beardless troopers rushed forward, and from out the night back under the trees there came many black forms. And each and every one, black men and white men, old men and little boys, reached up and thrust into the chieftain's face, with generous alacrity, an ear of roasted corn. Some of these ears of corn had only a few teeth marks in them, being almost entirely intact. Others again were pretty well gnawed down to the cob. But they were all alike offered with prompt generosity.

'Corn!' and the Confederate chief shook his head with a grim and sickly smile as he muttered to himself: 'Corn! biled corn, roasted corn, raw corn, red corn—all kinds of corn. No, no, boys, I'm hungry but I can't eat corn any more to-night.'

The men melted back in respectful silence into a broad circle. And there, suddenly, somehow in the centre of that circle, stood a child, a little boy who had been aroused from his sleep on the pile of saddles in the commotion that attended the chieftain's coming. And now, wide awake, with a little toy flag in one hand and a red apple in the other, this little boy stood there in the midst of these wild and ragged men, with cheeks as rosy as the apple he held in his dimpled little hand.

'If yer hungry, mister capten, general, here's my yed apple,' and with this the little boy toddled right up and stood almost between the booted legs of the surprised soldier.

'Sergeant Zeb, where in all Jericho did this child come from? Is it yours? I won't have children around me here. I left my babies at home: can't you do the same?'

'Tain't my poor little chickie, General Stuart.'

"Then take it to its mother," thundered the Chief.

'Its mother is dead, General.'

'To its father, then.'

'Its father is dead, too, General.'

'Dead?'

'Dead. Killed in battle yesterday when you led over that stone fence by the farm house on the hill, sah.'

The Confederate General bit his lips. Then, muttering to himself as he rose up and turned half away: 'Killed at the farm-house where I led. Some poor farmer defending his home and little ones. I can't stand this!'

'Please, sir, Mister General, won't you take my yed apple? Papa growed it in his orchard. And he buyed me that too.'

Here the child reached its little flag, trying hard to make friends with the seemingly hard man, who was turning away as if to avoid it.

'Sergeant Zeb, where did that flag come from?'

'Had it in its hand when I found it, sah, and it won't give it up, sah; says its father gave it to it for the fourth of July, sah.'

'Foff of July,' piped the little waif, waving the little five-cent stars and stripes overhead, there in the midst of the dark and gathering circle of soldiers under the oaks.

The General turned, stooped and caught the child in his arms.

'Keep your pretty little flag, and wave it when and where you like. You don't know the difference, and I wish I didn't know the difference. Here, Zeb, take care of this kid. Boys, we killed its father by chance yesterday. Let's take care of it. We can't do less; and, may be, it will bring us luck. What do you say, boys?'

The wild shout that shook the leaves of the oaks overhead started the advocate for discipline, and, turning to Zeb, as he strode away into the night for another part of his camp, he shouted, 'Silence! and Zeb, discipline, discipline! Dash it, discipline or death, I say!' and he was gone.

They gathered about the wide-eyed, rosy-faced orphan with its little flag and red apple, and many a black and white and not over-clean hand reached out to toy with and stroke the hair of gold that hung heavy as corn silk in summer time over the lad's shoulders.

'I found it in the fence corner,' said Zeb, 'all a shiverin' and its daddy and its mammy dead, shot down by stray bullets when we stormed the place.'

'Yes, and dar war a rabbit, right aside ub him,' said a black face back in the dark, over another man's shoulder.

'An' golly, we kotched and eat der rabbit,' chuckled another black man.

'Wal, we'll keep the kid; keep 'im till the cows come home.' And with a grunt of universal approval from all as they gradually melted away, old Zeb hoisted the little one high up on his colossal shoulders, and turned suddenly to look and to listen, for there was a shout down the hill and a sudden sharp volley of shots above, beyond the hay stacks. It began to look as if this little squad of raiders had got into a bite. Shouts of the enemy down the hill; shots of the enemy up the hill beyond the hay stacks. Which way should the surprised and panic-stricken soldiers fly? The colossal old Virginia sergeant, with the child on his massive shoulders, was the only officer in charge. The blacks were hiding about behind each other, under saddles, blankets, anywhere. The shouts from the advancing enemy came loud and clear from below and very near. The camp-fire, the song of the soldiers, had done the mischief. This little squad of ragged, panic-stricken night raiders was doomed. The leaves began to fall like autumn time over old Zeb, the tall and angular old sergeant.

What a plight for a soldier! A battle on hand and a babe in his arms. The old sergeant came near throwing it away with the heap of negroes hiding away under the saddles. Where was Stuart? The sergeant put his hand to his ear and leaned to listen as best he could between the sharp volleys from below, that were ruining the prospects of the next year's acorn crop in the trees overhead. He could hear the clatter of iron hoofs on the high ridge to the west. The moon was setting large and round and low. Over the bare crest of this hill and against the moon he could see the Confederate cavalry pouring in impetuous flight. Stuart, the cautious and wary leader, had escaped.

'Come, men! We must follow our General on foot—any way to get out of this. Come! Up by the hay stacks and on over the ridge.'

The strong man started up the stony hill to pass the hay stacks. The child, as if it was afraid it might fall, wound its little left arm affectionately about the great gray shock of hair. And that little act saved it; that accidental show of affection won the old fellow's heart entirely. Why, he would not now have pitched it aside with the terrified negroes for gold.

Up the hill he led swiftly, the men, following in groups, knots, singly, armed, unarmed, limping, leaning, erect, in all manners of ways, only so as to escape the ferocious Federals charging up the hill from below. They could see the points of shining bayonets entering their camp, by the light of the burning fence rails as they fled out of it, and the black color had nearly all faded from the flying Confederates as they neared the hay stacks.

Here the gray-headed old sergeant with the child on his shoulder, paused for a moment right under the hay stacks to get his bearings. The moon had fallen down behind the crest of the hill. It was nearly dark now. The Federal bayonets were only a few steps in the rear. The ragged and demoralized Confederates huddled close and helpless up and after the tall and grizzled old giant, who stood there looking out which way to lead them, with the child on his shoulder, its little left arm hugging the great shaggy gray head, its right one holding the flag.

The tall, gray soldier threw up his great, heavy hand to his brow and looked out under his broad palm to try and see which way to lead.

Suddenly the hay stacks blazed out before him, and the whole scene was bright as day. The Federals had been waiting for the Confederates to come! And now, as they stood there, huddled together and helpless as sheep, they find the hay stacks in their path of retreat, and stood there behind them, before them, around them, to shoot them down in the light which they had kindled.

It was a matchless and magnificent sight! No scene so bright, no sunlight brighter! It pleased the child, excited and delighted it. What could it care for the long line of gleaming guns leveled only a few rods away in the rear? What did it know of the death hiding down in every gleaming gun-barrel of that compact mass of uniformed men just before? Nothing at all. Its little heart leaps with wonder and delight at the beautiful uniforms, the discipline, the quick action into which every gun was brought instantly to the shoulder. The bayonets were beautiful—the gleaming bayonets all in the bright light.

The child seemed to think this a part of the celebration, and in the fullness of its delight, just as the Federal officer drew his sword and was giving the word 'Fire!' the child holding tight on to the great grizzled head with its left hand, and as if to contribute its part to the celebration, waved its little flag there in the glare and light. And in that awful stillness which comes always before any dreadful catastrophe, piped out in its shrill little voice, as it raised itself higher for the occasion:

'Foff of July!'

Put it upon record in gold and red that the Federal officer lowered the point of his sword. The heavy breeches of the guns struck the stony ground with a thud. The line of blue divided, and the old gray Confederate with his little charge on his shoulder still waving the little flag, passed on through the line, while cheer after cheer shook the bullet riddled leaves of the oaks overhead.

And this is the story of the old Confederate soldier of the Shenandoah, who had missed the train on the line of Progress down in old Virginia.

DRAMATIC AND MUSICAL.

Margaret Mather will appear this week and for the two succeeding ones at the Boston Theatre, opening in Juliet. Miss Mather's success this year has exceeded by far that of last year—which was phenomenal. Her appearance everywhere is a notable event. At Providence a few weeks ago, her engagement of a week brought the largest receipts of any week since the opening of the Opera House there; for the closing performance the back tiers of family circle and gallery being sold in advance, a thing unknown before in that city. She will have the support in Romeo and Juliet of young Salvini, Mr. Milnes Levick and a first class dramatic company.

At the Park Theatre, Miss Lizzie Harold plays a week's engagement in Princess Chuck. The company has been re-organized since it appeared in Salem, and it was then one of the best plays that have appeared this year in that city. Miss Harold will sing new songs, and will have good audiences at every performance.

"The Beggar Student" enters on the last week but one of its career at the Bijou Theatre. It is pleasant to observe the fine attendance—both as regards the numbers and the quality of the audiences—which characterizes the season here. Under the careful and watchful direction of affairs behind the curtain, which prevails at the Bijou, the performance is marked by unusual excellence of ensemble. Not a point is missed. Even those entrusted with minor roles make the most of them in a proper way; and the groupings are arrayed with an eye to the best possible effect. Mr. Harry Brown's Ollendorff is certainly very funny; and the company, in general, sing and act with a spirit that makes it evident that their duties are most congenial. The date for the first production of the English version of Suppe's "Trip to Africa," at the Bijou, is fixed for a week from Monday evening. It will be a great event; and in scenery and effects the representation bids fair to surpass even the reigning attraction at Manager Tyler's theatre. The music provided for the work is spoken of as delightful.

The exhibition of the Mather paintings at Horticultural Hall has been very largely attended. It will continue to be open to the public during the actress' engagement at the Boston Theatre.

Mr. H. M. Morse, the "interlocutor" and stage manager of Thatcher, Primrose & West's minstrels, was for three years a member of Rice's "Evangeline" company. He prefers minstrelsy to burlesque, and has made a decided success in the position he now holds.

Mr. Den Thompson brings "Joshua Whitcomb" to the Boston Theatre the week of March 10.

Alpine Roses is the name of the new play at the Madison Square theatre, New York, and as new plays are always great if rare events at this theatre special attention is called to the fact. The cast is certainly a remarkable one and includes Georgia Cayvan and Miss Marie Burroughs, (the Alpine Roses), Madam Von Stomwitz (the celebrated tragedienne), Richard Mansfield (late the Baron Chevrial in The Parisian Romance), George Clarke, Thomas Whiffin, W. Mayne, W. H. Pope, and others. The scenery is of course elegant.

It should only be necessary to remind our readers that Aldrich and Parsloe are to come to Mechanic Hall in "My Partner" Friday night to ensure a large attendance. Mr. Parsloe is the best Chinese impersonator on the American stage and the play which they have made famous is one of the best of its class. Seats are now ready at Ropes' drug store.

ROPING IN THE SOLID CITIZEN.—He is a young man with a thorough understanding of the leading traits in human nature. He dresses well, carries an extra cigar, and he drops in and presents a card to the effect that he is canvassing for an embryo work to be known as the "Encyclopedia of the State."

"Y-e-s, but I guess I don't care to subscribe," replies the citizen.

"Oh, but I don't want you to. The book will be sold on its merits. I am calling upon a few of the most eminent——"

Here he makes a pause to allow the shot to strike, and continues:

"Citizens of Detroit—the most eminent and prominent citizens of Detroit—to secure brief sketches of their lives."

"Ah," says the other, as he begins to melt.

"We desire to take five of the most prominent citizens of this county. In the sketches we desire to show how they have have risen from poor boys to great and honored men."

(Here occurs another pause to allow the victim to tickle himself.)

"Well—a—well—"

"You were the first of the five selected," chips in the young man. "My mission is to secure your photograph in order to make a steel engraving. In the course of ten days I will be followed by the gentleman who writes the biographies. Have you got a photograph?"

"Well—ah—I think so."

"We want one which does you full justice. The engravings cost us fifty-five dollars each. This we pay out of our own pockets, but are compelled to make a charge of five dollars each for the tint paper and the reference in the index. Let's see. What does the initial in your middle name stand for?"

It invariably stands for a five-dollar bill, and the young man leaves behind him such a pleasant impression that the victim keeps grinning for two weeks. At the end of that time he becomes suspicious, and in the course of a month he becomes a dangerous man to society.—Detroit Free Press.

NOT CONTENT WITH BEING THE BEST.—Whatever may be said in regard to the propensity of the management of great railway lines to provide for the public only what is actually demanded in the way of accommodations and comfort, can in no way apply to the management of the Chicago, Rock Island & Pacific Railway, or as it is more familiarly known, "The Great Rock Island Route." This line has for years been recognized as the best and most comfortable route between Chicago and Kansas City and the Southwest, and has been abundantly able on this account to successfully cope with its competitors. But not satisfied with this success and its already elegant equipment, its managers have caused to be turned out of its shops at Chicago, a magnificent line of Dining Cars which go into immediate service on the Kansas City Line. These cars contain all the conveniences of well furnished dining rooms, are elegant in design and finish, and models of the advanced railway art of the day. Within them meals are furnished equal to those of any first-class hotel in the land at the low rate of seventy-five cents. Travelers on this line now find on its trains all the comforts and conveniences of first-class hotels. Besides the best of first and second-class coaches there are Parlor Chair Cars, (which are free to passengers holding through first-class tickets), Pullman Palace Sleeping Cars and Dining Cars.

This Company's lines—all of which are equally well equipped—also extend to Council Bluffs and the West, and Minneapolis and St. Paul and the Northwest; and the deserved praises bestowed upon it by returned travelers who speak from experience, make it noted throughout the land. We bespeak for the owners and managers of this magnificent Railway ample returns for their generous provisions for the wants of the public, which is, as has already been proven by the patronage extended to this line, quick to appreciate and patronize those who prove by their deeds and generous treatment that they are devoted to its comfort and welfare.

SELLING

BOOTS AND SHOES

— AT —

MANUFACTURER'S PRICES.

A DECIDED SUCCESS.

A great many firms in Lynn are puzzled at the large attendance and great success of our special sales, simply because these same firms have failed in their own efforts to attract attention and accomplish the same results. The reasons are plain, for we assert that our establishments can show many advantages over others. We give the following, which are convincing:

First.

Enormous stock. The immense stock of our wholesale house, together with our two retail stores, 84 Market street and 23 Market Square, make a stock to draw from five times larger than all the other shoe stores in Lynn combined.

Second.

Low Rents. While our competitors are handicapped by having to pay exorbitant rents, we with our three stores, have to pay rent only on one—a fact, the significance of which as bearing upon our ability to sell for less than others, will be apparent to all.

Third

Wholesale. Our wholesale trade, which now extends to every city and town of any importance in New England, obliges us to carry an immense stock and gives us an advantage in buying entirely beyond the reach of our competitors. For where they buy of the jobbers in small lots, we buy direct of the manufacturers, and that we can buy as low as the large Boston jobbers is abundantly attested by the fact that we are able to meet and compete with them on their own grounds and build up a wholesale trade which is constantly increasing.

Fourth.

One Price. Marked in plain figures on every pair of boots and shoes, guarantees low prices.—Equal treatment to all classes and shows at a glance the quality of the goods.

Fifth.

Truthful Representations. No misrepresentations are tolerated. Goods are sold for just what they are. Some stores adopt the "bait" plan, advertising great slaughter, immense bargains, etc. Call in half an hour after such stores open and in nearly every instance the salesman has the old story to tell you: "All gone;" "haven't your size;" "too late;" "very sorry, but we have had such a rush they are all out.—Can't we show you something else?" We have no such nonsense. It won't do.

Sixth.

Quick Sales and Small Profits. Quick sales are the life of a successful business. Small profits are sufficient when the business is done on live business principles. You save one profit by buying of the wholesaler.

Seventh.

Exchanging Goods or Refunding Money. When any dissatisfaction occurs because the selection does not please in every particular, the goods, if returned uninjured in a reasonable time, can be exchanged; and it matters not of whom it was selected, any salesman at leisure will pay careful attention to the customer. In case nothing is found to please, the cash will be cheerfully refunded.

Eighth.

Prompt Cash Payments. We are so conscious of the overwhelming advantages we possess both in buying and selling we have no hesitation in asserting that no prudent purchaser can afford to buy anything anywhere else until they have looked through our stock and got our prices. Ready money in our hands enables us to buy goods in large quantities at figures that the average retailer knows nothing about. To-day we stand simply as the connecting link between the manufacturer and consumer.

We have an immense surplus stock which we are going to close out during this sale. In order to accomplish this purpose we know at the outset that it will be necessary to offer sufficient inducements which we are determined to do. Consequently, in this instance as well as all others, we appeal directly to the interests of every purchaser, regarding that as decidedly more potent than volumes of positive assertions.

TO THE PUBLIC!

We have always possessed the idea that the poor man's hard earned dollar should purchase just as much as a like amount of his wealthy neighbor.—WE BELIEVE IT. WE ACT UPON IT. Three years ago it was hard to convince customers that a firm in the FURNITURE business would or could make such a departure. WE DID, and our business to-day is a pleasing monument of its kindly reception by the people of Lynn, Swampscott, Saugus, Nahant, Marblehead, Peabody, Danvers, Lynnfield, Salem, &c., to whom we are more than thankful.

NEWPORT, R. I., Nov. 12, 1883.

J. D. & J. W. EATON, Dear Sirs: Enclosed please find check for amount of bill for CRAWFORD RANGE and Ware. It arrived last Friday noon, and we had it set up and a fire in it before four o'clock. We are more than pleased with it. All our cooking was done Saturday morning. It usually takes all day to do it. My wife thinks she shall take to cooking again herself, as it is real fun to cook with such a Range as the CRAWFORD. Hoping you may sell a great many more of them, and every purchaser be as well pleased as we are. I remain yours, very truly,

The No Recess Question.

"Facts are stubborn things." It is a fact that wherever the plan has been tried on the right basis, it has proved a success; and in the recent meeting of the Mass. Teachers' Association, every one who had tried the new plan spoke in its favor. The school superintendents of Albany, Rochester, Newbergh and Owego, N. Y., all report the plan highly successful in their respective schools. "The experience detailed shows no injury to health, or lessening of progress in studies, but there was a complete cessation of the demoralization attendant upon recess." "Physicians who understand the system approve, and it meets with general favor with parents, children and teachers."

Supt. Davis, of Woburn, this state, says in regard to this plan: "Having tried it three years, we no longer have any doubts. We know that the pupils are better off and that it is an improved custom." The plan, now continued several months, works well in the city of Newton, and the same is true of Newport, R. I. Under this plan the morning session is from 9 to 11.30, with no general recess. Full liberty for individual recesses is given, and under wise supervision by the teacher, this matter causes no trouble. Briefly stated some of the points in favor of the new plan are as follows: It prevents exposure to inclement weather; avoids the danger of returning, heated, to rooms purposely cooled; the rough play and the harsh voices ceased thereby; gives, practically, a longer time for out-door life, while the actual time from school work is not materially diminished; discipline is made easy; it lessens the opportunity for contamination which comes principally at recess; the continuity of the sessions is helpful to study. Primary schools are not generally included in the plan, but are given a short mid-session recess. And in grammar classes, the school work is not made continuous, but is broken by a brief whispering recess or some general physical exercise. Supt. Cole, of Albany, N. Y., says: "A trial of nearly two years has confirmed the belief that the disuse of the time-honored but wholly unessential mid-session recess, has tended to the well-being of the schools in their mental, moral and physical relations." A teacher in Newton writes;—"Teachers with very few exceptions (I know some—have heard of one or two out of eighty) think the new plan excellent in its results, morally, intellectually, and see not but that health is as good."

A recent issue of the N. E. Journal of Education contains the following:—"And now here are the doctors coming out in favor of the no-recess idea. One of the lecturers at a late meeting of the American Health Association declared that in large schools, the general recesses should be discontinued, and individual recesses given as needed. He argued that half the time of the general recess is lost in descending and ascending flights of stairs, involving anxiety and insubordination, and destroying the continuity of the lessons. Instead of the mid-session recess he would have two short class-room recesses, devoted to calesthenics, marching, or vocal music, and to thorough ventilation." The Rochester School Board says: "The change has met with general approval. The reports of the teachers uniformly state that better work is done under the new system, and that the health of the children has not suffered thereby. Certainly the number of cases of discipline has materially decreased, and many dangers to health and morals have been removed." It would seem that the no-recess plan has come to stay. ††

CURIOUS FACTS ABOUT BAKING POWDER.—There are practically but three general classes of the very useful compounds known as Baking Powder.

First, those composed of commercial cream of tartar, soda, and starch or flour. Cream of tartar is derived from a peculiar matter that is deposited in the casks during the fermentation of sour wines. It consists of potassa united with tartaric acid. The cream of tartar of commerce is not usually pure, as it generally contains from three to thirteen per cent. of tartrate of lime, besides uncertain quantities of sand, clay, flour, chalk, etc. In large doses it acts as a cathartic.

Second, those composed of alum, soda, and starch or flour. Alum is occasionally manufactured from the earths which contain it ready formed, but most generally from minerals called "alum ores." In small doses it is an astringent, in large doses purgative.

Third, those composed of the acid phosphate of lime, soda and starch. Phosphate of lime is a constituent of all grains, and is an important nutritive principle, and an indispensible element in the construction of the animal tissues. Fine white flour is much inferior to the Graham or whole wheat flour, because in the process of bolting the phosphates are discarded with the bran. The phosphates are necessary to sustain life, and fine, white flour alone will not sustain life, because the phosphates are not present in sufficient quantity.

This has been demonstrated by actual experiments upon rabbits, dogs, etc., and it was this fact and the several undesirable qualities of cream tartar for raising bread, that induced Prof. Horsford to seek for a method of producing an acrid phosphate of lime suitable for use in the composition of baking powders. He accomplished the purpose, and has succeeded far beyond his own or his friends' expectations, as the Bread Preparation (a baking powder) that bears his name fully testifies. Baking powder made by this process is the only one that adds anything to the nutritive qualities of the flour. Many baking powders contain very injurious ingredients.

The number of marriages solemnized was 105; of this number 141 of the parties resided in town, and 69 out; 77 of the marriages were solemnized in Peabody, and 28 in other places; 59 of the parties were born in Peabody, 57 in Foreign countries, 93 were born in the United States, but out of Peabody; 27 Peabody grooms married out of town brides; 13 Peabody brides found husbands out of town; 14 marriages were solemnized here when both bride and groom were non-residents; of the marriages in town the number solemnized by our clergymen was dividedas follows: Rev. V. F. Borgialli 16; Rev. W. G. Sperry, 12; Rev. C. N. Smith, 11; Rev. W. P. Chipman, 6; Rev. J. W. Hudson, 6; Rev. J. W. Colwell, 5; Rev. Geo. Walker, 5; Rev. John E. Hickey, 4; Rev. F. W. Sprague, 3; Rev. Daniel Steele, 2; Rev. M. J. Masterson, 1. Two marriages were solemnized in Peabody by out of town clergymen. The oldest groom was 84, the youngest 18. The oldest bride was 72, the youngest 16. The largest number of marriages was in the month of April, 19; the smallest number in March, 5.

Charles F. Donelly, a consistent democrat, and one of the most efficient members os the Board of Health, Lunacy and Charity—but not a supporter of Gen. Butler, has been re-appointed to that board by Gov. Robinson, in place of Robert T. Davis, of Fall River. It will be remember that Butler would not re-appoint him.

A wicked exchange says:—It is a curious fact, but about three-quarters of all the women drivers, when they want to stop at a store, will drive along the other side of the street until opposite the place where they wish to stop, then drive square across and leave the horse with his nose against the hitching post and the back end of the conveyance out in the middle of the street.

The various entertainments at the Opera House have demonstrated that no money can be made at the rental that is charged for the hall, not that the hall is not worth the price charged, but there is not now sufficient business in town to draw from; $25 would be about the proper rent for a while. *Cor. NEW YORK MERCURY,

FOR 1884.

With the initial number of the New Year, dated January 6, 1884, the NEW YORK MERCURY entered upon its

FORTY-SIXTH VOLUME,

and it is by long odds the cheapest, as well as the largest, handsomest and best metropolitan literary journal now published. Each number contains 56 columns, or 1,808 square inches of reading matter, comprising more than 15,080 lines

EQUALLING THE CONTENTS OF A TWENTY FIVE CENT MAGAZINE.

Arrangements have been consummated, both at home and in Europe, to secure for the ensuing year many sterling novelties to increase the already incomparable variety of literary attractions which have always made the NEW YORK MERCURY a welcome guest in every home circle, and

A PAPER SUITABLE FOR ALL CLASSES,

celebrated throughout the length and breadth of the land for its

The Peabody Press.
JOHN P. FERNALD, ALBERT VITTUM,
Editors and Publishers.

THE SALEM Register of Monday publishes a reply to the letter of Geo. F. Sanger, signed by Dr. T. L. Perkins, the Superintendent of the Salem Hospital. We have not space to publish it entire, as a portion of it is only a recapitulation of his personal statement to us, and which we published last week. We give a portion of it which is in point:

Allowing the claim of Peabody that notwithstanding the fact that Michael Fenton had been a resident of Peabody for several years, he was nevertheless a State pauper, it does not relieve the town from the responsibility of his board, as will be seen from the following letter from one who is acknowledged an expert on the subject of pauper law:

SALEM, Dec. 30, 1879.

Overseers of the Poor of the Town of Peabody:

Gentlemen,—Your denial of Michael Fenton is received, but inasmuch as this pauper was brought to this City by one of the Peabody Town officials, we shall charge the expense of said pauper to Peabody. Of course you know the law in regard to such cases.

For the Overseers of the Poor of Salem. Respectfully,
DANIEL P. FITZ, Clerk.

Then follows the copy of the bill amoun ing to $141.05, after which Dr. Perkins says:

The Chairman says the patient was not sent "by order of the Board of Overseers." The report did not say that he was, but that he was "brought by one of the town officials," who by the way was a policeman and supposed to represent the town.

* * * * * *

One patient taken from the Almshouse in Peabody and brought to the Hospital for an operation, was in the Hospital 100 days and the Town by special agreement paid $100. This is the only money the Hospital has ever received.

The facts of the case appear to be that the officials of the Salem Hospital take too much for granted. The fact that a policeman of the town of Peabody came to the door of the Hospital with Fenton, is not evidence, nor should it be so considered, that he was sent by the Overseers of our Poor. Mr. Ruth denies that he made any arrangements, or gave any information leading them to suppose the town would pay for Fenton's board. On the contrary he thought, and thinks now, that Fenton's brother arranged for his reception at the Hospital. At all events, had the Hospital Authorities notified Mr. Fitz at once, and had he notified the Board of Peabody, he would have had the information that he was not a town pauper, long before the time he did. The first notification was Dec. 26th, one month, nearly, after Fenton was received in the Hospital. Dec. 27th, the following day, Mr. Bancroft replied, denying according to general form that the town was liable. The reply to this denial is what is published above. If Fenton had been sent by the town to the Hospital the remark of Mr. Fitz, "Of course you know the law in regard to such cases," would be applicable. But he was not so sent. And it was the business of the Hospital Authorities to have found this out, and taken nothing for granted until they had official recognition that the town considered themselves liable. A Hospital doing the charitable work of this one, should, we think, learn by experience that it is unsafe to take the representations of any one outside of the Board of Overseers, that a city or town would be responsible for board of a patient. Take the case referred to by us last week, where the officials took for granted that Dr. Frost, whom they thought was the town physician, had pledged the word of the town that a case would be paid for by our town. There was no reason for such being taken for granted. Dr. Frost says all he had to do with the case was to advise the removal to the Hospital. If the parties taking him misrepresented the case, Dr. Frost nor our town should have to bear the brunt of it. The Hospital authorities should have informed themselves. There is another case, to which we did not last week refer, where Dr. Perkins thought the town should have paid. It was the case of the slater injured on our Town Hall. The authorities thought, at first, that because he was employed on the building of the town, the town must be liable. We informed Dr. Perkins that the contractors for the entire job were residents of their own city, when he acknowledged the injustice of the claim. On careful consideration of this entire business, we must say that we think the Hospital Authorities have not taken the business like course which experience should have taught them, and that if they had done so, they would not have the complaint to make against the town of Peabody which they seem disposed to bring.

It will be noted that the original report of Dr. Perkins says: "this town (Peabody) has been in no instance willing to recompense the hospital for any service rendered its poor." The letter above admits, however, that in one case the town did pay $100—specially arranged for. That means that our Overseers agreed to be responsible for the case when it was sent there, and of course the town paid for it. Every pauper case should be specially arranged for. That is the business way of doing it, and it is its neglect which has brought the Hospital Authorities into trouble. But Dr. Perkins is again in error when he says "This is the only money the Hospital has ever received." Another bill was paid by our town, for which the order was drawn Feb. 18th, 1882, and the receipt for which is in the hands of our town clerk.

We have been thus explicit because we find that our officials are not in error, and we desire our readers and the public should so understand. It is impossible that our town should be responsible for every case that is taken to the Hospital, where the patient is too poor to pay, when their first knowledge of the fact is the presentation of a bill. No candid man could so expect it. But if by private contribution, or by public vote, the town will appropriate for the relief of this hospital, or some other one, it will be, beyond doubt; an act that will bear fruit an hundred fold.

THE SALEM Correspondent of the Boston Herald must be hard pushed for political news when he indulges in such stuff as the following:

Col. Stone, member of Congress from this district, will be likely to hear from his constituents next fall. The Peabody postmastership has not yet been forgotten, where he turned out a veteran of the late war.

* * * * *

Following this comes Stone's vote against Gen. Porter, which is not popular in this section.

The people of Peabody settled the postmaster question at the last Congressional election and the voters in the district ratified it by his return to Congress. As far as we are able to ascertain, Col. Stone is not a candidate for re-nomination by the Republican party. He has received the customary courtesy of a second term, and with that we think he is content. We do not believe he will "hear from his constituents next fall" in any other way than will be perfectly acceptable to him.

In regard to the case of Fitz John Porter, there is room for difference of opinion, honestly expressed. To the credit of Congress be it said that it was not made a party question. The Massachusetts delegation was nearly equally divided, and members of both parties in Congress voted for and against his reinstatement. No candid man will condemn the vote of any representative in this case, even if it did not coincide with his own views.

PROBABLY no man in this country made more political enemies than Wendell Phillips, and now that he is dead no one has received more tributes from men of all parties. He was the foremost of the abolition orators; he was in advance of the public sentiment on the slavery question, and its overthrow was to him a life work. In his opposition to it and all its supporters, his impatience with those who, sympathizing with him, in a measure, could not see the evil in all its hideousness, as he saw it, — Mr. Phillips and his work is best known. His sympathy was with the poor and oppressed everywhere; that sympathy naturally led him into the later organizations of the labor party, and to be the advocate of those who were opposed to the existing order of things in every direction. But in all this no man doubted his fidelity to principle: and this we think is the secret of the sense of loss which is realized by all men, everywhere. Liberty and humanity have lost a true friend.

SPARKS.

The room of the H. & L. is now finished, and the boys are ready to have their friends inspect it. A new and handsome tapestry carpet, with a fine rug for the centre of the room, two new lounges, the chairs and tables stained and fixed up, the pictures varnished and new marbles put in. These improvements with the handsome frescoing of the walls and ceiling combine to make a very fine parlor, and the boys have reason to be proud of it. Sunday they had quite a number of visitors, and the room was kept open all day for inspection. The carpets and lounges came from the store of C. H. Goulding.

Hose 3 will give their next party in their hose house on Friday evening, Feb. 22d. This will be a leap year party.

A meeting of the Ball Committee of the three ones and a two was held in the room of Hose 1, and it was voted to give the printing to Fernald & Vittum, and several other small matters were settled. Wm. J. Roome was chosen Floor Director, and the aids will be the foremen and two members from each company in the house. Tickets will soon be on sale at a dollar apiece, admitting gent and two ladies.

Get a company of old volunteer firemen around the hot stove in an engine house, these cold nights, and it is charming to hear them fight their old fires over again in their minds. Between their profanity and their lying they make even a hardened angler afraid to stay where there is such a temptation to the wrath of Heaven.—Boston Post.

That is a fact that about all the boys in this department know well, and the older the firemen, the bigger the lie, especially when one of the old vets of the big fire of 1843 gets to talking.

The remodelled truck of the Franklin company is nearly completed at Dole & Osgood's manufactory in Peabody, and when completed will be the handsomest piece of apparatus in the department. The running gear is painted a delicate shade of light drab, with a light red stripe lined with a fine green stripe and gold outside. The wheels are faced with gold, carmire hubs, bolt heads blue and striped with fine lines. The new body is 22 feet long. The box doors on the sides are lettered "Franklin No. 1" in ornamented letters of blue and gold, and on the foot board is the word "Salem" in similar letters. The driver's seat is large and roomy, with the brake lever and the gong worked by the feet. The rolls are of iron covered with rubber, and the box underneath elegantly ornamented with gold scrolls. Handrails of brass, with nickle acorns on the tips, are placed on the side. The scroll work is neat and well finished, and the whole truck is as light as is consistent with strength. The fact is established that Essex county can turn out as good a truck and at as low a price as any place. The truck will be out in about ten days, and will be placed on exhibition in the square in Peabody when finished. The expense of the alteration will be a little rising $500, and an entirely new truck can be bought for $1000. The Peabody truck cost over $1200, and has got to be sent back for repairs already.—Globe.

The above article in its reference to the Peabody truck having to be sent to the repair shop, is all in their eye, as the truck has never yet had a cent laid out on it, and is in just as good condition as when it first came. We have seen the new truck, and with the exception of the little improvements made on it, rather like the Peabody truck the better. The Salem carriage is modeled from ours, and of course the builders had all the chances to improve.

Mr. Wm. T. Dole is getting up a new arrangement in hose carriages, which he thinks will revolutionize the making of that piece of apparatus. It is to be a four wheeled carriage with a reel on the rear axle and another above the centre of the carriage just back of the seat, the two to be connected by means of an endless chain, and the hose to be reeled over the two reels, giving it a chance to have a perfect drying while on the carriage. We have seen the drawing and fail to see where the carriage would be better than a hose wagon.

The Fireman's Herald of last week has a picture of Chief A. C. Moody, of the Lynn department, and a sketch of his life. Those who are acquainted with him say that it is a correct likeness of him.

Steamer number one was out two afternoons in succession, last week, pumping out the surface water from the cellar of Mrs. Mary Gallagher, on Fulton street.

Last Thursday evening about forty of the signers of the incorporation papers, met in Temperance Hall, in response to a call issued by Engineer D. B. Lord, one of the committee appointed for the purpose of getting a charter for the Relief Association. The meeting was organized and the By-Laws adopted, the following officers being elected: President, Geo. O. Pierce; vice president, Joseph H. Miller; secretary, John F. Moreland; treasurer, Fred B. Thomas. A committee consisting of Wm. W. Reed, John O. Buxton and Chas. K. Mallard were appointed to revise the By-Laws, and to report at some future meeting. The meeting was adjourned to the call of the President. Henry Wardwell, Esq., was present at the meeting to swear in the temporary and permanent secretary. There were 85 signers on the paper.

As it is coming on to town meeting time, one or two suggestions in regard to Fire Department matters will not come in amiss. There is one thing that should be done by the town for the firemen, and that is in the matter of rubber coats. At the present time, the firemen have to supply themselves with coats, which strikes us as being unfair, with the small sum paid for their services, that they should be obliged to pay out $5.00 for a rubber coat or get a wetting. It would only be a small item for the town probably about $500, but it is a big thing for the firemen. Other cities and towns furnish their men with the neccessary protection. Another thing which we hope will be brought up and decided this year, is the fire alarm telegraph. It is an important matter to the firemen and to the interests of the town, that upon an alarm of fire, it should be sent in promptly, and that is the only sure way to locate a fire, as it is well known that the first few minutes are the most important. The cost of the alarm system would be more than saved in a year when alarms and fires were plenty, in the wear and tear of apparatus, as with the alarm we should not get false alarms, or alarms from out of town, and the fire being promptly located, there would not be so much damage by water as at present. We hope the town will adopt that system at the annual meeting.

The insurance on the Richardson, Doyle & Co. fire was adjusted Monday afternoon through the office of O. B. Chadwick & Co., as follows: On stock, $9,780.16; machinery, $1015; building, $1,110; making a total of $11,905,16.

Hose 1, H. & L. 1, and Steamer 2, at their meetings held Monday evening, appointed aids and reception committees for the annual ball, and the following were appointed trustees to the new Relief Association. Hose 1, Chas. K. Mallard, H. & L. 1, Wm. H. Joll, Steamer 2, Geo. F. Currier.

A leap year party, complimentary to the firemen, will be held to-night in Upton's Hall, and the boys should turn out and show the ladies that they know how to appreciate their exertions. The ladies in charge of the arrangements and who have had the getting up of the party, are Mrs. F. O. Parker, Mrs. Frank Price, and Miss Abbie Fairbrother.

The Salem Fireman's Relief Association will hold their first meeting on the matter of incorporation at the engine house on Church street, Thursday evening.

Steamer number one was taken out in the yard last evening to try her pumps, as it was thought that some dirt or stones had got under the valves. The suction was dropped into the hose trough in the cellar, fires lighted and steam got up and after running a few minutes water was taken and all dirt removed from the pumps.

About 60 of the members of the old Relief Association met in Temperance Hall last evening, in response to the call for a meeting, but no business was transacted.

David A. Larrabee was chosen Trustee of the new Relief Association from Hose 2 at their meeting, Monday evening.

Two men were down from the works of G. M. Bowditch yesterday afternoon and revarnished the wheels of the new carriage, at the house of Hose 4.

The report of the Chief Engineer of the fire department for the year ending Feb. 1st, is as follows: Whole number of times the department has been called out during the year, has been 18; of which 9 were for fires, 8 for alarms, and one for a fire in the woods at West Peabody, at which fire part of the department were in service. Of the alarms, 3 were false. The total loss by fire for the year was $15,878.16, covered by an insurance of 46,000. z.

Why wouldn't it be a good idea to petition for Abbott's pardon now instead of waiting till after he has served a year or two in the state prison? Or still better, grant him now the pardon that will probably be asked for next year by clergymen, lawyers and jurymen, as is always done in cases of this kind and save the expense of a trial.—Salem News.

Wouldn't it be a good idea to catch the bird, brother, before you talk about pardoning him from state prison, and expense of a trial?

Almy, Bigelow & Webber are soon to take account of stock. Before doing so, however, they propose to offer some decided bargains, in order to dispose of as much of their stock as possible. Read their advertisement in another column.

SCHOOL NOTES.

With this issue we begin a column of School Notes, which will be continued from week to week. The matter furnished from the different schools will be written by a pupil of the school who shall be appointed by the teacher or elected to hold the position for a stated time by the pupils themselves. All matter will be subject to the approval of the principal. We trust the feature will be found of interest to the parent as well as the pupil. We were unable this week to hear from all the schools, but trust next week to give a full instalment.

CENTER SCHOOL.

The furniture for the new room has arrived and is waiting to be placed in position.

Some new maps have been furnished for the school, one of which, a large outline map of the United States, is for the first class.

A Strange Visitor.—One day last week, a teacher in one of the lower rooms noticed something hanging on the window blind, and thinking it was something that some of the scholars had left, she went up to it and, touching it, found it was alive. Being somewhat timid, the janitor was called and the visitor was let out. This creature was a bat; it probably got into the ventilator and fell down into the room.

WALLIS SCHOOL.

Truancy, which at one time had become a serious obstacle to the progress of our schools, is now much reduced in frequency and a gain in their efficiency is the result. Much credit is due to Mr. S. F. Reed for the almost total eradication of this evil and the teachers feared that his resignation might work disastrously to the best interests of the schools, but the present appointee, Mr. Jas. H. Thomas, has entered upon his duties with commendable zeal and determination. We believe that he will prove to be the right man in the right place.

The introduction of music into our school has done much already toward awakening an interest among the citizens. The town at its annual meeting can afford to be generous in the appropriation for the continuance of musical instruction.

The schools on Monday last commenced on the last half of the school year.

The average daily attendance of our school for the present year has never been surpassed.

Last Sunday evening two young men after attended church became involved in a quarrel which could not be settled in the usual way, with words. They agreed to knock it out according to the Marquis of Queensbury rules. Not being present we can't say which came off first best, but it was said to be a draw. Boys, we know you are ashamed of it now, at any rate we are of you.

The following is from the Marietta (Ohio) Times: Mrs. Tibbetts was the wife of the late Horace Tibbetts and formerly resided in Peabody: Mr. Isaac Atkinson and Mrs. Mary A. Tibbetts, both of this city, were quietly married, by Rev. G. R. Gear, on Monday evening. We wish them much joy and happiness.

Last Sunday the Cong. Church returned to quartette singing, consisting of Mr. Emerson, Mr. Martin, Mrs. Upton and Miss Bill. The chorus choir was not a success because it contained too many married people, who would not attend rehearsals.

PAINE is continually adding New Styles to his immense stock of fine furniture. Dining Room Tables and Chairs, New Styles in Chamber and Parlor Suites have just been added, also a number of New Styles in Book Cases are now being finished. MAYO'S
Compound Vegetable Anæsthetic.
A safe and pleasant substitute for gas and ether.
Discovered by Dr. N. K. Mayo of Boston, April 1883, subsequently administered by him in nearly two thousand cases, producing perfect slumber, being applicable to the child the delicate sentitive woman as well as the hardy man. No ill effects have followed its use in any case, it acting rather as a vegetable tonic.
It controls the patient one-fourth longer than gas giving us time to remove from three to twenty teeth. It is with great confidence we have introduced it into our practice, giving very successful results.

NOTICE.
The undersigned would take this opportunity to state that he has at his office a medicine which he has used with great success for many years, for all
Kidney Troubles.
And he now places it before the public at the earnest solicitations of friends, who have tried and proved it. It has seldom, if ever, failed to effect a cure for all diseases of the Kidneys, and impurities in the blood.
Reference can be given to persons who have used it with great benefit.

HOME HAPPENINGS.

Daniel H. Townsend, the veteran expressman on the So. Reading Branch R. R., died at his residence on Tremont street, last Thursday morning. Mr. Townsend was born in Saco, Maine, Aug. 31st, 1813. He worked at the currying business first in Amesbury, and in 1833 he came to this town, working during that year in Salem, the following year in Danvers and afterwards for Obadiah Kimball in this place. In 1836 he went into business with the late Franklin Upton, on Foster street, and in connection with James Perkins, now of Magnolia, made and set up the first leather splitting machine ever used in town. On this machine in Sept. 1841, he broke his arm. It was a very severe compound fracture, and one from which he never fully recovered. In 1844 he was tax collector of this town, and in 1846 he entered the express business on the So. Reading Branch R. R., carrying small parcels, supplying papers along the route and doing what business he was able. He knew personally nearly everyone along the route, and was careful and conscientious in all his dealings. Mr. Townsend was a strong temperance man, and one of the early abolitionists. Descended on his father's side from a Baptist circuit preacher who had been denounced by the puritan church, and through his mother's family of Hacker, which was founded in Brunswick, Me., by one who fled from Salem in the days of the persecution of the Quakers, he inherited a horror of injustice which all his life characterized him. Mr. Townsend leaves two sons, Chas. H., who resides in San Buena Ventura, Cal., Eugene, who leads a seafaring life from Gloucester, and one daughter, Mrs. M. O. Stevens, of this town. A Universalist in his religious belief he welcomed, during his sickness, the calls of Rev. Mr. Sperry, and so pleasant a friendship was formed, that it seemed not unfitting that this pastor should pay the funeral tribute. His only brother, William H. Townsend, a prominent builder of Burlington, Vt., and his only surviving sister, Mrs. Mercy Randall, of Portland, Me., with a number of nephews and nieces were present at the funeral. His remains were conveyed to Walnut Grove Cemetery, Danvers. An autopsy was held by Drs. Osborne, Weston and Foster, who found his heart, lungs and liver in perfect health, and in the lower stomach both a tumor and a cancer.

The Fair of the G. A. R. Post of this town, begins Feb. 12th. Preparations have been extensively made—the committee are in good working order—and the tickets are selling well. There will be an entertainment each evening in the large hall, the opening night by a grand concert by the Salem Brass Band, Feb. 13, a variety entertainment by Strout and Collier's Specialty company, assisted by Annie Liebsch and Ida Lewis, Seaman & Norris and others, Feb. 14, a concert by the Salem Band Orchestra, 12 pieces, Feb. 15, to be announced, Feb. 16, Concert by the Salem Brass Band. We hope our citizens will take hold in earnest and give the Post a lift.

The Missionary concert at the Baptist church, Sunday evening, was largely attended. Two pieces rendered by the choir were exceptionally fine,—"Work for your Master," and "Memories of Galilee." The address of Dr. Dennis, the converted Hebrew, was a review of the Jewish attitude towards christianity, and the christian attitude towards the Jew, for eighteen centuries. He thought there had been blame on both sides, but now a brighter day was dawning, and the gospel was being carried to the Jew as well as to the Gentile. The Master would not come again till the Jews as a nation had accepted Jesus.

The Gloucester Water Supply Company have contracted with Geo. H. Norman, who built the Peabody works, for the building of water works for that city, with all the necessary apparatus for pumping 2,000,000 gallons of water per day, into a reservoir 175 feet above the level of the sea, and the requisite distribution pipes to supply the inhabitants.

The Musicale of the Murray Club last Monday night was a pleasant affair. There was a large chorus, a double quartette of male voices, besides songs by different ladies and gentlemen belonging to the club. The entertainment consisted of twelve parts.

The committee of the Unity Club having in charge the concert to be given for the benefit of the Organ Fund, have decided upon Tuesday evening, Feb. 19. Full particulars will be given later.

Mr. Chas. Gardner was in town last week shaking hands with old friends.

The Portsmouth N. H. Times gives a little more light on the subject, concerning the man who died at Rowley, and was supposed to belong in this town. It says: "On Saturday evening last a citizen applied to the city marshal in behalf of an aged tramp, Joseph Nelson by name, who had called at his house that day begging for food. His appetite had been satisfied, but the citizen did not feel like lodging him over night, and called upon the marshal to do something for the man. The marshal did not think the station house a fit place for the old man, who was also sick. It was ascertained that the man had some relatives in Rowley, Mass., and the city marshal paid his fare to that town. To-day it was learned that the man had died in the depot at that station within ten minutes after getting off the train, and was cared for by the town officials. He had visited this city occasionally for several years, and was 86 years of age. On Saturday evening he was so weak that he could hardly walk."

Last Friday the Eastern Railroad announced a reduction of fares to quite a number of stations to take effect immediately. This makes the fares more equal and it will give general satisfaction, particularly to our own people. The new tariff shows a reduction of five cents between Boston and Swampscott, for single fares, and of ten cents to Marblehead, Salem, Peabody, Danvers, Beverly, Ipswich, Wenham, Essex and Rowley, while to Manchester, Gloucester and Rockport the deduction amounts to fifteen cents; to Magnolia the reduction is from ninety to seventy cents. Changes are also made in the five-ride tickets. For instanee, between Boston and Salem and Peabody, five rides are now sold for $1.50; to Danvers, $1.90; Gloucester, $3.75, and Rockport, $4.25.

The Boston Museum Company are announced to appear in the new Opera House under the auspices of Post 50, G. A. R., Feb. 25th. They are playing "Celebrated Case" on their New England circuit, but owing to the fact that it is to be played in Salem, an attempt will be made to have them appear in another play. Those of our readers who desire to see the company, should surely take enough interest in entertainments here to wait until it comes to Peabody, unless they go to both. Our hall with its accommodations is much more comfortable, better ventilated and in every way superior to Mechanic Hall, Salem. We hope the Post will see a large audience, and such an one is necessary to reimburse the managers at the present price of the hall.

The repetition of the concert of War Songs, last Friday night, was attended by a much larger number of people than the previous one. We are glad, also, to say that it is a financial success to the managers, Messrs. Hildreth and Randall. The chorus did not appear with such full ranks as at the first concert, and appeared to lack the vim of the previous occasion. The Lotus Club was, of course, good—and received an encore at every number. The Columbia Bros. Quartette played better than before, and of course Flockton in his solos was loudly applauded. The lady soloist was Marie Marchington, who sang Viva L'America and the Star Spangled Banner.

At the meeting called to consider the question of an Old Ladies' Home, the trustees of a fund already established for this purpose will be present and will make known the terms of the letter of trust and present a statement of the amount and character of the property in their hands. The officers of the Benevolent Society will also report the amount of funds in their hands for a like purpose and the conditions under which it is available. Other persons in the town have expressed an intention to substantially aid the object whenever there is a prospect of establishing a Home. That all interested may confer together in regard to the best methods of accomplishing what so many at the present time believe to be a needed and worthy charity, this meeting is called.

The New Haven Palladium has the following in regard to a son of Rev. Wm. M. Barbour, formerly of this town: William R. Barbour (Yale '80), whose examination papers for admission to the New York bar, last Saturday and Monday, are said to have been the most brilliant ever presented to the examining committee, was graduated at Yale Law school with the class of '82, taking the Jewell prize for the best examination, and the Townsend prize for the best oration at the law commencement.

Bowditch Lodge, No. 719, K. of H., were favored on Monday evening, with a visit from C. H. Eaton, the Grand Secretary of the order in this state. After a mutual interchange of courtesies, the business of the evening was proceeded with after which eloquent and forcible remarks were made by Dictator Wiley and Bros. Littlefield and Sanger.

AYER'S
Cherry Pectoral.

No other complaints are so insidious in their attack as those affecting the throat and lungs: none so trifled with by the majority of sufferers. The ordinary cough or cold, resulting perhaps from a trifling or unconscious exposure, is often but the beginning of a fatal sickness. AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL has well proven its efficacy in a forty years' fight with throat and lung diseases, and should be taken in all cases without delay.

A Terrible Cough Cured.

"In 1857 I took a severe cold, which affected my lungs. I had a terrible cough, and passed night after night without sleep. The doctors gave me up. I tried AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL, which relieved my lungs, induced sleep, and afforded me the rest necessary for the recovery of my strength. By the continued use of the PECTORAL a permanent cure was effected. I am now 62 years old, hale and hearty, and am satisfied your CHERRY PECTORAL saved me.
HORACE FAIRBROTHER."
Rockingham, Vt., July 15, 1882.

Croup.—A Mother's Tribute.

"While in the country last winter my little boy, three years old, was taken ill with croup; it seemed as if he would die from strangulation. One of the family suggested the use of AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL, a bottle of which was always kept in the house. This was tried in small and frequent doses, and to our delight in less than half an hour the little patient was breathing easily. The doctor said that the CHERRY PECTORAL had saved my darling's life. Can you wonder at our gratitude? Sincerely yours,
MRS. EMMA GEDNEY."
159 West 128th St., New York, May 16, 1882.

"I have used AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL in my family for several years, and do not hesitate to pronounce it the most effectual remedy for coughs and colds we have ever tried. A. J. CRANE."
Lake Crystal, Minn., March 13, 1882.

"I suffered for eight years from Bronchitis, and after trying many remedies with no success, I was cured by the use of AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL. JOSEPH WALDEN."
Byhalia, Miss., April 5, 1882.

"I cannot say enough in praise of AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL, believing as I do that but for its use I should long since have died from lung troubles. E. BRAGDON."
Palestine, Texas, April 22, 1882.

No case of an affection of the throat or lungs exists which cannot be greatly relieved by the use of AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL, and it will always cure when the disease is not already beyond the control of medicine.

Book Notices.

Many noted names lend weight and importance to the table of contents of the February Century, either as subjects, or as contributors to the number. In the frontispiece is given one of Rembrandt's most effective paintings, engraved with a skill that has seldom been exceeded in the magazine. This painting, "The Head of a Man," is from the Hermitage in St. Petersburg, containing a remarkable but little known art collection of which Richard Whiteing gives a description in the same number. There are two illustrated articles on Dante, one on Keats, another on How Edwin Drood was illustrated. This is one of the finest numbers of the Century that has been issued. The writers are all people of eminence, and the illustrations are profuse and very fine.

St. Nicholas for February is a bright, crisp, and cheerful midwinter number, and the seasonable frontispiece—an original wood engraving by Elbridge Kingsley,—is called "A Midwinter Night." A paper entitled "An Engraver on Wheels," gives an instructive and very pleasant account of wood-engraving. Another wintry feature which will find a merry welcome is "The Brownie's on Skates." "Griseld's Reception," is an amusing story of child life; St. Valentine's day is commemorated with some very pretty verses. W. O. Stoddard's serial "Winter Fun," is just as timely and even more entertaining than before. "Historic Boys," by E. S. Brooks, bids fair to be of unusual interest. "Marcus of Rome, the Boy Magistrate," is an account of some incidents in the boy-life of the Emperor Marcus Aurelius. Mayne Reid tells in "The Land of Fire," of a thrilling pursuit and escape of its heroes. Louisa M. Alcott's second spinning wheel story entitled "Tabby's Table-cloth," is a tale of the Revolution and the Rebellion.

Something to Read, for February, includes the grand Christmas number, containing complete "A Winter Night, or Found in a Snow Drift." There are numerous sketches, poetry, etc. Published by the International News Co., New York, and for sale by newsdealers everywhere.

The Bay State Monthly is the latest Boston literary venture and candidate for public patronage. Judging from the first number, we should say that to place it on a successful footing ought not to be a hard matter, for it seems to possess the elements necessary to win popular favor and secure a large support. It has real literary merit, and is a fresh, entertaining and instructive magazine. The initial number contains a fine portrait of the venerable Marshall P. Wilder, with a biographical sketch of that distinguished Massachusetts citizen, and many other good articles. It is published by Bicknel, McClintock & Co., 16 Hawley street, Boston, at $3.00 a year.

Harper's Magazine for February, is a strong number in both its artistic and literary features. The two serial novels, William Black's Judith's Shakespeare, and the Rev. E. P. Roe's Nature's Serial Story have a commanding interest. The frontispiece engraving, from Abbey's drawing, "The Bible reading," is a [illegible] Black's novel and both [illegible] Gibson evidence of best [illegible] Nature's serial story. Fifty [illegible] very fine engravings illustrat[illegible] ading articles of the mo[illegible] will is an excellent one from bot[illegible] ary and artistic point of view. [illegible] ditorial departments are full of entertainment and instruction.

The Art Amateur for February contains a strikingly fine ideal portrait for oil painting, said to greatly resemble the famous American beauty, Miss Chamberlain. Other designs are a child's head, snowballs and hepatica for china painting, and some charming figures for Valentine cards and sketching on linen. Specially attractive features are the page of "rapid sketches" by the Kit-Kat Club, and the illustrated articles on Alma Tadema's house and Cincinnati pottery. The practical departments are well filled, and the number fully maintains The Art Amateur's high standard of excellence. Price 35 cents; $4 a year. Montague Marks, Publisher, 23 Union Square, New York.

The story of a woman's life—Erring, Yet Noble, just Published by T. B. Peterson & Brothers, Philadelphia, is a novel that everybody will want to read from beginning to end. It deals with the hard facts of life in a style of minute naturalism, and as a thorough analysis of a woman's career cannot be equalled. The interest commences with the opening sentence and is kept up to the last. Julia Witherson, the heroine, though more sinned against than sinning, has a terrible record to fight against, but she does not falter in her struggles to overcome evil with good. Her love for Charles Singerly is her guiding star, and it leads her into peculiar fields of usefulness that most women, even some of the bravest, would fear to explore. Exciting situations are plentiful, and thrilling episodes follow each other with almost bewildering rapidity. The plot is powerful and excellent, and the character sketching graphic in the highest degree, while entire originality marks the book. The scene is chiefly laid in New York, though glimpses are given of life in Paris and civil war experience in Virginia. That "Erring Yet Noble" will meet with a very flattering reception in all quarters may be set down as beyond a doubt. It is published in a large square duodecimo volume, paper cover, price seventy-five cents, or bound in morocco cloth, price $1.25, and will be found for sale by all booksellers, by all news agents everywhere, and on all railroad trains, or copies of it will be sent to anyone, postpaid, on remitting the price of it in a letter to the publishers, T. B. Peterson & Bros., Philadelphia, Pa.

The February Atlantic has two additional chapters of each of the three serial stories now running in it,—Dr. Weir Mitchell's really striking novel "In War Time;" Mr. Crawford's story of "A Roman Singer," which is much the best work he has yet done; and Mr. Lathrop's "Newport." Rev. H. Bernard Carpenter contributes a noteworthy poem, a "Trio for Twelfth-night." O. B. Frothingham, in "Voices of Power," discusses the pulpit, the press, and the stage. The short story, French in scene and largely in character, is "In Madeira Place," by C. H. White. Mrs. Julia C. R. Dorr has a sweet poem, "Foreshadowings." The department of book reviews and notices is full, and gives readers an excellent idea of the best current books; and the contributors' club has eight bright short essays. Houghton, Mifflin & Co, Boston.

The opening paper in the magazine of American History for February, by George Cary Eggleston, is a most effective piece of word-painting, the subject being "Our First Ten Presidents;" It is a paper that will interest everybody, irrespective of political creed. Prof. Edward E. Salisbury contributes the first of a series of three scholarly essays entitled, "The Griswold Family of Connecticut" (announced some months since), a felicitous combination of history, biography and genealogy, which will be widely welcomed by all readers interested in solving historical problems in relation to the development of our country and its institutions. The departments of Notes, Queries, Replies, Societies, and Book notices are remarkably well sustained. Publication office, 30 Lafayette Place, New York City.

Frank Leslie's Popular Monthly for February is already on our table, and is, as usual, overflowing with good things in prose, poetry and illustrations. The articles particularly interesting are: "Henry Irving and His Work," "New York City in its Early Days," "Life on the Surface of the Ocean," etc., etc.—they are profusely illustrated. In the department of fiction Etta W. Pierce's serial, "A Dark Deed," is continued, and there are short stories by favorite writers—many of the poems are beautifully illustrated, and the colored plate frontispiece, "Little Mischief" is worthy of an elegant frame. The price of a single number is 25 cts., and the yearly subscription $2.50, postpaid. Address, Mrs. Frank Leslie, Publisher, 53, 55, and 57 Park Place, N. Y.

Odd Fellowship does not consist in expensive halls, or costly regalias, or rich stage trappings, but in "visiting the sick, relieving the distressed, burying the dead and educating the orphan." Mr. R. T. Bentley, a member of the estimable community of Quakers at Sandy Springs, Md., says he was severely affected by rheumatism in his right hand. Mr. Bentley applied St. Jacobs' Oil, the great pain cure, and by its continued use, in a short time, was completely cured.

KING'S EVIL

Was the name formerly given to Scrofula because of a superstition that it could be cured by a king's touch. The world is wiser now, and knows that can only be cured by a thorough purification of the blood. If this is neglected, the disease perpetuates its taint through generation after generation. Among its earlier symptomatic developments are Eczema, Cutaneous Eruptions, Tumors, Boils, Carbuncles, Erysipelas, Purulent Ulcers, Nervous and Physical Collapse, etc. If allowed to continue, Rheumatism, Scrofulous Catarrh, Kidney and Liver Diseases, Tubercular Consumption, and various other dangerous or fatal maladies, are produced by it.

SCROFULA

Ayer's Sarsaparilla

Is the only powerful and always reliable blood-purifying medicine. It is so effectual an alterative that it eradicates from the system Hereditary Scrofula, and the kindred poisons of contagious diseases and mercury. At the same time it enriches and vitalizes the blood, restoring healthful action to the vital organs and rejuvenating the entire system. This great

Regenerative Medicine

Is composed of the genuine Honduras Sarsaparilla, with Yellow Dock, Stillingia, the Iodides of Potassium and Iron, and other ingredients of great potency, carefully and scientifically compounded. Its formula is generally known to the medical profession, and the best physicians constantly prescribe AYER'S SARSAPARILLA as an

Absolute Cure

For all diseases caused by the vitiation of the blood. It is concentrated to the highest practicable degree, far beyond any other preparation for which like effects are claimed, and is therefore the cheapest, as well as the best blood purifying medicine, in the world.

THAT BUGLE CALL.

Old Cerro Gordo Williams is the handsomest man of his years in Kentucky, not excepting General William Preston, formerly Minister to Spain, and at the court of susceptible Isabella. Williams is six feet two inches, with a grizzled iron mustache and curled wig, piercing gray eyes, the frame of a giant and a voice of fine, melodious ring. He is as vain as a peacock. While travelling in Southern Russia, when a young man, he alighted at a village where the Emperor Nicholas was hourly expected. Williams was taken for the emperor. It took the Russians an hour to get over their mistake, but Williams never entirely recovered. He won his title by gallantry before the walls of Cerro Gordo, a captain in Scott's army, and he has maintained his fame for prowess in many personal encounters since, in all of which he handled himself well. He affects the quality divine to politicians—of an infallible memory for names and faces, and is not above the crudest arts of a demagogue.

One evening, while he was dining with some friends in an upper room at the town hotel, one of his admirers stumbled across "Buck" Combs, who had been bugler in Williams' regiment during the war. They had not met since. Combs got his bugle and, accompanied by an immense crowd, went down to serenade his old commander with war melodies. Standing under his window he lifted up his old regimental call to "boot and saddle." He repeated it once again.

"Tom," said old Williams to his host, "where is that stage going this time of night, and what is the driver tootin' so d—d much about."

"Why, Senator," explained his friend regretfully, that's 'Buck' Combs, your old bugler, serenading you. I told 'em you would remember him and his bugle, and they want a speech."

The old general stepped out of the window on the balcony, and, lifting his voice as silence fell on the crowd, began:

"That bugle call," he said, with a choking voice, "that bugle call, my friends, is like a dear echo of memory. If I had heard it in the untrodden wilds of a pathless wilderness, I would have known that old 'Buck' Combs was winding its sweet notes. Often has it called the old command to fields of carnage. [Cheers.] There is but one bugler in the world that could evoke these sweet notes, and that is 'Buck' Combs, of the old —th Kentucky. [Cheers] I knew it the instant I heard it." [Cheers.]—Philadelphia Times.

EGYPTIAN HABITS.

The ordinary inhabitant of the towns passes his life in a simple and uniform manner. Before sunrise he leaves his couch, performs the morning ablutions enjoined by his religion and repeats his early prayer. To say his first morning prayer after sunrise is forbidden by the ordinances of his religion, and to allow the sun to rise over one's slumbering head is regarded as prejudicial to health. He then drinks his cup of coffee and smokes his pipe, either at home or in the public coffee house. His breakfast, which he takes after the coffee, or sometimes before it, consists of the remains of the meal of the night before, or of cakes and milk, or for a trifle he procures from the market the ever ready national dish of stewed beans. He then begins his avocations, buys, sells, writes, works or moves about, all in the most comfortable, quiet and deliberate manner. "What is not done to-day must be done to-morrow, if God please," stands written on his forehead in large letters. The Egyptian mechanic cannot be said to be famous for anything. The things in which they used to excel are rapidly being forgotten. The fine masonry of the older mosques would be thrown away on the architectural tastes of the present day, and hence the race of skilful masons is becoming extinct. The colored glass which used to be made in great perfection for windows and lamps is the product of a forgotten art, and most of the glass and china used in Egypt are imported from Europe. The same fate has come to the turners who used to make the beautiful lattice window screens; people now prefer glass, and lattices being no longer required, turners are forgetting how to make them. The potters do a good trade in unglazed porous vessels for cooling water, and the palm furnishes occupation to many hands. Egypt is no longer famous for fine linen; its cotton and woollen stuffs are coarse and its silk of poor quality. The tanners, however, have not forgotten their cunning in curing morocco leather, and the love of ornament, extending beyond slippers, supports goldsmiths in all the small towns.

LONGEVITY INCREASING.

In a young country like this, where life is continually at fever heat, and where action rather than reflection carries the day, old age seems out of place. In the staid old towns and cities of England Hawthorne tells us in his "Old Home" that he observed that old age came forth more cheerfully and generally into the sunshine than among ourselves, where the rush, stir, bustle and irreverent energy of youth are so preponderant that the poor, forlorn grandsires begin to doubt whether they have a right to breathe in such a world any longer, and so hide their silvery heads in solitude. But "fast" as this country and this period both proverbially are, it is a fact that the percentage of old men who continue in active life and who do not show their years, except to a close scrutiny, is on the increase. Erect and active octogenarians even are not unknown on our streets, whose appearance still makes them pass current as being in the executive period of life. The constant improvement in the average style of living, in the matter of dwelling, food and raiment, perceptibly promotes longevity and increases the number of cases of it.

Miscellaneous.

The following was the manner in which this chef d'œuvre came into the possession of France: In 1820 a Greek peasant of the Island of Milo—the ancient Melos of the Cyclades—in digging the ground found it buried and broken in three fragments in a recess about seven or eight feet below the surface. The French consul at Milo was then M. Brest, whom the peasant informed of his treasure, and offered to sell it for a small sum. The functionary, who knew little about the fine arts, referred to M. Duval d'Ailly, Commander of the French Government transport the Emulation, then at the island. The latter proposed to purchase the statue immediately, and remove it to his vessel. But this proceeding was too hasty for the formalist, M. Brest, who wrote a long letter to the Marquis de Riviere, Ambassador for Louis XVIII. at the Porte. This communication was lost on the way, but, fortunately for France, M. d'Urville arrived at that moment in Milo to conduct a hydrographical survey. He saw the statue, recognized at once the value of it, and sent a special courier to the Marquis de Riviere. The Ambassador despatched Count de Marcellus to Milo, with instructions to effect the purchase. But all these formalities had taken time, and when the Count arrived in the island the Venus had been shipped on board a Turkish brig and was about to leave for Constantinople. He immediately applied to the Primate, who, pressed by his insistance and even menaces, ordered the statue to be landed and sold by auction. This was what Count de Marcellus desired, and having become possessor of the treasure he started for France with it, and did not stop until he had reached Paris. He had bought it in the name of Marquis de Riviere, who transferred his bargain to Louis XVIII., and the King presented the statue to the nation. Such is the history of one of the most exquisite specimens of Greek art in the world.

THE CHEROKEE ROSE.

A pleasing feature of Florida is the beautiful and fragrant Cherokee rose that abounds in the whole peninsula. The Cherokee tribe of Indians dwelt from 500 to 1,000 miles further north, in what is now North Georgia, and in adjacent regions, now comprised in Tennessee and North Carolina. How came the Florida rose to bear the name of Cherokee? The legend is that the Seminoles, living in the low country, now Florida, went on the war path against the Cherokees, entered their country and fought a battle. A young Seminole brave was taken prisoner and carried to the wigwam of a Cherokee chief. He was doomed to be put to death. But the custom of the tribe was not to execute captives when sick. The young warrior, being sick, was spared till he should recover, when death would be inflicted on him. The chief had a daughter who attended him in his illness, and the two fell in love. When convalescent and able to travel, the young brave determined, with her connivance, to make his escape, and return to his own people. She consented to elope with him. One dark night they started from her father's abode.

After they had gone some distance the young woman stopped and expressed an earnest desire to go back to her home and bear away some memento of the place. Retracing their steps, she plucked a small rose-bush that she brought away. They carried it to the Seminole country, where, being planted, it grew and flourished. From this root the variety was propagated, and, in course of time, it spread through the peninsula, where it thrives and blooms at the present day. It is universally styled the Cherokee rose.

BRAIN WORKER AND NOISES.

Bad noises, bad air, bad smells, bad light and inconvenient attitude, ugly surroundings, little misfortunes that have lately been endured, little misfortunes that are soon to come, hunger and thirst, overeating and overdrinking, want of sleep or too much of it, a tight boot, a starched collar, are all inimical to thinking. I do not name bodily ailments. The feeling of heroism which is created by the magnanimity of overcoming great evils will sometimes make thinking easy. It is not the sorrows but the annoyance of life which impede. Were I told that the bank had broken in which my little all was kept for me, I could sit down and write my love story with almost a sublimated vision of love; but to discover that I had given half a sovereign instead of sixpence to a cabman would render a great effort necessary before I would find fitting words for a lover. These little lacerations of the spirit, not the deep wounds, make the difficulty. Of all the nuisances named noises are the worst. I know a hero who can write his leading article for a newspaper in a club-smoking-room, while all the chaff of all the Joneses and all the Smiths is sounding in his ears; but he is a hero because he can do it. To think with a barrel-organ within hearing is heroic. For myself I own that a brass band altogether incapacitates me. No sooner does the opening burst of the first note reach my ear then I start up, fling down my pen, and cast my thoughts disregarded into the abyss of some chaos which is always there ready to receive them.

In this world of ours there are people who would make just as much stir, and do just as much good, and benefit society just as much—and we don't know but more—were they killed and stuffed.

The highest education is that which not only provides food for pupil's memory, but training for his judgement, discipline for his affections, guidance for his conduct, and objects for his faith.

NASBY'S PAPER.
THE TOLEDO WEEKLY BLADE.
Circulation 115,000.

This vast circulation is because the BLADE is a paper for the whole country. It is not thrown together, but every line of it is edited by competent hands. It is a complete epitome of the news of the week, and whosoever reads the BLADE carefully, needs nothing else to be well informed as to what the world is doing. Editorially the BLADE has made a proud record. It has an opinion on every thing that affects the people of the country, and it expresses it boldly, fearlessly, and forcibly. As good as the Blade has been in past years, we will make it better than ever in the year to come, among the features for the coming year will be the regular "Nasby Letters," two serials by Nasby, entitled "Nasby in Exile," and "Nasby in the South," a serial story by Ernest Warren, entitled, Court and Camp," a serial by John McElroy author of Andersonville, "Reminiscences of an Army Mule"; a serial written for the BLADE by an Austrian nobleman; besides our regular departments, "Household," "Answers to Correspondents," "Camp Fire," etc., etc. We publish all the news, and latest corrected markets.

Politically the BLADE will continue an exponent of true Republicanism, believing that the best interests of the country demand the continuance of its control in the hands of the party that represents the highest and most advanced ideas.

THE RUM POWER.

The BLADE will fight this monster iniquity with all the power it possesses, and in every way possible. The BLADE holds the liquor traffic to be a greater curse than slavery, and a thousand times more dangerous to the country.

We ask the co-operation of every well-wisher of the Republic that our work may be effective. We ask every Republican in the United States to assist in extending the circulation of the BLADE, especially among those of the Republican party who believe as we do in the necessity of Pulverizing the Rum Power. We want the BLADE in as many families as possible this winter, that it may be read before the excitement of a political campaign, giving it time for its truths to take root in the minds of its readers.

THE WEEKLY BLADE, $1.00 a year, postpaid, to EVERYBODY. Those preferring, may receive the BLADE, THREE MONTHS, by remitting 30 cents, or clubs of three months trial subscribers, of not less than four, 25 cents each.

OUR GREAT ART OFFER.

A $10.00 Steel Engraving for $1.00. Write us for a speciman copy of the WEEKLY BLADE, which will give full particulars of this, the greatest offer ever made by any publisher. We send specimen copies of the BLADE free to any address. We want as many addresses as possible to send Specimen Copies to. Write a postal card asking for a specimen for yourself, and send us the names of all your neighbors. We want to send out a half million copies within the next month. Don't be modest as to the number.

THE SUN.
NEW YORK, 1884.

About sixty million copies of THE SUN have gone out of our establishment during the last twelve months.

If you were to paste end to end all the columns of all THE SUNS printed and sold last year, you would get a continuous strip of interesting information common sense wisdom, sound doctrine, and sane wit long enough to reach from Printing House square to the top of Mount Copernicus in the moon, then back to Printing House square, and then three-quarters of the way back to the moon again.

But THE SUN is written for the inhabitants of this earth; this same strip of intelligence would girdle the earth twenty-seven or twenty-eight times.

If every buyer of a copy of THE SUN during the past year has spent only one hour over it, and his wife or his grandfather has spent another hour, this newspaper in 1883 has afforded the human race thirteen thousand years of steady reading night and day.

It is only by little calculations like these that you can form any idea of the circulation of the most popular of American newspapers, or of its influence on the opinions and actions of American men and women.

THE SUN is, and will continue to be, a newspaper which tells the truth without fear of consequences, which gets at the facts no matter how much the process costs, which presents the news of all the world without waste of words and in the most readable shape, which is working with all its heart for the cause of honest government, and which therefore believes that the Republican party must go, and must go in this coming year of our Lord, 1884.

If you know THE SUN, you like it already and you will read it with accustomed diligence and profit during what is sure to be the most interesting year in its history. If you do not yet know THE SUN, it is high time to get into the sunshine.

TERMS TO MAIL SUBSCRIBERS.

The several editions of THE SUN are sent by mail, postpaid as follows:
DAILY—50 cents a month, $6 a year; with Sunday editions, $7.
SUNDAY—Eight pages. This edition furnishes the current news of the world, special articles of exceptional interest to everybody, and literary reviews of new books of the highest merit. $1 a year.
WEEKLY—$1 a year. Eight pages of the best matter of the daily issues; an Agricultural Department of unequalled value, special market reports, and literary, scientific, and domestic intelligence make THE WEEKLY SUN the newspaper for the farmer's household. PEABODY.

Frank E. Farnham, Esq., will prepare the annual report of the trustees, of the Peabody Institute this year.

Remember the complimentary leap year party at Upton's hall to-night. Good music and a good time.

Lieut. Edward W. Abbott, of this town, was last Monday evening elected Captain of company B., Second Corps of Cadets in place of City Marshal John W. Hart, promoted.

Last Monday a sleigh belonging to P. R. Pratt, provision dealer of Boston street, was overturned on Aborn street, and both shafts broken off. The team was taken to the shop of Murray & Carroll for repairs.

Thomas Brennan, Elizabeth McCarthy and Bridget Norman, all saloon keepers, were before the Selectmen, charged with violating their license. They were discharged, as the evidence was not sufficient to convict.

The first social assembly of the Pacific Associates at Upton's Hall last evening, was very largely attended. The managers are young men who looked after every detail to make it the success it was. Another will be held May eve.

We call the attention of our readers to the advertisement of the New York Mercury, in another column. The Mercury has long held its position as the foremost journal in the country for dramatic, fire department and social news. Send for a sample copy, and you will like it.

At the meeting of the W. C. T. Union, Friday, February 1st, a resolution was adopted, tendering the sincere sympathy of the Union to its bereaved president, Mrs. M. O. Stevens, in this hour of her affliction. The annual business was postponed to Friday, Feb. 8, at 4 p. m. A full attendence is requested.

There are lives in which strange events follow each other in rapid succession. A motion, made before a Brooklyn court to secure the release of Geo. W. Lake, who is now serving out a sentence at Sing Sing for an unnatural crime, brings the story to mind again. Mr. Lake has a half brother in this town. It is generally believed that he is innocent and was convicted on circumstantial evidence. His story is wonderful. He lived at Topsfield, Mass. At the age of 15 he took to the sea, and shortly afterward a child was born to the unmarried daughter of a neighbor. Lake drifted to Japan, where he became a trader in Japanese goods, and made money. He finally returned in 1866 to this country, and on visiting his old home, became interested in a neglected child of eight years named Ettie Sweeney. By consent of the Grandmother, he took charge of the girl's education, and when she graduated at the age of twenty, she came to New York and lived with Lake as his wife, although no ceremony was performed. They lived happily, and a child was born. Lake became involved in a suit with the Mutual Insurance Company over the possession of certain land in Staten Island. He beat the company, and they retaliated, it is charged, by having him indited for taking his own daughter to wife. The only evidence was that the girl had been in the habit of calling him papa. He was convicted. It is thought a rehearing will be granted. His wife went insane under the blow.

COINCIDENCE.

When the poet Robert Browning and his sister were in Switzerland they began to talk in a lonely spot of what they would do in case they should suddenly find the corpse of a murdered person, as in that country it would be treated as a very suspicious and ugly circumstance. Without coming to any conclusion they returned to the hotel, where the next morning they were informed a man had been murdered. They did not stay any longer than was necessary in that place, but subsequently coming back they were pointed out the place where the body was found. The murder had been committed a few minutes after they had been talking, and on almost the exact spot where they stood. The man who found the body was arrested, but killed himself in prison, being unable to bear the thought of a trial, but the murderers escaped. It was the first crime of violence happening in the valley for one hundred years. A gentleman who heard the story said that one day in travelling to the town of Doncaster on business, he saw in the Times what he supposed was an error committed in the office of the paper; that is, the double announcement of his wife's having given birth to a son, the name and date being the same in both notices. On getting out of the train he was introduced by a friend to a gentleman who had just ridden in the same car or carriage with him. He was the other gentleman of the same name whose wife had also given birth to a son, as announced, and had been equally amused and puzzled by the two notices in the paper. And the same day the first gentleman was saluted roughly in the street by a stranger who said the gentleman owed him twenty pounds, but subsequently admitted that he had mistaken him for a friend and creditor whom he resembled.

CASTILE SOAP.

The hard soaps made in this country are almost exclusively from animal fats. In the south of Europe, where the olive grows abundantly, the poorer kinds of olive oil are used for soap-making. Castile soaps are soda and vegetable oil. In making castile soap great care should be taken to avoid an excess of alkali (the soda), only just enough being used to neutralize the oil. On this account the much milder may be used on wounds and other surfaces where common soap would irritate and give pain. The mottled appearance of castile soap is due to a small quantity of solution of copperas (sulphate of iron), which is stirred into it before it hardens; this leaves a blush of oxide of iron in the soap, which when exposed to the air becomes changed to the red oxide. White castile soap is also sold, which is the same as the other without the coloring.

A RARE CURIOSITY.

The Botanical Garden in Washington is possessed of a rare curiosty now in the flower kingdom. It is a Holy Ghost or Dove flower in bloom. This curiosity is from Panama, and blooms annually. The plant grows from a bulb about the size of one's hand, and springs up in a single stalk, which is the size of a pipe-stem, and resembling in color and general appearance a rush, and is about three and one-half feet high.

At the top of the stalk, and for a space of probably six inches along its sides near the top, the flowers are located. They are about two and one-half inches in circumference, white as snow, appearing rather like white wax or marble, and of the shape of a cup, with the mouth inclined outwardly. At the bottom of this cup-shaped blossom is the most lovely specimen of nature's art. It is the dove, which occupies a sitting posture, with wings extending upward, and exhibiting the first half of the dove.

In front of the dove is an altar, slightly sprinkled with diminutive dots of maroon coloring, and at this is the only color about the bloom. At the base of the stalk are three shoots, or long leaves, like the shoots to new corn. There are twenty-five of the cups on the stem, and the fragrance is very delicate and sweet. It is a great curiosity, and is attracting a large number of visitors. The dove specimen is kept in the greenhouse where the air plants are, which are nothing less than blocks of wood, kept in a temperature so hot and damp they are forced to grow and bloom, and these alone are worth seeing.

EVERY LITTLE MAKES A MICKLE.

The collection of cigar-ends, in order to support an orphan house at Lahr, in the Duchy of Baden, has been sedulously going on for many years in Germany, and even German settlers on the other side of the Atlantic regularly send their contributions in kind to the benevolent proprietor of the Hinkende Bote, of Lahr, who was the originator of the scheme. His example has been followed on a less ambitious scale in other towns of his fatherland, and every year a number of poor children receive new suits of clothes or other gifts at Christmas time, the results of the sale of the collected cigar-ends. The Saxon Gewerbeverein, in Dresden, has started a somewhat similar scheme. It begs for worn-out or disused steel pens, and has a whole organization of collectors for making a big heap of these little articles, who work on the principle that "every little makes a mickle." The proceeds are expended upon the technical education of a number of poor lads. The steel used for pen making is so good that it finds a ready sale and a good price if it can be collected in any quantity. The organ of the Verein says that it is used chiefly for watch-springs, the finest knives, and the fabrication of ink.

The law of harvest is to reap more than you sow. Sow an act, and you reap a habit; sow a habit and you reap a character sow a character, and you reap a destiny.

A MAN'S TENDERNESS.

A Cincinnati paper says: In a pottery factory here there is a workman who had one small invalid child at home. He wrought at his trade with exemplary fidelity, being always in the shop with the opening of the day. He managed, however, to bear each evening to the bedside of his "we lad," as he called him, a flower, a bit of ribbon, or a fragment of crimson glass; indeed anything that would lie out on the white counterpane and give a color to the room.

He was a quiet, unsentimental man, but never went home at night without something that would make the wan face light up with joy at his return. He never said to a living soul that he loved that boy so much. Still he went on patiently loving him, and by-and-by he moved that whole shop into positively real but unconscious fellowship with him. The workmen made curious little jars and cups upon their wheels, and painted diminutive pictures down their sides before they stuck them in the corners of the kiln at burning time. One brought some fruit in the bulge of his apron, and another engravings in a rude scrap-book.

Not one of them whispered a word, for this solemn thing was not to be talked about. They put them in the old man's hat, where he found them; he understood all about it, and, believe it or not, as you will, but it is a fact that the entire pottery full of men, of rather coarse fibre by nature, grew quiet as the months drifted, becoming gentle and kind, and some dropped swearing as the weary look on the patient fellow-worker's face told them beyond mistake that the inevitable shadow was drawing nearer. Every day some one now did a piece of work for him and put it on the sanded plank to dry, so that he could come later and go earlier. So, when the bell tolled and the little coffin came out of the lowly door, right around the corner, out of sight, there stood one hundred stalwart workingmen from the pottery with their clean clothes on, most of whom gave half a day's time for the privilege of taking part in the simple procession and following to the grave that small burden of a child which probably not one had ever seen.

THE COCOANUT AS FOOD.

The Fiji Times, in a recent article, calls attention to the immense utility of the cocoanut as food rations, and the valuable qualities which it has for sustaining nutrition. An instance is given in the case of a vessel that once left San Francisco with four hundred passengers for Sydney, and which, in consequence of running short of stores, had to put in at Samse, where a large quantity of cocoanuts were obtained. During the remainder of the passage very heavy weather was encountered, in which the vessel became waterlogged, and only reached Sydney after a perilous journey of eighty days, during which time all the provisions ran short, and men, women and children were fed only upon cocoanuts, being at last reduced to one per diem each adult. Notwithstanding the diet, not a life was lost, and not a single case of sickness occurred, all the passengers looking in a healthy and well-nourished condition. In another instance two men drifted in a whale boat on to Quairs Island, where they remained for seven years before they were taken off. They had no food beyond a chance flying fish and cocoanuts, and yet when rescued were in excellent condition and had gained in weight.

A Fiendish Act.

Last Thursday morning ugly rumors were afloat concerning a dastardy attempt to blow up the residence of Frank E. Farnham, Esq. No information, however, could be obtained from the police, who, in company with officers Shaw and Batchelder of the District police, were at work on the case and as a result "Billy" Hayes was arrested Monday, charged with the revolting crime. The best authority gives the circumstances as follows: Last Wednesday evening after Mr. Farnham had retired, a team drove into his yard, and at the request of Mr. Farnham, a servant girl stepped to the door and demanded what was wanted, to which she received no reply until the question had been repeated several times, when a short answer was made by the party Short as it was Mr. Farnham, his wife, and the girl recognized it as the voice of Mr. Hayes, who had been to the house during the day and had had a conversation with Mrs. Farnham. Mr. Farnham stepped to the window and recognized Mr. Hayes as he was entering his team. Upon dressing and making an examination he found in one corner of the shed near the barn, an oval substance covered with a yellow oil silk, this torpedo was connected by a fuse several feet long, and near the substance was a bottle of kerosene oil. The end of the fuse showed that an attempt had been made to light it, as it was considerably smoked. The substance proved to be atlas powder, a dangerous explosive used in blasting rocks. A little of it was burned on a piece of paper by the police and a flame several inches high shot into the air. The case came before Judge Merrill yesterday, Mr. Hayes not being able to appear he was held in the sum of $5000 for his appearance to-day.

The examination of Mr. Hayes came up this afternoon before Justice Merrill. Wm. D. Northend appeared for Mr. Hayes. The court room was crowded and the examination for the government was conducted by S. C. Bancroft, Esq. The first witness was Mr. Farnham, who testified that on the night of Wednesday, Feb. 6, he went home early and to bed by 9.15. Shortly after he heard the noise of a carriage driving into the yard. He called to his wife to see who was there. She said "they don't speak." Mr. F. said "make them speak." His wife opened the door and twice asked what was wanted. Finally they got the reply "What do you think?" Mr. F. said "That's Hayes' voice, shut the door and I'll dress and come down." He did so, and the hired girl said the man had come from the shed, and had driven off. Mr. F. then went out of doors to the shed, and found the cartridge and fuse, which was exhibited, also a bottle, which was wrapped in a paper. He put the fuse out, and told the girl to go to Mr. Buxton's for help. He came and brought a shot gun. The police were sent for, and came up. Meantime a man came up, and Mr. Farnham saw him behind a post and afterwards behind a tree. They all saw him. When the steps of the police were heard the man walked away. Mr. F. described the horse and carriage—the horse had a peculiar habit of dropping his head below the level of his body. The cartridge and kerosene was within six inches of the partition on a board floor. The fuse was coiled and had the appearance as if previously arranged. He knew it was Hayes' voice in the carriage. Had heard it often. It was a peculiar voice. The form behind the tree was that of a short, stout man. Came once within 15 feet. The man was William Hayes. Mr. F. said in the forenoon of the same day he was at the Washington House, or the grocery attached thereto, to take possession of goods under a mortgage, belonging to C. L. Cotton & Co., in the possession of Butler. He had with him Officer Sweeney and Wilson the expressman. Mr. Hayes was there. The store was locked, and Hayes told Farnham he could not get the goods. Wilson was ordered to break down the door, when Hayes became enraged and said "Your place may get broken into some time." Finally the door was opened, and Hayes paid the bill and Farnham went away. The cross examination of Mr. F. was very severe, but failed to shake the testimony.

Mrs. Sarah P. Farnham was called and testified that she was in her sitting room and heard Mr. Farnham say in effect that a carriage had come into the yard. She did not hear it. She went to the door, and said to Mr. F., "They don't speak." She stepped to the door and together with the girl saw the carriage, with one horse after repeated asking of what's wanted, the reply came, "What do you think?" Mr. F. said, "That's Hayes, come in and shut the door." Mrs. Farnham corroborated the testimony of her husband in nearly every particular respecting the finding of the cartridge, etc. Mrs. F. also saw the man behind the post. That day about noon, two men came up to the door of the house asking for Mr. Farnham. She identified one of them as the prisoner (Mr. Hayes) and the other as his attorney. She did not know them at the time. She also recognized this man behind the post as the man who had called at her house. She had no doubt of it.

Cross examination tried to convince Mrs. F. that she could not see any one, and tried to confuse her as to time, but without effect.

Miss Bowen, the hired girl, testified that between 9.30 and 10, she heard a carriage drive up in the yard. She tried to ascertain what they wanted, and finally some one said "What do you think?" She saw the carriage, and there was one man in it. She was sure of that. Miss Bowen gave the same testimony about the finding of the fuse, sending for Mr. Buxton, and the arrival of the police.

The cross examination of this witness elicited nothing. She admitted that the matter had been talked over, but Mr. F. told her to tell the truth. Mr. Northend, it may be said, had the witnesses all excluded until they had themselves testified. In view of this the testimony of these witnesses, corroborating each other so conclusively, was very strong.

S. P. Buxton testified to being called to go to Mr. Farnham's. He was returning to his home. Was met by Miss Bowen and went directly. Went to the shed and saw the explosive. Went home afterwards, and got a gun, and took it to Mr. Farnham. Then went for the police. When he went towards home first, he met a team, a top buggy and small horse, on Central street, coming towards the Square.

Officer Sweeney testified to going to Butler's grocery store to make a seizure. Hayes was there and excited. Heard him say to Farnham "He had as much right to go and break Farnham's house as he had to break open Butler's store."

Frank Wilson testified to being employed by Farnham to go to Butler's. Saw Hayes, who did some talking. The most that could be got out of this witness was that "Hayes would have satisfaction out of Farnham's hide."

James Hannah testified that he was bookkeeper for Geo. H. Sampson & Co. He examined the explosives and said it was Atlas powder, used for drills, &c. His firm were sole agents for it in New England. Had sold it to Mr. Hayes. Referred to his book, and found the charge which he read to the Court in full. It was of the date of Sept. 3, 1883. This powder is used for blasting purposes. The firm is the only agent in Boston or vicinity for its sale.

Samuel G. Brier, testified that he lived in Saugus; was a contractor for rock blasting. The explosive shown to him was pronounced atlas powder. It was used for blasting purposes. Its strength in rock was from 3 to 8 times as powerful as powder. Left on top of a rock, it would effect what could never be effected by powder. He explained how it was lighted, &c.

Thomas W. Peasley testified to going up to Farnham's about 10.15 p. m. Wednesday night. Saw no one. He called at Hayes', Thursday evening. Was told he was not in. Monday night went with Shaw, Batchelder and officer Sweeney.

J. E. Shaw testified that he was a state detective. Had an interview with Hayes Monday night. Found him in bed. There was no physician there, but sent for one, who pronounced him too ill to be removed. He had some conversation with him; asked him if he was out Wednesday. Hayes said he was in the afternoon. Admitted some trouble with Farnham. Said he was not out Wednesday night, but went up stairs to bed. Said he used dynamite, but had none in his possession. Kept it in the shanty at the ledge. Said the place had been broken into and caps and fuse stolen. Mr. Shaw says he went away, and came the next morning, arrested him, and had the Justice there, who held him for appearance. That morning he asked Hayes why he had not reported to the police after his property was stolen. Hayes said he wanted to keep it quiet so that he could "get on to the man." It was about six weeks ago. The bottle containing the kerosene was produced. It was a peculiar one, and Mr. Shaw had one just like it, which he obtained at the Washington House. He had visited every one else in town and could find none like it, save in one place and this party bought it of Hayes.

Officer Sweeney testified that he went to Hayes' Thursday at 5 P. M. and was told by the bartender that he was out.

This closed the testimony for the government. Mr. Northend called Dr. Shanahan. He testified that he had attended Mr. Hayes Jan. 29, Feb. 2, 5, 8, 9 and 10. Testified that Hayes was ill, and had been called during the times indicated.

On cross examination by Mr. Bancroft, he admitted that he advised Hayes to be careful to say little to the officers except under advice of counsel.

Mr. Northend said if his Honor would hold Hayes on this evidence, he desired to argue the case, and it was continued to Friday morning at 9 a. m., when the arguments will be heard.

THE COMMITTEE on biennial elections and sessions of the Legislature have reported in its favor, a minority report, understood to have been written by Mr. Rantoul of Salem, being also presented.

At the hearing before the Committee the argument in favor of biennials was well presented by Col. Haskell, late of the Governor's Council, and also for many years secretary of the Republican State Central Committee. The two leading points in its favor are that it has been successfully tried in nearly every state in the Union, and removes the confusion and disturbance to business, incident to frequent campaigns in the State. We believe this to be a matter that should be intelligently considered by every voter, so that they may know what they are voting for or against, if it is submitted to them in the form of an amendment to the constitution. The proposition is to have sessions of the Legislature once in two years, together with the election of Governor and the rest of the State officers which are now elected annually. It was claimed by Mr. Haskell, and supported by competent testimony from different states, that the experiment had been a success in the states where it had received a trial, and it is well known that Massachusetts stands almost entirely alone in the custom of annual elections. The testimony of other States should have due weight. It has been the custom here to elect the sheriff, district attorney and other county officers, for a longer term than one year, and no harm has ever come that we can see, to the State or the liberties of any of its people, by their service. This was well stated by Gov. Robinson in his message.

It has been said by the opponents of biennials, that the biennial sessions and elections rest on a different basis. This is to a certain extent true. And the argument in favor of less frequent elections is certainly the stronger. Everyone knows the disturbance to general business occasioned by a presidential campaign. This same disturbance in a less degree, is observable in a heated campaign, such as we had last fall. Such campaigns are liable not to be of unfrequent occurrence. Parties are more evenly divided in the State, than they were years ago, and it has come to be the case that politics is made a business with too many people. We believe in the exercise of the elective franchise by the people as often as possible, but the exercise of such privilege in its fullest extent means more than the simple deposit of a ballot. It means attendance in primary conventions and caucuses—something that is of more importance, as elections are now conducted, than the vote itself—with all the discussion and canvassing preliminary to such elections. Such things are necessary and unavoidable, and in many cases considerable feeling is manifested by political opponents. To say that such ought not to be the case is no answer—while the fact remains. A longer time between elections allows the healing of such dissensions, and gives freedom for the pursuit of the legitimate avocations of the voters of the state.

Another thing can be said in favor of less frequent legislation—and our liquor law is an illustration right to the point. No sooner has one law been in operation than the next Legislature has altered and tinkered it. We don't believe any law that has been passed on this subject has had a fair trial. There is some special legislation that might suffer from biennial sessions—but in comparison with the useless amendments and constant change in our laws before they are fairly in operation, we believe the good far overbalances the evil.

We honestly respect, however, the opinions of those who believe biennials unnecessary. But we are not in sympathy with the attempt on their part, not only to oppose the biennial elections and sessions, but the submission of the question to the people. They virtually say to the voters of this State that they are not competent to decide the question. Instead of the biennial being a subversion of the liberty of the people, the unwillingness on the part of the opponents of the measure to have it voted on by the people is a still greater subversion of their liberty, and one which they should by all means resist. It is a confession of weakness at the outset. We believe fully in the rights of the people. We believe when they are called upon to vote, whether they vote as we do or not, that they will do so intelligently, if the matter is properly presented. We therefore are heartily in favor of its submission to the people.

The anniversary of the birthday of the late Geo. Peabody will occur next Monday.

The Ladies' Aid Society of the Baptist church will meet with Mrs. Ferguson on Grove street to-morrow evening.

Mr. Joseph Peabody has been employed at the bakery on Lowell street, twenty-two consecutive years.

Our streets are lighted by 46 gas lamps and 153 oil lamps. The oil lamps give the most satisfaction, as they burn all night.

Next Sunday evening there will be a temperance meeting at Peabody Institute, to be addressed by Mrs. Louise Barton of Lawrence, a vice president of Elm Street Reform club. The public are invited. It was the intention to hold this meeting in the new opera house, but on account of the Grand Army fair it could not be held there.

The total number of births for the year was 245; there was two pair of twins. Of the whole number, seven were born out of town. There were sixteen cases where both of the parents were born in Peabody; 58 where one o the parents were born in town; 115 where both parents were born in foreign countries.

Gov. Robinson before the Mass. Press Association said: "The weekly paper that has here a more numerous representation occupies a peculiar position. The sphere of the weekly paper is one of great power. It has an influence that the daily press does not possess. Local weeklies are not thrown aside, but kept for reperusal.

The English sparrows are not the only birds that are spending the winter in these frozen latitudes, but there have lately come visitors of a new variety, somewhat larger than the sparrows, more in size and shape like a robin, with slate colored breasts, black wings, blunt bills and long tails, some of them having reddish tints about the neck and head. They go in flocks, are social and domestic-like in appearance, and seek localities that are somewhat sheltered. It has been suggested that they are Canada linnets possibly driven thus far toward the South by the severe weather in their native climate, but they are probably the well-known blue grosbeaks which now and then appear in winter.

A correspondent from North Milford writes us that the longest verse in the Bible is the 9th verse of the 8th chapter of Esther, it containing 90 words. The same correspondent also enters complaint against the Rutledge Co., which advertised to give a watch to the person sending them the information prior to Dec. 15, that they do not live up to their agreement.—Milford Journal.

The first part of the above paragraph is new to us, but the latter part is perfectly well known to several of their victims in this vicinity and ought to be to the public generally.

Poet's Corner.

Ode to a Baby.

See the pretty baby,
Eyes so big and blue.
Knows a great deal, maybe,
But only says, "Oo, oo."

Hands like balls of cotton,
Feet so pink and fat;
Where could the kid have gotten
Hands and feet like that?

Cheeks so round and chuffy,
And such a—such a nose!
Hair so short and fluffy,
And gracious, see those toes!

Looks at everybody.
As if it knew them all;
Does it want some toddy!
Is it going to squa'l?

Yes, it's going to do it,
Listen, how it hollers!
Mamma wouldn't sell it
For $200,000,000.

A Valentine.

BY WALTER LEARNED.

I'm poor in this world's goods, sweetheart,
Of gold I have no store;
Yet grant me but this single prayer
And I'll not crave for more.
For there's one word which thou canst speak
To me, my Valentine,
'Twould make me richer than a king,—
'Twould make the whole world mine.

Could I with diamonds deck thy hair.
Or load thine arms with gold,
There's naught on earth, that's rich or rare
But should its charm unfold
To grace thy form; but neither gold
Nor gauds, nor gems are mine;
Yet there's one word which thou canst speak,—
'Twould make the whole world mine.

Speak, then! Thy lover listening waits
A beggar at thy door.
A prince's ransom 'tis I ask,
A kingdom, aye, and more.
And yet 'tis but a single word,
But by St. Valentine!—
Whisper it in mine ear but once,—
'Twill make the whole world mine.

The Editor's Wife.

EUGENE FIELD,

When the editor comes from the office at night,
At a very late hour, in a dubious plight,
The impression prevails, and the story is told
That an editor's wife can be always cajoled
With a fib about "bridges" and "broken down press"—
But we who have been there are free to confess
That when husbands are late and suspicions are rife,
It is best to own up to the editor's wife.

But, all jesting aside— since I dimly surmise
That the ladies regard me with sinister eyes—
Who more than the wife of our bosom deserves
The sweet veneration her beauty preserves?
And the years may roll by and our heads may grow white
Her beauty is ever as pure and as bright
As when she faced poverty, sorrow and strife,
And blessed our estate as an editor's wife.

You may drink to your trade and your creatures of fame—
I raise not my glass till I hear her sweet name;
'Tis to her who alone uncomplainingly bears
The all of her sorrows and most of our cares—
Whose wealth of sweet influence subtly inspires
Our grandest achievements and noblest desires—
'Tis to her I would drink—our companion in life—
God's best inspiration, the editor's wife.

Selected Story.

The Lover's Quarrel.

BY SAFIZ.

'Never, while I live,' said Miss Rashleigh, 'never while I live, will I see your face again!'

She meant it when she said it; and as she spoke, she threw her betrothal ring towards her lover, who had offended her.

It missed him and rolled down upon the floor and over the sill of an open china closet—one of those old-fashioned closets that used to stand on either side of the mantel-piece.

She did not notice where it rolled; he did though; and after she had left the room, he turned to pick it up. The ring she had worn would always be precious to him.

Miss Rashleigh went straight to her own room, as miserable a girl as ever lived, and a moment later Grandmother Rashleigh hustled into the drawing-room, pushed the open closet door to, picked up the fallen magazine; set the annuals and books of poetry straight on the table, pulled down the shades, arranged the chairs mathematically against the wall, and bustled out again.

'I've had these things 50 years,' she said to herself, 'and there's Cornelia and her beau with no more respect for them than if they were so much lumber.'

Then she closed the door behind her, and went away to her own room upstairs, where a fine silk patchwork quilt was in the frame, a surprise for said Cornelia.

Grandma Rashleigh gave every young person of the family something of her own manufacture on his or her wedding day.

'Now,' the old lady had said a dozen times to Tripheny King, who was helping her; 'I rather think Cornelia will have the best thing I've done; and there's a bit in it of every handsome silk there's ever been in the family, and of her father's and grandfather's wedding vests.'

'Yes'm, it's a real memorial quilt,' said Tripheny. 'It takes you, mum, to plan such things.

The quilt was finished and bound that afternoon, and Tripheny's joy of quilting being over she went home. But she carried about the village the news that she 'was sure all was over between Miss Rashleigh and Mr. Spear. She'd heard Cornelia saying something to her grandma, and the old lady was furious.'

'He would never have done that if he had cared for me, you know, grandma,' Cornelia was saying at that moment.

'Stuff and nonsense! He loves the ground you walk on!' said the old lady.

'You'll never get such another, Cornelia!'

'I shall never marry at all; I hate men!' Cornelia answered.

And then her grandmother made the house too hot to hold her, and she went to her mother's, her usual course when she fell out with grandma.

Three days passed. At the end of the third Piety Pratt stepped in at Mrs. Rashleigh's—young Mrs. Rashleigh, as they called her, though she was nearly 50, for grandma was old Mrs. Rashleigh.

'I expect you'll feel upset when I tell you the news, Cornelia,' said she. 'You've been too cruel this time—he, he, he! Orville Spear hasn't been heard of since he was at your house. His mother says he went over to explain and make up, and he never came back—he, he! She thought maybe he'd stepped over to his brother's, but he hadn't—he, he! I reckon he's drowned himself!'

'I don't know why the whole town should talk over my affairs and every meddling old maid giggle about them!' cried Cornelia.

Piety jumped to her feet, seized her parasol and turned towards the door.

'Good afternoon, Miss Cornelia and Mrs. Rashleigh,' she said, with a contemptuous courtesy. 'I'll remember my manners, if other folks forget theirs. Only there's other folks as likely to be old maids as me, and I fancy it's Mrs. Spear's affair now if anything has happened to her boy!'

Away flounced Miss Pratt.

'You've put Piety in a rage, Cornelia,' said Mrs. Rashleigh. 'That's a pity; she has a long tongue.'

But Cornelia was crying.

'Oh, mother, dear,' she sobbed, 'it isn't true, is it? Orville did feel dreadfully. Won't you see, mother?'

But at this moment Sally, the servant girl from Grandma Rashleigh's came flying into the room, without any more warning than if she had been shot from a gun.

'The old missus says you are to come over at once, both you ladies!' she cried, standing before Mrs. Rashleigh, and repeating her lesson like a parrot. 'There's something of importance, and you're needed at wonst.'

'Get your bonnet. Cornelia,' said her mother. 'I'll just put on this sun-hat. What is it Sally; do you know?'

'I know it's something dreadful. Missus is almost wild, and there's lot of folks there. Something about Mr. Spear.'

The two ladies said no more. They hurried away together, and, entering grandma's parlor, found there assembled more of the members of the Spear family, and a friend or two besides.

Orville had indeed disappeared. He had never been home since his visit to Cornelia, and now the alarmed relatives were anxious to get all the information they could regarding the interview between Orville and Cornelia.

'I had reason to be angry, Mrs. Spear,' said Cornelia, proudly, good reason, and I took off my ring and gave it back, and went out of the room. That is all I know, I don't know when he went or where. I—I thought he wouldn't mind so much. I believed he had stopped caring about me.'

'He ought to now, at all events,' said grandma.

'My boy is dead, I'm sure. I shall have the pond dragged!' said Mrs. Spear, amidst her tears. 'He left all his money at home. He wouldn't have gone traveling without a change of clothes. Oh, you wicked girl!'

'I hope,' cried the eldest Miss Spear, 'that he'll haunt you!'

'I could kill you, you hateful thing!' cried the youngest Miss Spear.

Cornelia had kept up bravely until now; but when her two friends turned upon her thus, she gave a little scream, and fell over on the sofa. She was in a dead swoon, and the water they sprinkled in her face did not bring her to.

Grandma grew frightened.

'I hope it isn't an attack of heart disease,' she said. 'Poor child! she looks as if she were dead.'

'Oh, don't say that!' cried the mother.

They gathered around Cornelia and did all they could for her, and soon she recovered and sat up, but all her pride was gone.

'Oh, dear! oh, dear!' she sobbed. 'I wish I had died! I wish I had never come to! Oh, Orville! Orville! what has become of you?'

'Oh, oh!' moaned the mother.

'Oh! oh!' moaned the sisters.

And Cornelia's head fell back again.

'Emma, get the lavender out of the china closet,' said grandma to her daughter. 'Quick! It's on the corner shelf.'

Mrs. Rashleigh rushed to the closet.

'It won't open,' she cried, wildly.

'It's a patent lock,' said grandma; 'locks as it shuts. Here's the key.'

And Mrs. Rashleigh flew back to the door, opened it and uttered a shriek.

There on the floor, huddled up under the shelf, lay poor Orville Spear.

He was white and limp.

Cornelia sat and stared at him in the most awful way. She thought him dead, but the more experienced matron saw that he was yet living.

Sally was sent post haste for the doctor; and there, in Mrs. Rashleigh's drawing-room, he found Cornelia and Orville lying quite unconscious, like Romeo and Juliet in the scene at the tomb, and the rest of the party in a state of bewilderment and terror past description.

At last, however, both were conscious and seated in arm-chairs, regarding each other, while the observers kept silent, and Mr. Orville Spear uttered the first words.

'Of all the confounded fools——'

'Who, dear?' asked his mother.

'Me,' said Orville, regardless of grammar. 'Who shut me in?'

'What were you in the closet for?' asked grandma, with a guilty conscience.

'To pick something up that rolled there,' said Orville.

'The ring?' asked Cornelia frantically.

'Yes, the ring,' said Mr. Spear. 'More fool I! Some one banged the door to. I shouted and howled and no one heard me.'

'Oh, oh, oh, oh!' shrieked Cornelia. 'I believe you hid there just to kill me, for no other purpose than out of revenge.'

'You banged the door on me,' said Mr. Spear. 'A jealous woman will do anything.'

'I banged the door, Orville!' said old Mrs. Rashley. 'I! You'd left everything flying. I just pushed it as I passed, and you ought to bless your stars that you are alive, for people don't go into the drawing room sometimes for a fortnight in this small family. We use the parlor much more, and I am deaf and so is old Hepsiba, and you might have died there. Yes, and you'd have killed him, Cornelia,' added the old lady, 'throwing his pretty diamond ring on the floor!'

'Oh!' moaned Cornelia, 'Oh!'

'It wasn't her fault. I was a confounded fool all through!' cried Orville 'I knew that closet had a spring lock. No; don't blame Cornelia.'

'I shall always blame myself!' sighed Cornelia. 'Oh, how pale you are!'

'And how pale you are, Cornelia!' sighed Orville. 'Did you really care when you thought I was dead?'

'Ladies,' said Grandma Rashleigh, 'now that Orville has had his wine and biscuit, and is getting on, let us go into the other room, and leave these two young folks to talk things over together.'

She led the way, the others followed. When the tea bell rang soon after, Orville and Cornelia came out of the drawing room arm in arm, and the wedding day was fixed.

On Roller Skates.

"What broke your pa up at the skating rink?" asked the grocery man.

"Oh, everything broke him up," said the bad boy. "He is split up so ma buttons the top of his pants to his collar button like a bicycle rider. Well, he had no business to tell me and my chum he used to be the best skater in North America when he was a boy. He said he skated once from Albany to New York in an hour and eighty minutes. Me and my chum thought if pa was such a terror on skates, we would get him to put on roller skates, and enter him as "the great unknown" and clean out the gang.

We told pa that he must remember that roller skates were different from ice skates, and maybe he couldn't skate on them; but he said it didn't make any difference as long as they were skates, that he would just paralize the whole crowd. So we got a pair of big roller skates for him, and while we were strapping them on pa, he looked at the skaters glide around on the smooth waxed floor just as though they were greased. Then pa looked at the skates on his feet after they were fastened, sort of forlorn-like—the way a horse thief does when they put the shackles on his legs—and I told pa if he was afraid he couldn't skate with them, we would take them off; but he said he would beat anything there or bust a suspender.

Then we straightened pa up, and pointed him towards the middle of the room, and he said "leg-go" and we just give him a little push to start him and he began to go. Well, by gosh, you'd a-died to have seen pa try to stop. You see, you can't stick in your heel and stop, like you can on ice skates; and pa soon found that out, and he began to turn sideways, and then he threw out his arms and walked on his heels, and he lost his hat, and his eyes began to stick out, 'cause he was going right towards an iron post. One arm caught the post and he circled around it a few times, and then he let go, and began to fall, and, sir, he kept falling all across the room, and everybody got out of the way except a girl, and pa grabbed her by the polonaise, like a drowning man grabs at straws, though there was'nt any straws in her polonaise as I know of, but pa just pulled her along as though she was done up in a shawl strap, and his feet went out from under him, and he struck on his shoulders and kept a-going, with the girl dragging along like a bundle of clothes.

If pa had another pair of roller skates on his shoulders, and casters on his ears, he couldn't have slid along any better. Pa is a short big man, and as he was rolling along on his back, he looked like a sofa with casters on being pushed across the room by a girl. Finally pa came to the wall and had to stop; and the girl fell right across him, with her roller skates in his neck, and she called him an old brute and told him if he didn't let go of her polonaise she would murder him. Just then my chum and me got there and amputated pa from the girl and lifted him up, and told him for heaven's sake to let us take off his skates 'cause he couldn't skate more than a cow, and pa was mad, and said for us to let him alone and he could skate all right. Well, sir, I was ashamed. An old man like pa ought to know better than to try to be a boy. This last time pa said he was going to try and spread himself. Somehow the skates got turned around sideways on his feet, and his feet got to going in different directions, and pa's feet were getting so far apart that I was afraid I would have two pa's, half the size, with one leg apiece. I tried to get him to take up a collection of his legs and get them both in the same ward, but his arms flew around and one hit me on the nose, and I thought if he wanted to strike the best friend he had, he could run his old legs himself.

When he began to separate, I could hear the bones crack, but maybe it was his pants, anyway he came down on the floor like one of those fellows in a circus who spreads himself, and he kept going and finally he surrounded an iron post with his legs and stopped; and he looked pale, and the proprietor of the rink told pa if he wanted to give a flying trapeze performance he would have to go to a gymnasium, and he could not skate on his shoulders any more, 'cause the other skaters were afraid of him.

Then pa got up and steadied himself and tried to kick the man and both heels went up to wonct, and pa turned a back somersault and struck right on his vest front. I guess it knocked the breath out of him, for he didn't speak for a few minutes, and then he wanted to go home, and we put him in a street car, and he laid down on the hay and rode home.

Oh, the work we had to get pa's clothes off! He had cricks in his back and everywhere, and ma was away to one of the neighbors to look at the presents, and I had to put liniment on pa, and I made a mistake and got a bottle of furniture polish, and put it on pa and rubbed it in, and when ma came home pa smelled like a coffin at a charity funeral, and ma said there was no way of getting that varnish off pa till it wore off; pa says holidays are a condemned nuisance anyway. He will have to stay in the house all this week.

The engagement of Margaret Mather this season creates great enthusiasm wherever she appears. In nearly every city she begins where she left off last year, and in most places the receipts of the box office exceed those of any other attraction ever before given. At Toronto, Can., at the close of her engagement, the audience became wildly enthusiastic, called her before the curtain three times, and finally demanded a speech. The gifted little woman responded something as follows:—

Ladies and Gentlemen,—In attempting to respond to the great compliment you pay me this evening, I find myself bereft of words to express my gratitude. Only He who notes the fall of the sparrow can understand what my feelings were on Monday evening last, when I appeared before you a stranger and in a character made famous by one of the loveliest and most gifted women that this nation has been blessed with, Miss Adelaide Neilson. While this generation lasts the names of Neilson and Juliet shall be inseparable, and the memory of the tragic closing of her eventful life, which had scarcely reached its noon, will bring a feeling of sadness to all hearts, be they English or American. I came among you a stranger, and in parting my feelings are what no words of mine can express. If a lifetime's devotion to the study of my art can make me worthy of the encouragement you have so generously tendered, that service shall be cheerfully given to render myself so worthy. Before saying adieu finally I wish to express myself as deeply sensible of the uniform courtesy of the daily press, which with but one exception, has been in its treatment all that an earnest spirit could wish. The remembrance of my Toronto visit will be one of the happiest in my experience, and a perennial source of strength and effort to the best achievements in my chosen profession.

She was listened to with breathless silence, and her words were followed by a scene of enthusiasm the like of which was never witnessed there before except in the case of the lamented Neilson. Miss Mather will appear at the new Opera House, Peabody, March 22d, in her wonderful impersonation of Juliet. Particulars later.

L. A. 2947, K. of L., of this town at its meeting, last Thursday evening, passed resolutions of respect for the loss of the great advocate of humanity, Wendell Phillips.

SELLING

BOOTS AND SHOES

— AT —

MANUFACTURER'S PRICES.

A DECIDED SUCCESS.

A great many firms in Lynn are puzzled at the large attendance and great success of our special sales, simply because these same firms have failed in their own efforts to attract attention and accomplish the same results. The reasons are plain, for we assert that our establishments can show many advantages over others. We give the following, which are convincing:

First.

Enormous stock. The immense stock of our wholesale house, together with our two retail stores, 84 Market street and 23 Market Square, make a stock to draw from five times larger than all the other shoe stores in Lynn combined.

Second.

Low Rents. While our competitors are handicapped by having to pay exorbitant rents, we with our three stores, have to pay rent only on one—a fact, the significance of which as bearing upon our ability to sell for less than others, will be apparent to all.

Third

Wholesale. Our wholesale trade, which now extends to every city and town of any importance in New England, obliges us to carry an immense stock and gives us an advantage in buying entirely beyond the reach of our competitors. For where they buy of the jobbers in small lots, we buy direct of the manufacturers, and that we can buy as low as the large Boston jobbers is abundantly attested by the fact that we are able to meet and compete with them on their own grounds and build up a wholesale trade which is constantly increasing.

Fourth.

One Price. Marked in plain figures on every pair of boots and shoes, guarantees low prices.—Equal treatment to all classes and shows at a glance the quality of the goods.

Fifth.

Truthful Representations. No misrepresentations are tolerated. Goods are sold for just what they are. Some stores adopt the "bait" plan, advertising great slaughter, immense bargains, etc. Call in half an hour after such stores open and in nearly every instance the salesman has the old story to tell you: "All gone;" "haven't your size;" "too late;" "very sorry, but we have had such a rush they are all out.—Can't we show you something else?" We have no such nonsense. It won't do.

Sixth.

Quick Sales and Small Profits. Quick sales are the life of a successful business. Small profits are sufficient when the business is done on live business principles. You save one profit by buying of the wholesaler.

Seventh.

Exchanging Goods or Refunding Money. When any dissatisfaction occurs because the selection does not please in every particular, the goods, if returned uninjured in a reasonable time, can be exchanged; and it matters not of whom it was selected, any salesman at leisure will pay careful attention to the customer. In case nothing is found to please, the cash will be cheerfully refunded.

Eighth.

Prompt Cash Payments. We are so conscious of the overwhelming advantages we possess both in buying and selling we have no hesitation in asserting that no prudent purchaser can afford to buy anything anywhere else until they have looked through our stock and got our prices. Ready money in our hands enables us to buy goods in large quantities at figures that the average retailer knows nothing about. To-day we stand simply as the connecting link between the manufacturer and consumer.

We have an immense surplus stock which we are going to close out during this sale. In order to accomplish this purpose we know at the outset that it will be necessary to offer sufficient inducements which we are determined to do. Consequently, in this instance as well as all others, we appeal directly to the interests of every purchaser, regarding that as decidedly more potent than volumes of positive assertions.

TO THE PUBLIC!

We have always possessed the idea that the poor man's hard earned dollar should purchase just as much as a like amount of his wealthy neighbor.—WE BELIEVE IT. WE ACT UPON IT. Three years ago it was hard to convince customers that a firm in the FURNITURE business would or could make such a departure. WE DID, and our business to-day is a pleasing monument of its kindly reception by the people of Lynn, Swampscott, Saugus, Nahant, Marblehead, Peabody, Danvers, Lynnfield, Salem, &c., to whom we are more than thank ful.

NEWPORT, Nov. 12, 1883.
J. D. & J. W. EATON, Sirs: Enclosed please find check fo unt of bill for CRAWFORD RANGE and Ware. It arrived last Friday noon, and we had it set up and a fire in it before four o'clock. We are more than pleased with it. All our cooking was done Saturday morning. It usually takes all day to do it. My wife thinks she shall take to cooking again herself, as it is real fun to cook with such a Range as the CRAWFORD. Hoping you may sell a great many more of them, and every purchaser be as well pleased as we are. I remain yours. very truly,

The Danvers Insane Hospital.

MESSRS. EDITORS:

As it may be of interest to your many readers to learn something of this famous hospital, will you please insert the following in the columns of the PRESS: On the crest of a sightly hill, opposite a little station of the Eastern R. R., called Asylum, in the town of Danvers, rises a vast range of immense brick buildings of the Elizabethan style of architecture. From the valley, two hundred or more feet below, the towers attached to each of the buildings are to be seen sharply outlined against the sky. This group of buildings gives one the impression of a city set upon a hill. From the station a superb road sweeps up and around the hill. Following the driveway in its sinuous windings is a foot path the average grade being 3 1-2 feet in 100. Arriving at the summit, which, thanks to the easy grade, can be reached without much fatigue, the eye takes in, in its wholeness, the collossal structure, or rather series of structures. In the middle is a central edifice whose tower rises 100 feet from the ground, and 357 feet from the (tide) marsh level, making a conspicuous landmark for many miles around. On either side of the central building are four wings or buildings (for the male and female patients) making eight in all.

No other hospital for the insane in the Union has a more salubrious site. There is no danger of miasma or dampness. Everywhere is pure cool air. Sunlight and breezes have unimpeded access. Monadnock and Wachusett mountains are in plain sight, and the sun comes up in the morning from the broad blue plain of ocean whose glittering expanse, with now and then a sail or black trail of steamer smoke, is never hid from view save by fogs. Villages and spires dot the landscape. The land and marine prospect cannot be surpassed on the coast. Here, where nature exerts always her most curative influence, is placed this hospital for the northeastern part of the state, authorized by the General Court. The Commonwealth has made magnificent grants to this institution. The large expenditures incurred have excited not a little comment, both in the press and on the lower floor of the Legislature. Charges of extravagance and hints of jobbing have been made and uttered, but a careful inquiry fails to substantiate either. The extravagance is in the nature of the plans, but not in the manner of their execution; it is not denied that the hospital is a costly one. On going over the buildings, not only the legitimate expenditure of every dollar is to be seen, but that it is the cheapest and most thoroughly built of any similar structure in the U. S. Everything is well done, and nothing has been neglected.

The system of ventilation at Danvers is claimed to be more complete than that adopted in the great and more costly hospitals in other places. At the new hospital at Worcester the corridors are heated and unventilated, save through the rooms of the patients opening therefrom; the rooms are not directly heated but depend for warmth upon the corridors. At Danvers an entirely different system prevails. Each room and corridor is heated and ventilated separately. The buildings might have every door and window closed, and yet the air be kept pure and in active circulation. The air which is supplied to the buildings first enters the boiler house, being sucked in by powerful fans, worked by steam. This air passes over a surface of heated steam pipes, being slightly warmed. The fans then force it through subterranean air-ducts, substantially built, to the several buildings. There are nine of these ducts in all, and large enough to admit two men to work abreast. On entering each building the air is again heated to a higher degree of temperature by passing over high pressure radiators, fed with steam from the boiler house, the air then passing to the several rooms and corridors. It is so arranged that the attendants only can regulate the heat. Now as to ventilation. In each room there is a ventilator, and in each corridor, several. These connect by pipes with the ventilating tower of the buildings, each having one. The diameter is five, and its height 80 feet. Into this continually ascending air column all the impure air is poured and carried far above the roof tops. The towers while serving this purpose, also break the dull monotonous look of the vast range of buildings. The system of sewerage is simple and effective. The hospital derives its water supply from a five million gallon reservoir, on its grounds. The water is pumped in by two powerful pumps at Middleton, of a capacity of two million galls. each. It pays the town of Danvers $1000 per year, for its water. All the gas used is made upon the grounds from gasoline, the first building on your right as you ascend the hill being the gas house.

The roof-surface of the hospital is 78,000 square feet, the slates being embedded in cement to prevent leakage. The spaces between the floors are also filled with cement at a cost of $10,000, and the various buildings, all of which are connected, are separated from each other by double iron doors, as a precautionary measure against fire. There is no furring in any of the buildings, the plaster being applied directly to the walls. The walls, too, are double, the interspace being occupied by the great network of pipes. The rooms and corridors for the more violent of the insane are covered with Kean cement instead of plaster, its object being twofold: first to prevent the patients from injuring the walls; second to allow of the thorough cleansing of the walls from the filth with which this class of patients are proud to besmear everything. The sunlight enters, sometime during the day, every one of the hundreds of rooms. The buildings are so arranged that no room overlooks another, thus preventing patients from being annoyed by their fellow patients, it being a well known fact in other hospitals, that lunatics in a fair way of recovery, have been made maniacs by the grimaces of their fellow patients, whose window overlooked theirs. Immediately in the rear of the central building is the kitchen with numerous ovens and ranges calculated to do the cooking for 700 people. There are two copper tanks, of eighty gallons each for tea and coffee, also several smaller tanks for cooking by steam. Passing through the kitchen is the bakery, where some 800 or 900 loaves of bread are baked per day, this being the daily consumption; from 22 to 25 barrels of flour being made up per week. In the rear of the bakery is the new laundry, which was recently removed to its present quarters. It was built the past season at an expense of $12,000, and is a solid, substantial building. Passing in, on the first floor is the washing room, which is supplied with all the modern washing machines and wringers. A great improvement has been made in the floor, it being constructed of brick upon iron rails, with a top layer of state tiles; this prevents leakage of water to the basement, which was the fault of the old wooden one. Its cost was $1800. Also on the first floor are the mangling and drying rooms; the former being supplied with a mangler or steam ironer. It is a foreign invention and is used for ironing sheets, spreads, etc. The latter, or drying room, is supplied with hot air fanned in by a revolving fan placed over the engine. Ascending to the second floor by the steam elevator we find a large ironing room, where some twenty patients are employed with the other hired help. I am told that 15,000 pieces is the weekly work performed in this building. The washing room of the old laundry is being fitted up for a brush shop, which is at present located on the 2d floor of the building. It will give employment to about forty male patients, in the manufacture of hand brushes.

From the kitchen the food is conveyed (by an elevator) to hand cars running on rails, through the cellars to all the buildings. The floor of each is provided with a dining room of its own, supplied also with dumb waiters. On the second floor of the central building, is the chapel, which is fitted up for religious and amusement purposes. It is provided with a stage and many a good entertainment has been given for the benefit of employes and patients. Under the present management dances are held on Tuesday evening of each week, and dances for employes only, are held once a month. The female employes recently gave a leap year ball which was much enjoyed by those attending. At present some 725 patients are confined here, about equally distributed, the males being kept in G. N. I. and J. buildings, and the females in A. B. C. and D. The buildings are about 180 feet long, having three floors and an attic in each. There are about twenty-four rooms or 12 on each side of the corridors. From twenty to forty patients are confined on a corridor, superintended, on an average by three attendants, each side by their respective sex. No restraint being used to patients, they are, when violent, placed in blinded and padded rooms, there being three of the latter, one having recently been built for J. 2, on the male side. In the central building, the business and doctors' offices and dispensary are on the first floor, the second being occupied by the officers families and sleeping appartments. There are nearly two hundred persons employed here, nearly all being provided with good rooms, hot and cold water, gas, etc. Nearly all trades are represented here. All of the employes, outside of the attendants, have a dining room; the supervisors and the doctors by themselves. There are five doctors, four male and one female The whole institution is under the able management of Dr. H. R. Stedman, present acting superintendent, who is conducting it upon business principles. Supt. Goldsmith, who is in Europe studying, is expected home next July to take charge. In brief, every arrangement is as near perfection as science, skill and experience can make it, and you can have your curiosity further gratified by a visit to the institution on Monday and Tuesday of each week, which is open to visitors and friends, upon those days only.

DRAMATIC AND MUSICAL.

Margaret Mather, who has been playing the role of the heroine in "Romeo and Juliet" to excellent and appreciative audiences at the Boston Theatre, is to enact this week three of the successful roles in her repertory. She will impersonate the Jewish maiden in "Leah, the Forsaken," Wednesday and Friday evenings. This is one of Miss Mather's greatest pieces of acting. Critics elsewhere have pronounced her to be more effective than ever, and the actress should be seen by very large audiences. "As You Like It," with the star as Rosalind, is the play chosen for representation on Thursday and Saturday evenings. At the matinee on Saturday Miss Mather will appear as Pauline in "The Lady of Lyons." A gala matinee performance will be given at the Boston Theatre on Friday, February 22, Washington's birthday, by Miss Margaret Mather and her company.

Agnes Booth makes her re-entrance at the Park Theatre this week. She appears as Muriel in Celia Logan's drama, "That Man" (formerly known under the title of "An American Marriage"), and the cast includes Miss Margaret Lanner and Mr. Barton Hill, both of whom are well known to our play-goers. "That Man" won much commendation from the New York critics, and its production at the new Park Theatre seems to have proved very successful. "That Man" will be played for a single week only.

Denman Thompson comes to town for a week at the Boston, beginning March 17.

The Beggar Student closes its run this week at the Bijou Theatre, and those of our readers who desire to witness its closing performances will do well to secure their seats. Next comes at this theatre another great success in comic opera. It is Suppe's "Afrikareise." At the Thalia in New York, this work made the greatest lyric hit at this home of Teutonic productions. The music is commended as equal to the very best in "Fatinitza," which is certainly high praise. It is difficult both as regards solos and ensemble music, and in the hands of the Bijou company, "A Trip to Africa" is likely to be given with excellent effect. The light effects will be something unique for elegance here, and scenically the production is sure to command attention, quite apart from the excellence that is likely to attend the performance.

Handsome Dan Maguinnis will return to his much-loved home, the Boston Theatre, and take part in the performance of the Silver King when that play is brought out.

At the performance of "My Partner" in Mechanic Hall last Friday evening, there was a good audience. The play seems never to grow old.

Friday night appears Callendar's Minstrels at Mechanic Hall. This celebrated troupe is not composed of burnt cork artists, but is made up entirely of genuine darkies, the imitation of whose comicalities has been the basis of all minstrel business from time immemorial. Over half a hundred noted colored performers will appear in a programme whose magnitude and variety has never been excelled, affording nearly three hours of uninterrupted enjoyment, and presenting to the eyes of the pleased spectators a series of the most interesting scenes and incidents depicting the various phases of life among the darkies down in the realm where king cotton reigned supreme. The scene representing the "Tropical Grove" is of the most beautiful description and in it the entire company is introduced, and many beautiful songs and ditties are rendered in effective style. The Hyers Sisters, Anna and Madah, are with this troupe—also Wallace King, to hear whom sing one piece is worth the entire price of admission.

Our exchanges are warned against an advertising fraud named "Dr. J. C. Raymond." The Statesman received an advertisement for which cash in advance was promised, and since its first insertion we have been able to hear nothing from him. We therefore give him the benefit of this editorial notice free of charge.—Marblehead Statesman.

If all country papers would steadily insist upon payment in advance for all foreign advertisements, unless the parties are known to them, the corps of advertising beats would soon diminish.

Read the speech of Margaret Mather in another column. It is seldom an actor or actress can respond so fittingly outside the lines of their part, when called before the curtain at the request of an enthusiastic audience. The engagement in Peabody will be looked forward to with much interest, and already we are asked when the tickets will be for sale. Due notice will be given, and we expect to see the largest audience ever gathered in our hall.

NEW YORK MERCURY,
FOR 1884.

With the initial number of the New Year, dated January 6, 1884, the NEW YORK MERCURY entered upon its

FORTY-SIXTH VOLUME,

and it is by long odds the cheapest, as well as the largest, handsomest and best metropolitan literary journal now published. Each number contains 56 columns, or 1,800 square inches of reading matter, comprising more than 15,060 lines

EQUALLING THE CONTENTS OF A TWENTY FIVE CENT MAGAZINE.

Arrangements have been consummated, both at home and in Europe, to secure for the ensuing year many sterling novelties to increase the already incomparable variety of literary attractions which have always made the NEW YORK MERCURY a welcome guest in every home circle, and

A PAPER SUITABLE FOR ALL CLASSES,

celebrated throughout the length and breadth of the land for its

JOHN P FERNALD, ALBERT VITTUM,
Editors and Publishers.

THE INVESTIGATION of the officers of the Steamer Columbus, with a view, we presume, of ascertaining who was responsible for the disaster, leaves the public thus far in as much doubt as ever. The testimony of Capt. Wright is the most unsatisfactory of all, and while it is right that the public should have the protection of an official inquiry into the conduct of the officers, it is very far from being certain that anything will be brought out of a nature tending to reveal the real cause of the loss of this steamer.

The reason for this is evident. The officer who was in charge when the ship struck lost his life, and Capt. Wright knows nothing further than the orders he gave to that officer. Whether he gave them correctly, or if so, whether they were carried out, will never be known. One solitary fact remains, that some one has blundered, and we are of the opinion that the words of a sailor on the wharves of Boston, overheard shortly after the disaster, give the true explanation. "It is well known," he said, "that all coasting vessels in taking this route, skin just as close to Gay Head, as they dare to." This time they went too close—that is all. It is a sad commentary on the wisdom of the officers, but it seems only too evident that such was the case.

AFTER LONG discussion and delay, the House of Representatives has passed the bill permitting the President to restore Fitz John Porter to his former position in the army. The proposition has met all along with considerable opposition, from representatives of both parties, and public opinion has been divided on the feasibility of the measure.

Great weight has justly been given to the opinion of Gen. Grant, and after careful consideration he had publicly announced that an injustice had been done to Porter, the public have been slowly settling to the belief that a guilty man would not so persistently, wait all these years for a vindication of his honor. The bill passed the House by a large vote in his favor, the Massachusetts delegation being divided. The Senate ought to be able to settle the question without long debate, as abundant opportunity has been afforded for making up their minds.

THE FAIR which is now in progress in the new Town Hall, under the auspices of our Grand Army Post, should be visited by all our citizens. It is for the benefit of the Relief Fund, which has become considerably depleted. The charity of the Post is well known, and has been liberally dispensed. It is a worthy charity—the aid of the widows and orphans of the deceased soldiers of the war, and help to the comrades who have become disabled by disease, or been wounded in the service. The comrades here have prepared a fine entertainment for each evening, in addition to the other attractions offered, and we hope they will receive substantial encouragement.

On our 3d page will be found a very interesting description of the Danvers Asylum by our correspondent. Don't overlook it.

At the next meeting of the Murray Club, the entertainment will consist of a Town Meeting, and articles are being handed in for the warrant. Look out for a good time.

Frank Wilson was arrested, at the instigation of "Billy" Hayes, and last Saturday the case came up and was dismissed.

Pearls are now more fashionable than diamonds, but the woman who can afford diamonds is not ashamed to wear them all the same.

Town meeting will not take place until the second Monday in March, and a warrant with a large number of articles is expected.

Although the long continued cold weather has been fatal to thousands of the English sparrows, their number seems not to decrease.

Members of Naumkeag encampment I. O. O. F., will visit Boston Encampment this evening. Many of the Peabody members will go.

A party of young people went to Lynnfield Hotel last Thursday evening and enjoyed a supper and dance at that old and popular resort.

Hon. Fred Willcomb of Ipswich has been interviewed. We supposed the "Hon. Fred" would tell all he knew without being interviewed.

Ladies complain of the amount of loafing done in the vicinity of the post office, and say it is a nuisance which ought to be abated. Savay?

Mr. James Howley, of the firm of Distin & Howley, has opened an establishment on the first floor above Warren Trask's provision store.

The K. of L. of this town passed resolutions last Thursday evening, on the death of Wendell Phillips, and were published in the Boston Globe.

Another big cock fight took place not far from the Lynn road last Wednesday night between Salem, Beverly and Lynn birds. Lynn won in each battle.

A private class in waltzing will commence at Upton's hall, this evening, to be taught by Mr. Henry O. Upton, of Salem. It will consist mostly of married people.

About sixty were present at the last assembly of Farnham and Flannigan's private parties last Monday evening. It was no exception to the others in being a first class time.

The new watch manufactory are not quite ready to commence work at present as they are experimenting with a patent thermometer, which they intend to put on the market.

John Keefe's horse ran away on Spring street last Friday noon, just as his owner was getting in the wagon. Keefe was thrown to the ground and his head was badly cut.

Brown & Stanley will shut down for a short time, as the hides have been all finished up. As soon as other hides, which were started in the new yard, are ready they will start.

The repair shop of Benjamin Bishop was broken into last Saturday night, and about $10 worth of boots and shoes were stolen. Entrance was effected by forcing the door.

Three men in a buggy, which is always a sure sign that they came from Lynn, were smashed up last Sunday evening by getting caught in the horse car tracks on Washington Street.

Beware of wanderers who call at your house to sell a powder to prevent kerosene lamps from exploding. The powder is plaster Paris sometimes colored and the pedlers are imposters.

Two dogs got fighting on Mason street last Sunday, and one, a fine Newfoundland, had his leg broken by being bit by the other. Those who set them at it should have been the ones to suffer.

We witnessed a pretty sight from the office window recently. There was no less than eight pigeons at the drinking fountain near the flag staff, taking a bath, splashing around and having a nice time.

The Adventists have this time settled on the fourth of November for closing up this world's accounts. But in order not to get left on some big commotion, they have fixed upon the date for the presidential election.

Mr. James H. Thomas is canvassing for the new directory of Messrs. Meek & Fielding of Salem. Their work last year was performed in a manner to merit the combined support of the business men and citizens generally.

A young man named Bagley, who supposed that he had lost his pocketbook containing $13.00 found the money in his room on English street, on a table, over which he had laid a newspaper. He is happier than he was.

Now for the festive valentine season—the happiest of the year for post-office officials who have such a "soft time" of it with nothing to do but walk back and forth all day in a peck measure and receive the large-hearted criticisms of an over-generous public.

The Victor Manufacturing company of Newburyport, Irvin Besse, formerly of this town, treasurer, was incorporated last Monday, with a capital of $6000. They will manufacture the "Victor Hanger", a new article which is being well received by the public.

Lots of our boys who attended the polo game at the Salem rink last Monday evening, between the Salems and the Waltham clubs, are out-spoken in their denunciation of the referee, a Waltham man, who rendered very unjust decisions, and is said to have had $50 bet on the Walthams.

Last Sunday a lot of men were engaged in jumping on Union street, when a stranger came along and after watching the sport volunteered to do his big jumping act. He accordingly took off his coat and threw it on the ground among a lot of others. Shortly after he went on his way rejoicing with a coat belonging to another man which was a better one than his own. Possibly it was an intentional mistake.

SCHOOL NOTES.

WALLIS SCHOOL.

The semi-annual written examinations which were promised the first of the school year have not yet been made.

The janitor reports the coal bin unusually low for this season of the year.

The school census is some two hundred less this year than in 1882, according to Mr. Reed's enumeration. It must be that a much larger per cent. of our youth of school age attend this year than formerly, if over-crowding of our school-rooms is any indication.

Miss Annie S. Merrill, who is now 3d assistant in the Center School, has entered upon the twenty-first year of successful teaching in our schools, having taught seventeen years of the twenty in the school where she now is, and three years in the Rockville school. She has served the town as teacher, longer by several years than any other teacher now employed in our public schools. If faithful and successful service for twenty years in any occupation is ever a passport to gratitude and a fair remuneration, we certainly believe Miss Merrill has already gained the former, and is justly entitled to the latter.

Some new outline wall maps have recently been furnished the second and third classes.

There are several scholars in the third class who have not been tardy nor absent during the year.

Not a parent has deigned to visit the third class during the present school year. Parents will please remember that the "Latch string" is on the outside of the door.

The instruction given by Mr. Carter, "State Instructor in Drawing," to our teachers, during the present year, is bearing good fruit. Already more has been accomplished in this branch this year, than for many years previous.

Mr. Thomas Carroll visited the school last Friday afternoon and took charge of a recitation in History. The call was greatly enjoyed by members of the class. Come again, Mr. Carroll.

January Roll of Honor for Class 7. Charlie Thomas, Thomas Carroll, Harry Howard, Willie Knowlton, James Sheehan, Willie Ruth, John Sullivan, Fred Rowell, George Bartlett, George Quint, Ella Berry, Helen Bushby, Mabel Jenkins, Flora Lynch, Alice Sawyer, Alice Smiley, Annie Stevens, Mary Tumnelty.

A rehearsal was held last Saturday afternoon in the hall of the Wallis School, by three of the lower classes. A mass rehearsal was held this afternoon.

The tickets for the Concert on the 21st of Feb., were distributed for sale among the classes last Friday.

CENTRE SCHOOL.

The total enrollment in the six upper rooms is as follows: girls 154; boys 164. In the four rooms on first floor, primary classes, the enrollment is; girls 163; boys 153; making the present enrollment in the entire building 634, of which the number of boys and girls is just equal. New pupils come in every week and some make application before they are five years of age.

Should the present agitation in the Legislature, of the question of industrial education in the public schools result in a law, and should it become necessary to introduce mechanics into our schools, this building is well equipped so far as a room is concerned. The basement will afford a large, well lighted room, and the present janitor would make a good instructor in several branches.

EVENING SCHOOL.

The evening school has been thoroughly purged of the hoodlum element and is making rapid progress with an average of about fifty scholars.

Officer Cummings performed duty last Thursday evening in the absence of officer Pingree.

"John L. Sullivan" has survived his brother pugilists as a pupil at the school and has turned out to be a faithful and zealous worker.

Some of those who were expelled from the school at the first of the term for violating the rules, have returned and are studious and well-behaved. The teachers do not pretend to recognize them as old offenders.

Miss Kitty Wiley who came in as teacher at the commencement of the second week, on account of the overflow attendance, was not needed after the fifth week.

The school has a pupil, an employe at the Danvers Bleachery, who fitted for college in Ireland, from which country he came about 18 months since. His object in attending the evening school is to acquire a knowledge of book-keeping. He is an excellent pent man.

A young German who is a proficient scholar in his own language, and who is desirous of learning ours, may be seen each evening at the school hard at work on the childs' English primer.

The school will probably continue about three weeks.

SO. PEABODY SCHOOL.

The teachers of the Rockville School would be glad to see the parents in the schools, in greater numbers and at shorter intervals, than has heretofore been the custom—as they believe this to be for the best interest of the schools.

SOUTH PEABODY.

About one hundred and fifty people gathered at the house of Mrs. Rebecca E. Richardson on Lynn street, on the evening of the 6th inst., the occasion calling so many together being the ninety-second aniversary of the hostess' birthday. Besides many neighbors, there were friends present from Salem, Lynn, Winthrop, Chelsea and Dover, N. H. The unpleasantness without was in sharp contrast with the good-cheer within. Social chit-chat, singing and old-time games made the hours glide swiftly by. Miss Rogers of Salem gave several recitations which were received with great satisfaction by the company. In the course of the evening a nunny as could be paired to the room of Mrs. Richardson, when after brief remarks, the pastor read the 90th psalm and offered prayer. In response, Mrs. Richardson hoped all would live to celebrate their ninety-second birthday. A bountiful supper was provided for all—a supper, too, that would have honored any of the old time celebrations of the past which we read about. There was variety enough to whet the most fastidious appetite; and abundance to satisfy any appetite, however exacting. Really, as we sat by the side of the aged hostess in the old kitchen, eating from the blue china plates which she began housekeeping with sixty-three years ago, a buxom country lass, it did not require any effort of the imagination to put us back into the days of stage coaches, open fireplaces and warming pans. And while the old fashioned clock ticks away in dignified regularity in the corner, the mind listens back over the years which have witnessed so many discoveries and the opening up of the country wherein Mrs. Richardson first saw the light of day. As one after another extended their kindly greetings they hoped the long life might be lengthened into added years of happiness. The gathering broke up at a late hour, leaving many loving remembrances of regard.

Sunday, Feb. 3, Rev. J. W. Colwell entered into the fourth year of his pastorate in South and West Peabody. He gave the following summary of his three years' work in this town: No. of sermons preached, 284; Exchanges 10; Prayer Meetings 243; Bible Reading and Praise meetings 32; Missionary Concerts 18; Other services 87; Total No. of services 669; No. received into church by letter 8; On confession of Faith 15; Total 23; Dismissed 4; Net gain 19; No. Children baptized 5; Adults 14; Total 19; Marriages 20; Funerals 45; Pastoral calls 1051.

Wm. Mitchell and Geo. Williams' saloons were broken into last Saturday night, and about twenty-five dollars worth was taken from Mitchell and about five dollars worth from Williams. The police were notified and are engaged in working up the case.

Miss Viola Putnam is confined to her house with an abscess in her throat.

There seems to be some disease among the pigs in this section of the town. Mr. Frank Larrabee has lost two large ones, J. E. Trask one and R. Stickney one, in the past week.

The seats for the new church will be ready to put down about the middle of March. The pastor is in hopes to dedicate it sometime in April.

The 8 o'clock car on the Lynn road, which has been discontinued all winter, will be put on during the fair and one will leave the square at 11 o'clock.

Mr. Sylvanus Newhall, who was injured last week by a fall, is able to be up and dressed.

The concert given in the Rockville chapel on the evening of Jan. 30th by the choir of St. Stephen's church, Lynn, netted fifty dollars.

There will be a mum supper given in the vestry of the new church Wednesday, Feb. 20th, by the Ladies' Aid Society. Besides the supper, there will be readings by Mrs. Rogers, of Salem, violin solos, by Master Hazen Quint, piano solos by Miss Grace Stevens and Miss Ward, of Peabody. The proceeds are to go towards furnishing the auditorium of the new church.

Mr. T. T. Muzzy has returned from Bennington, Vt.

SPARKS.

The quarterly meeting of the trustees of the Relief Association was called for last night, but as only four of the Trustees were present, and eight being a quorum, it was postponed until one week from Thursday evening.

The new pair of grey horses were taken to Munroe & Arnold's scales, and were found to tip the beam at about 2700 which is considerable of a gain since they came here.

The West Newbury fire was plainly seen in this town by the firemen.

The new carriage of Hose 4 was weighed on Munroe & Arnold's scales, last Saturday, and its weight found to be just 1435 pounds without any load. Come to put on 800 feet of hose would add over 800 pounds more to the weight, making a good solid long ton, which is too much of a load for fifteen men to take out from the present location of the carriage. Old Charlie was hitched up in the carriage, and he just skipped round lively with it.

The Engineers held their regular meeting last Wednesday night, and the only business done was to appoint Wm. W. Reed as trustee for the new association.

At a meeting of Hose 4, held last Thursday evening, A. E. Johnson was elected trustee for the new Relief Association. The following members withdrew from the company and from the fire department: Geo. M. Wilson, Geo. H. Fairbrother, Lewis J. Foan, and William Berry, each of the four receiving his share of the funds of the company.

It is said that Barnum and Forepaugh will have it hot and heavy when the season is open. They travel through New England at the same time, often appearing in the same towns on the same date.

FURNITURE. Some idea of the extent of this branch of business as now carried on in Boston, can be obtained by visiting the warerooms at Paine's manufactory on Canal Street, Boston. This is one of the largest in the country, with show rooms, covering acres of floor-room, stocked with every variety of house furniture, at manufacturers' and importers' prices, which save about one-third the retail price to their customers.

MAYO'S
Compound Vegetable Anæsthetic.
A safe and pleasant substitute for gas and ether.
Discovered by Dr. N. K. Mayo of Boston, April 1883, subsequently administered by him in nearly two thousand cases, producing perfect slumber, being applicable to the child the delicate sentitive woman as well as the hardy man. No ill effects have followed its use in any case, it acting rather as a vegetable tonic.
It controls the patient one-fourth longer than gas giving us time to remove from three to twenty teeth. It is with great confidence we have introduced it into our practice, giving very successful results.

HOME HAPPENINGS.

Last evening a meeting of those interested in the establishment of a permanent Old Ladies' Home in this town. was held at the parlors of the Unitarian Church. There was a fair attendance and steps were taken to bring about the desired result. Theodore M. Osborne, Esq., acted as chairman and explained to the meeting the different bequests for this object and the conditions under which it was given. It would appear from his remarks, that there is now pledged and bequeathed different sums that will amount in the aggregate to about $10,000. A part of this amount is held in trust by Messrs. Geo. H. Poor, Geo. M. Foster, G. Fred Osgood, who will meet with the officers of the Benevolent Society next Saturday and unite on some plan to expedite the work. There will also be formed an auxiliary association consisting of ladies, who will endeavor to secure funds in various ways to help the cause along. A meeting for the organization of such an association will be held at the vestry of the Congregational church next Tuesday afternoon at 2 o'clock to which all ladies interested are invited.

The Concert by the Unity Club, for the benefit of the Organ Fund, will take place in the Unitarian Church, next Tuesday evening, Feb. 19th. In addition to the worthy object proposed, the concert will be a first class one, and will commend itself to all our musical people. The choir of the church, Misses Dalton and Felt, Messrs. Chase and Emerson, will be heard in two quartettes. Misses Dalton and Felt will sing a duet, and Mr. Record of Salem, the talented young violinist, will appear in solos. They will also have the assistance of Mr. Isaac Littlefield, of Stoughton, one of the finest tenors in the State, Mrs. J. P. Fernald, Mrs. Culliton and Miss Southwick in piano duets. It is also hoped to have a ladies' quartette in a favorite composition of Dr. J. F. Tuckerman, of Grace Church, Salem. The tickets are 35 cents each, and will be for sale by members of the Unity Club, and at the door. We hope the number of the audience will only be limited by the seating capacity of the church.

At the eighth annual meeting of the Women's Christian Temperance Union, held last Friday, the following officers were elected for the ensuing year: President, Miss Mary J. Floyd, in place of Mrs. M. O. Stevens, who was re-elected and declined. Secretary, Mrs. Mary E. Roberts; treasurer, Mrs. William A. Osborn. All interested in the cause are cordially invited to be present at the next meeting, Friday, Feb 15, at 3 o'clock. There will be devotional exercises, an address from the President, and singing by Mrs. Benj. H. Upton and Mrs. Bartlett, who have kindly consented to lend their voices to the interest of the occasion.

The Social party of the Murray Association last Thursday evening was a very pleasant affair. There was enough present to make the floor comfortably filled without crowding, and those who did not enjoy themselves must have been hard to please. The music was by the Cadet Orchestra, which was of course excellent, and at intermission ice cream, cake and coffee was served in the room below. The cake and coffee was furnished by the ladies of the Murray Club, and it was excellent in every respect, as was also the ice cream which was made by Ira D. Nador, of Lynn.

Last Sunday was Septuagesima Sunday.

It is our sad duty to record the death, last evening, of John E. Clement of this town. It is sad, not only on account of the loss which will be felt by the bereaved family and friends, but the loss to our town of any man controling a large and constantly increasing business is of no little moment. Mr. Clement was only 27 years of age, his death occurring on his birthday; and although seriously ill for a number of days, his death came very unexpectedly, and his friends can hardly realize that he will go in and out among us no longer. In his early years he developed a talent and knowledge of machinery that was remarkable, and in connection with Arthur W. Pinder, he carried on a machine shop in Sutton block, under Sawyer's store. Later he engaged in the provision business with S. W. King, but remained in it but a short time. About three years ago he commenced the business of machinery again, in the shop which he occupied to the time of his death. There was manufactured the McDonald Unhairing Machine and others; and he had the largest and best machinery for the business in which he was engaged, of any shop in this region. The business has constantly increased; preparations were almost completed for the introduction of a large boiler to accommodate the work, and it was the intention to shut down Saturday night for the necessary repairs. He has been employing from sixteen to 20 men. Mr. Clement was kind and generous in all his social relations, and honorable and straightforward in all his business. His men always received their wages every Saturday night, and in many ways they will have occasion to remember his kindness. He leaves a widow, who will have the sympathy of the community in her loss. The funeral will take place Friday, at 2 p. m., from his late residence on Park street.

The following is the financial account of the Coffee Party and entertainment recently given in the New Opera House:—Total number of tickets sold, 1,127, amounting to $563.50; there was also received from Finance, Committee collected in town, $92.00; from Committee on coat room, $23.40; there was raised by advertisements in Programme, $32: collected out of town, $47; making a total, $757.90. The expenses were $162.93, which with outstanding bills amounting to $13. left $581.97, which was paid ten discharged men, giving them a sum of $57 each, and a disbursing committee will take and settle up the few remaining details. The convention adopted a rising vote of thanks to the K. of L. 2921 and K. of L. 2947, also to the Atlantic Base Ball Association for the use of their halls, on various occasions, and a unanimous vote of thanks were adopted, thanking those who took part and who kindly subscribed, or in any way helped to make the party a success. The final meeting of the entire body comprising all of the General Committee of seventy-eight members will be held on Sunday, Feb. 17, at 2 P. M.

The Danvers Mirror says: A new enterprise is being established at the Port, it being for the manufacture of a leather-measuring machine invented by W. A. Sawyer. A company has recently been incorporated as the Sawyer Leather Machinery Company, with a capital of $10,000, of which W. H. Alley is president and treasurer, and M. C. Hight and J. S. Alley, directors. A building is being erected for the purpose near the box factory of Woodman Bros. & Ross, from which steam power will be taken. They have previously been manufactured at John E. Clement & Co.'s shop in this town.

Mr. Joseph D. Moreland, a life long resident of this town, died at his home on Elm street, last Thursday, of typhoid fever, after an illness of three weeks. Mr. Moreland was well known and respected by all who knew him. He had been in the employ of Mr. A. A. Messer for the past twenty years. His age was 63 years and 9 months. He was a kind and affectionate husband and father, and made friends wherever he went. He leaves a widow, two sons and a daughter, who have the sympathy of the community.

A lettered device is to be adopted by the railroads to announce the name of the next station at which the train is to stop. In reference to this subject the Boston Globe facetiously says: "The brakeman is about to be deprived of the chief joy of his existence. The only intellectual pleasure which the cares of a hard world allow him to enjoy is about to be taken away from him. But since his loss is to be the gain of the travelling public, the latter will endeavor to be reconciled."

We are now doing our work with a new eight horse power engine, just built for us by Mr. Thomas E. Wilson, and it bears evidence of the skill and workmanship for which Mr. W. is noted. The old, three horse power engine, which was removed, has done faithful service for a large number of years. It was the first engine ever built in town. It was made by Balcom & Jennings, when they were at Dole & Osgood's.

The Fair of the G. A. R. Post of this town opened last evening under favorable auspices. The entire Town Building had been engaged, and the side sections of seats on the lower floor, together with all but the twelve front rows on the other, had been removed. This gave abundant opportunity for the arrangement of the tables on either side, besides ample accommodation for people both standing and sitting. The tables containing fancy work and other articles contributed by the ladies for the benefit of the Post, were arranged on the left of the hall, facing the stage. These tables are under the supervision of Mrs. W. H. Hildreth, who is chairman of the committee on tables. Table No. 1 is in charge of Mrs. W. W. Reed; Table No. 2, Mrs. John H. Tibbets; Table No. 3, Miss Minnie Osborn; Table No. 4. Mrs. N. M. Quint; Table No. 5, Mrs. W. H. Hildreth. Table No. 1, has a number of book prizes, among them being a doll, carriage blanket, handsome toilet set, silver cake basket, No. 1, box of cigars, and a bed spread. Table No. 2 has for book prizes a lady's workbox and silver cake basket, No. 2. Tables No. 3 and 4 are devoted entirely to the sale of articles of use and fancy, they having no book prizes. Table number 5, is very handsomely arranged, and has as book prizes the chromo, "Battle of Gettysburg," and a fancy basket. On the right of the hall is table No. 6, which is the prize table. At this table the season ticket prizes are displayed, and the following book prizes:—Lady's gold watch, Keystone washer, pair of bracelets, silver water pitcher, china tea set, hanging lamp, music box, bird and cage, bracket, fancy boot box, combination prizes and album. Table No. 7 is the centre of attraction for the young folks, being the confectionery and refreshment table.

The Lawrence American remarks: "A local temperance lecturer of the female persuasion who weighs in the vicinity of 225 pounds recently remarked; 'You have been an attentive audience, and I have reason to believe one of the most orderly gatherings that has assembled in Peabody. In this, I am sure the policemen at the door will carry me out.' The officer viewed the lady and respectfully but firmly declined."

It is unnecessary to refer at length to the School Children's Concert, under the direction of C. R. Bill, to be given in the new Opera House next Thursday evening. A chorus of seven hundred will take part, and more than half the house is already sold. Those who have checks can exchange them to-night at Spaulding's, and in any case those who want seats had better be on hand speedily, as the prospect is that every seat in the house will be sold.

Mr. & Mrs. P. A. Masterson, living on Webster street, celebrated their twenty-fifth anniversary of their marriage. One hundred and fifty invitations were sent out and about sixty were present, including friends from Salem, Worcester and Springfield. The evening was socially spent. The host and hostess were presented with several elegant silver gifts.

A Farmers' Institute will be held by the Essex Agricultural Society at Plummer Hall, Salem, on Thursday next, Feb. 14. In the forenoon Mrs. E. V. Gage of Bradford will read an essay on the "Duties of Farmers' Wives," and in the afternoon J. E. Russell of the Massachusetts State Board of Agriculture, will deliver an address upon "English Agriculture."

Mr. Israel J. Goodwin has the sympathy of the community in the loss of his wife, Cassie A., who died very suddenly, Saturday afternoon. Mrs. Goodwin was well known and loved for her many amiable qualities, and will be greatly missed by those who were more intimate with her.

If any in these parts hold policies in the Charter Oak life insurance company in Hartford they will be wise to heed Commissioner Tarbox's advice and not surrender them at less than actual value, as in the judgment of the commissioner the company is abundantly able to meet its obligations.

Some bold, bad boys stole a small hand bag containing a purse from the glass show case at B. F. Steven's store last Saturday evening. It was the property of Miss Grace, and contained less than fifty cents. The police recovered the bag and purse, minus the money.

The Boston Globe, at the suggestion of Mr. L. R. Power, the shoe man, has headed a praiseworthy movement to place a statue of Hon. Wendell Phillips on Boston common, the expense of the same to be met by public supscriptions from one dime to one dollar.

The first and only person to disfigure or deface the new town hall is the correspondent of the Salem News; and he was so proud of his name that he had to write it on the backs of the seats in the main hall in large letters, where it can be seen at the present time.

Next Sunday evening there will be baptisimal service at the Baptist church.

HAIR RENEWER

was the first preparation perfectly adapted to cure diseases of the scalp, and the first successful restorer of faded or gray hair to its natural color, growth, and youthful beauty. It has had many imitators, but none have so fully met all the requirements needful for the proper treatment of the hair and scalp. HALL'S HAIR RENEWER has steadily grown in favor, and spread its fame and usefulness to every quarter of the globe. Its unparalleled success can be attributed to but one cause: the entire fulfilment of its promises.

The proprietors have often been surprised at the receipt of orders from remote countries, where they had never made an effort for its introduction.

The use for a short time of HALL'S HAIR RENEWER wonderfully improves the personal appearance. It cleanses the scalp from all impurities, cures all humors, fever, and dryness, and thus prevents baldness. It stimulates the weakened glands, and enables them to push forward a new and vigorous growth. The effects of this article are not transient, like those of alcoholic preparations, but remain a long time, which makes its use a matter of economy.

Book Notices.

The Feb. number of the Young Ladies' Journal has been received from the International News Company of New York. It is a beautiful number, and fully justifies the claims of the publishers, that they are making the "Best and Cheapest Fashion Journal of the Day." In addition to its fashion departments, its literary features are of the highest order. For sale by the Peabody News Co.

Frank Leslie's Sunday Magazine, the March number, is promptly on our table and is filled, as usual, with delightful reading matter—edifying and entertaining, and admirable embelishments. The popular editor, T. DeWitt Talmage, D. D., contributes a characteristic article, "Alarming Things of To-day," and the Home Pulpit contains one of his sermons, "Sensitiveness of Christ," Count Zinzendorf," the founder of the Moravian Church; "Salem, the Old Moravian town in North Carolina"; "The Boston Institutions at Deer Island"; "Annals of Little Compton"; "Anthony Vandyck, a Court Painter"; etc., are finely illustrated and exceedingly interesting articles. The serials, "How It all Came Round," and "Wrong from the First," are continued, and the Essays, Sketches, Poems, etc., are by popular writers. Marion Harland has a charming story, "A practical Woman." The contents are so varied and abundant that no one can fail to be gratified. The price is 25 cts. a number; $2.50 per annum, postpaid. Address Mrs. Frank Leslie, 53, 55 and 57 Park Place, New York, N. Y.

Our boys rose up on that July day,
As cheerily sounded the reveille,
And marched away with steps as true,
As though they had holiday work to do;
But the line of battle that way had swung
And a nations fate in the balance hung,
And e'er the sun in the west had set,
The bright green earth with their blood was wet;
And thousands who marched at dawn of day,
Had given their dear young lives away,
The advancing foe was backward turned,
The faith of the nation brighter burned,
And Freedom took a new lease of life,
Because they won in that terrible strife.

1883.

Those of them left to repeat the tale,
Are gallant no longer, now and hale,
Their once quick step is halting and slow,
For the fires of youth no longer glow;
But Time has silvered the once brown hair,
And furrowed the cheek with marks of care,
Oftener now they gather about,
The grave of a comrade mustered out,
And but few years remain for those,
Who bared their breasts to their country's foes.
Make smooth the way that they must tread,
As they march on to their comrades dead.
Ward off all want as old age draws nigh,
As they did danger in days gone by.

To create an appetite, and give tone to the digestive apparatus, Ayer's Sarsaparilla is unequalled.

Good Plain Cake without Eggs.—Two cups sugar, one-half cup butter, one-half cup milk, three cups flour, one measure of Horsford's Bread Preparation flavor to taste; bake quickly.

It was at the close of the wedding breakfast. One of the guests arose, and, glass in hand, said, "I drink to the health of the bridegroom. May he see many days like this!" "The intention was good, but the bride looked up as if something displeased her.

A correspondent up in the mountains writes that on a particular day all nature smiled. Well, this is remarkable, and can be accounted for satisfactorily only on the supposition that all nature was at a nominating convention and was invited to step up and smile at the expense of the nominees.

Mothers should remember, in the absence of a physician, that Ayer's Cherry Pectoral promptly relieves the croup.

Swedish Botanic Compound and Swedish Lung Balsam, taken together are the best and most rational of all remedies for consumption. Under their influence the cough abates, the night sweats cease, and the patient rapidly recovers health.

Mr. T. M. Casad, editor of the Corydon, Iowa, Times, writes that his little girl burned her foot severely on a stove. One application of St. Jacobs Oil, the great pain-reliever, cured it completely leaving no marks. By two applications of St. Jacobs Oil he cured himself of a torturing pain in his side.

The lightning struck a man out in Ohio, and when the news was broken to his wife she asked, in a sad but surprised tone of voice. "Is he dead?" "Yes," was the reply. "Poor John; then the lightning must have struck him more than once."

"Oh, my dear sir," said a poor sufferer to a dentist, "that is the second wrong tooth that you have pulled out." "Very sorry, my dear sir," said the blundering operator, "but as there were only three when I began, I'm sure to be right the next time."

A young lady entered one of our music stores yesterday, and, tripping lightly up to the handsome clerk, pertly asked, "Have you, 'Happy Dreams?'" She was nonplussed when he replied, "No, ma'am; I'm nearly pestered to death with mosquitoes."

TOMB CAVERNS OF NAZARETH.

There is a low range of hill, about 500 feet above the sea level, half way between Haifa and Nazareth. It is beautifully timbered with oak trees, and cut up into the most charming valleys. Leaving the high road to Nazareth to the right, we followed a path for about half an hour which took us to the village of Sheik Abreik. It was a miserable collection of mud hovels, in the muddiest of which dwelt the sheik. After much palaver and promises of abundant backshish we got him to admit the existence of the caverns of which we were in search, and persuaded him to be our guide to them. The first was called by the Arabs "The Cave of Hell." Its entrance seemed to justify the ill-omened appellation. It was a steep, sloping tunnel into the bowels of the earth, just large enough to admit the passage of a man's body. To slide into this feet foremost after a heavy rain involved a coating of mud from top to toe. After going down a few yards we found a chamber in which we could stand erect. Here we lighted our candle and looked about us. We found that it was the first of a series of similar chambers opening one into another. Each contained stone coffins, hewn out of the solid rock. The entrance to these were arched. The pilasters on each side of the entrance were in some cases ornamented with rude sculptures and decorated with designs in a yellow pigment. These were in the form of curves, scrolls, and circles, and were carried over the roof. Each chamber was about ten feet long by six feet wide, and on an average contained three tombs, one across the chamber, facing the entrance, and one on each side. There do not seem ever to have been lids to these stone receptacles for the corpses. The bodies were embalmed, wrapped in cloths, as we read in Scriptural accounts of burials, notably in that of our Saviour. "Each in his narrow cell forever laid," they remained undisturbed until rude hands, ages afterward, "rolled away the stone from the mouth of the cave" and rifled the contents.

Some of the entrances to the chambers had been completely filled up. In such cases the partition wall of rock had been broken through. Some of the chambers were larger than others, and there were two tiers of coffins. In order to get from one chamber to another it was often necessary to drag yourself along at full length upon the ground. In one case the roof had been broken through into a chamber above, and this probably led to more.

I had not time fully to explore this most curious and interesting spot. Examinations of this sort in the middle of a long day's ride are very fatiguing. The effort of scrambling about on all fours, or after the fashion of the serpent, is very great, and makes you very dirty. In the absence of a string, you are haunted by the idea of not being able to find your way back, to say nothing of the chance of sticking in one of these narrow passages. Altogether I entered about fifteen different chambers, and doubtless the others did not differ in any important particulars.—N. Y. Sun.

THE GIANT SLOTH IN IOWA.

Our readers will recall the suggestion of Prof. Marsh that the man-like foot-prints in the quarry of the Nevada State Prison might have been made by a giant sloth, though no other vestiges of the animal have been found in that region. Prof. Marsh's suggestion gives special interest to a recent find of bones of this extinct animal, in a sand pit near Council Bluffs, Iowa. The bluff formation along the Missouri River in western Iowa is composed of extremely fine salt cemented by lime. The bluffs, which are from 300 to 400 feet high, rest on the ordinary drift of the Iowa prairie, which overlies oolitic limestone. At intervals of two or three miles are pockets of pure sand from 200 to 400 feet deep. It was in opening one of these deposits that the bones were found in large quantities. It is said that no similar discovery has been made in that region. The skulls were in fairly good preservation, but the most of them were badly injured by the careless and ignorant workmen. The teeth, which are well preserved, are from three to four inches in length. The find has been taken in hand by a local scientific association, and careful explorations of the sand beds will be made.

DISCOVERIES AT THE ACROPOLIS.

Some very interesting discoveries have just been made on the acropolis of Athens. The rubbish heaps between the Parthenon and the museum, where remains of the older Parthenon have already been found, have now yielded several pieces of archaic sculpture. Among these are a figure of Athena, quite perfect, with the dress descending to the feet, which are shod with red slippers with pointed toes; a seated figure of the goddess, similar to a fragmentary one already found on the same spot, in the Egyptian style, with a tablet on the lap; and the upper part of a bas-relief representing a charioteer whose head is turned. The unskillfulness of the artist has twisted it completely round. The colors upon this bas-relief are still brilliant. Beside these relics of early art, a large marble hand with a serpent upon it, as well as two serpents entwined together, one of which has its mouth wide open, have also been discovered. They probably belong to a shrine of the daughter of Asklepios which stood in this part of the acropolis. It should be added that the head and upper part of the body of the so-called Athena are wanting.—The Academy.

The society editor of a certain western paper wears a polo cap. He is not bald, but owing to a lack of brains his head requires some sort of ballast.—Com. Ad.

Do not speak with contempt and ridicule of a locality where you may be visiting. Find something to truthfully praise and commend; thus make yourself agreeable.

A MARVELOUS STORY
TOLD IN TWO LETTERS.

FROM THE SON: "28 Cedar St., New York, Oct. 28, 1882.

"Gentlemen: My father resides at Glover, Vt. He has been a great sufferer from Scrofula, and the inclosed letter will tell you what a marvelous effect has had in his case. I think his blood must have contained the humor for at least ten years; but it did not show, except in the form of a scrofulous sore on the wrist, until about five years ago. From a few spots which appeared at that time, it gradually spread so as to cover his entire body. I assure you he was terribly afflicted, and an object of pity, when he began using your medicine. Now, there are few men of his age who enjoy as good health as he has. I could easily name fifty persons who would testify to the facts in his case.

Ayer's Sarsaparilla

Yours truly, W. M. PHILLIPS."

FROM THE FATHER: "It is both a pleasure and a duty for me to state to you the benefit I have derived from the use of

Ayer's Sarsaparilla.

Six months ago I was completely covered with a terrible humor and scrofulous sores. The humor caused an incessant and intolerable itching, and the skin cracked so as to cause the blood to flow in many places whenever I moved. My sufferings were great, and my life a burden. I commenced the use of the SARSAPARILLA in April last, and have used it regularly since that time. My condition began to improve at once. The sores have all healed, and I feel perfectly well in every respect—being now able to do a good day's work, although 73 years of age. Many inquire what has wrought such a cure in my case, and I tell them, as I have here tried to tell you, AYER'S SARSAPARILLA. Glover, Vt., Oct. 21, 1882. Yours gratefully,
HIRAM PHILLIPS."

AYER'S SARSAPARILLA cures Scrofula and all Scrofulous Complaints, Erysipelas, Eczema, Ringworm, Blotches, Sores, Boils, Tumors, and Eruptions of the Skin. It clears the blood of all impurities, aids digestion, stimulates the action of the bowels, and thus restores vitality and strengthens the whole system.

Miscellaneous.

Most of the leading authors in Great Britain are married. Dickens is one of the few modern British literati who was unhappy in his martial relations, though only a generation previously these difficulties were frequent in the history of genius. Walter Scott's wife was decidedly inferior to him in intellectual as well as in physical development, and in this perhaps may account for the immediate degeneracy of the family. She was the daughter of a French refugee of wealth who escaped the guillotine with his family and fortune. Being a pretty girl with a large portion she made an easy conquest of the penniless attorney, who had been unsuccessful in a previous love affair. Had Scott married into a finer stock he might have left a family worthy of his name. Shelley, Byron and Coleridge are among the chief illustrations of genius and domestic infelicity. The first ran a rapid career. Before he was twenty-nine he had married twice, and had abandoned his first wife, who committed suicide, and had achieved fame as one of the great poets of the day, and he quickly reached a grave in the English burying ground at Rome. Byron was unfit to marry, because of intense selfishness and a lawless appetite. Coleridge loved his wife, but was so addicted to opium that he was unfit for domestic life, and hence a long separation. Charles Lamb was a bachelor, devoted to the care of a lunatic sister. Gibbon, Hume and Macaulay, the greatest historians England ever produced, were bachelors. Perhaps had they been married they would have attained greater happiness if not greater excellence. Gibbon was deeply in love when he was a poor student at Lausanne, and his father forbade the union. The girl was a Swiss clergyman's daughter, and after her father's death, became a teacher in Geneva. From this lowly condition she was elevated to be the wife of Necker, the financial ruler of France—just before the revolution—and became the mother of Madame De Stael. As for Hume, he was constitutionally a celibate, but I presume Macaulay would have married had he ever found the time. Tom Moore married an actress. Wilkie Collins married a daughter of Dickens. The poet Campbell married a second cousin, and they had the usual bitter experience of literary life. The later circle of poets, such as Jerrold, Hood, Barry Cornwall, Ebenezer Elliott, etc., were all married. Hugh Miller fell in love with a girl who came into the shop where he was dressing stone, and the union proved very happy, but it was at last sadly terminated by his suicide.

NEWFOUNDLAND.

Newfoundland, the oldest British colony, was first sighted at daybreak on the 24th of June, 1497, when the welcome cry of "Land ho!" came from the masthead of the "Mathew," a little British ship of not more than 200 tons, manned by West-Country sailors, having for its captain John Cabot, father of Sebastian Cabot. It is said that the warning look-out was responded to by a round of British cheers from the deck below. The first officer on board was Sebastian Cabot. John Cabot was probably born in Venice; but Sebastian was born and bred in Bristol. In the following February the King, Henry VII., granted a new patent to John Cabot, authorizing him to sail with six ships, thus giving him a supplementary commission to that which he had first received. But John did not go on the second expedition, which was intrusted to Sebastian, then a young man only twenty-three years of age. The King was evidently greatly delighted with the discovery. It was, however, on the 5th day of August, 1583, eighty-six years after Cabot's discovery, that, no attempt having been made to colonize Newfoundland or any of the neighboring lands—four English war-ships being in the harbor of St. Johns and thirty-six fishing vessels of all nations at the same time—Sir Humphrey Gilbert read a royal patent on shore amid a goodly company of officers and others who had assembled there, authorizing him to take possession of Newfoundland on behalf of Queen Elizabeth and exercise his jurisdiction over it and all other possessions of the Crown in the same quarter. This grant gave Sir Humphrey Gilbert jurisdiction over two hundred leagues in every direction, so that the limits included Nova Scotia, New Brunswick, part of Labrador, as well as the islands of Newfoundland, Cape Breton and Prince Edward Island. The brave Devonshire knight, Sir Humphrey, was the first settler in Newfoundland, and had come thither on that August day, with some two hundred and fifty followers from his native county, with the view of making the western wilderness a home for Englishman. In this enterprise he was encouraged and supported by his distinguished half-brother, Sir Walter Raleigh Sir Walter himself had embarked on the same expedition, but a contagious disease broke out on board his ship and compelled him to return.

A PHOTOGRAPHER'S DREAM.

A photographer fell asleep in a street-car the other day and during the time he was wrapped in the arms of Morpheus the car filled up with passengers. A lady got in and as the photographer occupied more room than was necessary, she touched him on the shoulder and asked him to move up a little. This aroused him, and as he looked up and saw a lady standing in front of him and thinking he was on duty, said:

"Full length or bust?"

Abstinence from awful pleasure is exercise against unlawful.

Art may err, but nature cannot miss.

If you deal with a vulgar mind, life is reduced to beggary.

Miscellaneous.

As we drove through the principal street, containing the residences of Rome's first citizens, I read several names on the door-plates, and was delighted to know that the families of Brutus, Caius Fabricius, and Appius Claucius were still in existence, though the founders had been dead several years, at least so Lucius Junius informed me.

"And whose residence is that?" I asked, drawing attention to a stately mansion which was unoccupied and having a large card displayed in the window, with "To Let—700 lires per month."

"That, signor, is the home of the younger Casca, but he is an envious, miserly man, and can never get a tenant, he makes the rent so large."

"Is he the son of the Casca who made the rent in Cæsar's garment?"

"He is, signor, and the trait runs in the family."

"Thank you," replied I, handing Lucius a lire for being so truthful.

Our guide next conducted us to the Roman Museum, where we viewed the numerous curiosities so well known in history, but only observable to a few. Lucius Junius pointed out a large glass case containing a flock of seven stuffed geese, headed by a solemn-looking gander.

"And, pray, what does all this mean, Lucius?" asked I of the guide.

"These, signor, are what saved the city."

"And what is that garment hanging on yonder peg?"

"The toga of the illustrious Cæsar," he replied.

"What are those auger bits on the shelf, there?"

"Those, signor, are the four augurs that interpreted omens."

[NOTE.—Latin scholars will understand the augur statement.]

"What are those wax figures arrayed in white?" said I, pointing to a row of six or eight lay figures ranged against the wall.

"The vestal virgins, signor."

"You haven't got any Sabine women in your collection, have you, Lucius?"

"No, signor, they were all carried away several months ago."

"What are those two wax babies?"

General Pratt spoke up and informed me that they were Romulus and Remus.

"Where is the wolf?" I asked of Lucius.

"They are feeding him, signor, in the back yard."—Boston Courier.

OLD METHODS OF LIGHTING.

Young and even middle-aged people, accustomed to the convenience of the modern lucifer-match, can hardly imagine the time when the tinder-box, with its clumsy flint and steel and broad brimstone matches, was the only means of procuring a light. Some people were more skillful than others in striking a light and blowing the spark and match to a flame; but often on a wintry morning it was weary work with the servant who had to kindle the first fire if the tinder happened to be damp, or worn out, or the flint and steel "in a temper." Indeed, in many houses a rushlight was in some bedroom or other always burnt, so that in case of sudden illness, or any disaster, there might be a light ready. The rushlight, having, as its name implies, a rushwick, was about 15 inches long, and was burnt in a huge perforated shade; it was the "farthing rushlight," which very poor people were said to use for other puposes than a night-light. The picture of a half-starved seamstress in her garret would, in those days, have been incomplete without the thin rush candle; but its flames was so feeble that I can hardly fancy any eyes could have served to thread a needle by it.

It is commonly said that there are no bugs in Arabia, the dry heat killing them all off; and certainly all the names given for the creature in Arabic dictionaries are either taken from the Turkish or manufactured. Considering what a vast field for blood suckers is Bagdad, and what myriads of this particular species are constantly coming into it, if only from Bombay, in the boxes of travellers and pilgrims, what becomes of them all is a problem in natural history, anything like extreme heat, even supposing that to have the effect alleged, occurring only between June and September. Anyhow, it was a comfort to feel safe on that score at least in turning in for the night in a billet which, if there had been a member of the family in all Bagdad, looked as if it would have been sure to hold him. But morning brought the discovery that, if the bug was absent, he was represented by a sand-fly with a body hardly bigger than a mite's, a pair of wings like tiny sails, and a poison-injecting and blood-sucking apparatus of extraordinary calibre.

Some ascribe to the injection of a poison by this insect the singular ulceration of the skin to which natives of Bagdad, especially in childhood, are liable, and which seldom fails to attack European and other strangers during the first year of their residence. Either from the season when these sores generally break out being that when the date is nearly ripe, or from the scar left by them resembling that fruit in size and contour, they are commonly spoken of as "date-sores." The number of people in Bagdad whose faces are more or less disfigured in this way, frightens most new-comers. Hitherto the result of medical and surgical practice has gone to show that whatever constitutional, climatic, or external cause or causes depending, the affliction, like so many others, is best left alone. In the healthy it runs its course in about a year, sometimes only one sore appearing, but oftener a succession of them. They are not painful or dangerous; and except when on tender spots or on parts essential to locomotion, natives of Bagdad seem not to mind them—one instance more of the eel growing used to skinning.

NASBY'S PAPER.
THE TOLEDO WEEKLY BLADE.
Circulation 115,000.
This vast circulation is because the BLADE is a paper for the whole country. It is not thrown together, but every line of it is edited by competent hands. It is a complete epitome of the news of the week, and whosoever reads the BLADE carefully, needs nothing else to be well informed as to what the world is doing. Editorially the BLADE has made a proud record. It has an opinion on every thing that affects the people of the country, and it expresses it boldly, fearlessly, and forcibly. As good as the Blade has been in past years, we will make it better than ever in the year to come, among the features for the coming year will be the regular "Nasby Letters," two serials by Nasby, entitled "Nasby in Exile," and "Nasby in the South," a serial story by Ernest Warren, entitled, Court and Camp," a serial by John McElroy author of Andersonville, "Reminiscences of an Army Mule"; a serial written for the BLADE by an Austrian nobleman; besides our regular departments, "Household," "Answers to Correspondents," "Camp Fire," etc., etc. We publish all the news, and latest corrected markets.
Politically the BLADE will continue an exponent of true Republicanism, believing that the best interests of the country demand the continuance of its control in the hands of the party that represents the highest and most advanced ideas.
THE RUM POWER.
The BLADE will fight this monster iniquity with all the power it possesses, and in every way possible. The BLADE holds the liquor traffic to be a greater curse than slavery, and a thousand times more dangerous to the country.
We ask the co-operation of every well-wisher of the Republic that our work may be effective. We ask every Republican in the United States to assist in extending the circulation of the BLADE, especially among those of the Republican party who believe as we do in the necessity of Pulverizing the Rum Power. We want the BLADE in as many families as possible this winter, that it may be read before the excitement of a political campaign, giving it time for its truths to take root in the minds of its readers.
THE WEEKLY BLADE, $1.00 a year, postpaid, to EVERYBODY. Those preferring, may receive the BLADE, THREE MONTHS, by remitting 30 cents, or clubs of three months trial subscribers, of not less than four, 25 cents each.
OUR GREAT ART OFFER.
A $10.00 Steel Engraving for $1.00. Write us for a specimen copy of the WEEKLY BLADE, which will give full particulars of this, the greatest offer ever made by any publisher. We send specimen copies of the BLADE free to any address. We want as many addresses as possible to send Specimen Copies to. Write a postal card asking for a specimen for yourself, and send us the names of all your neighbors. We want to send out a half million copies within the next month. Don't be modest as to the number.

THE SUN.
NEW YORK, 1884.

About sixty million copies of THE SUN have gone out of our establishment during the last twelve months.

If you were to paste end to end all the columns of all THE SUNS printed and sold last year, you would get a continuous strip of interesting information common sense wisdom, sound doctrine, and sane wit long enough to reach from Printing House square to the top of Mount Copernicus in the moon, then back to Printing House square, and then three-quarters of the way back to the moon again.

But THE SUN is written for the inhabitants of this earth; this same strip of intelligence would girdle the earth twenty-seven or twenty-eight times.

If every buyer of a copy of THE SUN during the past year has spent only one hour over it, and his wife or his grandfather has spent another hour, this newspaper in 1883 has afforded the human race thirteen thousand years of steady reading night and day.

It is only by little calculations like these that you can form any idea of the circulation of the most popular of American newspapers, or of its influence on the opinions and actions of American men and women.

THE SUN is, and will continue to be, a newspaper which tells the truth without fear of consequences, which gets at the facts no matter how much the process costs, which presents the news of all the world without waste of words and in the most readable shape, which is working with all its heart for the cause of honest government, and which therefore believes that the Republican party must go, and must go in this coming year of our Lord, 1884.

If you know THE SUN, you like it already and you will read it with accustomed diligence and profit during what is sure to be the most interesting year in its history. If you do not yet know THE SUN, it is high time to get into the sunshine.

TERMS TO MAIL SUBSCRIBERS.

The several editions of THE SUN are sent by mail, postpaid as follows:
DAILY—50 cents a month, $6 a year; with Sunday editions, $7.
SUNDAY—Eight pages. This edition furnishes the current news of the world, special articles of exceptional interest to everybody, and literary reviews of new books of the highest merit. $1 a year.
WEEKLY—$1 a year. Eight pages of the best matter of the daily issues; an Agricultural Department of unequalled value, special market reports, and literary, scientific, and domestic intelligence make THE WEEKLY SUN the newspaper for the farmer's household. To clubs of ten with $10, an extra copy free.

NORTH PEABODY.

OAK HILL FARM.

This farm is situated in North Peabody, nearly two miles from the Square, on the western side of Andover street. Its border line upon that street is conspicuous for nearly or quite one-third of a mile in extent, by a substantial bank wall, built entirely of split stone. When it was built the farm was owned and occupied by the Hon. Richard S. Rogers, father of the present proprietor.

Nearly two hundred years ago all of this territory was owned by a wealthy and aristocratic family by the name of Derby. As near as we can learn, they owned and lived at that time in the old Batchelder house, which was torn down some years since, located on the bend of the road opposite the "Endicott Farm." This branch of the Derby family also owned large estates in Salem. The Mansion House on Essex street was one, also all the land known as "Derby Square," where the Market House now stands. Upon this previous to the erection of the market house, stood a solid mahogany mansion the residence of some member of the Derby family. This fine structure was torn down to make room for the present building. Both the Endicott farm and the Oak Hill farm were owned by the Derby family. Capt. Nathaniel West, of Salem, an enterprising ship master, married a daughter of Mr. E. H. Derby, thus eventually becoming proprietor of what is now known as the Roger farm. During several years of his ownership it was occupied by the Lander family. It was purchased of Mr. West by Richard S. Rogers, who cultivated and improved it during the remainder of his life, residing there summers and at his residence on Essex street, Salem, during the winter.

The farm is now owned by his son, Jacob C. Rogers, Esq. This farm is not the largest in town as is sometimes stated. It consists of about one hundred acres, a part of which is used for summer pasturage, the remainder is under thorough cultivation, from which large crops of hay, grain, roots and vegetables are annually obtained. Twenty-five cows and heifers are kept upon the place, mostly pure bred and imported Jersey and Guernsey stock. Among them one heifer just imported at Philadelphia. She is six months old and cost her present owner $250. There are, also, four splendid cows, for which large figures were paid. Two pure bred bulls are among the stock, one two years old, the other six months, the youngest a perfect beauty. Twenty of the cows and heifers are in milk. About eighty pounds of butter are sent to Boston weekly, for which eighty cents a pound is obtained from a firm in Quincy Market. Mrs. Greenwood, the wife of the Superintendent, manages the dairy with consummate skill and ability. One yoke of large and handsome Durham oxen and three large horses do the work upon the farm. For swine, only Berkshires and small boned Yorkshires are kept. One hundred and twenty-five fowls young and old, of the Plymouth Rock variety, are kept for their excellence as poultry, and their superior laying qualities.

Through the politeness of the gentlemanly superintendent, Mr. Greenwood, we were shown through all the buildings and allowed to examine all the stock kept upon the farm. All the questions we asked were promptly answered, and we came home strongly impressed with the feeling, that a half day could not be more profitably and agreeably spent, in these dull times, than by an examination of the stock and buildings at Oak Hill Farm, the summer residence of Jacob C. Rogers.

We sigh for Spring!
Last month of Winter!
Another rainy Sunday!
No sleighing for some time!
Winter is on the home run!
No school Friday and Saturday!
The muddy season still continues!
The day is an hour and a half longer!
Base ball talk is beginning to revive!
Rain, rain. More rain. Lots of rain.
Smoking cigarettes makes the fingers yellow.
Who sent us that horrid looking valentine?
This weather takes the profits off the livery business.
Mr. James Perkins of Magnolia was in town last week.
"No-license" will be the war cry this year.—So they say.
Our farmers will hardly do much plowing this month.
The Post will probably net about $2,000 from the fair.
A baked apple before breakfast is a good bowel regulator.
Bean blowers and marbles are fashionable with the boys.
Some one remarked that it was the anniversary of the flood.
They (the ladies) are talking of spring bonnets even now.
The private waltzing class will meet again to-morrow evening.
Mr. Bowman Viles is confined to the house with a catarrhal fever.
A family on Franklin street have lost a pet gray and white cat.
Wm. H. Hildreth drew $5.00 cash at the G. A. R. fair at Beverly.
Rev. Mr. Sprague preached at the Danvers Asylum last Sunday.
William Barrett starts for California about the middle of next month.
About four hundred copies of the Sunday Herald are sold in town.
Mr. William F. Russell of this town, has received a patent on a pocket.
Vinegar and pepper will make a well throat sore, and a sore throat well.
New York will have a world's fair in 1890. Save up your spending money.
The wooden boxes that bring oranges from Florida, are manufactured in Maine.
Messrs. Warren Trask and Warren Shaw had charge of the season ticket drawing.
William S. Nevins fell on Walnut street last Sunday and fractured his right hip.
The cheerful "cycler" now shineth his machine and prepares for summer pedalling.
The new nickles on which the word "cents" are omitted are worth exactly five cents each.
Rev. Mr. Spaulding is willing to place himself in the hands of his friends. Ahem!
Mr. Jacob C. Rogers has been re-elected a director of the Boston and Albany Railroad.
Mr. Patrick Murphy lost a fine hog last week. Another victim to the disease among pigs.
David A. Messer will canvass the town for the new publication of Hon. James G. Blaine.
Mr. W. M. Ward shipped a coop of his premium stock to Central New York last Thursday.
The Essex County Good Templars Union will hold its quarterly session in Newburyport to-day.
Flour is said to be cheaper at the present time, than ever before in the history of the country.
Mr. F. Torrey Upton of Salem will give a short concert of piano music at the French lecture Feb 28.
Yesterday afternoon one of Starr C. Hewitt's teams collided with another vehicle and lost a hind wheel.
Our Postmaster received a comic picture of himself (we suppose) dressed as a policeman and carrying a billy.
It will only cost two cents postage to propose by mail this year. It cost three last year. Everything is cheaper.
Ere long the gentle whisper of the candidate will be around like the humming bird in the spring time, as the March election is not far distant, and somebody will get almost paralyzed.

The shifters' hands had a good deal of trouble Friday night with several cars at the Franklin street crossing.

Next Friday all the little boys and girls will be told the old, old story.

Why George Washington didn't catch it,
For hacking a tree with his little hatchet.

Frank Jones of Portsmouth brewed 184,307 barrels of ale last year. We suspect a few barrels were used in this town.

What's in a name—Henry Clay is running for alderman in Philadelphia, and driving a depot carriage in Peabody.

Ventilated or perforated bedclothes are an English invention which will not probably be adopted in this country before spring.

Ask any of our dealers for eggs, and they look at a fellow as if they thought he had recently fallen heir to an immense fortune.

Some of the boys and large ones too, played Peek-a-boo at a house on Central street the other evening. A word to the wise, etc.

Walter P. Warren, formerly of this town, was elected one of the managers of the stove manufacturers' association of Cincinnati, Ohio.

The Eastern Railroad has adopted Dion & Mignault's patent car coupler for freight cars. It is estimated that 2500 will be required.

House plants are suffering for the want of sunshine, There have not been a half dozen bright clear days since the advent of '84.

We are told that a couple of tramps have lodged for a week in the storm door of one of our aristocratic residences on Washington street.

Some wretched hoodlums tied a dog to the Lowell track and watched the effect of the wheels of a coal train upon it last Thursday afternoon.

The Philadelphia and Reading coal and iron company announce an advance in its eastern prices of 25 cents per ton on stove and chestnut coal.

There is an organized effort on foot to secure an anti-license vote at the coming town election. And a board of Selectmen to enforce the laws.

Peabody is pronounced fairly healthy for the season. Colds are the leading ailment to which may be added a few cases of measles and fewer of fever.

The underpinning of the large fence opposite the Unitarian church, enclosing the Clement estate, was loosened by frost last week and fell upon the side walk.

The business at the post office is not as rushing as formerly. Postmaster Randall is acting as local correspondent of Charles D. Howard's paper, the Salem Post.

The Selectmen have voted to call town meeting March 10, and to recommend to the town, the laying out of private ways in the vicinity of Pierpont street.

An exchange remarks that if there is one time more than another when a woman should be entirely alone, it is when a full line of clothes comes down in the mud.

During the G. A. R. fair an officer was on duty in the skating rink to keep ungentlemanly skaters from spitting on the floor, and he had his hands full in doing duty.

The Unity Club holds its next meeting Monday evening, at the Unitarian Chapel. Mr. Bergen, our high school principal, will read an essay on "Pre-Historic Man.

The new comets have made their appearance in the starry field, but they will not attract much attention, as it is yet too early for young people to sit on the front door steps.

Miss Clara Blanchard, Mrs. Ida McCarthy, Miss Jennie W. Phillips, Geo. F. Rowell and Chas. P. Vaughn were baptized by immersion at the Baptist church last Sunday.

Mr. Geo. B. Chandler has accepted a position in a shoe factory at North Bennington, Vt., and shook the Peabody dust off his feet last Saturday and started for his new home.

We heard one lady telling of another whose bonnet blew off the other day, and she did not discover it until she got home. The narrator of this incident seemed to look upon it as a very singular coincidence; but when ladies persist in wearing a postage stamp for a head covering, we don't think it at all remarkable.

The water was shut off from the entire town of Danvers last Sunday, to make necessary repairs. In case of fire the town would have depended on Peabody for a supply.

Last Saturday afternoon two bark cars left the track of the E. R. R. freight yard, on Central street, and were embedded so deeply in the earth that the wrecking train had to be sent for.

Mr. Charles A. Haskell of this town has donated the handsome sum of $25 to the G.F. and S. W. and O. A. Society of Gloucester. The widows of the Gloucester fishermen are a deserving charity.

Rev. Mr. Chipman of the Baptist church preached a very interesting sermon Sunday upon the subject of Baptism from a Baptist standpoint. His text was taken from the third chapter of Matthew, 13 to 15 verses.

The newly married man who is compelled to stay at home and attend to the cooking of the Sabbath dinner, while his "sweet little wifey" goes to church, realizes that the matrimonial rose is not without its thorns.

Persons versed in bird-ology say that the present season is very peculiar and that feathered bipeds representing sections of our country from Hudson Bay to the Carolinas have been here together during the present winter.

Last Thursday afternoon a carryall driven by Mr. D. N. Stoddard of West Peabody got caught in the horse car track on Main street, and the axle was broken off. The horse did not offer to run away and no one was hurt.

Rev. Mr. Sprague of the Universalist church, has made arrangements with Rev. A. B. Hervey of Taunton, to exchange with him next Sunday. Our people will enjoy hearing their former pastor of the church here.

Mr. Winfield S. Nevins is assistant manager for Essex County of the New England summer excursion to the National Educational Association of the United States, which will hold its next annual session at Madison, Wis., July 15 to 18.

The twelfth annual ball masque occurred at the Malden Skating Rink last Thursday evening. Mrs. S. A. Pope of this town, representing a pack of cards; was present. It was given under the management of Messrs. Cox & Amerige.

One of the peaceable citizens of Lynnfield street had a furious battle with a "critter" which had made himself at home under his barn. The scent of the affray still lingers about the place although the dear little animal is dead.

Moulton and Johnson will present Denman Thompson in Mechanic Hall, Salem, Wednesday evening, Feb. 27th. Uncle Josh will there receive his friends, of whom he has a veritable host. Tickets, at popular prices, will be on sale at Ropes' drug store.

The St. John's C. T. A. Society are advertising their annual dance and promenade concert which takes place at Upton's Hall, Feb. 25, by means of an advertising paper called the "Business Advertiser." The Salem Cadet Orchestra with seven pieces will furnish the music.

Edward Trask is building up quite a trade in his little store. Last Saturday night he was obliged to have an assistant, in order that his customers might be properly served. It may also be said that "Ed" sells for spot cash, and he makes it an object for such traders to buy of him.

One night last week a very neat looking young man called at a boarding house not far from the Square asking for room and board, saying he had a job and would like to locate permanently. He was accommodated and early the next morning left town forgetting to pay his board.

The fishing boat George A. Upton belonging in Swampscott, was taken from its winter quarters at Beverly bridge, last week, and will as soon as ready start on a fishing trip. Mr. Charles Putnam, who formerly kept the fish market on Foster street will have charge of it.

Samuel Trask is building up an enormous trade in his new store. He keeps a large and varied stock—everything in the line of hardware, cutlery, paints, farmer's tools, etc. In fact, a visit to his store is absolutely indispensible to a knowledge of his stock. His prices are also way down.

A surprise party was given Mr. and Mrs. Patrick McGurn on Mason street last Friday evening. The company provided their own supper, and a pleasant time was enjoyed with music and dancing. The Whittenhagen Bros., of Beverly, were present and helped entertain the company.

It is reported that Mr. John Sawyer formerly of this town, ever ready to advance any new enterprise that will facilitate his business has on his western ranche attached a telegrahic battery and machine to his barbed wire fences, and uses them for a telegraphic wire to send messages from one part of the cattle range to another.

The large and interested curbstone committee, adjourned last Saturday from in front of the post-office, to the front entrance to the court room and patiently awaited for the doors to open and allow them to listen to the argument in the Hayes case. Most of them were disappointed, however, as only enough to comfortably fill the court room was admitted.

The temperance meeting at the Institute, last Sunday evening, was very interesting. Mr. Neil Shaw opened the exercises and introduced the speaker, Mrs. S. Louise Barton, of Lawrence, who delivered an address occupying three quarters of an hour. The Baptist choir under the direction of Mr. Eri Littlefield, was a very pleasant part of the exercises.

The mock town meeting by members of the Murray Club at the Universalist Vestry last Monday evening was a very pleasant occasion. The warrant contained twenty-one articles, and several gentlemen had prepared elaborate remarks to carry their point. Should it be repeated and the public admitted it would be a pleasing entertainment for the public.

Quite a number of the Peabody members of the Naumkeag Encampment I. O. O. F. paid a visit to Boston Encampment last Wednesday evening. The work was exemplified by the admittance of five members, after which the company proceeded to Parker Memorial Hall where a banquet was served. A special train left Boston for Salem shortly after one o'clock.

The Grand Army Post, of this town, will bring the Boston Museum company to the new Opera House next Monday night, in "Led Astray." This is one of the oldest Museum successes,—and a play in which Barron and Annie Clark appear to fine advantage. Tickets have been put at the low price of "50 cts. all round"—and surely there is no reason why everyone should not go.

The valentines caused considerable extra labor at the Post-office this week. The sending of valentines is, as a general thing, an injury; for the occasion is taken advantage of by those who wish to deride or insult some one of their companions. The result is hard feelings and possibly enmity. But few handsome or complimentary valentines are sent through the mail—cheap trash predominates.

Six persons, three ladies and three gentlemen, are on the side of a lake, and desire to cross. There is only one small boat, which will hold but two persons. Each gentleman is so jealous that he will not allow his lady to be in company with one of the other gentleman, unless he, the first gentleman, is present. They all cross, however, with safety, and with satisfaction to all the gentlemen. How do they do it?

People who buy tickets in lotteries and fairs, should see that the number of their ticket ends with the cabalistic figures 99. At the G. A. R. Fair there were 3200 coupons in round numbers in the wheel, and with 60 prizes the chances are one to 53. In 3200 consecutive numbers the figures 99 in ending the number can occur but 32 times; therefore, by the law of chance, there should be one prize ticket ending with "99". As a matter of fact, the 99 took the first prize of $500

Mr. Thomas Conlon, better known as "Mud Tom," died at his residence on Andover street yesterday. He was an eccentric little Irishman, and received his name of mud Tom, on account of a house he built of mud some years ago. This house was built from the side of a hill, and had a mud and thatch roof. He followed the occupation of a farmer. His wife refused to live in the mud house during the winter as it was so damp, and always went to Salem, using it as a summer residence.

COMPETITORS
Baffled and Dumb-founded at the Prices we Name!

Many of these goods are marked down below the actual cost of manufacture, and in some cases below the cost of material. No such bargains were ever before offered in America. We have received orders from our Head-quarters, 395 Washington St., Boston, to mark down and close out our Men's, Boys' and Children's Heavy Overcoats, Ulsters, Suits and Pantaloons at once. The Counter Room we must have for the Spring Goods we are now manufacturing. Men and Boys, now is your time to buy, as we are selling all wool garments for less money than some dealers sell shoddy for. It is a fact, and we can prove it to your satisfaction.

Poet's Corner.

A Clear Conscience.

She? She was a girl in the chorus,
I sat in a box beside Mape,
While she sang and capered before us,
And I rather fancied her shape.
Her face, too, was quite prepossessing,
And then she wore elegant hose—
Perhaps I should say that her dressing
Was not meant to quite hide her toes.
In short I had justification;
My taste I'd no cause to defend,
And found, on a brief consultation,
My views were approved by my friend.
And thinking I seemed interested,
As he in the green-room could go,
My friend very kindly suggested
We'd meet the girl after the show;
And if, after that, I elected
To hint at a supper and wine
He not for a moment suspected
I'd find her disposed to decline,
The offer was very beguiling;
I wanted to go, for a fact.
She looked very charming when smiling,
I thought of the scheme for an act.
But supping with one of the ballet,
Though fun it may be, I admit,
Like chumming around with one's valet,
Is dropping the standard a bit.
And so, though my fancy inclined me
To take up the offer and go,
I threw the temptation behind me
And summoned the nerve to say no.
The lark would have likely proved jolly,
But then to have felt all next day
That I had been guilty of folly
Was rather a big price to pay.
I'm now a clear conscience possessing—
A nice thing to have as a rule—
But still have the thought most distressing,
That maybe I've been a blamed fool.

Out of Love and Out of Debt.

BY GEORGE BIRDSEYE.

Of happy men the happiest yet
Is he that's out of love and debt;
Who owes no kiss to womankind,
Who has no duns to craze his mind;
With heart and thought and conscience free,
Where is the man more blessed than he?
"Out of love and out of debt,"
Motto none will e'er regret.

To all surroundings reconciled,
He sleeps as sweetly as a child;
By neither love nor death distressed,
His dreams but glorify his rest.
He never dreads the morn to see,
For days with days in peace agree.
"Out of love and out of debt,"
Motto none will e'er regret.

Who's had his share of debt and love
Knows what the peace they rob him of;
And, once relieved of love and debt,
His slavery never can forget.
No longer will he bend the knee,
But sing the pæans of the free.
"Out of love and out of debt,"
Motto none will e'er regret.

For all the bliss that love can give,
There's more of woe with love to live;
He plucks the perfect, thornless rose,
Who, honoring manhood, no man owes,
No love, no debt, ah! there's the key
Of life for him who'd happy be.
"Out of love and out of debt,"
Motto none will e'er regret.

A Yarn of a Skein.

I held a skein of yarn for Ruth,
She was as pretty a maid, in truth,
As any you shall see.
I did not hold it to her liking,
She said, my clumsy fingers striking,
I did it awkwardly.

Well, then, I try to mend my ways,
In vain, the witching damsel says:
"Its in a fearful tangle."
She puts her white hands close to mine
And tries the muddle to untwine,
It catches in her bangle.

I drop the yarn—Yea, let it travel
Where'er it will, untwist or ravel,—
I wash my hands of it,
And gently take her dainty wrist,
Feigning the tangles to untwist,
The first she knows her hand is kissed,
She does not care a whit.

She blushes just a little, though,
(Pale rose-leaves, wind-kissed, act just so)
And, as she meets my eye,
She murmurs, the entrancing maid,
With double meaning, I'm afraid,
"You do this splendidly."

Too Soon Awakened.

I waked, and waked too soon, alas!
For, while I slept, it came to pass;
A step fell lightly on the floor,
A step well loved in days of yore.

A voice spoke tenderly the words,
That made me glad as singing birds;
Ah! long ago those tones I knew,
When darkly clouded days were few.

I waked, and waked too soon; ah, me!
For waking called sad memory,
Unto the throne, and drove away
The dear delusion's happy play.

And memory brought the heavy tread,
And tones too harsh for love to wed;
And words, that better far had fled,
Where flee the unimmortal dead.

Then let me sleep, since sleeping brings
A fond delight on soft white wings;
Nor let me haste to wake again,
Since waking only brings me pain.

Demorest's Monthly for March

The Vanished Choir.

Once more, after years, in the quaint old church,
To the choir I bent my ear,
But vainly, through it made listening search,
For the voice once held so dear.
No lack of melodious art was there,
Still grand were the chords of praise,
Yet I missed with a pang the familiar air
Of the choir of my boyhood's days.

The sweet, pure flood of my sister's voice,
Of my brother's full-toned and clear,
And of yet a dearer, whose accents choice
Made my pulses stir to hear;
And of friend and neighbor, each quite distinct,
In the symphony—where are they?
Gone, vanished and mute—a chain distinked—
An accord that had died away!

I mourned their loss; and then vague and dim
Grew the notes of the later choir,
And there seemed to swell on the air a hymn
Rich and strong with the old-time fire.
With a thrill ecstatic I recognized
Each tone in remembrance kept,
While that one dear voice, than of all more prized,
My innermost heartstrings swept.

So real it was that I turned my head
To the singers as if to see,
The prayer eyes of my beautiful dead,
Looking down, as if old on me;
When the spell was dissolved—I recalled no face,
No glance the new choir among,
And the dream-hymn, fading, gave gradual place
To the psalm that was being sung.

Sad and sedate through the Gothic door
I passed with the goodly throng,
And the quaint little church was hushed once more
So to rest for a whole week long;
But for days and days, in recesses gray
Of memory, long locked fast,
A phantom choir held sovereign away
With the anthems of the past.

Selected Story.

Dolly's Destiny.

"I shouldn't be surprised any day, Dolly, to see David Wiggin tying his horse at your gate," said Mr. Blount, roguishly, gathering up the reins.

"Nonsense, brother! Anything the matter with his own hitching post?" retorted Miss Dolly turning in the doorway.

Mr. Blount laughed. Everybody felt bound to laugh at Miss Dolly's crisp sayings that had kept her friend in good humor these forty years.

"And when David does call on you," pursued Mr. Blount more seriously, "I do hope, Dolly, you'll give him his chance to do his errand. That'll be no more than fair, and the man won't be easy until he has freed his mind."

"What mischief are you the forerunner of now, James Blount?" cried Miss Dolly, about like a soldier on drill. "What facing upon earth have I to do with David's errands?"

"Well, his wife has been dead a year or more," said Mr. Blount, suggestively, shutting one eye, and squinting with the other down the length of his whipstalk, "and lately he has been asking about you. You can put that and that together to suit yourself."

"Fiddlesticks!" exclaimed Miss Dolly, energetically.

"I sha'n't say have him or don't have him—though there isn't a likelier man living than David—but I do say, Dolly, you ought to give him a hearing," and having convinced himself beyond a reasonable doubt that the whip was all right, Mr. Blount tickled his horse with it and drove away.

"Oh, my sorrows!" ejaculated Miss Dolly, closing the door with an afflicted countenance, and sitting down so quietly for once that a photographer might have copied her then and there.

Now that he could have done her justice, for her expression was too quick and varied to be caught by a trick of chemicals, and without it Miss Dolly's physiognomy would have been rather characterless but for her prominent Roman nose. This organ gave tone to her face. By which I would not be understood literally, as saying that she talked through a nasal whine. I mean simply in a metaphorical sense, this bold feature spoke loudly of energy. And Miss Dolly had abundant need of energy—else why the nose? Every two years during her childhood she had been tiptoed into the east bedroom to see a new baby, till at her mother's death, five little brothers fell to her charge to be coaxed and scolded into manhood.

"You can't bring up those boys," groaned a dolorous aunt. "They'll run square over you, Dorothy Almeda."

"Let them run over me so long as it does not hurt 'em!" laughed Miss Dolly, skewing her flaxen hair with a goose-quill and tying a calico apron over her calico longshort, preparatory to "bringing up said youths.

From that day forward she went cheerily on, making the best of everything, though it must be confessed she often had odds and ends to work with, as people usually do have who are born with a faculty. Somehow she found time for all her duties except matrimony. If that were a duty, it was one she wouldn't and couldn't attend to while her father and children needed her. Divers young men thought this a great pity, among them David Wiggin.

"Don't be silly, David!" said Dolly, when he hinted as much to her; whereupon David went off and married Olive Searle, the plainest looking girl in the parish.

This happened thirty years ago, and David was again wifeless and again the current of his thoughts turned toward Dolly, who still lived at the old homestead at the foot of Bryant's Falls. Her father had died some months before. Of the boys James and Ezekiel had settled on neighboring farms and the remaining three had gone west. David's benevolent heart warmed with compassion as he remembered Dolly's lonely condition, and he felt that it would be exceedingly kind in him to offer her a home especially as he owned as good a place as you can find on the river, while the Blount cottage was falling into decay.

He wouldn't let her former refusal tell against her, for as he looked back, he couldn't really see how she could have married any one at that period. She ought to be rewarded for the devotion she had shown to the family, and, for his part, he felt magnanimous enough to give her a second chance to accept him. Such was the worthy widower's state of mind when he asked James Blount with mock humility whether it would be of any use for him to try and make a bargain with Dolly.

"That's more than I can tell," Mr. Blount had answered. "Dolly's a puzzle; you'll have to find her out yourself."

Mr. Wiggin smiled in complacent anticipation of acceptance; indeed if it might not seem like reproach to the memory of his lost Olive, I should say the kind-hearted man rejoiced in this opportunity of making Miss Dolly's happiness. Benevolence was in his face, benevolence was in his spirit, as he sallied forth at an early day to acquaint her with her good fortune. The broken harrow which he had strapped into the wagon to give the neighbors a plausible reason for his trip to the Falls, was by no means typical of mental laceration to its owner. His feeling as he approached Miss Dolly's moss-grown cottage was purely one of thankfulness that it was in his power to provide her a better home. Not that he was grateful to his dead wife for leaving a vacancy there. Mr. Wiggin had mourned faithfully for Olive a year and a day.

Miss Dolly was out in the garden gathering catnip. She had built a chip fire under the tea kettle and then whisked off to pick an apronful of the pungent leaves while the water was boiling. There she was stooping beneath the eaves of a log-cabin sun-bonnet, and humming a lively tune when Mr. Wiggin drove up.

"'Come, my beloved, haste away,'" piped Miss Dolly, cheerly, snapping away briskly at the stalks.

"'Cut short the hours of thy delay;
Fly like a youthful—'"

"'Fly like a youthful—'" struck in a wheezy bass.

The sun-bonnet tipped back like a cart-body.

"Sakes alive!" cried Miss Dolly, not in the words of the hymn, as Mr Wiggins strode toward her on his slightly rheumatic legs.

"I didn't mean to put you out," he laughed, shaking hands heartily; "but it seemed kind o' nateral to take part with you in 'Invitation.'"

"You always had a way in falling in at the most unheard of time, I remember," retorted Miss Dolly, saucily, recovering herself and going on gathering catnip.

"You used to say I kept good time, only too much of it," pursued Mr. Wiggin, with a sudden inspiration; "but I tell you what, Dolly, time never did drag with me more than it does these days."

"It is a dull season," said Miss Dolly with exasperating simplicity. "I suppose the grasshoppers have eaten most of your wheat—haven't they—so it'll hardly pay for reaping?"

"Just so," assented Mr. Wiggin discomfited.

He had not travelled five miles in the heat to discuss the state of the crops.

"Walk in and sit down, won't you?" said Dolly, with reluctant hospitality.

Her apron was crammed to its utmost capacity. She devoutly wished it had been larger.

"Well, yes, I don't care if I do," answered Mr. Wiggin, after a hypocritical show of hesitancy. "I had a little business further on at the blacksmith's. No hurry, though, as I know," and he turned to let down the bars for Miss Dolly who meanwhile slipped through the fence, catnip and all. "Bless my heart! I don't see but you are as smart as you ever was," said he, admiringly, as he puffed along in her wake. "Still you must be getting into years, Dolly, as well as I—no offence, I hope—and I was wandering whether or no it wasn't lonesome for you living here a woman so?"

"Oh, I never was one of the lonesome kind," responded Miss Dolly, briskly, seating her guest in the patchwork cushioned rocking-chair, "and for that matter hardly a day passes without some of James' folks running in."

"Yes, I know; but if you was to change your situation, wouldn't you enjoy life better, think?"

Miss Dolly fidgetted at the green paper curtains and intimated that her happiness would be complete if the grasshoppers would stop feeding on her garden sauce.

"That's just it," continued Mr. Wiggin, eagerly; "you do seem to need a man to look out for your farming interests now don't you, Dolly? a man that will be ready and willing to do for you, and make you comfortable?"

"I don't know," said Miss Dolly, dryly. "The year father died I did have Silas Potter, and he is the most faithful creature living; but what with the extra cooking and washing I had to do for him, my work was about double, and when mud-time came, I was glad to send him off and hire by the day. I made up my mind that men folks around the house cost more than they come to."

"I guess we don't understand one another," said Mr. Wiggin, slightly disconcerted at this unflattering view of his sex. "I wasn't speaking of hiring help, Dolly. Naturally you would get tired of that. It's worrying to a woman. But if you was to have a companion, now—one that could give you a good home, with wood and water under cover—"

"Shoo! shoo!" cried Miss Dolly, flying out after an inquiring chicken on the doorstep.

Mr. Wiggin drew his red handkerchief from his hat to whipe his glowing face. Certainly he had not felt the heat so bad through haying.

"How's your health, now-a-days?" asked Miss Dolly, frisking back with a look of resolute unconsciousness.

"Very good; remarkable good! I don't know where you will find a man with a tougher constitution than I have got."

"Ah!" and Dolly blushed like a sumac in October.

"Yes, I'm well," pursued Mr. Wiggin, perseveringly, "and I'm tolerable well-to-do, with nothing to hinder my marrying again, providing I can see a woman to my mind."

"There's the deacon's widow," suggested Dolly, officiously; "she's pious, economical—"

"She's left with means enough to carry her through handsomely," interrupted Mr. Wiggin, quickly. "Now I'd rather have a wife to provide for—one that needed a home. In fact, Dolly, I have my eye on a little woman I want this very minute."

He had both eyes on her for that matter, and Miss Dolly was forced to recognize the situation, whether she accepted it or not.

"I've managed to sweeten my tea so far, David, without calling upon my neighbors," chirruped she, stooping to lay straight the braided mat, "and I might as well keep on. I don't feel it a tax as some folks would. But there's Martha Dunning she's having a hard time to get along. Why don't you take her, David? She'd appreciate such a nice home as yours."

"It would seem as if most any women might," said Mr. Wiggin in an injured tone; "all finished off complete, painted outside and in—"

"She'd be delighted with it—I'm sure of it!" broke in Miss Dolly, with an air of conviction, as she darted into the kitchen to lift the boiling kettle from the crane.

"But you don't mean that you won't marry me, Dolly?" pleaded Mr. Wiggin, anxiously following her to the door. "I have been doting on seeing you at the head of things at my house."

"Martha is a good manager," said Miss Dolly, coolly. "David needn't think he can buy me with a new set of buildings!" added she, mentally, snapping down the lid of the pug-nosed tea-pot. "I never did have the name of being croping."

"I tell you, Dolly, I won't have Martha I don't like her turn!" cried Mr. Wiggin testily balancing himself on the threshold yet not daring to step over it.

Miss Dolly gave her undivided attention to winging the hearth.

"You know you was always the woman of my choice, Dolly," pursued Mr. Wiggin, as tenderly as he could consistently with the distance between them. "And when we were both young—"

"Pshaw!" snapped Dolly, scorching her wing, "that's beyond the memory of man."

Mr. Wiggin's position was becoming painful. Miss Dolly was not to be won by the attractions of wealth and position, nor even by tender allusions to the past. He would appeal to her kindness of heart.

"I used to believe you had some feeling, Dolly," said he, tremulously; "but you don't seem to have any for me. Here I am left here all alone in the world; children all paired off, 'thout's Matilda, and she'll go before the snow flies; house empty—"

"I suppose you can have a home with any of your boys and welcome," put in Miss Dolly, still fluttering about the chimney like a swallow.

"Yes, if worse comes to worse, I suppose I can," assented Mr. Wiggin, mournfully, anything but consoled by his reflection. "It would break me up terribly, though, you may depend, to give up my place that I set so much by and crowd myself on my children."

No response save the clattering of the tongs.

"And it's dreadful melancholy business for a man at my time of life to drag along without a partner. I'm getting too old, Dolly,' and Mr. Wiggin brushed his sleeve across his eyes as a feruled school-boy might have done. "Yes, I'm getting to be old, Dolly, and it stands to reason that I haven't many years to live; but I did hope that we might go down hill together, Dolly, you chirking me up with that spry way of your'n that I always took to, and carrying the heft of—"

Here Miss Dolly gave a little sniff, nothing worth mentioning only for the effect it produced on Mr. Wiggin.

"Can't you make up your mind to have me, Dolly?" pleaded Mr. Wiggin. "I don't see how I am going to stand it if you can't."

"Then Miss Martha wouldn't suit," said Miss Dolly, archly. "What a shame now, when she needs property so much!"

"Hang the property! I'd mortgage the whole of it rather than not get you!" cried Mr. Wiggin, with a vehemence that quite closed her mouth.

And so at last he had Miss Dolly.

PRIMEVAL TINDER.

There are some kinds of mushrooms, notably the woody and leathery ones, that no more suggest ideas of a meal to us than a log of timber or a pair of old boots do. But if we do not think of eating them, we can fashion them into excellent razor strops or other useful articles on occasion. Several polypores make first-rate tinder, and for such purpose they have undoubtedly been used from very remote times. We infer that fires were kindled by their means in the ancient Swiss lake dwellings, from the fact that they occur among the remains in almost every one of these old habitations. The common tinder polypore has also been found in the lake dwelling at Lochlee, in Ayrshire. Perhaps they may have been put to some other use. These old lake dwellers were probably not without their vices, and may have pounded polypores to dust and snuffed that up as eagerly as certain natives of Northern Asia do at this day.

Landlord Roberts was woke up one night by hearing some one travel about the house, and, lighting a candle, found one of his guests in full shirt dress wandering through the rooms. "What do you want?" said Roberts. "I want to find the hen-pen," said the man. "What in thunder do you want of the hen-pen at this time of the night?" asked Roberts. "Well," said the man, "you see I lost my pillow somewhere, and I wanted to get into the hen-pen and get a feather and make another."

LOCKING THE TOWER.

The locking up of the Tower of London at night is one of the cumbersome old ceremonies still in use. A few minutes before the clock strikes eleven, the porter with an attendant, appears before the main guard-house, carrying a lantern, and calls out "Escort Keys." The guard, supplied always from the Queen's houshold troops, then turns out and escorts "Keys" to the outer gate, called the "Spur," each sentry challenging as they pass his post. "Who goes there?" "Keys." After the gates are securely locked and barred the procession returns, the sentries exacting the same explanation as before. When they come in front of the main guard-house the sentry stationed there gives a loud stamp on the ground with his foot and demands, "Who goes there?" "Keys." "Whose keys?" "Queen Victoria's keys." "Pass Queen Victoria's keys and all's well." The porter then calls out, "God bless Queen Victoria!" to which the main guard responded, "Amen." The guard then present arms, the officer kisses the hilt of his sword and the keys are deposited in the Lieutenant's lodgings. After this all ingress or egress is impossible. It sometimes happens that strangers visiting the pile do not get out before the time comes for locking up. In that event they may have to sleep—or keep awake—on benches in the guard room.

WRESTLING CAMELS.

Wrestling matches between camels is an amusement in which the Turks take great delight, although they sometimes get a fine animal maimed in the sport. The camels are trained to wrestle when quite young, and take much pleasure in the fray. A correspondent writes: We had a young one on board, only a month old, and as he was born under the flag he was christened "Uncle Sam." One of the Turks amused himself on the voyage making a "pehlevan" of him, and when he was six weeks old he was more than a match for his master, using his legs, neck and mouth with such dexterity, and displaying such wonderful strength in so young a thing, that he became a very rough playmate, and often hurt the men by throwing them down. This feature seems to be natural to the camel, for when two strange ones come together where there are any females they have a wrestling match for the supremacy, and the conquered one ever after acknowledges his inferiority by not so much as daring to glance at a female. Well-trained animals seldom injure each other, being taught to throw their antagonist by getting his neck under their fore leg—the right one—and then throwing the whole weight of their body on him and bringing him to the ground.

ODD DERIVATIVES.

Canard is a French word, meaning duck-decoy.

Padlocks is from the Danish word padde, a toad, and is so called from its resemblance to that animal.

The word "man" signifies thinker. In Sanscrit "man" is to think. Our English verb "mean," and nouns "mind" and "mania" (from the Greek) are from the same root.

The word chic, as used by artists, and indicating a certain indefinable superiority, is derived from the German words schick or geschick, meaning skill, dexterity, talent, or knack.

The origin of "fudge:" This is a curious word, having a positive personality underlying it. Such at least, it is, if Disraeli's account thereof be authentic. Disraeli quotes from a very old pamphlet, entitled, "Remarks Upon the Navy," wherein the author says: "There was in our time one Captain Fudge, commander of a merchantman, the Buck Eagle, of the time of Charles II., who, upon his return from a voyage, how ill-fraught soever his ship was, always brought home his owners a good crop of lies, so much so that now, aboard ship, the sailors, when they hear a great lie told, cry out: 'You fudge it!'"

A BLIND MAN'S BALL.

A novel entertainment was that given not long since in Philadelphia. The promoters and many of the participants in the affair were blind men and women. It was the first grand sociable of the Enterprise orchestra, an organization of recent date, the members of which are blind, and many of whom were pupils at one time or other of the institution. The orchestra is composed of about a dozen pieces. There were about fifty couples on the floor, men and women both being in their vision. Three or four hundred friends and spectators were present. The orchestra played all the latest popular airs in good tune, and were frequently applauded. The dancing music was also remarked upon, the quadrilles being given with the same precision as if each member of the orchester could read the score before him. A remarkable sight was that of the quadrilles, two couples in each of the "sets" being blind. They executed the figures very well, with the assistance of those who could see. Of course there was some mistakes, but those were taken so good naturedly that they merely lent interest to the occasion.

The French gun factory of Fives Lille has just finished a cannon which presents some peculiarities of proportion and shape, but whose chief novelty is a compact wrapping of fine wire arranged around it as tightly as possible by a machine constructed expressly for the purpose. The gun is evidently built after the Longridge type, and at various times descriptions have been given of it. The preliminary tests have shown that the resisting strength of the gun metal is more largely increased by this device than it would be by an equal weight of similar metal cast with the tube itself.

SELLING

BOOTS AND SHOES

— AT —

MANUFACTURER'S PRICES.

A DECIDED SUCCESS.

A great many firms in Lynn are puzzled at the large attendance and great success of our special sales, simply because these same firms have failed in their own efforts to attract attention and accomplish the same results. The reasons are plain, for we assert that our establishments can show many advantages over others. We give the following, which are convincing:

First.

Enormous stock. The immense stock of our wholesale house, together with our two retail stores, 84 Market street and 23 Market Square, make a stock to draw from five times larger than all the other shoe stores in Lynn combined.

Second.

Low Rents. While our competitors are handicapped by having to pay exorbitant rents, we with our three stores, have to pay rent only on one—a fact, the significance of which as bearing upon our ability to sell for less than others, will be apparent to all.

Third

Wholesale. Our wholesale trade, which now extends to every city and town of any importance in New England, obliges us to carry an immense stock and gives us an advantage in buying entirely beyond the reach of our competitors. For where they buy of the jobbers in small lots, we buy direct of the manufacturers, and that we can buy as low as the large Boston jobbers is abundantly attested by the fact that we are able to meet and compete with them on their own grounds and build up a wholesale trade which is constantly increasing.

Fourth.

One Price. Marked in plain figures on every pair of boots and shoes, guarantees low prices.—Equal treatment to all classes and shows at a glance the quality of the goods.

Fifth.

Truthful Representations. No misrepresentations are tolerated. Goods are sold for just what they are. Some stores adopt the "bait" plan, advertising great slaughter, immense bargains, etc. Call in half an hour after such stores open and in nearly every instance the salesman has the old story to tell you: "All gone;" "haven't your size;" "too late;" "very sorry, but we have had such a rush they are all out.—Can't we show you something else?" We have no such nonsense. It won't do.

Sixth.

Quick Sales and Small Profits. Quick sales are the life of a successful business. Small profits are sufficient when the business is done on live business principles. You save one profit by buying of the wholesaler.

Seventh.

Exchanging Goods or Refunding Money. When any dissatisfaction occurs because the selection does not please in every particular, the goods, if returned uninjured in a reasonable time, can be exchanged; and it matters not of whom it was selected, any salesman at leisure will pay careful attention to the customer. In case nothing is found to please, the cash will be cheerfully refunded.

Eighth.

Prompt Cash Payments. We are so conscious of the overwhelming advantages we possess both in buying and selling we have no hesitation in asserting that no prudent purchaser can afford to buy anything anywhere else until they have looked through our stock and got our prices. Ready money in our hands enables us to buy goods in large quantities at figures that the average retailer knows nothing about. To-day we stand simply as the connecting link between the manufacturer and consumer.

We have an immense surplus stock which we are going to close out during this sale. In order to accomplish this purpose we know at the outset that it will be necessary to offer sufficient inducements which we are determined to do. Consequently, in this instance as well as all others, we appeal directly to the interests of every purchaser, regarding that as decidedly more potent than volumes of positive assertions.

TO THE PUBLIC!

We have always possessed the idea that the poor man's hard earned dollar should purchase just as much as a like amount of his wealthy neighbor.—WE BELIEVE IT. WE ACT UPON IT. Three years ago it was hard to convince customers that a firm in the FURNITURE business would or could make such a departure. WE DID, and our business to-day is a pleasing monument of its kindly reception by the people of Lynn, Swampscott, Saugus, Nahant, Marblehead, Peabody, Danvers, Lynnfield, Salem, &c., to whom we are more than thankful.

J. D. & J. W. EATON, Dear Sirs: Enclosed please find check for amount of bill for CRAWFORD RANGE and Ware. It arrived last Friday noon, and we had it set up and a fire in it before four o'clock. We are more than pleased with it. All our cooking was done Saturday morning. It usually takes all day to do it. My wife thinks she shall take to cooking again herself, as it is real fun to cook with such a Range as the CRAWFORD. Hoping you may sell a great many more of them, and every purchaser be as well pleased as we are. I remain yours, very truly,

An Astonished Inspector.

The insurance companies must have plenty of money. Every few weeks somebody comes in and looks our premises over, glances at the stove pipes, smells the benzine bottle (sometimes with a disappointed face), and asks all sorts of questions. We do not grumble. We like to see people active, and are glad to discover that some people are impertinent besides newspaper reporters.

One of them called at the Gazette office the other day. He looked up stairs and down, and found no fault till peeking through a window from the composing room into the cellar, he discovered a small boiler surmounted by a steam guage which registered a pressure of 115 pounds. He was evidently astonished, and inquired if we considered the boiler safe to use.

'Perfectly.'

'You are running an unusual pressure. What is your safety valve set on?'

'Don't know. Never examined.'

'Has this boiler been tested recently?'

'Not that we know of.'

'Do you always run that amount of pressure?'

'Usually.'

'You are running a great risk. Shall have to examine it at once You are endangering the life of every person in the building. I must order you to reduce the pressure at once, and will see that the boiler is inspected.'

We made no reply, but when that man examined the boiler and found that it was merely a shell which had not been fired up for half a dozen years, and that the 'printer's devil' had fixed up the steam guage in his spare moments, while waiting for copy, he said naughty words which so shocked us that we have turned the guage around, and the only person who can look at it is the boy who comes in to guess at the gas meter.—Milford Gazette.

A Word to Barbers.

A face well lathered is half shaved.

When about to stroll out of an evening, fill your coat pockets with cloride of lime.

After you have thoroughly soaped your customer's face, seize him by the nose and begin operations. This enables him to breath through his ears.

In your conversation ask as many questions as possible that require an immediate answer. Swallowing soap don't injure a person seriously.

It is considered very unprofessional for a barber to brush his customer's coat. If the boy happens to be absent let the customer brush his own coat.

Never fail to remind a man that his head is full of dandruff. The tonsorial artist who neglects this plain duty, doesn't know any more about his business than a barber.

Do not think of selling your "Egyptian Lustral" for less than a dollar a bottle. Affairs in Egypt are somewhat unsettled, and, besides glass costs money—a little.

Always keep on your table a six month's old copy of the Police Gazette and also a copy of the Fireside Companion. These two publications are indispensable to every well regulated barber shop.

If you have been eating onions and drinking gin be frank with your customer and tell him so. Otherwise he may think it is the sewer, and bother the weekly newspaper writing letters about it.

If you find that your customer is about to swallow his "Adam's Apple" you should at once shave in that direction. In this way you can cut quite a hole in his throat, and it will apparently be his own fault.

Never fail to call the attention of your customer to the celebrated tonic of your own manufacture. The fact that you made it yourself will go a long way towards effecting a sale—particularly with strangers.

If, while cutting hair and watching a dog fight on the street at the same time, you find that your shears come to an abrupt stop, neglect the dog fight for a moment. Otherwise you may cut off somebody's ear.

If your customer wears a pair of fourteen dollar calfskin boots, a brass watch and chain and a colored shirt you are safe in presuming that he is a brakeman on a passenger train, and you can proceed to color his mustache a solemn black.

When a man comes in whom you know to be a stranger, always ask him if 'he has a cup?' He will say no, of course; but his manner will indicate that he is pleased. As a rule none but bankers, brokers, statesmen and editors indulge in the luxury of a private cup.—Philadelphia Call.

Book Notices.

Our Little Ones for February is a gem One could almost wish to be a child in order to experience the pleasure a "little one" must feel in the possession of such a treasure. The engravings are charming and suggestive, especially the picture of the "Four Years Old" and "Grandmother's Clock."

The March number of Demorest's Monthly cannot fail to bring pleasure to its readers. It is filled with good stories including the continuation of the admirable serial, "The Shores of Nothing," and variety of miscellaneous articles of an interesting naure. Among these are "A Duke who wrote Maxims," "The Norman Housewife of the Middle Ages" "The American Girl at Home and Abroad," and "Life in New York" by Jennie June. The illustrations, as usual, are excellent, the frontispiece being an oil picture, "The Rise of the Moon," an art production that is both novel and beautiful.

Ballou's Monthly Magazine for March, is an unusually lively number, containing as it does an illustrated paper on submarine diving, by an expert, and the third installment of "On Land and Sea." In this chapter the vessel arrives at Monteray, and vivid description of the town is given as it existed at the time, with a glance at some noted persons, among them Mr. Thomas O. Larkin, afterward the American consul. Old residents of California should read this story as it is full of interest. Ballou's Magazine is only $1.50 per annum postpaid, or 15 cts. a single copy. Published by Thomes & Talbot, 23 Hawley street, Boston.

THE BELLE OF AUSTRALIA.—The thousands of readers of Mr. William H. Thomes' former books, will be made glad by the announcement of a new work by this most popular author. While it possesses an abundance of exciting interest, the central interest of the story is involved in the adventures and scrapes which befall the hero, on account of his exact resemblance to a certain English nobleman, for whom he is continually and persistently taken. Interwoven with this fiction are many charming descriptions, for which Col. Thomes' travels admirably qualify him. For straightforward writing, comprehensible and engaging, he has earned a reputation which cannot fail to be increased by "The Belle of Australia." He aims to interest his readers, and in the range of fiction to which the novel belongs, he has wrought well in plot, in the delineation of character, and in keeping close to the facts of actual life. It is one of the best stories of Australian life ever written, and few who take it up will leave it before they have reached the end of the book. Sent, post-paid, on receipt of price ($1.50), by De Wolfe, Fiske & Co., Publishers, Boston, Mass.

Our lady readers can hardly fail to have their attention called this week to the latest combination of improvements in that most useful of all domestic implements, the "sewing machine." As we understand it, a machine for family use should meet first of all these requirements. It should be simple in its mechanism; it should run easily; it should do a wide range of work; it should be as nearly noiseless as possible; it should be light, handsome, durable, and as cheap as is consistent with excellence throughout. These conditions the "Light-Running New Home" certainly meets. It has also several very important and useful attachments and "notions" of its own, which go far to make good its claims to popular favor. The "New Home" specially recommends itself to purchasers on account of its superior mechanical construction, ease of management and reasonable price. Over half a million have been sold in the last three years, all of which are giving universal satisfaction. This unrivalled machine is manufactured by the New Home Sewing Machine Co., 30 Union Square, New York, who wish us to say that all who will send for their new illustrated catalogue and enclose their advertisement, (printed on another page) will receive a set of fancy advertising novelties of value to those collecting cards, etc.

THE PHOTOGRAPHIC CAMERA.

Although the photographic camera has been aptly described as "a retina which never forgets," and although we know that the image it produces is true as to form, it is within the experience of everybody that photographic portraits are not always good likenesses. We are inclined to attribute this failing to the circumstance that by photography it has hitherto been found impossible to give colors their true shade-value, if we may invent a term to serve our purpose. What we mean is this; yellow to the eye is a brilliant light tint; but in a photograph it is reproduced almost black. Red, instead of giving the idea of fire and light, comes out black. Blue, photographs perfectly white. Such changes, of course, play sad havoc with complexions and contrasts of color generally, and persons with hair and skin exhibiting exceptional brilliancy of coloring are quite justified in remarking: "I never make a good photograph." According to a note brought before the Photographic Society of France recently, this stigma upon photographic portraiture is not to remain. By the addition to the usual ingredients of the sensitive photographic surface of one per cent. of eosine, the difficulties which we have described can be altogether obviated.

NEW YORK MERCURY,
FOR 1884.

With the initial number of the New Year, dated January 6, 1884, the NEW YORK MERCURY entered upon its

FORTY-SIXTH VOLUME,

and it is by long odds the cheapest, as well as the largest, handsomest and best metropolitan literary journal now published. Each number contains 56 columns, or 1,800 square inches of reading matter, comprising more than 15,000 lines

EQUALLING THE CONTENTS OF A TWENTY FIVE CENT MAGAZINE.

Arrangements have been consummated, both at home and in Europe, to secure for the ensuing year many sterling novelties to increase the already incomparable variety of literary attractions which have always made the NEW YORK MERCURY a welcome guest in every home circle, and

A PAPER SUITABLE FOR ALL CLASSES,

celebrated throughout the length and breadth of the land for its

LATEST FASHION NEWS AND SOCIAL INTELLIGENCE,
A CORRECT AND EXTENSIVE MIRROR OF THE AMUSEMENTS OF THE WORLD,
ALL THE FEATURES OF A REFINED FAMILY NEWSPAPER,
AND ALL THE LIVE SENSATIONS OF THE METROPOLIS.

In fact, the New York Mercury contains more stories than the story papers. More news than the newspapers. More fun than the comic papers. More theatre news than the dramatic papers. More society news than the society papers. More exclusive local sensations than all the papers.

JOHN P FERNALD, ALBERT VITTUM,
Editors and Publishers.

ELSEWHERE IS given the argument by the opposing counsel before Justice Merrill in the case of William Hayes. The evidence was printed in our last issue, and the entire affair has been the theme of general conversation in store, shop or street.

That the evidence given was sufficient to justify the holding of Hayes for the grand jury, is beyond question. Further than that it is not the province of the newspaper to go. It is to be remembered that the defense of Hayes has not been heard, except so far as it was outlined by Mr. Northend. The public will do well to rest their judgment until the case comes before the grand jury.

There can be no doubt of the act committed, and this we do not understand the defense to deny. Some one drove into Mr. Farnham's yard on the night mentioned. This is proved beyond question by three witnesses. It is also equally certain that the explosive fuse was placed in the barn of Mr. Farnham by this man—whoever he was. Whether it was done with malice intent, or by some one to simply frighten Mr. Farnham, as the attorney for the defense seemed to claim, the public can judge.

We do not think the method of procedure by the party placing the fuse there so preposterous as Mr. Northend would have the Court understand. Mr. Farnham's house, as is known to our readers, is a goodly distance from the Square. More than that, it is considerably retired. A man in a buggy with a good horse at that time of night could with considerable assurance trust to it to escape detection. Even if discovered, the possibilty of identification would be slim; few people are on the street in that retired part of our town at nine o'clock, and the police —well we don't imagine they are very numerous in that quarter. What easier thing, then, for the man to accomplish his purpose and get away before he could be identified? If he had accomplished the burning or firing of the building, the attention would have been entirely directed thither. That it failed and that the quick ear of Mr. Farnham discovered the presence of a carriage in his yard, removed the affair from what might easily have been an impenetrable mystery. Neither Mrs. Farnharm nor the girl heard the team, and we think the possibility of no one hearing it until the object had been accomplished would seem highly probable to one who would conceive such a plot. When the object had been accomplished it would be but the work of a few moments to get entirely out of reach.

The performance of such a dastardly outrage, shows the necessity existing, that not alone in the more populated portion of the town, but in the outskirts as well, there should be an increased force of police. If we have in our midst, without stopping to consider who they are, parties who will make such attempts to destroy property, if not life,—a better protection is needed. Surely there is no man among us who desires anarchy and incendiarism, instead of quiet and order, to prevail.

The Selectmen will call a Citizens' Caucus for the nomination of candidates for the Town Offices, to be held probably on Friday evening Feb. 29.—Danvers Mirror.

That is as it should be in this town. If the town pays the bill for the caucus why shouldn't the Selectmen call it?

INDICATIONS surely point, at the coming town election, to an effort to secure a no-license vote on the liquor question. That the temperance people will obtain a large vote in opposition to the sale of intoxicants seems also to be reasonably evident. Under existing circumstances, as far as the sale of liquor is concerned, it will make little difference. Previously there has been just as much sold under one law as another. Neither has been enforced in Peabody, and we doubt if there is an attempt to enforce it.

We have previously in the PRESS expressed the opinion that a Law and Order League would be an ally very important in this respect. We don't mean the organization of a few radical prohibitionists, but a League in which all who love order and the enforcement of law could heartily join hands. If the town should vote license, let them see that the last is complied with. This has been done in Woburn,—and successfully. Two noted liquor sellers, one the representative from that town in the Legislature, have been convicted and the conviction sustained by the higher court. We are in favor of the enforcement of the law, whatever that may be. Those who are only in favor of the enforcement of law, when it agrees with their idea—who are anxious to enforce prohibition, but would not take a step to enforce any other law—these people do the temperance cause, and the cause of law and order, an infinite amount of harm. If the law is not what we would make it, let us take the best we can get, and work for its enforcement.

The cause of Law and Order could in other ways be effectively advanced by such a League. There are by-laws of this town which we should like to see better enforced than they are now. And with a live organization representing the citizens of our town in goodly numbers, behind the police, we think they would be encouraged to take notice of the violations of law which are now apt to be winked at. It seems to us at least worthy of consideration.

The third entertainment of the Oratorio and Symphony course will be given at Mechanic Hall on Thursday evening next, by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Mr. Georg Henschel, Conductor, and as soloists Mr. and Mrs. Chas. F. Webber, Mr. Bernhard Listemann, Mr. E. M. Heindl and Mr. Alex. Freygang. The following is the programme:

Overture (Olympia) — Spontini
Aria (Euryanthe) — Weber
Mr. Webber.
March from the Symphony "Lenore" — Raff
Songs with Piano
Mrs. Webber.
Scherzo from the Suite "Roma" — Bizet
Andante from the Concerto for Flute and Harp — Mozart
Mr. Heindl and Mr. Freygang
Andante from the Serenade in Canonform — Henschel
Ballad for Violin (MS)
Mr. Listemann.
Duet (The Seasons) — Haydn
Mr. and Mrs. Webber.
Overture (William Tell) — Rossini

While Mr. Geo. Bushby, driver for Samuel Donnell & Son, was taking orders at a house near the Alms House, this forenoon, his horse started and striking against a post became frightened and ran away, and brought up near the old Naumkeag house, having broken the box protectors from several young trees during his flight. At this place the horse cleared himself from the wagon, having broken a shaft and the harness, and came home to the stables. Mr. Bushby had to walk about a mile and a half in the rain.

Have you noticed Wilmot's windows in Salem recently? They are filled with bargains, and just now he is making some special prices in goods to order. You can get a pair of pants to order for $5.00 which any tailor would charge $9.00 for—the best goods and best work. In ready made clothing, the price is no object. Everything is marked down to rock bottom prices. We never before saw clothing so cheap. If you don't believe it—why take a look at his stock, where you will be shown every attention.

The attention of our readers is directed to the great carpet sale inaugurated by Almy, Bigelow & Webber of Salem. The firm will make a special offer of spring importations at very low prices — that their patrons may have an opportunity to make their purchases before the rush that inevitably follows later in the season. Their carpet trade has assumed immense proportions—a fact which our readers will do very well to note.

Mr. J. W. Vaughn will set up a large setting out machine, of his own invention at Richardson, Doyle & Co's. this week. The rolls through which the leather will pass are 9 feet long.

Edward J. Poor, a 19 months old son of Joseph Poor of this town, was awarded the third prize at the baby show at the Beverly G. A. R. fair, Tuesday, for being one of the handsomest babies present. The prize was a chased gold ring.

We received a very pleasant call last Friday from Mr. Edwin Ayres, of Brooklyn, N. Y., editor of the Official Guide and Semi Weekly Advertiser, who with his wife, is visiting his mother-in-law, Mrs. Benj. Doughty who is ill.

SCHOOL NOTES.

WALLIS SCHOOL.

It may be of interest to the readers of this column to learn something regarding the term of service of the teachers of our public schools, and for this purpose we have carefully collected the following facts from the Wallis school.

Miss Hill, the 1st assistant, was employed in April, 1878, and has served in the position which she now occupies since that date, a period of nearly six years.

Miss Stratton, the 2nd assistant, began first as principal of the Felton school in 1871, and after five years of service in that school was transferred in 1876 to her present position, having served continuously for a term of thirteen years.

Mrs. Williams, who is now 3d assistant, began teaching in the West school in 1867, but was soon promoted to the principalship of the Rockville school, where she remained till 1878. In all Mrs. Williams has taught fourteen years in our schools.

Miss Jacobs was elected to a position in the Wallis school in 1869 and has not been absent from her position for a single week, during the fifteen years of her service.

Miss Batchelder began her first service in the Center school in 1872, continuing until last year, when she was transferred to the Wallis school, having been employed as teacher twelve years.

Miss Hannan was elected in 1869 to a position in the Bowditch school, but was soon thereafter changed to the Wallis school, where she will soon complete the fifteen years of teaching service.

Miss Forness was elected to the Wallis 1st primary in 1875 where she remained for six years. Three years ago she was transferred to the 2d primary, making a total of nine years of continuous service in the primary department.

The above record represents eighty-four years of service in the schools of town, by seven teachers, or an average of twelve years to each teacher. During the above period no considerable advance in the salary of any of these teachers has been made, but on the contrary a reduction of fifteen per cent. in the average pay has occurred.

It would certainly seem that the longer the service and experience of teachers, the more valuable ought that service and experience to become to our schools; at least, this principle is usually conceded and enforced in all other occupations, and why should not this be applied to this department of labor?

We believe that all our teachers are entitled to a better compensation than they are now receiving and we feel confident that the citizens of this town would willingly contribute to the end if the matter was fairly presented to them.

This week, Sadie Peirce of the first class was presented with an illustrated edition of Gray's Elegy, for memorizing the poem.

Monday afternoon the scholars of the High and Grammar schools, who are to take part in selected pieces in the Concert, held a rehearsal in the hall of the Wallis school building.

Prof. C. R. Bill, teacher of music, has nearly completed all arrangements for the concert to be given to-morrow evening. The last mass rehearsal occurs this afternoon in the new Town Hall.

If the parents and friends of our schools wish to know whether any progress has been made in music this year, let them attend the concert to-morrow evening.

CENTRE SCHOOL.

Nothing has "taken" among the children like the concert, except the measles last winter.

J. Albion Cowdrey has lately sent to the Principal a fine specimen of his penmanship, as acquired at Burdett's Commercial College.

Miss Wilkins, first assistant, is expected to resume her school duties next week, after an absence of eight weeks which she has spent with her sister at Clover Bend, Arkansas.

HIGH SCHOOL.

Since the dedication of the new Town Hall, the lower part of the old building has been utilized as a gymnasium. The School is divided into two sections one of which have exercises in gymnastics each day. The time spent is about 20 minutes, and is taken from the time of the former recess.

Several changes in text books have been made this term.

Isn't it about time the town made provision for a decent school room for this school? As it is, it is the poorest house in town. Now that the whole building is empty, it might be made at least more comfortable than at present.

SO. PEABODY.

This school has had a case of, to put it mild, kleptomania this week. For some time past the teacher and pupils have missed small articles, such as pocket knives, a thimble, a pair of rubbers, several handkerchiefs and an umbrella, some of which have been returned. One of the pupils, a girl, about 13 years of age, was accused of the theft and on reporting it to her father, a very insulting letter was sent to the teacher, Miss Emery. She has put the matter into the hands of the school committee.

EVENING SCHOOL.

It would have been a good idea to have taken a vacation at the evening school last week. The G. A. R. Fair reduced the attendance to a very small number. There was a great dearth of both scholars and notes of interest.

The school generally has kept eight weeks, but will probably continue ten weeks this year.

SCHOOL COMMITTEE.

The sub-committee have during the week investigated the charge that liquor was used at a recent dance at the West Peabody School House hall. While the use of liquors on the premises was denied, yet there were several things to indicate that every thing had not been as pleasant as might have been desired, among them the fact that those only who had been invited were admitted to the last dance.

TRUANT.

Several arrests for truancy have been made by truant officer J. H. Thomas, during the week, and truancy is on the decrease. At the Wallis school where it has been the worst there have been no cases for several days.

SPARKS.

Engineer Daniel B. Lord has been confined to his house for over a week with a severe cold.

The adjourned meeting of the Trustees of the Relief Association will be held in the engine house, Thursday evening.

Hose 3 will hold a leap year party in their hose house on Friday evening, Feb. 22d,—music by the Danvers Quadrille Band. The boys assisted by their lady friends will be sure to have a good party and all the firemen will turn out to help them.

There will be a leap year party on George Washington's birthday in the house of No. 3 hose company, at Peabody, Mass. The ladies who sent out the invitations had never heard that George was dead, and, thought it would be only an act of common politeness to invite the man whose birthday they intended to celebrate. The invitation is awaiting delivery at the dead letter office. Peabody girls don't know much about history.—Firemen's Herald.

The Herald man evidently don t know the Peabody girls, and it will not be safe for him to venture to come on to the dance, as they are practising for his scalp. If they do not know anything about history, they are great on a good time.

When the wise housewife at Peabody, Mass., desires to refurnish her house she goes down to the hook and ladder company's quarters and learns the latest styles in furniture and decoration.—Firemen's Herald.

Charles H. Hooper has been elected as Trustee for Hose 3, for the new Relief Association.

Alarm of fire at 11.45 P. M., last night caused by a lamp post getting fire, from a leak around the gas jet. The alarm was given by some one coming out of the Town Hall, but the apparatus did not start out, with the exception of Hose 1, which got into the stree .

S. C. Bancroft Hose No. 5 of this town, were awarded the Fireman's badge for selling the greatest number of tickets to the G. A. R. fair.

In Salem, Feb. 17, Edwin H. Locke, 32 yrs. 9 mos. 23 days. Funeral Wednesday at 2 o'clock p. m. at 14 Orchard street. Relatives and friends are invited to attend without further notice. Mr. Locke was an active member of the Abel Proctor H. & L. Co., No. 1 of this town for a good many years, and as a fireman and a friend had won the love and respect of all his brother firemen.

Tickets for the fourth Annual Ball of the Three One's and a Two are on sale by mmbers of the different companies at one dollar each. z.

The masked party in Essex Hall Tuesday evening, was a complete success, over 125 persons being present. In the grand march about 25 couples took part, in all conceivable rigs—clowns without number, darkies, soldiers, cowboys, gypsies and others. The devil was present to look out for Punch and Judy and the baby. Eben I. Kimball and wife as Punch and Judy, were perfect in their make up. Other prominent suits were—Boston Herald, Miss Lizzie Burton; Spangled suit, Mrs. George Morgan; Morning and Evening, Mrs. Hodgkinson, of Salem; Sailor Boy, Dougherty; Gypsy Queen, Mrs. Annie Holt. There were many good characters, too numerous to mention. The music was fine, being furnished by Upton's Band. Dancing was kept up till 12 o'clock.

The Manufacturers' Gazette, of last week, contains a description and illustration of Electric Light Plants, as constructed and fitted up by the Jarvis Engineering Co. It shows that all the companies equipped by the Jarvis Co. have succeeded, being able to show a profit, while their competitors have been running at a loss.

DRAMATIC AND MUSICAL.

You can in most cases tell, by the number of tickets sent to the press, whether it is an amateur or local company, or a professional one, as the two former always send the least possible number, while the latter's generosity is in accordance with its standing in the profession and the size of the editorial staff of the paper they are dealing with.—Chel. Telegraph.

Disagreeable as the weather has been for much of the week, it has not kept at home so many of Margaret Mather's friends that the audiences at the Boston Theatre have been otherwise than large. This is Miss Mather's last week. Doubtless the interest and enthusiasm, now so great, will be more noteworthy than ever. Never did young artiste find greater favor. It will present the artiste in the role of Julia, in "The Hunchback," for the first time on the Boston stage. There is to be a special matinee on the holiday next Friday. "The Hunchback" is to be given this evening and at the matinee Saturday. "Romeo and Juliet" is to be acted for the actress' farewell Saturday night. "The Lady of Lyons" is the play for Thursday night. "As You Like It" will find representation at the special matinee on Washington's birthday, while "Leah, the Forsaken," is to be played on Friday night.

Mr. and Mrs. McKee Rankin are favorites of such long standing in Boston, that they will have an unusually pleasant greeting when they come upon the Park stage. A new play is to be presented—Bret Harte's "Gabriel Conroy," which is the latest addition to the repertory of these players. Mr. Rankin playes the title role, and Mrs. Rankin will appear as Ollie Conroy. The company gives promise of unusually excellent support. It includes Mr. Frederick Bryton, recently of the Madison Square, Mr. J. J. Wallace and Miss Ada Crisp.

The Bijou management, controling the entire right to Suppe's opera in English, and desiring to make the production surpass even past achievements at this house, will defer the first performance of "A trip to Africa" until to-morrow evening. There has been a great demand for seats to the opera which will be costumed, it is promised, with oriental elegance, as well as noteworthy for scenic and electric light effect never yet presented on the stage.

Only for a single week can Mr. Irving, Miss Terry and the London Lyceum company remain with the Boston public. Their engagement, which begins on Monday of next week, will probably be most brilliant and successful. It will be the farewell of Mr. Irving and his corps of artists to this city.

Nilsson, Sembrich, Valleria, Fursch-Madi, Campanini, Stagno, Del Puente, Kaschmann and all the artists of Mr. Henry E. Abbey's Italian opera will appear for a week's return engagement at the Boston Theatre March 3. The season is likely to introduce a grand presentation of Meyerbeer's "Le Prophete," which made such a success in Cincinnati, as well as "Don Giovanni." The repertory will be made especially attractive.

Margaret Mather has a new Rosalind dress this year much more effective if less subdued than that worn last season, and which reminded one of Neilson. It is brown hose, cross gartered, gray boots, brown velvet doublet and brown cloth cape, with a jaunty velvet hat. The effect of the dress is suggestively masculine.

"The Silver King" is a fine play and will be worthy the care and outlay attending its production on the 17th prox., at the Boston Theatre. Wilson Barrett made a great hit in London as Wilfred Denver, a part that Mr. Redmund is to play here, while in New York and through the country. The drama, wherever seen has pleased the public greatly. Its run at Wallack's was a triumph.

RICH NEW STYLES in furniture can be obtained in Boston of the manufacturer at remarkably low prices. Paine seems to be leading in this; already his immense stock is attracting people from near and far. We know of no other establishment in America that carries so large a stock of nice furniture ready to deliver at once and at such remarkably low prices. A visit to his store 48 Canal Street, opposite Maine Depot will prove to any one what we say to be correct.

MAYO'S
Compound Vegetable Anæsthetic.
A safe and pleasant substitute for gas and ether.
Discovered by Dr. N. K. Mayo of Boston, April 1883, subsequently administered by him in nearly two thousand cases, producing perfect slumber, being applicable to the child, the delicate sentitive woman as well as the hardy man. No ill effects have followed its use in any case, it acting rather as a vegetable tonic.
It controls the patient one-fourth longer than gas giving us time to remove from three to twenty teeth. It is with great confidence we have introduced it into our practice, giving very successful results.

HOME HAPPENINGS.

On Tuesday, Feb. 19, 1884. at 2 P. M., a meeting of ladies was held at the ladies room of the South Church, Peabody for the purpose of organizing an Old Ladies Home Auxiliary Society, the object being to assist in the establishment and support of a Home for aged women in the town of Peabody. The meeting having been called to order, Mrs. H. S. Osborne was chosen chairman of the meeting and Mrs. H. H. Proctor, Sec. pro. tem. A brief statement of the object having been made, Mrs. Thatcher read a paper, which the trustees of the fund already established for the purpose of providing a Home for Old Ladies, had presented and recommended, as a basis of organization, and also as a heading for the purpose of soliciting subscriptions. The following is a copy: "We, the undersigned, hereby agree to give the sums set against our names, toward the establishment of a Home for aged women in the town of Peabody. All sums are to be paid to George H. Poor, G. Fred Osgood and George M. Foster, or their successors, Trustees of a fund already established for that purpose and are to be administered and disposed of by said Trustees, with the co-operation of the President, Vice-President and Treasurer for the time being, of the South Danvers Female Benevolent Society, agreeably to the terms of said trust. All sums are to be payable when the total sum pledged and raised, shall amount to eight thousand five hundred dollars in addition to the amount now held or available by the Trustees and officers above named." It may be here mentioned that the amount of funds now in the hands of the Trustees is $6,650. Having accepted the above basis of organization, the following officers were elected: President, Mrs. Eliza Sutton; Vice Presidents, Mrs. George Sanger, Mrs. D. B. Lord, Mrs. D. P. Grosvenor, Mrs. Joseph Jacobs, Jr., Mrs. Augustus Harrington, Mrs. John Osborn; Treasurer, Miss Addie Little; Secretary, Mrs. Mary E. Roberts. The above officers constitute a board of Directors. A constitution was adopted on the basis recommended, and it was stated that the sum of one thousand dollars had been promised to the new society, by one person, and that several others had agreed to give one hundred dollars each. It is hoped that many others of our citizens will follow their example, and give according to their ability, that a Home may be speedily established.

At a meeting of the fourth quarterly conference, of the Washington street M. E. Church, Dr. L. R. Thayer, P. E. presiding, the following officers were elected for the ensuing year: Board of Stewards, L. F. Moulton, L. W. Foan, Wm. A. Saunders, John Baxter, John Steele, J. W. Reed, W. H. McMath, Peter Sim, Jr. Board of Trustees, L. Stiles, I. A. Drowne, N. Kimball, N. N. Gilman, B. F. Goodwin, C. W. Jenkins, A. McKean, W. C. Bancroft, T. E. Smith; Com. on Missions, Mrs. L. F. Moulton, Hattie Saunders, I. A. Drowne, Annie E. Lynch, Ella Johnson, Emma L. Frye, Emma Fellows; Com. on S. School, Wm. A. Saunders, J. Steele, C. W. Jenkins, Lottie Sim, W. J. Goldthwaite, Ella McMath, Martha Larrabee, Grace Jenkins; Temperance Committee, W. A. Baker, Peter Sim, Jr., W. McMath, Winnie Jewett, Hattie Saunders, H. Perkins, Mary J. Goldthwaite; Music Committee, L. W. Foan, I. A. Drowne, T. G. Smith.

The concert of school children under the direction of Prof. Bill at the Town Hall to-morrow evening is the result of an arrangement which is not generally understood by our citizens. In the spring of 1883 the musical instruction in the schools had become so irregular that the school committee were desirous of putting it under the charge of some more competent teacher, but were unable to do so from want of funds at their disposal. At that time Mr. Bill offered to undertake the work for the salary of $150, for the purpose of showing what could be done by the Mason method of instruction, believing that an interest would be awakened which would lead to the continuance of his work. It was also agreed that the schools should give a concert for his benefit, to show the results of his instruction and compensate him in part for his services. The concert is therefore an exhibition of the musical work or the schools, and the children's contribution toward the payment for their instruction.

Although the weather has been mild and sloppy, soft and juicy, so to speak, for a few days, the prudent citizen who has lived long in New England is in no hurry about taking down his stove or folding away his overcoat. When we least expect it another cold wave will be knocking at our doors.

Savannah shad and "new" maple sugar are in the market.

Another of our well known leather manufacturers has departed this life—James M. Caller, probably best known as a partner in the old firm of Brown & Caller. Mr. Caller had been ill for some time, of paralysis, and his death was not unexpected by his friends. He was born in the state of New York, in 1813. In 1830 he came to Danvers, entering the tannery of his uncle. He afterwards went back to New York and was associated with his father in the freighting business. In 1842 he entered the leather store of his uncle, R. C. Southwick, remaining two years. Afterwards he came to Danvers again, and was one of the firm of Jas. M. Southwick & Co., and later with John Pinder and Rufus H. Brown. In 1876 he retired from the firm, since which time Mr. Caller has engaged in no active business. His residence has been of late years in Salem, and he has served the city as member of the Common Council and Aldermen. He married Lucy Frye, daughter of the late Caleb Frost, who, with a large family of children, survive him. He was a member of the Society of Friends.

Last Saturday evening was one of the balmy evenings that are not given us often at this season of the year. And beneath the stars which studded the sky, three young men were "holding down" the pavements in front of a house on Main street, talking about the G. A. R. fair and occasionally fanning out an ejaculation not found in the book of etiquette. Presently a feminine voice floats on the balmy zephyrs and explodes above their heads, and took the following shape: "If you young men don't quit using profane language, I'll have you arrested." Words fail to express their astonishment but on looking up they discovered the expounder of the threat, dressed in white clothes standing at the window. One of the boys suggested that she "pull down the blinds" as they moved along.

A public temperance meeting, under the auspices of the W. C. T. Union will be held in the Vestry of the Cong. Church next Wed. evening, Feb. 27, at 7.30. Mrs. Gordon—wife of Dr. A. J. Gordon, and President of the Boston Union, will read a paper on the present aspect of the Prohibitory work, and also give an account of her systematized plan of reaching voters with temperance literature. Mrs. Gordon is a very pleasing speaker and a most efficient worker. All are invited. A collection will be taken for the benefit of the Union. Mrs. Gordon will also address the Band of Hope at 3.30, in the room of the W. C. T. U.

Didn't know who he was talking to; A short time ago Rev. Mr. Nevis of Danvers occupied the pulpit at the South Church, and came down from Danvers in a team. After the services were over he went out and while getting out his team a stranger came out of the church and said to him, "Who was that fellow who preached to-day?" The minister said, "he is the new Danvers minister, who has only been there about two weeks." The man then said well, he gave us a good sermon any way, and passed on.

The trustees of the Old Ladies' Home met at Rev. Mr. Hudson's last Saturday evening. Much important business was entered upon and attended to. It was decided that the sum of $6500 which the treasurer now holds is too small to start the home upon at present. About $15,000 is deemed sufficient, and until that amount has been received it is probable that no steps will be taken. Much substantial encouragement has been promised by our people and the founding of such an institution is not an event of the distant future.

A remonstrance signed by a large number of corporations in this state has been presented to the legislature, "against the passage of any act fixing by law a limit of time for the payment of wages, believing all such legislation to be inexpedient in theory, partial in its application, wasteful in practice, of doubtful constitutionality, and calculated to permanently damage the interests of all concerned." Among the signers we notice the Danvers Bleachery of this town.

A boy who certainly ought to have known better, crawled into a dry gutter under the railroad track on the South Reading branch last Saturday, to see how it would seem to have the train go over him. It happened that the fireman was breaking clinkers at that particular time, and the hot coals fell upon the urchin's body. It is needless to state that wails, and the odor of burning cloth were the predominant features in that vicinity for several minutes.

Slush and mud are very disagreeable, but it should be remembered that a little mild weather is a very acceptable boon to a multitude of the poor and unemployed. It not only makes the lack of food and shelter easier to bear, but provides work for many artisans who cannot carry on their trades when severe cold weather stops out-door work.

Don't scold the milkman if he's late now-a-days. He has a hard road to travel.

A concert was given last evening in the Unitarian Church, under the auspices of the Unity Club, and for the aid of the Organ Fund. Financially it was a success,—but not so great as it should have been. The efforts of the Unity club to create a fund for a new organ are commendable; and when an entertainment like that given last evening is presented, the members of the society and their friends ought easily to fill the church. This was not the case last evening. But there was a goodly number present, and they were treated to a fine concert. The pulpit was removed from the platform which was handsomely decorated with flowers and potted plants, through the kindness of Mrs. W. H. Brown. The concert consisted of two quartettes by the choir, Miss Grace F. Dalton, Miss M. K. Felt, Messrs. Emerson and Chase, with Frank Upton as accompanist. Those who are in the habit of hearing this quartette sing need not to be told that these selections were well performed. Mr. Isaac Littlefield, who sings in Rev. Mr. Stimpson's church in Worcester, sung "The Angel at the window" and Marguerite. He also appeared in a duet with Mrs. Fernald. Mr. Littlefield has a voice of peculiar sweetness of tone, coupled with a magnetism that carries the audience with him. He was listened to with rapt attention, and repeatedly encored, giving an admirable execution of "The Summer Shower" and a Laughing song. F. C. Record, of Salem, gave two pieces for the violin. Mr. Record has improved much since last year, showing a skill and expression which is rarely equalled for so young a man. Misses Dalton and Felt sung a duet, Mrs. Culliton and Miss Southwick played two piano duets and Mrs. Fernald sang the "Waiting Heart" with violin obligato. The accompanist for the soloists and for Mr. Record was Miss Nellie M. Bartlett, to whose excellence the audience are indebted for no small share of the evening's pleasure. Their sun shall no more go down, a quartette for ladies by Dr. S. P. Tuckerman, was admirably sung by Miss Dalton, Mrs. Osgood, Miss Felt and Mrs. Ferguson.

The man who mends broken umbrellas was around this section last week. This brings to mind an incident in relation to this peculiar gentry that can be told briefly as follows: He called at a certain house in this town, and was given a valuable umbrella, on which slight repairs were made. The job done, he offered to take a dinner for his pay which was given him. After dinner he departed taking with him the umbrella he had repaired and leaving a worthless one in its place. Meeting the "man of the house" in the yard he collected of him twenty-five cents for repairing the umbrella and departed. Question. Wasn't that a good speculation for the umbrella man?

To the Masons of the United States: The Masons of Cincinnati represent that a calamity greater than ever known is now upon the Ohio Valley. For hundreds of miles not only Masons in great numbers, but thousands of men, women and children are homeless, cold and hungry. Every source of charity must be called on to relieve their distress. If any Masonic body desires to contribute to this noble purpose remittances may be sent to the Masonic Flood Committee, Masonic Temple, Cincinnati. The above has been sent us for publication.

He came down the street one morning last week, smiling all over himself, passing the reporter gently by on the corner of Mill street. We looked after him and wondered what was up. Some of the boys followed him to the railroad station, and say he wanted to climb the monument and hug the statue, he felt so good. Well, we didn't think this of Officer Sweeney, but we guess a 14 pound infant arriving at his house that morning accounts for it.

Next Friday Essex Lodge, F. & A. M., will hold an all day session in their hall for the exemplification of the work of the order. The morning session will open at 9 a. m., when Liberty Lodge, of Beverly, will exemplify the first, or Entered Apprentice degree, followed by an exemplification of the second, or Fellow Craft degree by Essex Lodge, of Salem. In the afternoon at 2 o'clock, Jordan Lodge, of Peabody, will work the third, or Master Mason's degree. The meeting will be open to all master masons, and a Grand lecturer will be present.

Mr. E. Welman Osborne, brother of Mr. Jonathan E. Osborne of this town, died at his residence on Walnut street, Lynn, last Wednesday, aged 76 years. He was born in the old Bowditch house in this town, and was the first Foreman of the Torrent engine company, when it was located on Central street. Mr. Osborne moved to Weare, N. H., when he was about 36 years of age, and engaged in the grocery trade. About 15 years ago he came to Lynn, and bought the Lynn Hotel. He leaves a widow, two sons and a daughter.

The sun is evidently ashamed of his rubicund visage at night and at morning, for he has hardly shown his face during the week.

AYER'S
Cherry Pectoral.

No other complaints are so insidious in their attack as those affecting the throat and lungs: none so trifled with by the majority of sufferers. The ordinary cough or cold, resulting perhaps from a trifling or unconscious exposure, is often but the beginning of a fatal sickness. AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL has well proven its efficacy in a forty years' fight with throat and lung diseases, and should be taken in all cases without delay.

A Terrible Cough Cured.

"In 1857 I took a severe cold, which affected my lungs. I had a terrible cough, and passed night after night without sleep. The doctors gave me up. I tried AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL, which relieved my lungs, induced sleep, and afforded me the rest necessary for the recovery of my strength. By the continued use of the PECTORAL a permanent cure was effected. I am now 62 years old, hale and hearty, and am satisfied your CHERRY PECTORAL saved me.
HORACE FAIRBROTHER."
Rockingham, Vt., July 15, 1882.

Croup.—A Mother's Tribute.

"While in the country last winter my little boy, three years old, was taken ill with croup; it seemed as if he would die from strangulation. One of the family suggested the use of AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL, a bottle of which was always kept in the house. This was tried in small and frequent doses, and to our delight in less than half an hour the little patient was breathing easily. The doctor said that the CHERRY PECTORAL had saved my darling's life. Can you wonder at our gratitude? Sincerely yours,
MRS. EMMA GEDNEY."
159 West 128th St., New York, May 16, 1882.

"I have used AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL in my family for several years, and do not hesitate to pronounce it the most effectual remedy for coughs and colds we have ever tried. A. J. CRANE."
Lake Crystal, Minn., March 13, 1882.

"I suffered for eight years from Bronchitis, and after trying many remedies with no success, I was cured by the use of AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL. JOSEPH WALDEN."
Byhalia, Miss., April 5, 1882.

"I cannot say enough in praise of AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL, believing as I do that but for its use I should long since have died from lung troubles E. BRAGDON."
Palestine, Texas, April 22, 1882.

No case of an affection of the throat or lungs exists which cannot be greatly relieved by the use of AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL, and it will always cure when the disease is not already beyond the control of medicine.

FACULTIES OF BIRDS.

In studying the habits of birds one cannot but be struck with the fact that in proportion to their many dangers, experiences, and pleasures, they become warm-hearted, quick-witted, bold or timid, ferocious or cunning, passionate as the falcon, or deliberate as the rook, according to the life they have to lead. And more than this, we find that they display in many ways a remarkably high degree of intelligence. The water-hen, for instance—which is found from Siberia to the Cape—has a kind of human facility, as Mr. Ruskin observes, in adapting itself to climate, as well as almost human domesticity of temper, with curious fineness of sagacity and sympathies in taste. A family of them, much petted by a lady, were constantly adding material to their nest, and made real havoc in the flower-garden, for though straw and leaves are their chief ingredients, they seem to have an eye for beauty, and the old hen has been seen surrounded with a brilliant wreath of scarlet anemones! This æsthetic water-hen, with her mate, lived at Cheadle, in Staffordshire, in the rectory moat for several seasons, always, however, leaving it in the spring. "Being constantly fed the pair became quite tame, built their nest in a thorn bush covered with ivy which had fallen into the water, and when the young ones were a few days old, the parents brought them up close to the drawing-room window where they were regularly fed with wheat, and as the lady of the house paid them greater attention, they learned to look upon her as their natural protectress and friend, so much so that one bird in particular, which was much persecuted by the rest, would, when attacked, fly to her for refuge; and whenever she called, the whole flock, as tame as barn-door fowls, quitted the water and assembled around to the number of seventeen. They also made other friends in the dogs belonging to the family, approaching them without fear, though hurrying off with great alarm on the appearance of a strange dog.

FLOATING GARDENS.

Among the most remarkable illustrations of human energy are certainly the floating gardens in Kashmir, in Eastern Asia, the more so that they are the work of an essentially indolent population. For their creation an expanse of water about nine miles in circumference has been utilized, on which masses of weed, grasses and aquatic plants grow and become intertwined and entangled. These form the soil as it were, on which cultivation is carried on. Divisions are made in them, they are cut level with the surface of the water and then banked over with river mud. Property prepared for this purpose, this soil is sown with melons and cucumber plants, and a crop is raised which is unequalled in any country in quantity and quality. These melons and cucumbers are sold in a good season at the rate of ten or twenty for two cents; in dear seasons they bring two cents apiece. Floating gardens in Mexico are upon much the same plan, but are usually devoted to the culture of flowers.

A rancheress of Washo Valley, Neb., has invented a novel method of preserving eggs for winter use. During the summer she breaks the eggs, pours the contents into bottles, which are tightly corked and sealed, and then placed in the cellar, neck down. She claims the contents of the bottle come out as fresh as when first put in.

At a large dinner party in a certain city lately, frosty weather had done considerable duty in supplying conversation, when a plump, happy-looking married lady made a remark about cold feet. "Oh, surely Mrs.——, you are not troubled with cold feet?" said a lady opposite. Amidst an awful pause she naively answered, "Yes, indeed, I am much troubled—but then, they are not my own."

Messrs. Francis Newberry & Son, London, Eng., established for 125 years, write: As a testimonial from one of the oldest drug-houses in Great Britain, respecting your household remedy, will no doubt be of interest to you, we are pleased to make the statement that we have sold St. Jacobs Oil with satisfaction to the public, for several years, and that owing to the extraordinary merits of the article, the demand is continually increasing, and that we have heard of many favorable reports regarding its great virtues as a pain curing remedy.

How I make bread.—I take a package of Horsford's Bread Preparation, sift it in twenty-five pounds of flour, set it away, and have it handy for use. When I mix a batch of bread, I take sweet milk, stir in flour until it is a very thick batter, pour it into greased pans, and put them in a hot oven. I have my oven and pans hot, before commencing to mix, and put the loaves into the oven just as quick as I can. That is all I have to do. Result: bread that is sweet, moist and light.

Swedish Botanic Compound and Swedish Lung Balsam, taken together are the best and most rational of all remedies for consumption. Under their influence the cough abates, the night sweats cease, and the patient rapidly recovers health.

A letter from Gov. Robinson was read at a meeting of the Essex county Homœopathic Medical Society in Salem last week. The Governor stated that in the appointment of physicians to official positions, he should remember the homœopathic as well as other classes.

Experience proves that nothing else so surely destroys Scrofula, root and branch, as Ayer's Sarsaparilla.

HOLDING THE REINS.

A good driver grasps the reins so that they pass into the hand under the little finger first, the ends of the fingers, after the hand is closed upon the reins, being in a perpendicular line. This gives a vice-like grip which it is almost impossible for the leather to slip through. But the wrong habit young drivers, and especially ladies fall into, is to catch the rein in such a way that when it enters the hand it first passes over the forefinger; when held in that way it is very hard to keep it from slipping, and so it happens that when an excited horse gives a quick jerk and the lady feels the lines slip she thinks her strength is inadequate, loses her presence of mind, and in a few minutes somebody's hurt. If persons knew how awkward a poor driver looks they would try to improve. There's nothing more ridiculous than a green driver with his arms stretched away out in front "pushing on the lines." On the other hand, there is no more pleasing sight than to see a well-trained driver, and especially in the person of a pretty girl, sitting erect, with hands close to her slender waist, the rein curling cutely over her delicate thumb, and the whip grasped firmly, arching over the horse's back, thread her way without nervousness or fear through narrow crowded streets, or on broad avenues leave her timid friends behind. In England fox hunting has such a hold upon the people that a girl is taught to ride almost before she learns anything else. In France the pleasure of individual driving has never worked its way into the French woman's mind. In this country there is a change coming, but it is scarcely visible at present except at the fashionable centres, where a few of the leading ladies are noted horsewomen. A New York lady enjoys almost as much distinction as a queen, simply because she knows how to dispense with the services of a coachman and tone up her system by manipulating the ribbons over a trotter's back as she flies along the ocean drives.

THE DANDY OF INDIA.

The dandy is unknown in Europe, and is not very easily described, as there is no other means of conveyance which can afford the faintest idea of it. The nearest approach to traveling in a dandy I can think of is sitting in a half-roofed topsail in a storm, with the head and shoulders above the yard, it consists of a single bamboo, about nine or ten feet long, with two pieces of carpet slung from it—one for the support of the body and the other for the feet. You rest on these pieces of carpet, not in line with bamboo, but at right angles to it, with your head and shoulders raised as high above it as possible, and each end of the pole rests on the shoulders of one or of two bearers. The dandy is quite a pleasant conveyance when one gets used to it, when the path is tolerably level and the bearers are up to their work. The only drawbacks then are that when a rock comes bowling across the road like a cannot shot, you cannot disengage yourself from the carpets in time to do anything yourself toward getting out of the way; and that when the road is narrow and, in consequence, your feet are dangling over a precipice, it is difficult for a candid mind to avoid concluding that the bearers would be quite justified in throwing the whole concern over, and so getting rid of their unwelcome and painful task. But when the path is covered with pieces of rock, as usually happens to be the case, and the coolies are not well up to their work, which they almost never are, the man in the dandy is not allowed much leisure for meditations of any kind, or even for admiring the scenery around; for, unless he confines his attention pretty closely to the rocks with which he is liable to come into collision, he will soon have all the breath knocked out of his body. On consulting a Continental savant, who had been in the inner Himalaya, as to whether I could get people there to carry me in a dandy, he said, "Zey vill carry you, no doubt; but zey vill bomp you." And bump me they did, until they bumped me out of adherence to that mode of travel.

DYEING CUT FLOWERS.

Many uses have been found for dyes outside the textile kingdom, but perhaps the most remarkable discovery for their utility has just been made by an English chemist. It has for a long time been known that the color of growing flowers can be altered by simply mixing a little dye stuff with the mold in the flower-pot. No one, however, has hitherto thought changing of the color flowers when cut. There are in London many artists whose business it is to give to birds finer feathers than nature has allowed them, and they have now a counterpart in flowers. Mr. Nesbit, a distinguished botanist, has found that by simply soaking the stems of cut flowers in a weak dye solution, their color can be altered at will, without the perfume or freshness being destroyed. Most beautiful effects are produced by prepared lakes. Singular to say, flowers refuse to absorb certain colors, while they dispose of others in different manners. If placed in a mixed solution they make a complete analysis, and some lilies that had been treated with purple showed distinct red and blue veins, the colors having been divided in the process of absorption. Mr. Nesbit is still engaged in his investigations.

Prof. Graham Bell, in preparing a catalogue of pamphlets, essays, and books on electricity in order to facilitate his own studies and those of others engaged in electrical science, has already noted the titles of at least 40,000 publications bearing upon the subject with more or less pertinence.

Hoods, Jackets, Gaiters, etc., at Peabody's.

WARREN LELAND,

whom everybody knows as the successful manager of the Largest Hotel Enterprises

of America, says that while a passenger from New York on board a ship going around Cape Horn, in the early days of emigration to California, he learned that one of the officers of the vessel had cured himself, during the voyage, of an obstinate disease by the use of

Ayer's Sarsaparilla.

Since then Mr. LELAND has recommended AYER'S SARSAPARILLA in many similar cases, and he has never yet heard of its failure to effect a radical cure.

Some years ago one of Mr. LELAND'S farm laborers bruised his leg. Owing to the bad state of his blood, an ugly scrofulous swelling or lump appeared on the injured limb. Horrible itching of the skin, with burning and darting pains through the lump, made life almost intolerable. The leg became enormously enlarged, and running ulcers formed, discharging great quantities of extremely offensive matter. No treatment was of any avail until the man, by Mr. LELAND'S direction, was supplied with AYER'S SARSAPARILLA, which allayed the pain and irritation, healed the sores, removed the swelling, and completely restored the limb to use.

Mr. LELAND has personally used

for Rheumatism, with entire success; and, after careful observation, declares that, in his belief, there is no medicine in the world equal to it for the cure of Liver Disorders, Gout, the effects of high living, Salt Rheum, Sores, Eruptions, and all the various forms of blood diseases.

We have Mr. LELAND'S permission to invite all who may desire further evidence in regard to the extraordinary curative powers of AYER'S SARSAPARILLA to see him personally either at his mammoth Ocean Hotel, Long Branch, or at the popular Leland Hotel, Broadway, 27th and 28th Streets, New York.

Mr. LELAND'S extensive knowledge of the good done by this unequalled eradicator of blood poisons enables him to give inquirers much valuable information.

Miscellaneous.

Fish is a great treat for a cat; in many cases of illness they will eat this when they can take nothing else. Horse-flesh, when it can be had, is good occasionally, but it has a laxative tendency. Nice tripe or cowheel is excellent; but indeed nothing comes amiss that one eats one's self, only we must be careful to give bread and vegetables as well as meat. Raw beef minced finely is often given to cats when ill; so are boiled eggs and cream. Milk seems to be one of the necessaries of life to a cat; let it be good and abundant. Few people know that cats cannot be kept in health unless they be supplied with water. If a cat does not get water, she will have to help herself to it. This in the country she has generally a chance of doing, but not in towns. A saucer should be always kept in a corner for pussy, and the water ought to be fresh, and fresh every morning. Another thing that cats do not thrive well without is grass. Herein, again, the happy country cat has the advantage of the feline dweller in cities; nevertheless, grass may be pulled for a cat. I have known it placed between two bricks in the corner of the scullery, where it would keep fresh for a week, and be always handy when the little creature wanted it. There is no domestic animal in our possession more fond of cleanliness in every way than puss. Habits of cleanliness in the house are very easily taught; and a well cared for and properly treated cat will even teach her kittens to be cleanly. But pussy's food ought always to be nice and clean, and the dish that contains it should be washed every day. Putting fresh food among that which has been left from a former meal is a sure way of preventing a cat from enjoying, or even touching it. If well fed, a cat's coat is beautifully soft, thick, and sheeny, and she seems to take a delight in keeping it so. When ill or neglected, the coat becomes rough and thin. It is usually after a meal that puss sits down contentedly to wash herself and pay attention to her personal appearance; and those who breed beautiful cats take advantage of this and give the animal a tiny bit of butter after her dinner, or put a little cream on her paws. She requires no other incentive to cause her to proceed forwith to groom herself all over. The oil of the butter and her own saliva seem to form a kind of soap, which acts like magic when applied by means of her rough tongue to the coat. Sometimes a cat requires to be washed. The water should be lukewarm, the soap the mildest procurable, and the towels with which she is dried very soft; and after the operation she ought to be put into a clean room until thoroughly dry, or what is better still, placed in a clean empty cage near the fire.

AFRICAN ANTS.

Among the luxuries of travel in Western Africa armies of ants and venomous flies may be safely reckoned on. Crocodiles, mosquitos and serpents are such commonplace matters in comparison that it is not worth while to dwell upon them.

The bashikouai ants must be a terrible plague. They travel, we are told, night and day, in armies miles long. The elephant and gorilla fly before them; the black man runs for his life so soon as the ants are seen. It is related by a traveller that as he was going up one of the mouths of the Zambese he saw a whole village suddenly deserted by the inhabitants, who fled with all they could carry off, a proceeding which, as there was no foe in sight, rather puzzled him, till he found they were fleeing from the ants. When these ants enter a hut they clear it of every living thing in a few minutes. Huge cockroaches, almost as large as mice, centipedes, mice and rats are instantly devoured. A strong rat is killed in less than a minute, and in another minute its bones are picked. A leopard, dog or deer is sood dispatched and devoured, for they kill by their numbers. They are quite half an inch long, and one variety is so strong that it will bite pieces clean out of the flesh. They possess, however, one meritorious quality—they mortally hate, and whenever they can, put to death the mischievous white ants which make such destruction in houses.

In addition to these and the sand ants which bite like scorpions, leaving distressing pain behind them, there are several varieties of flies which sting horribly, such as the igogonai, small gnats, whose bites go through the tough hide of the negros, causing a terrible itch; the ibolai, flies or gnats, which sting as though with a needle, and whistle as they dash at you; the richouma, which fills themselves with your blood before you know they are there, and then leave an itching that lasts for hours, varied at intervals by sudden sharp stabs of pain; the sloway, or nest-building flies, not quite so big as a bee, which cling to a man even in the water, and assail the natives with such ferocity that if a canoe, by chance, touch one of their nests, the men instantly dive overboard. These seem the most spiteful of all. The spots where they bite remain very painful for two or three days after.

AN OLD GREEK DWELLING HOUSE.

Letters from Athens announce an interesting discovery, brought to light in the course of some excavations which are being carried out in the island of Delos by the pupils of the French school at Athens. In the neighborhood of the Theatre of Apollo they came upon the remains of a private house, which apparently belonged to the Alexandrine epoch. A court surrounded by pillars and twelve chambers has been opened out. The floor is composed of mosaic, representing flowers, fishes and other ornaments. In the middle of the court is a well. The door of the house and the line of roadway or street leading to it have also been discovered The excavations will be continued.

DESTINY OF OLD HOUSES.

Many of us love old fashioned houses, and they have a peculiar charm to poets and novelists. There is a fascination and romance even in the old-fashioned kitchen, with its spacious chimney corner, where, if you look up, you may see the stars; its capacious ovens and smokejack; with its straight-backed settle and sprawling chairs, and creaking table and pleasant smell of viands; the low ceilings and naked beams, the tall clock, the lustrous buffet, with all its glories of china; the landscape-papered wall; the out-of-the-way recesses where children love to hide; the store-closet with its treasures of sweets; and, above all, the mysterious garret, full of rich and rare and curious relics—how delightful it all seems in the reminiscence! We wonder how it would satisfy us now. The final destiny of many fine old houses it is not pleasant to contemplate. A large number of them are converted into shops and warerooms, being frequently lifted into the air and a basement introduced for business purposes, which, with its plate glass windows and iron columns, forms a singular contrast to the domestic looking structure above. To one who has been born and bred in a house thus elevated into obscurity, it is sad and strange to see a nice old sitting-room converted into a barber's shop and the dining-room into a dentist's place of business, and the upper chambers into a photographer's saloon. It is sadder still when a grand old mansion sinks to the low level of a common tenement house; the rich wall papers defiled with dirty stains; the ornamental stucco on the ceiling dropping off piece by piece; the marble mantel cherubs with their noses knocked off; the costly balusters carried away for fuel; every corner of the house crowded with dirty men and women and dirtier children; the outer walls defiled with slops; old hats and rags and paper stuffed into the broken window panes; the doors askew; the floors unsteady; a terrible smells everywhere; clothes hung up to dry everywhere; and then to think what the house once was, and how nice everything once was, and who the people were that once lived there! It is the fashion now to build old houses, or rather, houses that are made to look as if they were old. In fact, old things of all sorts are in demand, and perhaps old men will be in requisition by and by, which would be a great relief to some of us.

GEORGE ELIOT'S GRAVE.

It is not true, as alleged in an American girl's note to the London Times, that George Eliot's grave is unknown at the cemetery where she lies and is unmarked. In a quiet little corner of Highgate Cemetery, one of the most picturesque spots of suburban London, the grave and the monument of George Eliot can be seen. Shortly before her death George Eliot made a tour through the midland counties of England, and on one occasion passed through one of those charmingly quaint and severly silent village churchyards, where time alone marks life and death so quietly and effectively. There a simple flagstone bore the suggestive and mysterious single inscription: "The Unknown." This attracted "the great authoress." Making inquiries she learned this was the spot where a cultured and disappointed woman lay at rest after living the life of an "unmarried wife," and being deserted by that very "humanity" George Eliot had so much praised in seductive chapters. Living out the remnant of this wordly existence in a retired corner of a village, and unknown and uncared for, this fair and frail one breathed her last in a tiny room, leaving a written request that she should be buried in the neighboring churchyard, and that her only epitaph should be "The Unknown." A small sum of money was found to defray the funeral expenses and put up the stone which gave "George Eliot" a serious view of life at home and abroad over and above "the humanities."

NVENTION OF AN ELECTRIC GUN.

One of the most interesting novelties at the Vienna International Exhibition is an electric gun. The powder is fired by means of a piece of platinum in the cartridge, and the electric current necessary for heating the platinum is obtained from a little accumulator, which must be worn in a belt specially devised for the purpose. Besides the accumulator and the belt, a glove and a shoulder strap are necessary. The glove is worn on the left hand, and is connected with one pole of the accumulator, the strap with the other. All this would, it must be confessed, be a rather formidable addition to a soldier's accoutrements and one is hardly surprised to hear that the inventors do not expect their patent to be immediately adopted in all the European armies. Meanwhile they point out that the electric gun affords several advantages besides the charm of novelty, which ought to commend it to the sportsman. In the first place, it is said to be very economical; and what new application of electricity is ever said to be anything else—at first? There is no great saving on the gun or the cartridges, but then only a quarter of the ordinary charge of powder is necessary. Moreover, the gun is economical of time and trouble. The cartridges serve many times over, and there is none of the bother of taking off the old caps. But the crowning merit which is claimed for the electric gun is that it is warranted never to "kick." If this warranty be really true, the application of electricity to sport ought not to be long delayed.

No way has been found for making heroism easy, even for the scholar. Labor, iron labor, is for him. The world was created as an audience for him; the atoms of which it is made are opportunities.

NASBY'S PAPER.
THE TOLEDO WEEKLY BLADE.
Circulation 115,000.
This vast circulation is because the BLADE is a paper for the whole country. It is not thrown together, but every line of it is edited by competent hands. It is a complete epitome of the news of the week, and whosoever reads the BLADE carefully, needs nothing else to be well informed as to what the world is doing. Editorially the BLADE has made a proud record. It has an opinion on every thing that affects the people of the country, and it expresses it boldly, fearlessly, and forcibly. As good as the Blade has been in past years, we will make it better than ever in the year to come. Among the features for the coming year will be the regular "Nasby Letters," two serials by Nasby, entitled "Nasby in Exile," and "Nasby in the South," a serial story by Ernest Warren, entitled, Court and Camp," a serial by John McElroy author of Andersonville, "Reminiscences of an Army Mule"; a serial written for the BLADE by an Austrian nobleman; besides our regular departments, "Household," "Answers to Correspondents," "Camp Fire," etc., etc. We publish all the news, and latest corrected markets.
Politically the BLADE will continue an exponent of true Republicanism, believing that the best interests of the country demand the continuance of its control in the hands of the party that represents the highest and most advanced ideas.
THE RUM POWER.
The BLADE will fight this monster iniquity with all the power it possesses, and in every way possible. The BLADE holds the liquor traffic to be a greater curse than slavery, and a thousand times more dangerous to the country.
We ask the co-operation of every well-wisher of the Republic that our work may be effective. We ask every Republican in the United States to assist in extending the circulation of the BLADE, especially among those of the Republican party who believe as we do in the necessity of Pulverizing the Rum Power. We want the BLADE in as many families as possible this winter, that it may be read before the excitement of a political campaign, giving it time for its truths to take root in the minds of its readers.
THE WEEKLY BLADE, $1.00 a year, postpaid, to EVERYBODY. Those preferring, may receive the BLADE, THREE MONTHS, by remitting 30 cents, or clubs of three months trial subscribers, of not less than four, 25 cents each.
OUR GREAT ART OFFER.
A $10.00 Steel Engraving for $1.00. Write us for a specimen copy of the WEEKLY BLADE, which will give full particulars of this, the greatest offer ever made by any publisher. We send specimen copies of the BLADE free to any address. We want as many addresses as possible to send Specimen Copies to. Write a postal card asking for a specimen for yourself, and send us the names of all your neighbors. We want to send out a half million copies within the next month. Don't be modest as to the number.

THE SUN.
NEW YORK, 1884.

About sixty million copies of THE SUN have gone out of our establishment during the last twelve months.

If you were to paste end to end all the columns of all THE SUNS printed and sold last year, you would get a continuous strip of interesting information common sense wisdom, sound doctrine, and sane wit long enough to reach from Printing House square to the top of Mount Copernicus in the moon, then back to Printing House square, and then three-quarters of the way back to the moon again.

But THE SUN is written for the inhabitants of this earth; this same strip of intelligence would girdle the earth twenty-seven or twenty-eight times.

If every buyer of a copy of THE SUN during the past year has spent only one hour over it, and his wife or his grandfather has spent another hour, this newspaper in 1883 has afforded the human race thirteen thousand years of steady reading night and day.

It is only by little calculations like these that you can form any idea of the circulation of the most popular of American newspapers, or of its influence on the opinions and actions of American men and women.

THE SUN is, and will continue to be, a newspaper which tells the truth without fear of consequences, which gets at the facts no matter how much the process costs, which presents the news of all the world without waste of words and in the most readable shape, which is working with all its heart for the cause of honest government, and which therefore believes that the Republican party must go, and must go in this coming year of our Lord, 1884.

If you know THE SUN, you like it already and you will read it with accustomed diligence and profit during what is sure to be the most interesting year in its history. If you do not yet know THE SUN, it is high time to get into the sunshine.

TERMS TO MAIL SUBSCRIBERS.

A Successful Fair.

The Grand Army Fair, the opening of which we noted last week, was brought to a successful close last evening, with the drawing of the season ticket prizes. Wednesday evening Strout and Collier's Specialty Company furnished the entertainment. The different parts were well taken and repeated encores greeted the performers. Miss Annie Liebsch is too well known to a Peabody audience to need any notice at this time, and when we say that the rest of the company performed their parts in the same satisfactory manner, it is sufficient praise. Messrs. Strout & Collier in their songs and dances, and in their roller skate performance, were immense.

Thursday evening the Salem Band Orchestra gave a very enjoyable concert, and the skating rink and other attachments of the fair did a very good business.

On Friday evening the larger part of time was occupied by Comrade Yeaton, of Chelsea, accompanied on the piano by Miss Osgood of the same city. His Dutch songs and recitations were much enjoyed. Miss Osgood also favored the audience with a song. Eddie McLaughlin, the boneless boy, gave a fine exhibition as a contortionist. Cassidy and Murphy, in Irish sketches, were loudly applauded. W. H. Garness gave some fine piano selections.

The attraction for Saturday evening was a fine concert by the Salem Brass Band, and their fine concert was enjoyed by the large company present. The skating rink was largely attended, every pair of skates being in use.

The committee having decided to continue the fair another night, the ticket prizes were not drawn on Monday evening. The Salem Band was present; having volunteered their services. A pleasant feature of this evening was the presentation to Mrs. Wm. H. Hildreth, by the other attendants, of a very handsome lace handkerchief, lace trimmed apron, and two fancy sachet bags.

Tuesday evening the drawing of the season ticket prizes took place. As there were 3226 season tickets sold, there was much interest in the drawing. Everybody could not have the $500 but some one got it as well as the rest of the prizes as will be seen by the following list:

FAIR NOTES.

The Salem Brass Band gave a fine concert.

There was a change of program of attractions each evening.

Strout & Collier gave a good entertainment Wednesday night, worth double the price of admission.

The fair opened most auspiciously, and that it continued to receive generous patronage through the week was what it deserved.

What a crowd there was, and how everybody appeared to enjoy themselves! People do appreciate a good thing after all.

It is well to remember that when you bought an article at the counters, you not only received the value of your money but aided a worthy cause.

To the ladies is due a great deal of credit in making the fair attractive to the general public, and it was through their efforts that much of the excellent work of carrying out the arrangements was accomplished.

Mr. Chas. H. Simonds has been drawn as juror to the Superior court to be held at Lawrence March 2, 1884.

Continuation of the Hayes Case.

The case of William Hayes came up before Justice Merrill last Saturday morning. Mr. Northend argued the case for Hayes, claiming that there was great doubt that any offense was committed by anybody. The principal witness was laboring under great excitement and his testimony should be taken with allowance. He claimed by the evidence of the government that there were two men seen that night, one in the buggy, and another, some other. Which one of them committed the crime? The claim of the government was preposterous. Do men drive up in plain sight before a man's house, and put a fuse under his dwelling? The whole thing was as thin and shabby as he ever heard in a Court of Law. He had no doubt Mr. Farnham thought it was Hayes' voice. But the suspicion was the father to the thought. He referred to the purchase of the Atlas powder and the bottle found—claiming that he used both largely in his business and that it was no evidence at all. He asked the Justice not to put the government to the trouble and expense of holding Mr. Hayes.

Mr. Bancroft spoke for the government. He referred to the law of punishment for both murder and arson, and said neither of these crimes was committed, but some one was morally guilty of an attempt to commit both. The object of this investigation is to seek the author. There was no excitement. Mr. Farnham would be the last man to fix any crime upon Mr. Hayes he was not guilty of. There was no motive for doing so. In pursuance of his duty as an attorney he acted with energy and efficiency. Hayes attempted to thwart him. A lawyer does not get excited in such a case. Mr. F. was not thwarted. He got his money. He was doing what he had a perfect legal right to do. He had a mortgage on personal property, not in a dwelling house, but in a grocery shop, where he was entitled to take forcible possession. There was nothing to cause Mr. F. to get excited. Was he excited on the witness stand? Mr. Bancroft thought him wonderfully cool. As an attorney he saw that Mr. Northend was encroaching upon his rights and he resented it. He was glad of it. Was that a sign of excitement? Mr. Bancroft then took up the evidence at length, claiming that if we can prove that he drove up in the yard, there is a strong probability that he committed the act. There was no claim on the part of the government that the fuse was lighted when Mr. F. discovered it. It made no difference. He supposed Mr. Northend would follow up this point on the cross examination, but he did not. They were willing to admit that it was not on fire.

The opposing counsel, and he agreed with him, thought it preposterous to suppose that any man in his senses could go there. But Hayes was a preposterous kind of a man. Yet it was admitted by counsel that some one was there. Was it any more preposterous that it was Hayes, than any other man? He came in to the yard very quietly,—so stealthily that even the servant girl and Mrs. F. did not hear him. Mr. F. although dozing, did happen to hear and spoke down the stairs. It is probable that this man, whoever he was, was a little under the influence of liquor. It was not the work of an expert villain, but of a reckless one. Mr. Northend sees that and tries to turn it in his favor. It is plain that Hayes was on one of his tantrums. On such a one that he had to send for Dr. Shanahan. On the day of the offense he was on one of these tantrums. Yet we hear of his scooting around with two lawyers from Salem, to find a legal remedy against Farnham. Failing in this he evidently felt that he ought to have a more summary means of redress. He was under excitement, and that is a great motive. He was not accustomed to be thwarted up there in his dukedom. He has his vassals, he can say to some, go, and they goeth,—to others, come, and they cometh. He is ruler over his entire domain, defying the police and all the citizens who once appropriated $5000 to clean him out. It was a tremendous disappointment. Mr. Hayes had not been wronged. He held second mortgage on Butler's stuff. He simply paid the first mortgage, and had then the same claim on it that Mr. F's clients had. But his dignity had been affected among his dependents.

The offense was committed probably by a man who lived in the direction of the village, who drove a horse and team similar to Hayes. It was probably by a man accustomed to the use of dynamite and explosives. This was an unfavorable circumstance. They had traced to Hayes the purchase of an explosive of a peculiar kind—Atlas powder. It was a particular kind of Atlas powder D. plus. The man who put it in Mr. F's barn was not only one accustomed to its use, but to its use with considerable of recklessness.

We would suspect it to be the work of a man who had some difficulty with Mr. F. It is true Mr. Hayes claimed to Mr. Shaw that the powder had been stolen. But he was under suspicion. So much so that he sent for the doctor to give him a pill, but instead gave him legal advice. It was useless for him to deny the possession of the explosives, so he attempted to explain the circumstances. Had he reported the theft to the police? The detective had also found a bottle. It was a bottle used for the importation of French brandy. The man who committed the act was in the habit of handling bottles—not a small shop, but a great groggery, where they have all varieties. Mr. Shaw came to the great groggery of Mr. Hayes, and found the exact counterpart of the one left in the barn. He visited all the other saloons, and found only one other, and the owner said he bought it of Mr. Hayes. Every circumstance, Mr. Bancroft said, pointed to Mr. Hayes. The attorney for the defense had tried to make a point of Mr. F's delay. He knew it was necessary to convince others as well as himself. He must get evidence to convince twelve men. Mr. Bancroft referred to the recognition of Hayes' voice and to the presence of Hayes at the house in the day. What was he up there for? We say he was there to reconnoiter the ground. We have a right to say it. There, fresh from his indignation, he laid the plan, and formed the design. Probably he had never been up that street before. Mr. Bancroft had walked the streets of Peabody fifty years, and never been up that street but once. It was an isolated house. There was no travel. What was he there for? Taking the bottles, the explosions, the indignity and the recognition of the voice, can there be any excuse for the Justice declining to bind over Hayes for trial?

Justice Merrill considered the evidence sufficient to warrant holding him, and he did hold him in $10,000 for appearance before the Superior Court, to be holden in Newburyport, the second Wednesday in May. Mr. Hayes secured as bondsmen, James E. Millea, John Donovan, Thomas Duffy, Jerry Bresnehan and Daniel Hogan.

More copies of the News were sold in Peabody last week, than in any other week, the aggregate number being 6745, or an average of 1119 papers per day. The largest day's sales were 1190, which were sold between 4 and 6 o'clock Saturday afternoon, when the supply became exhausted. Competition makes business lively with the News, which is continually increasing its circulation.—Cor. Salem News.

On the first day of next March the circulation of the PRESS will be 2,000,000, and will be printed in immense sheets 3x12 rods in size, being the largest paper, with the largest circulation of any paper in the world, and it will be retailed at the low price of $2 per year in advance. We have contracted for a new building eight stories high and covering six acres of ground. Murat Halsted, Richard Grant White, Charles C. Hills, Whitelaw Reid and other great journalists have been engaged to write for us, and only last week we declined an offer of Jay Gould, to put $3,000,000 into the concern as a silent partner. R. Hoe & Co. have been engaged for the past two years on our double action perfecting cylinder presses, 100 in number, which will print 20,000 copies a minute. The whole of this mammoth machinery will be run by a 20,000 horse power electrical engine, and a free sunlight never obscured by clouds will indicate our place of business.

N. B. This is all a colossal lie, but we must keep up with the procession.

The engagement of Margaret Mather in Boston has been but a repetition of her successes everywhere this season. At the two closing performances of Romeo and Juliet, after they had been played the entire week, there was taken more money than has been known in the Boston Theatre at a dramatic performance. In Brooklyn, the local managers scouted the idea of charging regular prices at a matinee. But Mr. Hill would not yield, and as a result people were turned away from the Theatre unable to gain admittance. At the performance of Leah, last week, she was called before the curtain ten times—was this ever known before? The truth is, the people desire to see Miss Mather. Those who have seen her once are so enthusiastic that the infection spreads; and whether the critics of the different journals like or dislike her methods, no actress save Miss Mather ever acquired the hold upon the public which she now enjoys. We consider it fortunate for our people that she has consented to play in Peabody. She will appear in Romeo and Juliet, in which Miss Mather and young Salvini are at their best. It will be the opportunity of a life time, and we are confident that the Opera House will be well filled.

Willlam A. Crafts, the efficient clerk of the board of railroad commissioners since its organization, who was removed by Gov. Butler purely to make a place for C. H. Litchman, the Marblehead greenbacker, has been reinstated by Gov. Robinson, greatly to the satisfaction of the board and those who have business with it.—Palmer Journal.

A telephone connection between the Alms House and the Overseer's office would save a good deal of expense during the year.

Some one remarked that articles in a town warrant are like broken-headed tacks in a carpet—easy to put in but hard to take out.

"Our boy" says he wanted to celebrate "Birthington's wash-day" but the "boss" said there was too much work for him to be off.

A very desirable cottage house, with nearly 7000 feet of land, situated on Washington street, is offered for sale in another column.

It is stated on good authority that Mr. H. K. Pevear and family will occupy the residence of Mrs. Eliza Sutton on Main Street.

"Maria," who drew the meerchaum pipe, at the fair, was Walter Pray, and Matthew Mason, was the "Oh my," who drew the calf boots.

The great question of the day at the present is how to wear a high all-round collar and still be able to sneeze hard without cutting your throat.

Good cold weather is what most people like to see at this time of the year, and a fair sample was given us Saturday night and Sunday morning.

The toy dealer now looks over his last year's stock of books and marbles, and the small boy counts up his pennies and catches onto the bait.

It is surprising how a little paint judiciously used by a skillful workman will add to the appearance of a place of business. Drop in and see what we mean.

The machine shop of the late J. E. Clement was closed last Saturday. There was considerable work ahead which will have to be finished elsewhere.

Gents, show this to your wife when you are out late to lodge. A Mississippi widow has received $12,000 from the lodges of which her husband was a member.

After a brief glimpse of the sunshine last Friday, it gladdened the eyes again on Sunday, of many watchers who had anxiously waited through the dismal days.

Mr. Dean Kimball, 87 years of age and a resident of Danvers, died last Monday. He was a member of Jordan Lodge F. & A. M., and at one time was treasurer.

A man named Jermyn, got his hand caught in the machinery at the Bleachery, last Monday, and it was so badly crushed, the first and second fingers had to be amputated.

Skirmishers from the Salvation Army, of Lawrence, were in town last Friday, looking after a place to locate, after converting that wicked city. We trust they will locate.

Mrs. Martha Goss, daughter of George Foan, fell yesterday at her residence on Pierpoint street, breaking two of the small bones in her wrist. Dr. Frost attended her.

Last Sunday, Rev. Mr. Hudson delivered his lecture at the Unitarian Church, Lynn, upon the subject, Brahma Somaj, of India. There was also special musical exercises.

Occasional correspondents to the newspapers will please remember that a person unused to writing always shows it by the frequency of his italics. The general public is intelligent, and so much emphasis is needless.

John Maguire employed at the Bleachery got the skirts of his coat caught in some machinery last Thursday; but for the prompt action of fellow workmen a more serious accident would have had to been chronicled.

The Women's Christian Temperance Union have voted to establish a refreshment table for the sale of hot coffee, tea and cold lunch in the basement of the town hall election day. A good idea and it should be liberally patronized.

The first of the new counterfeit nickles was detected at the Sub-Treasury in Boston recently. The base coin is an alloy in which the principal ingredient is lead. It is a good imitation, but it can be detected by its "feel" and dead ring.

The officials at Dedham jail where Burnham Wardwell, the alms house and prison crank, is serving a year's sentence for libelling Sheriff Sprague of Worcester, seems to think he is insane. He is now at work in the laundry connected with the institution.

What a patriotic old town we are! Washington's birthday was celebrated by the closing of the stores, bank and post office, and a few of the manufactories. Not a bell was rung, nor cannon sounded, nor even the flag raised on the flag staff. There was one man, however, who did celebrate, and entertained the crowd at the corner of Foster street by reciting, while mounted on the post-office steps, "Washington's Farewell."

Martin Gerry is a shaver, not a little shaver, but a man who shaves hides at a certain tannery on Foster street. Last Saturday he shaved the hide off one of his fingers. Of course this was a mistake, and so is this item as he "didn't want to see it in the paper."

Last Wednesday afternoon a man named McCarthy, while soaping a belt at Joseph A. Poor's bark mill, on Foster street, slipped, and fell on the belt, and was carried over the main shaft, and his left arm was broken above the wrist. It was a narrow escape.

Last Thursday as undertaker Fallon, with his horses attached to the hearse, was on his way to the catholic cemetery, he collided with one of S. A. Osborne's delivery wagons breaking the whiffletree to the former. The procession was stopped while repairs were being made.

Mr. Ezra Shannon will continue the business of the late Charles A. Collins at the old stand. Mr. Shannon has proved himself a valuable man, taking as he did the business when Mr. Collins' health was on the decline, and not only retained the old business, but largely increased it.

The effort to obtain a fund for a chapel at Asbury Grove, is meeting with so great success that work will probably commence in the spring. The estimated cost is $1600, and the work will not be begun until $1000 is secured. The chapel will seat some three hundred people.

The latest craze, and one of the wildest, is that of the hot-water cure. So wide has it become that in some places cups of hot water are distributed among hotel guests with the regularity of sunrise. It regulates the human stomach, and is supposed to wash out and prepare it for better work.

The plumbers will hail a change in the weather with joy. They say that they have done nothing in the way of "business" for the past two months, and are longing for a big freeze. If they don't have it soon they can't go to Europe, but will have to be satisfied with Saratoga next Summer.

Messrs. Nador & Taylor's confectionery is as near perfection as anything in the line of sweets yet produced. They use only pure sugar in all that they manufacture, and bring out a variety in style and quality that suits the most fastidious. Mr. George Stevens in this town handles the goods.

Officers of the Old Ladies' Home Auxiliary, met Feb. 25, and voted to hold a Kettledrum consisting of a supper and dance in Upton's Hall, about the second week in March. All members, and those desiring to become members, are requested to aid in making the affair a success. Further notice will be given next week.

It has been the habit of teamsters and others, to strip the bark cars which come into town, of the lumber comprising the sides. This lumber does not belong to the rail road company, but is furnished by the party who furnishes the bark. A victim offers $5 reward in another column for the conviction of any party caught doing it.

George Allen, an eight year old lad, met with a painful accident last Friday. He was playing on Washington street, near Mason, and was just crossing the street when one of Moulton's heavy express wagons, which was standing in the street, backed a little, striking the boy in the face, knocking him down and spraining his left wrist.

The morocco shavers of this town held a meeting at James H. Thomas' office last Monday evening and among other things had prepared an elegant floral harp with a broken string to lay on the casket of their departed brother, Daniel Kane, who died at Salem last Sunday. He was employed in the shop of Thomas Carroll in this town.

Mr. A. B. Clark is preparing to increase his business by the erection of a large addition to his morocco shop. Calvin Pierce is doing the work.

Mr. W. H. Little lost his pocket book in Salem this morning. It contained little of value except a blank check signed by Geo. H. Little. The public are cautioned against negotiating such check in another column.

Margaret Mather appears in Salem next Tuesday, March 4th, in Leah. She will play Romeo and Juliet in Peabody the 22d of the same month. Our readers will thus have an opportunity of seeing her in both plays.

Forepaugh & Adams's great Humpty Dumpty troupe has made an engagement with Mr. Andrews, to appear at Mechanic Hall on Monday, March 3d. This is the best pantomime company now travelling, without exception.

The first letter of each word in the following sentences is the first letter of each successive President of the United States: "Will a jolly man make a jolly visitor? How truly poor that first paper looks. John gave her good advice."

"Can dogs find their way home from a long distance?" asks a paper. It's according to the dog. If it's one you want to get rid of, he can find his way back from California; if it's a good one he's apt to be lost if he goes round the corner. This doesn't refer to "Bill" Smith's dog.

The missionary concert at the Baptist church last Sunday evening was very interesting and instructive. The subject of the concert was "Burmah" and illustrated charts were shown locating the work of the missions there. The exercises consisted of responsive readings upon the subject by adult members of the society and the pastor.

The Wakefield Pioneer says of a former resident: "A crow swooped down into one of George H. Clothey's show windows yesterday. He looks perfectly at home among the drugs and patent medicines. Is he alive? O, no; but he was once, and looks as if he was ready to fly now. He was stuffed and mounted by Charles I. Goodale, the taxidermist."

The annual promenade concert and dance by the St. John's C. T. A. Society took place at Upton's hall last Monday evening, and was a decided success. The concert by the Cadet Orchestra occupied the time the first of the evening and it was much enjoyed, as their concerts always are. The concert was followed by a dance which lasted till 12 o'clock.

Mr. A. B. Tasker, of the law firm of Hoag & Tasker, has withdrawn from the firm and will presently go to Sandwich, N. H., his native town, where he will open a law office, and continue the practice of the law. Elmer Tasker, his younger brother, who has been a student in the office since last October, will continue his studies with his brother in Sandwich.

The store of Chas. M. Buffum in Salem is the head-quarters in this vicinity for all kinds of garden seeds. He keeps the well known variety of Aaron Low of Essex—the very best in the market. At his store can also be found a good variety of farmers' tools of every description. Call at his store and you will thank us for calling your attention to the matter.

The Boston Museum Company appeared last Monday evening in the new Opera House in "Led Astray." There was a large audience, as was expected from the reputation of the Company. Led Astray is one of the old successes of the Museum, and as brought out at the Home Theatre with the full cast, is a good play. Mr. Barron and Annie Clarke were of course excellent in their parts; save that the peculiarity of Barron of clipping his words was more perceptible in the Hall than usual. This difficulty of distinguishing the words of the play was noticeable through the entire evening, not only by the auditors in the rear but by those in what is usually considered the best seats. Unless the players are in the front of the stage, there is no distinctness of utterance. It is evidently the fault of the hall. Mrs. Vincent had little to do in the play, but that little was done well, as can also be said of Miss Robins who took the part of Mathilde. The rest of the support was ordinary — and not equal to many companies of less reputation on the road. It is evident that the Museum Company rely greatly upon their previous reputation.

COMPETITORS
Baffled and Dumb-founded at the Prices we Name!

Many of these goods are marked down below the actual cost of manufacture, and in some cases below the cost of material. No such bargains were ever before offered in America. We have received orders from our Head-quarters, 395 Washington St., Boston, to mark down and close out our Men's, Boys' and Children's Heavy Overcoats, Ulsters, Suits and Pantaloons at once. The Counter Room we must have for the Spring Goods we are now manufacturing. Men and Boys, now is your time to buy, as we are selling all wool garments for less money than some dealers sell shoddy for. It is a fact, and we can prove it to your satisfaction.

Poet's Corner.

The Mortgage.

We worked through spring and winter, through summer and through fall,
But the mortgage worked the hardest and the steadiest of them all;
It worked on nights and Sundays; it worked each holiday;
It settled down among us and it never went away.

Whatever we kept from it seemed almost as bad as theft;
It was watched every minute and ruled us right and left.
The rust and blight were with us sometimes and sometimes not;
The dark-browed, scowling mortgage was forever on the spot.

The weevil and the cut-worm, they went as well as came;
The mortgage stayed forever; eating hearty all the same.

It nailed up every window, stood guard at every door,
And happiness and sunshine made their home with us no more,
Till with failing crops and sickness we got stalled upon the grade,
And there came a dark day on us when the interest wasn't paid;

And there came a sharp foreclosure and I kind o' lost my hold,
And grew weary and discouraged, and the farm was cheaply sold,

The children left and scattered, when they hardly yet were grown;
My wife she pined and perished, an' I found myself alone.

What she died of was a "mystery," an' the doctors never knew;
But I knew she died of mortgage—just as well as I wanted to.

If to trace a hidden sorrow were within the doctor's art
They'd ha' found a mortgage lying on that woman's broken heart.
Worm or beetle, drought or tempest, on a farmer's land may fall,
But for first class ruination, trust a mortgage 'gainst them all.

Selected Story.

The Girl Detective.

The door of Rufus Markham's counting-room was securely closed, and the proprietor of the large, flourishing cotton factory talked earnestly with a gentlemanly looking man of middle age, whose face was as impressive as a wax mask.

"Five thousand dollars!" said the individual. "It was a large sum to leave exposed."

"Exposed!" said Mr. Markham. "It was in my private desk, to which no one has access but myself and my nephew, Fred. Tryon."

"Would it be possible the young gentleman—"

"Sir," said Mr. Markham, "my nephew is not a thief. If he needed ten times that sum he knows I would freely give it to him. He will be my heir, and he is as dear to me as a son. It is simply absurd to connect him in any way with this robbery."

"Just state this matter again as briefly as you can, and allow me to take notes; will you, Mr. Markham?"

"Certainly. I drew five thousand dollars out of the bank yesterday to meet a note that was not presented for payment. Retaining it until after the bank was closed, I concluded to lock it in my desk until this morning, and did so. At nine o'clock this morning the expected note was presented and I unlocked the desk. The money was gone, and with it a small memorandum-book that was in the same roll."

"The lock was not forced?"

"No, sir; the desk was apparently exactly as I left it."

"And Mr. Tryon has the only duplicate?"

The old gentleman frowned. He was evidently displeased at the turn the detective's suspicions seemed to be taking.

"Yes, my nephew certainly has the only duplicate key."

"Humph! yes. Have you the numbers of all the notes?"

"Yes. The roll consisted of ten five-hundred-dollar notes."

The list of numbers being taken, the detective made a searching examination of the apartment, and prepared to take his departure. As he stood near the door Mr. Markham suddenly said nervously:—

"I think, Mr. Vodges, if you make any discoveries you had better report to me privately before making any arrests."

"Certainly, sir, if you desire it. Will you grant me one favor? Do not mention the robbery to Mr. Tryon, if you have not done so already."

"No one has heard of it but yourself."

"Very good. I will call again when I have any report to make."

"Fred! Fred!" the old gentleman said in a troubled tone, when he was alone. "Vodges evidently thinks it is Fred! It is impossible that my nephew would rob me. I cannot believe it. And yet he knew the money was there. He was here when I handed Arnold the check, and here when he returned with the money. He knew that Johnson's note was not presented, and Fred alone has a duplicate key. Oh, if it should be! Anna's boy, that I have promised to love as a son. Have I kept my promise? Where have I failed? And why should he steal from me when all I have is his? I cannot, will not, believe it."

"May I come in?" asked a pleasant voice at the door, and, permission being given, Fred Tryon entered the room.

Looking into his handsome young face, bright and frank, with wide-opened, brown eyes, and curls of nut-brown hair, it was hard to connect it with any idea of roguery, ingratitude and theft. His manner toward his uncle, who had ever filled a father's place, was the perfection of respectful affection, and before he had been an hour in the counting-room Mr. Markham's fears were entirely gone.

They were talking of a certain dark-eyed little maiden who was soon to be Mrs. Tryon, [illegible] promise that he would call in the evening upon Miss Clarkson to arrange for the wedding day.

The young man, a favorite of fashion, apparently, spent the afternoon with his betrothed, received his uncle in the evening beside her, and accompanied the old gentleman to his boarding-house, receiving an affectionate farewell when he took his way to his own rooms in another house. For a week he heard nothing of the robbery.

It was just when summer twilight was fading that, returning home from a drive with Maud Clarkson, Fred met his uncle's confidential clerk waiting for him at Maud's house.

"I have a note for you, Mr. Fred," he said, "and as you were not at home I thought I would wait for you here."

Something in the young man's face struck a sudden chill to Maud's heart.

"You have bad news," she cried.

"Perhaps Mr. Fred had better read the note," was the evasive answer.

But Maud's terror was only increased when Fred, after reading the note, broke into a furious exclamation of rage.

"Who dares say that I am a midnight burglar?" he shouted.

"O Fred! what is it?" asked Maud, turning very white.

"My uncle has been robbed of five thousand dollars, and he pays me the compliment of supposing me to be the thief, because I have a duplicate key to his private desk. I—great Heaven!" he cried, with a sudden change in his voice, "he cannot mean it. I rob my uncle, I—"

"Mr. Fred," said the clerk, respectfully, "I only waited to see how you took the note to speak a few words of advice. Mr. Fred, I was with your father when he was killed on a railway train. I was with your uncle when he brought you from your mother's funeral to his home. I took you to boarding-school and brought you home for the holidays, and I've loved you, boy and man, since you were ten years old, and that's twelve long years. I know you never, never took the money; but things look ugly for you."

"But," said Fred, grasping the hand the old clerk held out to him, "I cannot understand it. Listen." And he read aloud the note from his uncle:—

"MR. FREDERICK TRYON:—I could not believe without proof—undeniable, positive proof—that you could rob me of five thousand dollars, taken, as you know, from my private desk on Wednesday last. You are my sister's son, and I will never be the one to imprison or punish you; but you are no longer a nephew of mine. Willingly, I will never look in your face again. Your ill-gotten gains I freely give you to start in some business, trusting that you will endeavor to live honestly in the future. Do not try to see me; I will not listen to any explanations I know to be false. Do not write, for I will not open your letters.

"RUFUS MARKHAM."

Maud Clarkson grew white as death as she heard the stern edict.

"O Fred!" she cried, "what can you do?"

"Starve, I suppose," was the bitter answer, "as I do not happen to possess the ill-gotten gains he so generously presents me. But I will not ask you to starve with me, Maud. You were betrothed to the millionnaire's nephew and heir; the disinherited beggar frees you from your promise."

"Fred," she cried, bursting into tears, "how can you be so cruel?" Then, unheeding the clerk, who was discreetly looking from the window, she came close to Fred's side. "Darling," she said, fixing her large black eyes upon his face, "if all the world cast you off, I will keep my promise."

The young lover had been bewildered, indignant, desperate, but he folded the gentle comforter in his arms, and great tears fell on her upturned face.

"God bless you, Maud!" he cried; "I can defy the world if you are true to me. Now, Potter, sit down and tell me what you know of this wretched business."

"Well, Mr. Fred, I never heard of the robbery until this morning, when Vodges, the detective your uncle employed to work it up, came to make his report. They did not notice me at first, and when your uncle remembered I was in the room I had heard about all that Vodges knew. You remember there was a note coming due last Wednesday?"

"To Johnson?"

"Yes; well, I thought at the time it was curious that your uncle gave him a check, when I knew the money was drawn out of the bank the day before to meet the very note. But I never knew till this morning that the money was stolen from Mr. Markham's desk by means of false keys. Mr. Fred," said the old man, earnestly, "it was all in five-hundred-dollar notes, and your uncle had the numbers."

"Well?"

"This morning Vodges brought back one of the notes which you gave to T—— yesterday in payment for a pearl locket."

"Stop! Potter, let me think. Where did I get that note? I have it. Arnold gave it to me to take out a hundred dollars I lent him some time ago. And Arnold—Potter, Arnold borrowed my keys last Wednesday night to open his trunk. Potter, huzza! we know the thief."

"Not so fast, Mr. Fred—not so fast. It will not be an easy matter to prove this. Were there any witnesses present when Arnold borrowed the keys?"

"No; I was all alone in my room, half undressed, when he knocked at my door and said he had lost the key of his trunk. I lent him my bunch of keys, which he returned before I was out of bed the next day."

"And you were alone when he paid you the money?"

"Yes; I thought he was very flush, for you know as well as I do, Potter, that a note for five hundred dollars is not a daily visitor in Graham Arnold's pocket."

"He is a cunning scoundrel. He wants to ascertain if the notes can be identified before he tries to get rid of them himself. Mr. Fred, will you leave it to me a few days—and if I do not catch the thief you may try."

"But my uncle?"

"Wait till you can prove your innocence before you see him. Only a week—give me only a week to watch Arnold. And, by the way, you will give me an additional chance if you will leave the city. Throw him off his guard by letting him suppose you are banished for his crime."

"Run away, like a coward?" flashed Fred.

"Only for a week. You see, the probability is that Arnold has the money in his possession yet. He will wait to see the fate of what he has given you before putting any more into circulation; but he has probably hidden it very securely. He will watch, but if you are willing I will take your room while you are gone and do a little detective business on my part."

It was not an easy matter to persuade Fred to consent to Potter's plan, but Maud's persuasions being added to the old man's, he finally consented to leave the city for a week, and return in time to vindicate his own innocence in case of Potter's failure.

Before night Fred was on his way to visit another city, and his landlady had agreed to allow Mr. Potter to occupy his place during his absence.

Fred had been gone two days when the old clerk called upon Miss Clarkson to report progress.

"I am completely baffled," he said in answer to her inquiries. "You see Arnold knows me, and evidently suspects me. He is so affectionately desirous of keeping me in sight that I cannot get a peep in his room; and whenever he is out he locks the door and gives the key to the landlady. I cannot force the door yet, and by the time Fred returns I am afraid the money will be smuggled away. I am sure the money is in his possession now, he is so careful about his room. Nobody gets in there but the landlady. I did think of bribing the chamber-maid to let me in when she was at work there, but unfortunately she left to-day."

A flash of light seemed to pass across Maud's face, but she only said, demurely,—

"Your landlady is German, is she not?"

"Yes; her English is very imperfect. Have you ever seen her?"

"No; I have heard Fred speak of her. My mother, you know, was German."

"But what has that to do with Fred's case?"

"I will tell you. Vodges has tried to catch the thief and failed. You have tried and failed. I mean to try, and succeed."

"You! What can you do?"

"Come to-morrow and I will tell you."

Punctual to the appointed time Potter made his appearance. With dancing eyes and flushed cheeks Maud met him.

"Well?" he asked, certain from her looks that she had good tidings.

"I told you I would succeed."

"And you did? Huzza! I feel as young as Fred himself."

"To whom I have telegraphed to return. He will be here this evening, and you must bring Mr. Markham, Mr. Vodges, and the proper police authorities to meet in his room. Then, Mr. Potter, go to Mr. Arnold's room and remove the pipe of the stove at the elbow. In the joint you will find Mr. Markham's memorandum book and the missing notes,"

"You are sure?"

"Listen. This morning, in a calico dress, sunbonnet, and coarse shoes for disguise, I applied for the place of chambermaid at the boarding house where Mr. Arnold has a room. I braided my hair in two long plaits, and convinced your landlady that I was a recent importation from Germany, and unable to speak a word of English. She agreed to take me for one week on trial, and before I had been two hours in the house I was sent to tidy Mr. Arnold's room. Never was a room tidied so quickly; and, seeing my mistress on her way to market, I shot the bolt and took a survey of the premises. The trunk was locked, the bureau drawer wide open, the closet door ajar. I felt a reluctance to overhaul any private depositories, though I should have done it," she added resolutely, "if I had been driven to it. I rummaged a little, when on the closet floor I espied a shirt, apparently scarcely soiled except one sleeve, and that was black with soot. I wondered what he would be doing at the fireplace in summer, and went to examine. A few minutes sufficed to convince me that the stove had been moved out, and the elbow of the pipe removed. I repeated the process, to find a roll of five-hundred-dollar notes and a small note-book with the name of Rufus Markham on the first page. I carefully replaced everything and came home. Now, Mr. Potter, he must be taken by surprise, or he may say Fred put the notes there."

"You are a brave girl!" cried the old man, looking with admiration at the beautiful, animated face, "and Fred will owe you more than his life—his reputation."

"He can repay me by coming to tell me the good news when he is clear."

* * * * *

Eight was struck by the city clocks when Dr. Graham Arnold, dressed in the latest fashion, and with a fragrant Havana between his lips, strolled leisurely into his own room.

He had been in the parlor of his boarding-house for hours, watching Mr. Potter with some anxiety, but was wholly unaware of the little party of four who, in Mr. Potter's temporary apartment, awaited his return to his own room.

Once inside the door the nonchalant look left the handsome face of the young man, and he muttered fiercely,—

"I must get out of this. Potter suspects me, and may yet communicate his suspicions to Mr. Markham. I will be off to-night as soon as the house is quiet."

He opened a small travelling satchel as he spoke, and was rapidly filling it with necessaries for a journey, when he was interrupted by a knock at the door.

Tossing the satchel into the closet he cried,—

"Come in."

But his face turned livid as his call was obeyed, and a party of five entered the room.

Two policemen stationed themselves on his right and left, while Mr. Markham, Mr. Potter, and Fred Tryon followed them.

"Now, Mr. Potter," said one of the policemen, with the face and voice of the detective Vodges, "will you tell us where to search for those missing notes?"

"What notes?" cried Arnold. "What does this outrage mean?"

"It means," said Mr. Potter, "that your plan to throw the robbery of Mr. Markham's private desk upon his nephew, has failed. It means that the five thousand dollars stolen from that gentleman are now in your possession, except only one note given to Mr. Tryon in payment of a debt."

"It's a lie!" cried the prisoner; but his white face, faltering voice, and shaking limbs, were no proof of innocence. "Search my trunks; search everything I have."

"No, gentlemen," said Mr. Potter. "Draw out the stove, if you please, and look in the elbow of the pipe."

With a cry Graham Arnold fell senseless to the floor as Vodges put his hand upon the stove.

Mr. Markham turned to Fred. There was no word spoken. Hand clasped hand, and each read forgiveness in the other's eyes.

Mr. Graham Arnold spent some weeks in jail ere his trial and conviction, but before his sentence was pronounced Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Tryon were crossing the ocean on a wedding tour to Europe.

SALT IN THE SYSTEM.

We have received from a correspondent a letter making some inquiries into the use of salt and we are given to understand that among other follies of the day some indiscreet persons are objecting to the use of salt, and propose to do without it. Nothing could be more absurd. Common salt is the most widely distributed substance in the body; it exists in every fluid and in every solid; and not only is everywhere present, but in almost every part it constitutes the largest portion of the ash when any tissue is burnt. In particular it is a constant constituent of the blood, and it maintains in it a proportion that is almost wholly independent of the quantity that is consumed with the food. The blood will take up so much and no more, however much we may take with our food, and, on the other hand, if none be given, the blood parts with its natural quantity slowly and unwillingly. Under ordinary circumstances a healthy man loses daily about twelve grains by one channel or the other, and if he is to maintain his health that quantity is to be introduced. Common salt is of immense importance in the process of ministering to the nutrition of the body, for not only is it the chief salt in the gastric juice, and essential for the formation of bile, and may hence be reasonably regarded as of high value in digestion, but it is an important agent in promoting the processes of diffusion, and therefore of absorption. Direct experiment has shown that it promotes the decomposition of albumen in the body, acting probably by increasing the activity of the transmission of fluids from cell to cell. Nothing can demonstrate its value better than the fact that if albumen without salt is introduced into the intestines of an animal no portion of it is absorbed, while it all quickly disappears if salt be added. If any further evidence were required it could be found in the powerful instinct which impels animals to obtain salt. Buffaloes will travel for miles to reach a "salt lick;" and the value of salt in improving the nutrition and aspect of horses and cattle is well known to every farmer. The conclusion, therefore, is obvious that salt, being wholesome, and, indeed necessary, should be taken in moderate quantities, and that abstention from it is likely to be injurious.

FOOTPRINTS OF THE PAST.

Heavy stone blocks lately taken from the Portland freestone quarry about eight feet below its top bear some remarkable fossil footprints of birds and beasts. A lower stratum has the depression caused by the steps of the antediluvian animals which roamed this region when the sea reached to the place, and the next lying stratum above took a cast of the marks in projection. One of these tracks measures fifteen inches by eleven, and was probably made by some animal of the elephantine species, although the footpriut is larger than that which would be made by an elephant of the present age. There are three of these tracks in a slab about a yard wide and two yards long. Another slab has the impress of some three-toed bird, supposedly a member of the ostrich family. The stride is about a foot and a half. Another slab ten foot long, has the impress in relief of part of a tree trunk. The tree from its shaggy bark, is thought to have been a hickory. The slabs are to be presented to the Hartford High School.

ALTOGETHER TOO CIVIL.

Dean Ramsay relates an incident illustrating a phase of Scottish courtship, that of a Scotch girl who thought it possible that there might be even too scrupulous a regard for appearances. On her marriage day the youth to whom she was about to be married, and who had never dared to kiss her, said, triumphantly: "Weel, Jennie, haven't I been unco ceevil?" "Ay, Jock," said she, "senselessly ceevil."

At a recent meeting of the London Physical Society, Mr. Braham gave an experimental demonstration of the vorticel theory of the formation of the solar system by rotating a drop of castor oil and chloroform in water until it threw off other drops as planets.

The Dude and the Roses.

Now blow all the lush crimson roses
In every flower-man's shop,
As red as political noses
You see at reception or hop;
And the dude buys several bunches

And then for a fortnight he lunches
On pie.

The Great Bernhardt.

[La Vie Parisienne.]

Sarah Bernhardt in the love scene of her latest dramatic success.

He Recognized It.

[Wall Street News.]

A Philadelphian was sitting in a mining broker's office in Virginia City one day last fall, when a stranger entered and showed him a pound lump of silver ore which was at least 90 per cent. pure stuff.

"Found that on one of my hills," he said, as he drew up a chair and sat down.

The ears of the man from the Quaker City began to work and his heart to thump. The native looked green, and perhaps he didn't know the value of that hill.

"What you got?" asked the broker, as he came from behind his desk.

"Oh, nothin' much—just a little hunk I found on one of my hills," was the reply.

The broker took the hunk, carefully examined it for a minute, and then quietly remarked:

"Yes, I recognize it. I sold that hunk four weeks ago to salt a hill in the next county! Please put it in your coat-tail pocket and never let on. It is too rich for our blood!"

The "Flap" Postal.

[Texas Siftings.]

What has become of the once vaunted postal card with a flap? Has it gone to join the ghost of Keely's motor? It seems but a few brief months ago that we were promised a new flap style of a Mother Hubbard postal card which could be hermetically sealed from the prying eyes of the young lady clerk in the postoffice.

He Wasn't Left.

[Petit Journal Pour Rire.]

This represents a gentleman who, during the late strike of the Paris cabmen, didn't intend to get left.

Almost Incredible.

[Texas Siftings.]

Mrs Bill Plumbottle is one of the wealthiest ladies in Austin, but she hasn't got a particle of sense. One day last week she drove up to the store door of a prominent grocer. He came out, bowing, and asked what he could do for her.

"Have you any more hams like that one I got last week," she asked.

"Yes, Mrs Plumbottle, we have six more just like them."

"If they are not the same kind I don't want 'em."

"Why, madam, I assure you they are all from the same animal."

"Well, if the whole six are from the same hog, you may send them to my home," replied Mrs Plumbottle.

The Editor at Work

[The Judge.]

Just What He Wanted.

[Newman Independent.]

"Say, mister, ain't you the orator man what made a speech to us yesterday?" asked a country bumpkin of a Newman politician a few days ago.

"I have that honor," was the reply.

"D'ye ye remember what you said?"

"Well no—yes, I remember the substance of my remarks. But why do you ask?"

"Why, you said that you made the welkin ring, and I've tried all over town to get one big enough for Mariar's finger, and there ain't any big enough, and I thought as how I would come to your shop and get ye to make her one of them thar welkin rings. She's a stunner, and it'll take lots of welkin to make one big enough for her."

SELLING

BOOTS AND SHOES

— AT —

MANUFACTURER'S PRICES.

A DECIDED SUCCESS.

A great many firms in Lynn are puzzled at the large attendance and great success of our special sales, simply because these same firms have failed in their own efforts to attract attention and accomplish the same results. The reasons are plain, for we assert that our establishments can show many advantages over others. We give the following, which are convincing:

First.

Enormous stock. The immense stock of our wholesale house, together with our two retail stores, 84 Market street and 23 Market Square, make a stock to draw from five times larger than all the other shoe stores in Lynn combined.

Second.

Low Rents. While our competitors are handicapped by having to pay exorbitant rents, we with our three stores, have to pay rent only on one—a fact, the significance of which as bearing upon our ability to sell for less than others, will be apparent to all.

Third

Wholesale. Our wholesale trade, which now extends to every city and town of any importance in New England, obliges us to carry an immense stock and gives us an advantage in buying entirely beyond the reach of our competitors. For where they buy of the jobbers in small lots, we buy direct of the manufacturers, and that we can buy as low as the large Boston jobbers is abundantly attested by the fact that we are able to meet and compete with them on their own grounds and build up a wholesale trade which is constantly increasing.

Fourth.

One Price. Marked in plain figures on every pair of boots and shoes, guarantees low prices.—Equal treatment to all classes and shows at a glance the quality of the goods.

Fifth.

Truthful Representations. No misrepresentations are tolerated. Goods are sold for just what they are. Some stores adopt the "bait" plan, advertising great slaughter, immense bargains, etc. Call in half an hour after such stores open and in nearly every instance the salesman has the old story to tell you: "All gone;" "haven't your size;" "too late;" "very sorry, but we have had such a rush they are all out.—Can't we show you something else?" We have no such nonsense. It won't do.

Sixth.

Quick Sales and Small Profits. Quick sales are the life of a successful business. Small profits are sufficient when the business is done on live business principles. You save one profit by buying of the wholesaler.

Seventh.

Exchanging Goods or Refunding Money. When any dissatisfaction occurs because the selection does not please in every particular, the goods, if returned uninjured in a reasonable time, can be exchanged; and it matters not of whom it was selected, any salesman at leisure will pay careful attention to the customer. In case nothing is found to please, the cash will be cheerfully refunded.

Eighth.

Prompt Cash Payments. We are so conscious of the overwhelming advantages we possess both in buying and selling we have no hesitation in asserting that no prudent purchaser can afford to buy anything anywhere else until they have looked through our stock and got our prices. Ready money in our hands enables us to buy goods in large quantities at figures that the average retailer knows nothing about. To-day we stand simply as the connecting link between the manufacturer and consumer.

We have an immense surplus stock which we are going to close out during this sale. In order to accomplish this purpose we know at the outset that it will be necessary to offer sufficient inducements which we are determined to do. Consequently, in this instance as well as all others, we appeal directly to the interests of every purchaser, regarding that as decidedly more potent than volumes of positive assertions.

TO THE PUBLIC!

We have always possessed the idea that the poor man's hard earned dollar should purchase just as much as a like amount of his wealthy neighbor.—WE BELIEVE IT. WE ACT UPON IT. Three years ago it was hard to convince customers that a firm in the FURNITURE business would or could make such a departure. WE DID, and our business to-day is a pleasing monument of its kindly reception by the people of Lynn, Swampscott, Saugus, Nahant, Marblehead, Peabody, Danvers, Lynnfield, Salem, &c., to whom we are more than thankful.

NEWPORT, R. I., Nov. 12, 1883.

J. D. & J. W. EATON, Dear Sirs: Enclosed please find check for amount of bill for CRAWFORD RANGE and Ware. It arrived last Friday noon, and we had it set up and a fire in it before four o'clock. We are more than pleased with it. All our cooking was done Saturday morning. It usually takes all day to do it. My wife thinks she shall take to cooking again herself, as it is real fun to cook with such a Range as the CRAWFORD. Hoping you may sell a great many more of them, and every purchaser be as well pleased as we are. I remain yours, very truly,

52 MAIN STREET,

A Day Spent with the Salvation Army Corps of Lawrence, Mass.

Sunday was a beautiful day, and 7 o'clock in the morning found me at their barracks on Lowell street, to participate in their knee drill, an hour's earnest communion with God, in powerful, earnest prayer to him for souls and the descent of the Holy Ghost, interspersed with songs of praise and shouts of victory, a meeting not soon to be forgotten. Meeting over we wended our way to our lodgings, deeply impressed with their sincerity and the mighty power of the Captain of their salvation (Christ). Returned at ten and found their converts and leaders getting ready for an hour's march, the lasses (as they call the lady soldiers) with their tambourines, triangles and other instruments, and a large bass drum beaten by a converted infidel only six months ago the man was an engineer in a brewery, now as happy a man as you very often see—given up his position for Jesus. He could not serve God and the devil. The company numbered about seventy when in marching order, and their faces shone from the happiness within. The order to march was given, and off they started. They were a strange procession as on they went, an ever increasing crowd with them. People rushed to the corners of the streets, crowded the doorways and windows, from the tottering babe to the grey headed old man; some scoffed and made fun, some rejoiced; but the army moved right on, singing and playing and praising God and shouting glad Halleluias. On they marched, and about eleven arrived at the barrack doors and entered, and the crowd with them, or what could get in, for it was half full thirty minutes before the officers and soldiers took their seats on the platform, the tambourine lasses to the left and the bass drum on the right, officers in the centre, a goodly company, seventy-five or more. The meeting opened with singing, the heartiest imaginable, the tambourines jingling, the banjo, bass drum, and other instruments doing their part, and for the first time the writer got an idea of what David meant in playing on all manner of instruments, and praising God. Soon everybody sang, the tunes are all familiar, and the choruses are repeated over and over, until you really feel, before they are through, that the thing they sing about is really so, and unfix it from your mind you can not. Then come the reading of the scripture, some few sharp comments and burning words, which constitute the preaching, then another song with a chorus "The Old Fashioned Religion is Good Enough for Me," and the way the audience joined in it gave one the impression that more than one heart was touched; then came the sharp-shooting by the soldiers, testimonies for Jesus, his power to save, and what he will do in eradicating the love of tobacco, strong drink and other evil habits; there were many marked cases of reclamation. Sometimes the Captain would make a remark and turning to the soldiers would say, "Do you believe that, if you do, give us a volley?" and immediately a hundred throats would respond Amen.

I have as yet given no description of the officers. There were three, brother Shirley and wife, both captains, and Happy Jack, a lieutenant. Mrs. Shirley was dressed in a dark blue navy suit, plain basque, little straight collar with a red cord around it, and a metal Soon either side, inside of this was worn a straight linen collar, the cuffs of the sleeves were trimmed with red cord, otherwise it was plain; the skirt of the dress was without ruffles or flounces, a hat something like a poke, black straw, trimmed with dark blue on the inside edged with red, with a twist of blue around the crown, faced with a red ribbon on which was printed Salvation Army. No feather, no rings and plated jewelry, no bangs, no crimps, for they believe that when a person gets salvation he will want none of them, but in dress will try and please God as well as in everything else. The styles for all the seasons can be found in the New Testament, no need of sending to Paris, look for yourself. Bro. Shirley had a dark blue overcoat with brass buttons, two S's on the collar, cuffs, collar, etc. trimmed with yellow cord appropriate to his rank, a blue cap shaped like a helmet, made of some waterproof material, corded with red, on which in red letters was printed "The Salvation Army. Blood and Fire. Prepare to meet thy God." Underneath he wore a red jersey shirt, across the front of which was worked in yellow, Salvation Army. The coat is laid off during meetings in the barracks. The lieutenant's dress was the same, blue hat yellow corded, the trimmings of the coat red and the jersey shirt blue with trimmings of the same color. All the soldiers wore metal badges on their outside garments stamped Salvation Army. Soldiers are always expected to do their duty. They are tremendously in earnest, and the audience is carried along with them. They are perfectly natural in their talking, and as free in their movements as a child; hands, arms and feet keeping time with the song, and it is evident to the most careless and indifferent observer, that there is no sham or make believe to the performance. One forgets all the strangeness in the deep devotion which underlies the whole, for a careful mind perceives that a prayerful trust in the living God is the secret of their wonderful success, and that they certainly expect that God will bless the means they are using; and he does. At the end comes the Salvation meeting, the invitation to sinners to come in a penitent form and get washed in the blood of Jesus, and they do come and evidently get gloriously saved; such pleading with God, such earnestness and directness and expectancy, the writer never has witnessed before; people who have been church members for years, go away realizing that they never were converted, or if they were that they have lost it. The conscious witness of the spirit is insisted upon, and a total giving up of things offensive to God. There is no half way work. Back-sliders must go back to their first works to be saved. The personality of the devil, the hell of the damned are insisted upon and driven home to the hearts of the hearers with an unction that can only come from God. In the afternoon they had a Blood and Fire meeting. Blood signifies the blood of Jesus, fire the Holy Ghost, and a grand meeting it was, with a salvation meeting at the end when others got saved. The house was packed and jammed in the evening, two or three hundred being there an hour before meeting commenced, a grand meeting; several souls were saved. They have had about 200 converts for their nine weeks campaign. They are much cramped for room. In their work they do not interfere with other churches; if their converts belong to no other church they can join the army and become a soldier, but otherwise go back to your own fold and tell them what God has done for you. If members from other churches desire to come, they must bring their letter, but even then they are not anxious to receive you unless it is your honest conviction before God that you ought. They seek out the lost ones of the by ways and hedges, though in their audiences there is a large number of what would be called the best in the community who are as interested as any one, and want the work to go on. They reach to a remarkable extent, those whom the churches never see.

The army officers are a self denying, God fearing people, and have no stated salary. They go to a place expecting God to open the way, they doing their part. They are supported by voluntary contributions. Their local expenses must be settled first, such as hall hire, fire, lights, etc. Then they are allowed to take so much for lodging and food, if there is that amount in the treasury. If there is any scrimping it comes on their end; the surplus goes into the war fund to spread the march of the Salvation Army. Their food is the plainest but wholesome, no pies, or cake or such stuff, so the cost of living is reduced to a minimum. The army numbers 1,000 soldiers, and is established in thirteen different countries. They have a weekly paper called the War Cry, with a circulation of 26,000,000 per year. The officers are changed about from place to place every few months, rarely stopping as long as a year in one place, and so are constantly meeting new scenes and experiences. The time outside the meeting is spent in visiting and spreading the news of salvation. They do a tremendous amount of work, and dedicate soul body and spirit to God and then act as though it was so. They count not their lives dear, but are willing to spend and be spent in their Master's work. Much more could be written but we must draw this letter to a close.

Book Notices.

The March number of Frank Leslie's Popular monthly is, we think, one of the best yet issued of this deservedly favorite magazine. The articles embrace various subjects, and are by popular writers. "Soudan and its Complications," "The New York Negro Plot of 1741," etc., are exceedingly interesting. Etta W. Pierce's serial, "A Dark Deed" is continued, and there are short stories, sketches, etc. There are poems of great merit, a comprehensive miscellany of pleasant reading matter. The price is only 25 cents for a single number, and a years subscription $2.50 postpaid. Mrs. Frank Leslie, Publisher, 53, 55 and 57 Park Place, New York.

The March Atlantic continues Dr. Mitchell's story "In War Time," and Mr. Crawford's story, "A Roman Singer. These, though very unlike, are two of the best and most interesting serial stories that have appeared from American writers for a long time. Henry A. Clapp contributes an admirably intelligent and discriminating article on Henry Irving, the famous English actor. Henry M. Lyman has an interesting paper on "The Discovery of Peruvian Bark," which, under the name of quinine, is so much used in medical practice. Other interesting articles are "The Sources of Early Israelitish History," an excellent example of what is now known as the "higher criticism" of the Bible, by Rev. Philip H. Wicksteed, a learned English clergyman; "Texts and Translations of Hafiz," by Prof. E. P. Evans; two poems, reviews of books, and a bright Contributors' Club. Houghton, Mifflin & Co., Boston.

We have received a specimen copy of A. M. Purdy's Seed, Plant and Tree Catalogue. It is a beauty. The colored plates of his new seedling Raspberry, "The Crimson Beauty" and his "Latest of All" strawberry, the "Jumbo," are very fine indeed, and should be seen by every lover of fruits. The information given on growing strawberries, raspberries, blackberries, grapes, etc., is very valuable, while his prices for plants, trees, &c., are as low as any reliable grower or dealer. The Catalogue, or a specimen copy of his valuable monthly paper, the Fruit Recorder, can be seen at our office, or by dropping a postal to A. M. Purdy, Palmyra, N. Y., a copy of either or both will be sent to you free.

"Is our civilization perishable?" The question is asked in the North American Review for March, by Judge J. A. Jameson, who considers the several agencies by which the overthrow of existing civilization might be effected. In the same number of the Review there is an article of extraordinary interest on "Agricultural Politics in England," by Wm. E. Bear, editor of the Mark Lane Express. "A Defenceless Sea-board," by Gen. H. A. Smalley, is a description of the unprotected condition of the harbors and coast cities of the United States. In "The Story of a Nomination," W. O. Stoddard recounts the hitherto unpublished history of the means by which Abraham Lincoln for a second Presidential term was brought about. Other articles are "Literary Resurrectionists," by Chas. T. Congdon; "How to improve the Mississippi," by Robert S. Taylor; and "The Constitutionality of Repudiation," by D. H. Chamberlain and John S. Wise. Published at 30 Lafayette Place, New York.

Purdy's 64-page Small Fruit Instructor will tell you all about growing small fruits for home use or market. Send him a 25 cent postal note or postage stamps and he will send you a copy post paid. He also sends free to all applicants his beautiful and instructive catalogue of fruit trees, plants, vines, seeds, &c., (a copy of which may be seen at our office,) as also a specimen copy of Purdy's Fruit Recorder and Cottage Gardener—a 20 page monthly devoted exclusively to fruits, flowers and vegetables. It speaks for itself.

We are in receipt of the "Beacon"—a new society paper, published in Boston, by Cyrus A. Page, formerly business manager of the Boston Museum, which, by the way, gets a large share of notice in its dramatic and other columns. The make up is somewhat novel, and it contains a sermon by Rev. Phillips Brooks.

The N. Y. Morning Journal says that Mrs. F. G. Kellogg, 50 E. 86th St., was partially paralyzed, and lay for seven days in convulsions. Physicians were engaged and discharged until seven had failed to help or cure her. She was unable to leave her bed, and was as helpless as a child. After using all sorts of salves, ointments, lotions and plasters, her case was given up as hopeless. She was induced to try St. Jacobs Oil as a last chance. She began to improve from the time the first application was made, and by its continued use she has completely recovered.

NEW YORK MERCURY,

FOR 1884.

With the initial number of the New Year, dated January 6, 1884, the NEW YORK MERCURY entered upon its

FORTY-SIXTH VOLUME,

and it is by long odds the cheapest, as well as the largest, handsomest and best metropolitan literary journal now published. Each number contains 56 columns, or 1,800 square inches of reading matter, comprising more than 15,000 lines

EQUALLING THE CONTENTS OF A TWENTY FIVE CENT MAGAZINE.

Arrangements have been consummated, both at home and in Europe, to secure for the ensuing year many sterling novelties to increase the already incomparable variety of literary attractions which have always made the NEW YORK MERCURY a welcome guest in every home circle, and

A PAPER SUITABLE FOR ALL CLASSES,

celebrated throughout the length and breadth of the land for its

LATEST FASHION NEWS AND SOCIAL INTELLIGENCE,

A CORRECT AND EXTENSIVE MIRROR OF THE AMUSEMENTS OF THE WORLD,

ALL THE FEATURES OF A REFINED FAMILY NEWSPAPER,

AND ALL THE LIVE SENSATIONS OF THE METROPOLIS.

In fact, the New York Mercury contains more stories than the story papers. More news than the newspapers. More fun than the comic papers. More theatre news than the dramatic papers. More society news than the society papers. More exclusive local sensations than all the papers.

JOHN P FERNALD, ALBERT VITTUM,
Editors and Publishers.

A LETTER is published in the Lynn Bee, signed by William Hayes, in which he claims that the press gave more prominence to the argument of Mr. Bancroft than that of his attorney, Mr. Northend. As far as this paper is concerned, we took full notes of both gentlemen's argument, and we gave all the points made by Mr. Northend. If we made more out of Mr. Bancroft's argument it is because there was more to it.

IT IS time some thought was being given to the poor accommodations which are possessed by our High School. The removal of the offices of the town to the new hall leaves the lower part of the building unoccupied, save as it is used as a gymnasium. The graduate of the High School need not be told that the present school room is far from what it should be: that in cold days there is draft enough through the cracks in the floor, which has long since outlived its usefulness, to nearly run a sawmill. There is no reason why the student of the High School should not have as good accommodations at least, as the children in the lower grades. This is not the case. It is doubtful if the old Town Hall could ever be made into a model school building. But a reasonable outlay would do much to improve it, and make it not only more comfortable, but more healthful to the sons and daughters of our citizens who will avail themselves of the privileges of the High School.

IT IS interesting to read some of the eulogiums of the late Wendell Phillips—coming from men with whose work he was a life long opponent. One would think these men had been life long abolitionists, when they are, in reality, Bourbon Democrats. But their approval of him hinges entirely upon his support of Gen. Butler during the last few years of his life. With them, this outweighs all his previous opposition to their principles. One unacquainted with history would be led to think him a Democrat of good standing. In fact, there is scarcely left anything to be said by those who have been in sympathy with the great object of Phillips' life. For those few who disregarding his politics, seeing only the innate character of the man, have commended him for his sincerity and manliness, we would give all praise. For the rest, it only shows that "politics makes strange bedfellows"—and the very men who years ago were his bitterest political enemies can see only his support of Gen. Butler, and the weak vagaries of his later life, and find enough in them to raise him to the loftiest pinnacle of glory.

THERE IS much to be said in favor of the proposed measure to have free text books in our public schools. At present the school system of Massachusetts makes everything free save this. Why, it may pertinently be asked, should the line be drawn on books?

With the parents of many of our children, this item is the turning point of continuance in school or taking the children out and putting them in the store or workshop. It is just at the time, too, when a year or two more of schooling would make a better citizen of the boy, and be of equal advantage to the girl. These school books are an item of considerable magnitude to the man of humble circumstances, with a large family, but who desires his children to have all the advantages which our schools afford.

The free text book system would put all the scholars upon an equality. Many of them are now unable to buy their school books. They feel the invidious distinction which is made by their more fortunate companions, the children of well to do parents,—and the distinction is more keenly felt by them at that age than by the parents themselves. The free text book would remove all this.

Massachusetts has always been liberal in the support of her schools. Nothing that has been needed to place them in the front rank has been withheld by her citizens. The project now under consideration is worthy of thought.

THERE IS rebellion in the new Mormon settlement outside of Salt Lake city, and the leaders are finding that it is not all smooth water among the supposed faithful. The opposition to the demands of the church comes from the better educated and well-to-do Americans in their new colony. It shows that if left for their converts to American soil, the Mormon religion would fall before the advancing civilization of the West. But the reliance of the Mormon leaders is upon foreigners. These are lured thither by prospects of a fertile country, communistic privileges, and the spiritual shelter of the church. When there, the power of the leaders is felt. They are told for whom to vote, and it is expected they will obey. In one of the Mormon precincts there were 172 votes cast; the favored candidate of the church received 172. These men from distant lands cannot revolt. They have no means of redress. They are strangers, as it were, to our customs and civilization—and nothing is left but blind obedience.

In the case above mentioned, the will of the leaders in regard to the ballot was disregarded. Of course excommunication followed. But they are not in fear of its consequences, and its outcome will be of interest to those who desire to see polygamy trampled under foot. Education will do much yet, to uproot this giant evil, as it is doing against all the evils of the world.

THE INVESTIGATION which is being held by the Congressional Committee into the Mississippi elections, has developed a state of affairs which it will not do to pass unnoticed. It has been shown that Mathews, who it was admitted was a peaceable citizen, was murdered as soon as he deposited his ballot. It has been shown that the negroes who would not vote the Bourbon ticket were afraid to cast their ballots. It has been shown by Democratic testimony also, that they were determined to carry the elections by bulldozing, murder and blood, if in no other way.

We were shown, during the last fall election, a private letter from Ex-Gov. McLean, of So. Carolina, in which the attitude of the Bourbon leaders was shown in this very light. It was also an appeal to the people of this state to give no further encouragment to these Bourbons of the South, as the election of Gen. Butler would surely do.

The Republican party must insist, during the coming campaign, upon the absolute freedom of the ballot for all citizens. If elections are to be carried by threats, by bulldozing, or any unlawful means, the ballot is of little use. Not only in our state, but in every state it should be the privilege of every voter to deposit his ballot according to his own wishes, and he should be protected in such privilege. This should be the watchword in the next campaign. Whichever party adopts it will surely triumph.

THE CONCERT of school children in the new Opera House, last Monday evening, is the result of an endeavor to show what can be accomplished in the matter of teaching music in the public schools of our town. Of course there is more or less superficiality to an exhibition of this kind. But behind all this, it is beyond a doubt that the employment of a teacher for the past six-months has awakened an interest in music among the children which was before undeveloped.

But this is not the question. If music is to be taught in our schools, it should be done regularly. It is too late in the day now to argue the advantage to the scholar or the school of such a study. It is admitted by most educators, and their decision approved by the parents of the children. The reading of music at sight can be learned more easily by the child. Like the study of a language, the earlier the age of the scholar, the better the results. Hence the establishment of a branch of music in the schools of all our large cities. The day of the old fashioned singing school has gone by, and its instructions delegated to the public schools.

The advocates of congregational singing in our churches find encouragement in such teaching. It is a noticeable fact that in large cities where music has been taught for any considerable time in the schools, all the members of the congregation can sing. They can read most of the ordinary hymn tunes at sight. While in the country villages, or where there is no musical education in schools, the congregational singing, if had at all, must be limited to a small variety of tunes, most of which must be learned by the congregation by ear.

We therefore hope that the beginning made by our school committee in behalf of music in our schools as a regular study will continue, and that they will have the support of the citizens of the town in an appropriation for that purpose. The work which is being done in the schools each day is the true test of the teacher; and while such exhibitions as were given last week are very pleasing to the audience, they ought not to be necessary to satisfy people of the advantages to be derived by the scholars. The teacher, too, should be paid a sufficient amount to reimburse him for his services, and an exhibition of the proficiency of the scholars could then be given under the auspices of the school committee, free to all our citizens.

THE PLAIN preaching of the Rev. Dr. Thomas, of Chicago, one of the ablest preachers of the Methodist church, and his expression of more liberal views of theology than was thought proper by the more conservative brethren of his church; his trial for heresy, and retention by his congregation in spite of it, will be remembered by our readers. Now another preacher, this time in the Episcopal church of that city, has given utterance to opinions for which he is to be called to account. The preacher is no less a personage than Rev. Dr. Cully, and simply as a matter of interest we give an extract without comment.

We have no Hebrew literature of any older date than the time of the Jewish captivity, and we have no Hebrew scholars now, or so few that you might count them on your fingers. The time may come when there will be thoroughly educated Hebrew scholars, but that time is not now. But we are now standing on the eve of the most stupendous revolution in reference to the doctrines of the Bible that the church has ever known. Uncertainty and doubt are pressing upon us. We are not certain of the authorship of the Old Testament. We cannot tell what part was written by Moses and what part by other hands of the books attributed to Moses. We say David wrote the Psalms, but we know that the Psalms were not all written by David. They were written by different persons at long intervals. No one can tell who wrote the book of Job It contains evidence of being one of the oldest books in the Bible. The Old Testament abounds with 10,000 old wives' fables, which will finally drop out like a tadpole loses its tail when it has no further use for it. It would not be prudent for us to attack these fables in the pulpit. But I must say that there is a great deal in the Old Testament that is of very little value to religion. It is not all given by inspiration. When you have to give up what your mother taught you do it honestly, but do not say much about it publicly. The revised New Testament is imcomparably superior to the old version; but there are still many things that will have to be changed. But I am awfully shy of the Old Testament. It has got to be thoroughly revised, and if criticism says that any of the books are not genuine they must go overboard. Many of the prophesies of Isaiah and other prophets that are applied to Christ and the church had reference to the return of the Jews from their captivity. Let those who attack Robinson, [Robertson] Smith and others with him move slowly, for they may find themselves standing on the same ground in the near future.

The Naumkeag Clothing Co., announce that they will close out all their fine overcoats for less than cost to manufacture. Their advertisement to this effect was received by us too late for insertion this week. But we would remind our readers that every thing in the store has been marked down in order to make room for the new Spring goods. There is no store in the country that can offer such inducements. All their clothing is manufactured expressly for them, and is guaranteed to be first class in every particular.

The Boston Symphony Orchestra gave a fine concert at Mechanic Hall on Thursday evening, in the Salem Oratorio Society course. The instrumental numbers were magnificently rendered. The vocal numbers by Mr. and Mrs. Webber gave great satisfaction, Mr. Henschel accompanying them on the piano. Mr. Listemann brought exquiste music from the violin. Taken as a whole, it proved one of the most enjoyable musical entertainments of modern times.

At the Unity Club last evening, a vote of thanks was tendered to Mr. Isaac Littiefield and Miss Nellie M. Bartlett for their generous services at the Concert in the Unitarian Church, last Tuesday evening. The vote was passed unanimously and the secretary instructed to forward to them a copy of the vote. $41.00 was netted from the Concert for the benefit of the Organ Fund.

A subscriber enquires if the extra doors leading from the balcony to the lower floor of the new Hall are open during an entertainment. He thinks they ought to be and the public got accustomed to their use.

Hose 2 held their annual supper at their hose house on the evening of the 22d of February.

Hose 3 gave a leap year party in the hall of their house last Friday evening, with music by Danvers Quadrille Band. There were about 26 couples present, and a good time was enjoyed by all until about 1 o'clock in the morning.

The trustees of the Relief Association have called three meetings, and at no time have they had a quorum, and the matter has been left with the President to call a meeting whenever he sees the need of it.

The members of the Lawrence Fire department are furnished with badges which are of solid silver, oblong in design, with the impression of the city seal for a centre-piece, surmounted with emblems of the service and the words "Lawrence Fire Department" over all. Beneath the seal is the name and number of the company, with the member's number.—Lawrence Eagle.

The members of this department should be furnished with badges by the town. The badges now in use by the firemen are furnished by themselves and there are numerous designs and qualities.

We don't hear anything about the fire alarm telegraph as yet, but we hope that it will come up before the meeting, and that it will be put in operation.

Wouldn't it be a good idea to increase the pay of the firemen this year, say from 15 to $25, for the year's services? This would not make a very great addition to the expenses of the fire department, and it would be just about the "proper caper" with the boys, as it would save them from going down into their pockets at the end of the year to settle up bills, as they have to do very often now. Attention is called to the advertisement of Morton's Celebrities, who appear in the new Opera House, to-morrow evening. We are assured by the managers that it is a variety troupe which none of our readers need be ashamed to see: there will not be a thing, either by word, gesture, or dress to offend the taste of any of the auditors. They will open with a first part minstrel entertainment, during which will be sung the popular songs of the day. Then will follow a variety consisting of clog dancing, &c. The young lady on roller skates, is said to be a marvel. Those of our readers who enjoy a good variety entertainment will do well to attend. Seats are now on sale at popular prices at Spaulding's.

Several letters from correspondents on matters of local interest appear this week in the PRESS. We will take this occasion to repeat that our columns are always open to such communications. We do not hold ourselves responsible for their views; they are equally welcome whether they agree with us or not. All we ask is brevity and freedom from personal allusion.

FURNITURE. There is now in Boston, one of the most extensive manufacturing establishments in America. The entrance to Paine's Furniture Warerooms is at 48 Canal St., opposite Maine Depot. They not only manufacture, but also import from Italy curious carved pieces of the time of the Doges of Venice; from Switzerland fine lace curtains, from France inlaid woods, tapestries, and rich silks for upholstering; from England red, amber, blue and black hair cloth, in richly brocaded patterns, besides a large variety of lace curtains. These, together with their own numerous manufactures, will well repay one to travel miles to visit. Illustrated lists of these sent upon application.

RESOLUTIONS OF RESPECT.

L. A. 2921 K. of L.

WHEREAS, it has pleased the Omnipotent Ruler to remove from our midst, one whose untiring zeal and fearless sense of honor made him ever ready to extend a helping hand to the oppressed, and opposed the exercise of selfish tyranny from whatever source it came, and

WHEREAS, in the death of Wendell Phillips, the working masses of America have lost a constant and unswerving champion, ever fearless and entirely unselfish in his advocacy of human rights an honest, earnest friend on whose sympathy and advice we could always rely, therefore be it,

RESOLVED, That while we bow in humble submission to the decrees of an all wise Ruler we deeply deplore our loss and will ever cherish his name in fond remembrance and endeavor to perpetuate the memory of his courage, honesty and godlike humanity as an heritage to the toiling generations yet to come.

A CARD.

The subscriber desires to make public acknowledgment of the services of the lady teachers and gentlemen Principals of the public schools of Peabody, whose faithfulness and zeal in the school room in carrying out my ideas of musical instruction, and whose immediate efforts in connection with the Children's Concert contributed in no small degree to its success. And here I wish particularly to mention Master Barnes, who planned and directed the movements of the children in passing to and from the stage, and whose assistance was invaluable in bringing the concert to a successful issue. Nor must I forget the boys and girls who took part, who have followed with a loving enthusiasm and a degree of aptitude which I have never before seen surpassed the efforts of their teacher, and where every look and action on the evening of the 21st, expressed an effort to do their very best. HOME HAPPENINGS.

A pleasant sight met the eyes of the large audience which gathered in the Town Hall last Thursday evening. Several hundred scholars from the primary and grammar schools were the performers. All were in holiday attire: they were carefully marshaled to their places in the galleries and upon the stage by their respective teachers under direction of Mr. Barnes. They were in perfect order, and evidently full of purpose to show to the extent of their powers, the results of a few months training in music. Their interest and enthusiasm were manifest throughout the long programme. The concert began with singing by the younger scholars. They followed the leader perfectly. Few choruses of adults are so fully under control as they were. We were prepared to hear the thin and flat quality of voice, usual from young children, and were surprised at their resonant and musical tones. The boys' alto was strong and well defined. The first soloist, Agnes Grosvenor, appeared quite undisturbed by the great audience before her, singing in pure and pleasing tones, the history of Dame Hubbard's Wonderful Dog. The little miss won the hearts of all and may be sure of a welcome from a Peabody audience whenever she chooses to sing again. Masters Herbert Richardson and Johnny Eagan won hearty applause by their solo singing. Master Richardson is evidently "full of music." His voice is worthy of the best cultivation. The motion songs and especially the flower song attracted much attention. After eight numbers had been sung, the scholars on the stage retired to the galleries, and those in the galleries took their places upon the stage. The very difficult matter of effecting this change without confusion was accomplished by Mr. Barnes; to whom great credit is due for efficient direction. The three part singing of the older scholars was in tones clearly defined and well sustained. "The Mermaid's Song" was especially interesting, as showing how readily young singers can be trained to follow mixed and difficult movements. In the trio and duetts, Misses Smith, Phillips and Poor gave evidence of unusual taste and ability. A selected chorus from the High school sang once, in a spirited and effective way. We commend this chorus for its earnest, faithful effort. The most remarkable feature of the concert was this: pitch was sustained from beginning to end. It is common for conductors of children's choruses to watch their voices, and to transpose remaining numbers to lower keys whenever they begin to fall from pitch. So far as we could judge, no transpositions were made: the chorus gave no sign of unevenness or failing voice. The concert was even in quality and uniformly excellent. The voices of the scholars were well sustained by Miss Mary Bill at the piano, and Mr. E. Victor Emilio, at the organ. Mr. Bill may well be congratulated upon the success of his labors in the schools. He has accomplished much in a very short time. We are sure that all who listened to the singing at his concert will desire that the musical training, thus well begun, may be soon a permanent feature in the work of our public schools.

The lecture by Harry W. French, for the benefit of the Benevolent Society, will be of unusual interest. His subject, "The Wonders of Our West," will be found very interesting, and include pictures of the matchless Falls by day and night, as they were and are, in summer and winter. Following the river to the great lakes, or by Mammoth Cave to the great river of the world.—A glimpse of St. Louis and Chicago.—Denver yesterday and today.—Over the prairies, into the hills, among the mountains of Colorado, to the summit of Pike's Peak.—A view of the Morman's promised land, the Indian's hunting grounds, and the garden of the gods.—Over the Rocky Mountains, into the valley of California, with San Francisco by the Golden Gate.—Into the giant forests of Mariposa.—A day on the banks of the Merced, as it flows through the Yosemite.—Sunset and Moonlight on the shores of Mirror Lake.

The twenty-seventh Farmers' Institute of the Essex Agricultural Society, will be held at Saunders' Hall, Lawrence, on Thursday, Feb. 28, at 6.30 o'clock, A. M. Forenoon—Subject, "Poultry in all its branches." Opened by J. M. Bartlett, President of the West Newbury Farmers' Club. Afternoon—"Plants Grown under Glass for the Flower and Vegetable Garden," with a paper by Edward E. Woodman, B. S. of Danvers, Florist. Ladies as well as Gentlemen, and Young Men, particularly, are invited to be present and participate in the discussion. The Boston & Maine and Eastern Railroads are expected to furnish Free Return Tickets to those who attend.

The Beverly Citizen has the following to say in regard to a shop formerly owned by a Peabody man, and a shop to which is attached a whistle which is often heard here. "The old Gray morrocco factory, on River street, is to be sold at public auction, to be removed, which probably means torn down. Mr. John Gifford, of Salem, has purchased all the piping and has been removing the same during the past week. Paul Patten, of Salem, has purchased the engine. This is an establishment in which many thousands of dollars have been lost, but notwithstanding this fact we think the end for which it was built has been accomplished, for, we understand, previous to the starting of this factory, morocco manufacturing in Beverly was an unknown enterprise, whereas we now have a good representation of that business in our midst."

Mr. Charles H. Collins, whose illness we have chronicled from time to time, "passed to a higher life" last Thursday morning. Mr. Collins was the prorietor of the cigar manufactory and retail store in Allen's Block. Mr. Collins was a man whom everybody knew, and respected. He was always upright and honorable in his dealings. He was a member of Union Post 50, G. A. R. He enlisted from Salem, Sept. 14, 1861, in Co. A 23d. Mass. Reg., being discharged for disability from diseases contracted at Roanoake Island, Oct. 2d., 1862, after a term of service of fourteen months. He leaves a widow and one daughter who have the sympathy of the community.

The services of Mrs. J. Ellen Foster, of Iowa, have been secured for the next Sunday evening temperance meeting which will be held Mar. 2nd, at the new Town Hall. Mrs. Foster comes with the highest commendations of the press, having earned a wide reputation by her logical and able advocacy of "no-license" and "constitutional prohibition." Mrs. Foster is a singularly pleasing and persuasive speaker. Her subject will be, "The Duty of the Hour." A collection will be taken as heretofore. Doors open at 6.30. Lecture commences at 7.

The "oldest inhabitant" reliable on the weather, insists there is a striking resemblance in the winter thus far in the way of snow falls, to that of 1832, when we had the greatest freshets and biggest rivers known to our history. In 1853 there were frequent snow falls in January, and about the last of the month they were supplemented by a heavy fall of twelve or fifteen inches. Rains followed early in February, and there was a rushing of mighty waters.

A very enjoyable time was held at the residence of Mrs. Charles Roberts, 17 Prospect St., Salem, the evening of the 21st inst., the occasion being a surprise to her son, Mr. Urban C. Roberts, the popular driver of C. F. Hathaway's baker team, Peabody, who was made the recipient of an elegant gold watch chain and charm, and a Silver Individual set and a sum of money. After which a bountiful collation was served. The rest of the night was passed in singing and playing of games, and a general good time.

The installation of Rev. S. Linton Bell, of Lincolnshire, over the North church. Marblehead, will take place to-morrow, at 2 o'clock p. m. It is expected that Rev. Mr. Eddy, of Beverly, will make the installing prayer, Rev. Mr. Elder, of Salem will give the charge to the pastor, Rev. Mr. Davis, of Beverly will extend the fellowship of the churches and Rev. Mr. Clark, of Salem will make the address to the people. Rev. Messrs. Moore and Hill, of Lynn, Sperry of Peabody, and Atwood, of Salem, will probably assist at the exercises.

Luther C. Hanson of Peabody, who purchased Sargent's Soap and Tallow Works at Glenmere recently, asked the Board of Health to hold in abeyance the order directing Sargent to give up business April 1, as he alleges that Sargent did not inform him that an order had been issued. Mr. Hanson has been improving the buildings and preparing for a large business. The board have decided to investigate the matter.

There is to be a Lenten costume, this year which is to be very Lenten indeed. It may be of black, but in order to show that it is new, and that is of course a point of great spiritual importance, it should be of gray nun's cloth. The skirts may be kilt-plated or embroidered, and the outer garment may be trimmed with either fur, or with cords and frogs of gray, and it may be hooded or not as the Lentist pleases.

The treasury department is receiving no more $1 and $2 bills from the bureau of engraving and printing on account of the appropriation being exhausted. The supply of ones at the department is exhausted and that of twos will last but a few days longer. Now you are striking right home to the editor. That is the denomination he is most familiar with.

A resident on Mt. Vernon street thinks the hen thieves have a particular fancy for his poultry. An unsuccessful attempt was again made last Thursday to enter his coop.

SCHOOL NOTES.

WALLIS SCHOOL.

The scholars in the Wallis school were visited Monday afternoon by Mr. Cable, superintendent of the schools at Hyde Park, and Mr Hayes, principal of the Winter Hill school, Somerville.

Mr. Bill's rehearsals have been a great inconvenience to the Janitor of the Wallis school as the evening school is kept there. The hall has had to be reseated every time a rehearsal has been held there, thus making a great deal of work for him.

The following composition was written by Maud Ayers, age 11.

BROOKLYN.

Brooklyn, which is called the city of churches, is one of the largest and most populous cities in the United States. Its nearness to the city of New York, and its many means of transit, help to make it a very convenient place of residence for the business men of New York.

If one of our forefathers could be placed upon the bridge and see the cities of New York and Brooklyn, with their ferry boats, and their harbors full of ships, with the flags of every nation floating from their masts, they would open their eyes and wonder, and would say with Cobbler Keezar:

"What is it I see?" said Keezar:
"Am I here, or am I there?
Is it a fete at Bingen?
Do I look on Frankfort fair?

"But where are the clown and puppets,
And imps with horns and tails?
And where are the Rhenish flagons?
And where is the foaming ale?"

It has a great many public streets in which are handsome dwellings and buildings, kept in good order and make an imposing appearance. Its opera houses and places of amusement are plenty and beautiful, and afford amusement to its numerous inhabitants.

There are four large elevated railroads in Brooklyn, and the public schools equal any in the Union, and accommodate as many as fifty thousand children.

Its churches are presided over by a great many prominent preachers, among whom are Beecher, Talmage, Storrs, and many others.

Its parks are fine and in summer time are visited by many. The principal park is Prospect, which has fine drives and lakes where one can sit in the shade and listen to the music, discoursed by one of their finest bands.

The people of Brooklyn are blessed with having so many places near them for summer resorts; where they can hear the finest music, and see the finest sights, and bathe in the cool surf of the ocean, or sit where its cool breezes fan them and relieve them from the heat of the day.

BOWDITCH SCHOOL.

There is more encouragement for the teachers to work since the concert. They feel that a great hindrance to the progress of their work has been removed. The pupils are becoming interested once more in their tangible studies, and resuming their normal condition in the school room.

We have been expecting that test which was spoken of for the middle of February. We shall be better prepared for it a little later.

Drawing under Prof. Carter's system has not made rapid advancement.

The attendance, in spite of the unfavorable weather, continues good. Only a few cases of slight sickness are reported in the district.

CENTRE SCHOOL.

The primary room of this school kept open all day Thursday, while the primaries of the other schools were closed in the afternoon.

The principal of this school has in his possession, a fragment of a three inch shell used during the late war; it was brought from the battle ground at Beverly Ford on the Rappahannock, where he picked it up soon after a Cavalry fight there. He has, also, several grains of powder such as were used in the heavy guns of the monitors. The grains are as large as chestnuts.

EVENING SCHOOL.

Last week the evening school kept but two evenings on account of Children's Concert and Washington's birthday.

This will probably be the completing week of the school. The average attendance has been good and the school has been a complete success. While not all who have attended have seemed to appreciate this rich bequest, yet many have taken advantage of their opportunities and accomplished much. The scholars seem as much interested in their studies as at first and regret that the school is so soon to close.

MAYO'S

Compound Vegetable Anæsthetic.

A safe and pleasant substitute for gas and ether.

Discovered by Dr. N. K. Mayo of Boston, April 1883, subsequently administered by him in nearly two thousand cases, producing perfect slumber, eing applicable to the child the delicate sentitive woman as well as the hardy man. No ill effects have followed its use in any case, it acting rather as a vegetable tonic.

It controls the patient one-fourth longer than gas giving us time to remove from three to twenty teeth. It is with great confidence we have introduced it into our practice, giving very successful results.

AYER'S Hair Vigor

restores, with the gloss and freshness of youth, faded or gray hair to a natural, rich brown color, or deep black, as may be desired. By its use light or red hair may be darkened, thin hair thickened, and baldness often, though not always, cured.

It checks falling of the hair, and stimulates a weak and sickly growth to vigor. It prevents and cures scurf and dandruff, and heals nearly every disease peculiar to the scalp. As a Ladies' Hair Dressing, the VIGOR is unequalled; it contains neither oil nor dye, renders the hair soft, glossy, and silken in appearance, and imparts a delicate, agreeable, and lasting perfume.

MR. C. P. BRICHER writes from Kirby, O., July 3, 1882: "Last fall my hair commenced falling out, and in a short time I became nearly bald. I used part of a bottle of AYER'S HAIR VIGOR, which stopped the falling of the hair, and started a new growth. I have now a full head of hair growing vigorously, and am convinced that but for the use of your preparation I should have been entirely bald."

J. W. BOWEN, proprietor of the McArthur (Ohio) Enquirer, says: "AYER'S HAIR VIGOR is a most excellent preparation for the hair. I speak of it from my own experience. Its use promotes the growth of new hair, and makes it glossy and soft. The VIGOR is also a sure cure for dandruff. Not within my knowledge has the preparation ever failed to give entire satisfaction."

MR. ANGUS FAIRBAIRN, leader of the celebrated "Fairbairn Family" of Scottish Vocalists, writes from Boston, Mass., Feb. 6, 1880: "Ever since my hair began to give silvery evidence of the change which fleeting time procureth, I have used AYER'S HAIR VIGOR, and so have been able to maintain an appearance of youthfulness—a matter of considerable consequence to ministers, orators, actors, and in fact every one who lives in the eyes of the public."

MRS. O. A. PRESCOTT, writing from 18 Elm St., Charlestown, Mass., April 14, 1882, says: "Two years ago about two-thirds of my hair came off. It thinned very rapidly, and I was fast growing bald. On using AYER'S HAIR VIGOR the falling stopped and a new growth commenced, and in about a month my head was completely covered with short hair. It has continued to grow, and is now as good as before it fell. I regularly used but one bottle of the VIGOR, but now use it occasionally as a dressing."

We have hundreds of similar testimonials to the efficacy of AYER'S HAIR VIGOR. It needs but a trial to convince the most skeptical of its value.

The Happy Man!

He left his tools upon the bench,
And homeward took his way,
His wife and children to meet,
When closed the busy day,

A happy heart beat in his breast,
And joy was in his eye,
When into Peabody's he strolled
A perfect shirt to buy.

His joy indeed, may well be great,
For there he purchased cheap,
A perfect fitting shirt which made
Him happy for a week.

In travelling throughout the length and breadth of this great and glorious Republic, one cannot help being struck with the evidences of the great and rapid strides that have been made in style of building the past four or five years and are now being made in our domestic architecture. Everywhere may be seen the most decided advance in building town and country houses on new and improved plans, conveniences and artistic ideas being introduced that 10 years ago would never have been dreamed of, and which is approaching a direct contrast with the hideous structures which for the most part have been monuments of the want of architectural beauty in our villages, which has chiefly arisen on account of the rapidity with which new towns spring up in this country, but this box style of building will soon be crowded out by improved and better work taking its place. This marked improvement is in a measure due to the fact that a well-known firm of Architects, Palliser, Palliser, & Co., of Bridgeport, Conn., are doing valuable service in its frequent publication of copiously illustrated works on building and architecture, which are not only moderate in price but in accordance with a constantly improving, popular, artistic taste, and the new and original work on every description of modern Architectural Detail entitled Palliser's Useful Details, published at $3 perhaps meets the most extensive and actual demand for practical designs, of any work ever issued on the subject of building, as a builder remote from a city, and who perforce of his situation, is his own architect, needs just such a book, giving, as it does, every description of American constructive detail, of a good character, in large and endless variety of such features as must be wrought into the small houses, stables, shops, etc., in whose construction nine-tenths of the mechanics and a large proportion of the Architects of this country find occupation. "Useful" Details they are properly called, and consist of forty plates—size of each 20x26 inches. Each plate is engraved and printed as a facsimile of original Drawing, without reduction, therefore just the same as if drawn by hand for placing in the hands of the mechanic for execution. They are given at a very large scale, none being smaller than 3-4 inch to foot, and many larger, and up to half full size; in fact they are so plain that every mechanic and apprentice can readily understand them. That they are practical designs is evident, all the drawings having been built from many of them duplicated several times over. Palliser's Useful Details are published for the benefit of the builder, mechanic, and all people interested in the Building Arts. They embrace a variety of constructional working, Drawings for all classes of work—exterior and interior—pertaining to the erection of buildings of every description, and such as never before published. The designs shown are a free adaptation of the so-called Queen Anne and other new and popular styles. Each plate is worth the price charged for the whole to any one requiring any ideas for the new, artistic and useful, be it ever so little. If you wish to build a fence, a door, a mantel-piece, book-case, or any special features for outside or inside work, as gable finish, a porch, veranda, cornices, bay window, or to finish up a dining room or hall in any special style or manner, here are the ideas that will give the key to enable one to work out his problems, and, furthermore it has been the aim of the authors to fully prove to the mechanic that these new styles of exterior and interior construction and ornamentation, when properly understood, are no more expensive or difficult to execute than the ordinary jig-sawed, ginger-bread, box-like work that have had their day; to prove to the masses that the false ideas of ornamentation without constructional qualifications are as vulgar to the true mechanic as brass compared with gold to the goldsmith, to help those who are seeking to help themselves and to promote a higher artistic feeling in connection with the every day work of the mechanic, and to do the same without any more cost than if the old ruts were followed. Among the details given are for brick and stone work, water tables, sills, belt courses, steps, window and door openings, cornices, chimneys, panels, and other miscellaneous brick and stone work, including terra-cotta work of a large variety. For exterior wood work; framing, giving plans, elevations and sections of same; water tables; belts, gables, brackets, balconies, verandas, porches, door and window frames, towers, cupolas, ventilators, roofs, store fronts, steps and buttresses, balustrades for all kinds of balcony and verandah finish, wood fences in such style and variety never before dreamed of, but all very practical and elegant in their simplicity; barge boards, rafter feet and cornice in endless variety; overhanging projections; combinations of brick, stone and wood finish; dormer windows of different styles and finish, adapted to modern work, crestings, finials, front and outside doors, conservatories, plant cabinets, drive porches, finish for barns, out-houses, well-houses, summer houses, grape arbor and other details too numerous to mention. For interior work will be found different styles of finish for every part, and which includes doors of almost every kind and finish, window finish, casings and architraves, base-boards, chair boards, wain-scotting, sideboards, side tables, hall stands, book cases, tables, chairs, benches, pews and seats for churches, stands, drawers, wardrobes—all easy, practical designs, such as the master mechanic can readily execute. Staircases, newels, rails, balusters, mantel pieces, picture moulding, wood and plaster cornices, center pieces, brackets, beam and arch finish, wooden ceilings, wood finish for side walls, inlaid floors, bank counters, desk and office fittings, grocery, dry goods and drug store fittings. Also a new, full, and comprehensive method of stair building and hand railing, prepared expressly for this work. The easiest and simplest yet devised, having few lines and complications, hence can be readily understood. Every one of these stair problems is drawn to a scale of 1 1-4 inches to the foot, and are such as the carpenter has to encounter in his every day work, hence their usefulness. The fact is Palliser's Useful Details is the first work of its kind ever published in this country and meets a real demand never before supplied. It is to the intelligent mechanic what the encyclopedia is to the student and journalist. Every builder and mechanic should possess it. Ideas are as necessary as tools. Tools have no edge without them. In these days it is the educated mechanic who goes to the front, and who gets the biggest pay for his work. Palliser's Useful Details is the best work of its kind ever issued, and at one quarter the price of any previous attempt, and also contains twice as much material. The ideas or designs need not be used as a whole. The parts being complete in themselves, they can be combined so as to produce different results. No matter what kind of a job is to be done, the book contains the idea to help out. When one looks at the contents in detail, it is surprising that so much can be given at so low a price. Only $3.00 for these 40 plates—only 7 1-2 cents each—which furnish the mechanic nearly eleven hundred ideas, and practical ideas that they want and use every day. We are glad to be able to commend this work so warmly. It is just what has been needed by the building community; in fact we do not exaggerate when we say that no builder who wishes to make money by making the building he erects look beautiful can afford to do without this valuable work. When one sees the prodigality with which the authors have made public their ideas, one cannot but smile afresh at the remark of an English Architect, "D'ye know I wouldn't be doing that ye know. When I got an idea I wouldn't be giving it to the other fellows; I'd be keeping it for my own work, ye know."

Tea Biscuits. One quart flour, two cups new milk, two spoonfuls butter, and a good pinch of salt. We use no soda, and no cream tartar, but prepare our own flour by sifting into 25 pounds of it a package of Horsford's Bread Preparation. It is then always ready for immediate use. Such biscuit will puff open like white roses.

KING'S EVIL

Was the name formerly given to Scrofula because of a superstition that it could be cured by a king's touch. The world is wiser now, and knows that can only be cured by a thorough purification of the blood. If this is neglected, the disease perpetuates its taint through generation after generation. Among its earlier symptomatic developments are Eczema, Cutaneous Eruptions, Tumors, Boils, Carbuncles, Erysipelas, Purulent Ulcers, Nervous and Physical Collapse, etc. If allowed to continue, Rheumatism, Scrofulous Catarrh, Kidney and Liver Diseases, Tubercular Consumption, and various other dangerous or fatal maladies, are produced by it.

SCROFULA

Ayer's Sarsaparilla

Is the only powerful and always reliable blood-purifying medicine. It is so effectual an alterative that it eradicates from the system Hereditary Scrofula, and the kindred poisons of contagious diseases and mercury. At the same time it enriches and vitalizes the blood, restoring healthful action to the vital organs and rejuvenating the entire system. This great

Regenerative Medicine

Is composed of the genuine Honduras Sarsaparilla, with Yellow Dock, Stillingia, the Iodides of Potassium and Iron, and other ingredients of great potency, carefully and scientifically compounded. Its formula is generally known to the medical profession, and the best physicians constantly prescribe AYER'S SARSAPARILLA as an

Absolute Cure

For all diseases caused by the vitiation of the blood. It is concentrated to the highest practicable degree, far beyond any other preparation for which like effects are claimed, and is therefore the cheapest, as well as the best blood purifying medicine, in the world.

A GREAT JOURNAL.

The American Agriculturist, now 42 years old, is the recognized leading Agricultural Journal of the world. It furnishes far more engravings than any $4 periodical, and nearly as much original reading matter. Every number contains nearly 100 columns of original reading and nearly 100 Illustrations describing labor saving devices, animals, plants—everything pertaining to the Farm, Garden and Household. Its Family and Children's Departments are the best in the world. Much space is given to plans for new buildings of every description; to the exposure of all humbug schemes for defrauding the unsuspecting, and to the best localities in the Far West for Farmers to migrate to, &c., &c. Price, $1 50 a year; single numbers, 15 cents.

THE ATLANTIC MONTHLY
For 1884.

The conductors of The Atlantic Monthly indicate herewith a few of the noteworthy features for 1881, and need not assure its readers that it will continue, as it has been beyond question, the foremost of American magazines, in all features and varieties of literary excellence.

MR. CRAWFORD'S SERIAL STORY
"A Roman Singer"
Will run through the first six numbers of the volume for 1884. This story has attracted marked attention by its vigor and freshness.

OLIVER WENDELL HOLMES
Will write exclusively for The Atlantic during 1884. The mere announcement of frequent contributions by him is more welcome than almost any other announcement could be.

DR. WEIR MITCHELL
Has written for The Atlantic a striking serial story, entitled "In War Time." This will begin January.

HENRY JAMES
Will contribute several Short Stories and sketches of Continental travel.

W. D. HOWELL'S
Will furnish several papers of European travel.

CHARLES DUDLEY WARNER
Will contribute Essays on literary and social topics.

THE CONTRIBUTORS' CLUB
Will continue to be one of the most agreeable features of The Atlantic.

NEW BOOKS
Receive more attention in The Atlantic than in any other magazine in the English language.

CHARACTER IN SMOKING.

Said a cigar dealer: It is twenty years now since I began to sell tobacco, and in that time I have closely studied the character of my patrons, forming my conclusions from the kind of company they keep. I mean by the kind of cigars they smoke. I can always tell. An even-tempered, quiet fellow, never goes to an extreme in choosing a tobacco. Then there is a great deal in the way men handle their cigars. Few can smoke on one side as well as on the other. Men come in here every day who have been smoking for years, and if they were to place a cigar on the wrong side of the mouth they would appear as clumsy and green as a boy who was trying his first weed. The muscles of the face become set to one position. Any change requires a reorganization of the face. So it isn't by the way a cigar is embraced in the mouth that you can estimate a man.

If a man smokes his cigar only enough to keep it lighted, and relishes taking it from between his lips to cast a whirling curl of blue smoke into the air, set him down as an easy-going fellow, who cares little for how the world goes, and no more for himself. He has keen perceptions and delicate sensibilities. He will not create trouble, but is apt to see it out when it is once begun.

Beware of the man who never releases the cigar from the grip of his teeth, and is indifferent of whether it burns or dies. He is cool, calculating and exacting. He is seldom energetic physically, but he lives easily off those who perform the labor.

A man who smokes a bit, rests a bit, and fumbles the cigar more or less, is apt to be easily affected by circumstances. He may be energetic, careful, generous and courageous, but he is vacillating and liable to change on a moment's notice.

If the cigar goes out frequently the man has a whole-soul disposition, is a devil-may-care sort of a fellow, with a lively brain, a glib tongue, and generally a fine fund of anecdotes and yarns.

To hold half the cigar in the mouth and smoke indifferently is a lazy man's habit. They are generally of little force and their characters are not of the higher strata.

A nervous man, or one under exciting influences, fumbles his cigar a great deal. He is a kind of popinjay among men.

Holding the cigar constantly between the teeth, chewing it occasionally, and not caring whether or not it is lighted at all, are characteristics of men with the tenacity of bull-dogs. They never forget anything and never release a hold.

A fop stands his cigar on end, and an inexperienced smoker either points it straight ahead or almost at right angles with his course.

A SERIOUS QUESTION.

The abuse of witnesses is a subject which should command universal attention. There is probably no evil connected with the administration of the law which calls more loudly for redress. Says a contemporary: "Men who are innocent of any fault but that of having been involuntary spectators of other men's crimes, or disputed transactions, are dragged into court against their will, either to secure the punishment of a criminal, or perhaps more frequently, to give testimony in a civil case. It would be natural to suppose that one who had thus been compelled, at considerable personal inconvenience, to attend a duty so onerous, would be treated with at least ordinary civility and respect. But this is not generally the case. After being sworn to tell the truth, he is beset by several sharp practitioners who have made this business a study, and who use the most despotic efforts to befog his intellect, to confound his ideas, to perplex his memory, and, if possible, to betray him into unintentional error. If in such hands he becomes so worried as to utter seeming contradictions, he is lashed without mercy as a perjurer. Or if, after spending all their impudence upon him—after browbeating and torturing him to their hearts' content—the lawyers are unable to puzzle him, and he still adheres to his simple story, mark the seeming malignity with which he is assailed in the advocate's argument. How his motives are impeached, his character criticised or blackened, his most sacred feelings ridiculed, until he seems a monster too vile to be believed! We have known some estimable men of sensitive minds who have not recovered for weeks from attack of this sort, made by a skilful speaker, without a shadow of excuse for it, save in his anxiety to sustain a sinking cause."

Shad which were planted in the waters of California a few years ago, are naturalizing themselves along the whole Pacific coast. They are now caught in Puget Sound, and it is thought will soon frequent every river and Harbor between San Francisco and Alaska.

Walter Scott always said that he took his idea of the Waverly novels from Miss Edgeworth's stories, and a writer of a very interesting notice in the London Daily News says: "Tourguenieff said to me: 'It is possible, nay, probable, that if Marie Edgeworth had not written about the poor Irish of the county Longford, and the 'Squires and 'Squireens, it would not have occurred to me to give a literary form to my impressions about the corresponding classes in Russia.'"

SHORTHAND.

Isaac Pitman invented shorthand in 1837; in 1854 Graham published his "Reporters' Manual;" in 1866 Munson issue his "Complete Phonographer." Munson's system is the latest of the three practical systems of shorthand.

Industry is the companion of honor and honesty.

Miscellaneous.

THE CAPACITIES OF LANGUAGES.

No human beings are without language, and we know what that implies. All the stories of tribes without language or with languages more like the twittering of birds than the articulate sounds of human beings belong to the chapter of ethnological fables. What is more important still is that many of the so-called savage languages have been shown to possess a most perfect, in many cases too perfect, that is to say, too artificial grammar, while their dictionary presents a wealth of names which any poet might envy.

True, this wealth of grammatical forms and this superabundance of names for special objects are, from one point of view, signs of logical weakness and a want of powerful generalization. Languages which have cases to express nearness to an object, movement alongside an object, approach toward an object, entrance into an object, but which have no purely objective case, no accusative, may be called rich, no doubt, but their richness is truly poverty. The same applies to their dictionary. It may contain names of every kind of animal; again for the same animal when it is young or old, male or female; it may have different words for the out of a man, a horse, a lion, a hare; but t probably is without a name for animals in general, or even for such concepts as member or body. There is here, as elsewhere, loss and gain on both sides. But however imperfect a language may be in one point or other, every language, even that of Papuas and Veddas, is such a masterpiece of abstract thought that it would baffle the ingenuity of many philosphers to produce anything like it. In several cases the grammar of so-called savage dialects bears evidence to a far higher state of mental culture possessed by these people in former times. And it must not be forgotten that every language has capacities, if they are only called out.

THE FLORIDA EVERGLADES.

When the General Government sought to remove the Indians to their reservations, many of different tribes fled into the Everglades, and it is estimated that 700 or 800 are now living there. Only eighty appear upon the rolls of the census, because no census officer has been able to penetrate the wilderness. The eighty Indians who appear upon the census rolls are those who come out to trade, but it is known that the large majority are averse to trading or mingling with the whites. Indian hunters come out with bear, deer and panther skins, showing that the Everglades must contain good hunting grounds. A number of negroes, say thirty or forty, are known to be held by the Indians. They speak the Indian tongue, wear the dress of the Indian woman and are made to do the women's work. These negroes are evidently the progeny of runaway slaves who escaped before or during the civil war, and are still held in slavery.

Only one missionery ever attempted to carry the news of Lincoln's proclamation into the Everglades; he left the borders of the Indian country with great speed. A few months ago chief Tiger Tail became displeased with one of his colored servants and brought him into Fort Meyers to offer him for sale. When informed that the negroes were all free he ejaculated: "White man's nigger mebbe free, but Indian's nigger, no." Whereupon Tiger Tail grasped the darkey by the nape of the neck, pushed him into the canoe and paddled back to the Everglades. The Seminoles are quite jealous of any interference with their domain and will not serve as guides through their country. So strictly is this rule maintained that an Indian boy who has been raised by Colonel Hendry, under an agreement with the Indians that he may stay six months of each year with Colonel Hendry and six months with his people, could not be prevailed upon for any consideration to guide white men into the country.

A CASE OF RED TAPE.

The Italian Times has a very clever story which illustrates the grand truth that abroad some things can be done as well as others. It comes out apropos of the suppression of the memoirs of the Duke of Saxe-Coburg. A younger son of the Duke of Argyll, so runs the tale, wished to marry an untitled lady, and not unnaturally asked his father's consent, to that step. The Duke replied that personally he had no objection to the match; but, in view of the fact that his eldest son had espoused a daughter of the Queen, he thought it right to ask Her Majesty's pleasure on the subject before expressing his formal approval. Her Majesty, thus appealed to, observed that since the death of the Prince Consort she had been in the habit of consulting the Duke of Saxe-Coburg on all family affairs. The matter was, therefore, referred to Duke Ernest, who replied that since the unification of Germany he had made it a rule to ask for the Emperor's opinion on all important questions. The case now came before the Kaiser, who decided that, as a constitutional sovereign, he was bound to ascertain the views of his Prime Minister. Happily for the now anxious pair of lovers, the iron Chancellor had no wish to consult anybody, and decided that the marriage might take place.

JAPANESE CHESS.

Japanese chess is the most intricate game in the world. The board has eighty-one squares, and twenty pieces are used, which have moves somewhat like our own, though none are exactly similar. These pieces change in grade when they arrive at a certain position on the board. The strangest feature of the game is that either player can take any piece that has been captured by him, replace it on the board, and use it against his adversary.

NASBY'S PAPER.
THE TOLEDO WEEKLY BLADE.
Circulation 115,000.

This vast circulation is because the BLADE is a paper for the whole country. It is not thrown together, but every line of it is edited by competent hands. It is a complete epitome of the news of the week, and whosoever reads the BLADE carefully, needs nothing else to be well informed as to what the world is doing. Editorially the BLADE has made a proud record. It has an opinion on every thing that affects the people of the country, and it expresses it boldly, fearlessly, and forcibly. As good as the Blade has been in past years, we will make it better than ever in the year to come. Among the features for the coming year will be the regular "Nasby Letters," two serials by Nasby, entitled "Nasby in Exile," and "Nasby in the South," a serial story by Ernest Warren, entitled, Court and Camp," a serial by John McElroy author of Andersonville, "Reminiscences of an Army Mule"; a serial written for the BLADE by an Austrian nobleman; besides our regular departments, "Household," "Answers to Correspondents," "Camp Fire," etc., etc. We publish all the news, and latest corrected markets.

Politically the BLADE will continue an exponent of true Republicanism, believing that the best interests of the country demand the continuance of its control in the hands of the party that represents the highest and most advanced ideas.

THE RUM POWER.

The BLADE will fight this monster iniquity with all the power it possesses, and in every way possible. The BLADE holds the liquor traffic to be a greater curse than slavery, and a thousand times more dangerous to the country.

We ask the co-operation of every well-wisher of the Republic that our work may be effective. We ask every Republican in the United States to assist in extending the circulation of the BLADE, especially among those of the Republican party who believe as we do in the necessity of Pulverizing the Rum Power. We want the BLADE in as many families as possible this winter, that it may be read before the excitement of a political campaign, giving it time for its truths to take root in the minds of its readers.

THE WEEKLY BLADE, $1.00 a year, postpaid, to EVERYBODY. Those preferring, may receive the BLADE, THREE MONTHS, by remitting 30 cents, or clubs of three months trial subscribers, of not less than four, 25 cents each.

OUR GREAT ART OFFER.

A $10.00 Steel Engraving for $1.00. Write us for a specimen copy of the WEEKLY BLADE, which will give full particulars of this, the greatest offer ever made by any publisher. We send specimen copies of the BLADE free to any address. We want as many addresses as possible to send Specimen Copies to. Write a postal card asking for a specimen for yourself, and send us the names of all your neighbors. We want to send out a half million copies within the next month. Don't be modest as to the number.

THE SUN.
NEW YORK, 1884.

About sixty million copies of THE SUN have gone out of our establishment during the last twelve months.

If you were to paste end to end all the columns of all THE SUNS printed and sold last year, you would get a continuous strip of interesting information common sense wisdom, sound doctrine, and sane wit long enough to reach from Printing House square to the top of Mount Copernicus in the moon, then back to Printing House square, and then three-quarters of the way back to the moon again.

But THE SUN is written for the inhabitants of this earth; this same strip of intelligence would girdle the earth twenty-seven or twenty-eight times.

If every buyer of a copy of THE SUN during the past year has spent only one hour over it, and his wife or his grandfather has spent another hour, this newspaper in 1883 has afforded the human race thirteen thousand years of steady reading night and day.

It is only by little calculations like these that you can form any idea of the circulation of the most popular of American newspapers, or of its influence on the opinions and actions of American men and women.

THE SUN is, and will continue to be, a newspaper which tells the truth without fear of consequences, which gets at the facts no matter how much the process costs, which presents the news of all the world without waste of words and in the most readable shape, which is working with all its heart for the cause of honest government, and which therefore believes that the Republican party must go, and must go in this coming year of our Lord, 1884.

If you know THE SUN, you like it already and you will read it with accustomed diligence and profit during what is sure to be the most interesting year in its history. If you do not yet know THE SUN, it is high time to get into the sunshine.

TERMS TO MAIL SUBSCRIBERS.

The several editions of THE SUN are sent by mail, postpaid as follows:
DAILY—50 cents a month, $6 a year; with Sunday editions, $7.
SUNDAY—Eight pages. This edition furnishes the current news of the world, special articles of exceptional interest to everybody, and literary reviews of new books of the highest merit. $1 a year.
WEEKLY—$1 a year. Eight pages of the best matter of the daily issues; an Agricultural Department of unequalled value, special market reports, and literary, scientific, and domestic intelligence make THE WEEKLY SUN the newspaper for the farmer's household. To clubs of ten with $10, an extra copy free.

DRAMATIC AND MUSICAL.

This week Henry Irving and Ellen Terry play a return engagement at the Boston Theatre. The prices for the week are $2.50, 1.50 and 1.00 according to location. The singing birds of the Metropolitan opera company—Nilsson, Sembrich, Valleria, Fursch-Madi, Scalchi, Trebelli, Lablache—return to the Boston Theatre next week for a brief sojourn previous to opening the spring season in New York. Everything points to a highly successful season. With Nilsson and Sembrich as bright particular stars, seven most brilliant lyric performanres are assured. Ambrose Thomas' opera, "Hamlet" is to open the engagement. "Mefistofele," Botto's famous work, will be offered on Tuesday. Meyerbeer's "Le Prophete" is the opera selected for Wednesday. The evening following "Don Giovanni" is promised with Nilsson, Sembrich and Valleria in the cast. Special prices for this entertainment will rule. "Robert le Diable" is chosen for Friday night; "The Barber of Seville" will be sung at the Saturday matinee, and the season will close with "La Gioconda." No such repertory as this has ever been offered by any impressario. Mr. Abbey merits the most cordial support. We do not doubt that he will receive this, and that Boston will show to his enterprise most substantial appreciation.

Agnes Booth and a strong supporting company will appear at the Park Theatre this week in "Claire and the Forge Master." Manager Schoeffel has had new scenery prepared, and has arranged to make the production in every way a notable event.

Suppe's reign at the Bijou is glorious indeed. "A Trip to Africa" has not been equalled on our stage for beauty and ornateness of stage effects and costuming. Musically it is a delightful work, and delightfully interpreted. The acting has improved nightly; and, with such evidences of appreciation as the public show, a long and prosperous season of the opera seems assured. It will remain the Bijou attraction till further notice.

Home from Chicago came Mr. William Redmund, Mrs. Thomas Barry, Frazer Coulter, Rachel Noah, and other favorites of the Boston Theatre company. They are to prepare for their work in the grand production, March 17, at the home theatre, of "The Silver King," in which also Mr. D. J. Mc-gainnis is to make his reappearance. The drama is very strongly written, effective and thoroughly interesting. Manager Tompkins will give the success a scenic mounting that will excel even that of past productions at this playhouse.

Messrs. Rich & Harris' "Peck's Bad Boy Company" is doing a splendid business. Last week crowds were turned away from the doors. The company plays this week in Philadelphia.

Miss Fanny Kellogg Bachert has fully recovered from her serious illness, and will soon be heard again on the concert stage.

In the amazon march in "Jalma," last night, one of the girls marching down the staircase fainted and fell forward, but her armor caught on the step and saved her from rolling to the stage. Mr. William Redmund came from the wings, went up the steps, and placing the fallen warrior on his shoulder, bore her lightly from the scene. His act was not only a neat physical exhibition, but humane and gallant. It is not every leading man and prosperous star that would show such public consideration for an unknown "super."—St. Louis Post Dispatch.

MESSRS. EDITORS,—Dr. L. W. Baker says in an article recently written for the "Women at Work," "England is far ahead of this country in her provision for the care of the sick in small cities and towns, and the system of Cottage Hospitals there in operation is one which we may study with advantage, and adopt with great benefit." Our large cities are in general well supplied with hospital accommodations, but the smaller cities and larger towns are lamentably deficient in this respect. Concerning the desirability of supplying these places with small hospitals, there can be no question. Especially are they needed in the larger manufacturing towns, in which many of the employes are without a home; living in boarding places, and in case of accident or disease are but poorly provided for and many lives are lost in consequence of improper care. Any physician practising in these towns well knows how unsuitable are their boarding places for the care of the sick, and often finds his best efforts will be of no avail in face of the improper conditions which surround his patient. How different would often be the result if the sick or injured could be removed at once to a quiet, homelike cottage hospital, where, with a trained nurse in charge, and attended by the physician of his choice, he would also have all the resources of the hospital at his command. The value of these hospitals has been well tested in England during the past twenty years, and their simplicity, their homelike surroundings, and ready adaptability to the need of quiet life, have won for them a warm place in the regard of the English people. Two hundred and fifty cottage hospitals are now in successful operation in that country, relieving 50,000 patients annually, who contribute to the hospital at least one sixth the cost of their maintenance. Now such a hospital is exactly what we need in our own town; and several of this discription have been established already in towns in our own state. One at Pittsfield managed by ladies, another at Baldwinsville and one is contemplated at Newton. Now instead of paying $250 per year for a bed in the Salem Hospital, or a similar amount for cases sent there without any previous agreement, let the town hire some neat and commodious building in a healthy and retired part of the village. Say an ordinary dwelling house with eight or more rooms. Then aside from this expense of the renting of the building, which will be no more than the unavoidable expense of hiring a bed in the Salem Hospital or in some other way caring for the sick, there need be no further expense to the town as a whole. Then the house will have to be plainly furnished suitable for the care of sick persons, with ordinary hospital furniture, which need not be expensive, as little is necessary beside beds, bedding, chairs, curtains and a few screens. If then we could have the use of such a building from the town; for $500 and their living, a very competent and trustworthy man and wife could be hired who could care for all the sick that it would be necessary to send to a hospital, and without doubt every physician in town would be willing to care for every patient, that he might send there, free of charge and they need not in this way interfere with each others work. After we have a building rented and furnished, $1000 per year with what some patients would be willing and glad to pay for such care as they would get, would defray all expenses of such a hospital, and we have in town about ten thousand inhabitants or perhaps fifteen hundred families, so that if each family would pay 75 cents each year, we could have in successful operation a hospital ample for all our needs. Is it then too much to expect or to ask that the town shall furnish a building, that some of our charitable organizations shall furnish the rooms with beds, bedding, chairs, etc., and that there be raised by subscription each year on an average seventy-five cents per family. The physicians in town would gladly, I think, give much time and effort to make this method of providing for our sick or injured townsmen a complete success, and without doubt endowments would be given some time in the future, so as to make such an institution all the more permanent.

F. M. D.

MESSRS. EDITORS.—With the approach of the annual town meeting, there is always a stirring up of questions which are of more or less concern to the voters, and each of these questions has its following. Of these, the one foremost in the minds of our citizens at the present time, is that of granting a liquor license. There are many temperance people who are morally opposed to the licensing of the traffic in town, and cannot favor increasing our burden of taxation by an additional appropriation of several thousand dollars, the amount necessary for the proper enforcement of the law under a no license vote, when we have already so large a municipal debt bearing on the shoulders of taxpayers. There are others who believe that while there is an appetite for the ardent, the article can and will be sold in defiance to all opposition, whatever, and that the best way out of the difficulty is the granting of a license, and have it enforced as far as possible; and still another view of the question will lead one to conclude, after the many fruitless attempts to enforce prohibition here, that so long as the stuff is manufactured, just so long it will be sold under the most rigid enforcement of any prohibitory law, while to vote to no-license will make many of our citizens who have heretofore been engaged in the liquor business in a legitimate way, discouraged, the business will be abandoned by them, and their places filled by unworthy and unprincipled men, making them more powerful to wield a bad influence in the community, to license the sale of liquor; and while to license does not increase the demand for drinking, it does add materially to the receipts of our town and very likely helps to keep those engaged in the business on their good behavior, and less drunkenness is found. Those who oppose the granting of licenses are principally enthusiastic temperance people who have not given the subject a proper consideration; they only see the evils produced from intemperance to others, many of them never having used liquor in their lives. This class of our citizens, though they make loud professions of temperance, do assist more than any other class in our community, the dishonest rum seller, the drunkard and bummer, who never voted for a license, as making the sale of liquor illegal gave them extra opportunities for carrying out their fiendish operations, and many respectable people who believe in a little stimulant cannot obtain it without visiting these vile dens, endangering their property and sometimes even life. It may be better for a community not to have any liquor sold in it, we admit, but we cannot hope to see that brought about under the present condition of things; it is not that which we would like most and cannot have, but the best thing obtainable. Candid readers, is not this a reasonable presentation of the case? Admitting this, what must be the conclusion of all reasonable persons? The question is this, "shall we vote for a license and stop a free rum sale, give respectable men a chance to do their business in a business way, and net $7000 in the town treasury, or shall we vote no license, drive the sale of rum into tenement houses and by-ways of the town, have three times as many engaged in the business, and not one dollar therefrom, with several thousand dollars expended on the police force to suppress the liquor business?"

The Merde Antique quarry at Lynnfield Centre is still being operated with some activity notwithstanding the embarrassments of an inclement season, under the direction of Supt. Pratt. Some persons have expressed incredulity as to the quarry being able to furnish blocks of any considerable size, but there is now being taken out a splendid block, 10 ft. long, 6 ft. wide and 3 ft. thick. The office of the company is at 62 Sudbury street, Boston, where good evidence is afforded of the solid foundation on which the company rests. A very important fact has lately been developed in connection with this quarry. It has been found that a ton of this stone when ground and treated with sulphuric acid and steam will produce a ton of the sulphate of magnesia, of late so highly esteemed as a fertilizer. A writer in the Massachusetts Ploughman of last week, refers to the deposit at Lynnfield in the following terms: "In reference to the supply of sulphate of magnesia, an inexhaustible deposit of it exists within fifteen miles of Boston, in the form of serpentine, which, by actual test, yields a large percentage of magnesia at a small cost for manufacture—and according to a late report of Prof. Shaler, there are on this property four million tons of it above the water level; a good fertilizer can be made from this source and sold at a price that will place it within the reach of all farmers, or gardeners, rich or poor. It is to be hoped that the owners of this valuable deposit will take immediate steps to bring about so desirable and important a result."—Wakefield Citizen.

Miss Elizabeth Wilson has just had her window repaired that was demolished by the hoodlums last fall, and is just recovering from a severe fit of illness occasioned by the same.

The facts in regard to the robbery of Mr. Jacob and Joseph Rand, commonly called the Rand boys, as near as can be ascertained are these, as they were returning from Boston, they stopped at a place in Revere called the Wayside Inn, and upon starting for home from there, their horse was seized by the bridle and the boys beat severely and Joseph relieved of some $30 in cash. They arrived home at about 10.30 o'clock P. M. They were pretty roughly handled, especially Joseph; at the point of writing they are improving.

The meeting of the Unity Club for this week was held in the chapel last evening. Prof. Bergen, the principal of the High School, delivered an essay on "Pre-historic man." It was very interesting and instructive. We are informed that Prof. Bergen has this lecture prepared with illustrated views for the use of the stereopticon, and it would be interesting to our people to hear it in a more public place.

Next week, beginning with Tuesday evening, the Unity Club will hold an Art Exhibition in the parlors of the chapel. It will open Tuesday evening and continue Wednesday, Thursday, and Friday. Those who remember the exibition of last year will easily understand that a rare treat is in store. An entertainment will also be furnished each evening, and articles offered for sale.

"Her Atonement," Anson Pond's great emotional military and spectacular drama, will be presented at Mechanic Hall next Friday evening under the local management of N. W. Andrews. The New York Daily News of Feb 13, says this brilliant drama won in that city instant recognition as a popular success. It is strong, compact, full of powerful situations and ends with a grand climax. The Graphic says the military scenes are excellent. The Herald says it was well acted, and was received with enthusiasm.

We call attention to the advantages for the study of music presented by the New England Conservatory of Music. The long established reputation of the Conservatory, its able corps of teachers—the best in the country—and the class system, which is in use in all the schools in Europe, make this institution what it is. They now have quarters at the St. James Hotel, with abundant room, and accommodations for out of town pupils who wish the comforts of an elegant home. The Conservatory presents advantages which the student can nowhere else obtain. We cordially advise our readers desiring to study music, to learn what they are doing for their pupils before studying elsewhere. It will be for their interest, not only financially, but in many other ways, to do so. Send for catalogue which will be mailed free to any applicant.

Sunlight.

BY HARLAN H. BALLARD.

Beyond the edge of the mountain,
The sun sank out of sight;
And clover leaves were closing,
At the first cool kiss of night.

The clover was deep in shadow
While roses were yet aglow;
And maples flamed with sunshine
When the roses went out below.

My little boy with his arrows
Had busily been at play,
But now stood thoughtfully watching
The sunbeams climb away.

He watched the rising shadows
Till the tallest elms were dark.
And over the dewy grasses
Wandered the fire-fly's spark.

Then, seizing a white-winged arrow,
He raised his bow on high,
And shot it up from the darkness
Into the evening sky.

It rose till it pierced the sunlight,
And glittered a moment there,
As the arrow of old Acestes
Burst into flame in air.

Then he called, and I gladly hastened
To look at the wondrous sight,—
The earth wrapped all in darkness,
But the sky all robed in light.

And I thought that above the sorrow
That darkens our earth with care,
An ocean of happy sunshine
Rests peacefully everywhere.

And we talked of the white-winged arrows
Of faith and prayer and love,
That fly from a world of sadness
To the light of heaven above.

—Good Cheer.

Only Wait.

When the spirit worn and weary,
'Neath its daily load of care,
Finds the pathway lone and dreary,
And the burden hard to bear,
Tired with hoping, faint with fearing,
Sighs to reach the golden gate,
Then in accents soft and cheering,
Patience whispers, "Only wait;"
For a brighter day is dawning,
Joy awaits thee in the morning—
In the beauty of the morning—
"Only wait."

Oh, sad hearts, whose soundless sorrow
Dares not let a murmur fall.
Only wait and trust the morrow—
God's great love is over all.
Only wait, oh wounded spirit,
By the cross of life weighed down;
Thou shalt surely earth inherit—
Bear the cross and win the crown,
For a brighter day is dawning,
Joy awaits us in the morning—
In the beauty of the morning—
"Only wait."

Selected Story.

My Story.

"My dear, I have something to tell you; Richard is coming home."

"Richard, Aunt Barbara?"

"He will be home on Thursday."

She did not look at me as she spoke, and after the first startled glance, I had quickly turned my eyes from her.

"I am very glad, Aunt Barbara; I—"

Some honest words were on my lips, but her crisp voice interrupted:

"You would like to make Richard's acquaintance; that is only natural. But he has been so long away, I feel like having him to myself a little, and so I have arranged for you to go to Medford to visit other cousins you have not seen. You will meet him, of course, my dear; he will be here in the morning, and you will not leave till afternoon.'

"Aunt Barbara!"

A cry of amaze, of wrath, burst from my lips; in open defiance I stared at her, till, suddenly, she raised her usually quiet eyes with a look I had brought to them once before.

"You think it strange, Elsie, but it must be, all the same. I—"

But I did not wait for her to finish; ere the last I was hurrying out and down the hall to the room where the picture hung. It was Aunt Barbara's custom to sit here mornings, but—I did not care: with a little thrill of triumph, I locked the door behind me, and stood alone with him.

With him, indeed, for the face on the wall had long been a living one to me. It was the first to welcome me, that dreary morning, six months ago, when a stranger, even to Aunt Barbara, I had come to stay at Bonnycrest. Till my father's recent death I had lived abroad; his will making her my guardian, I had come, perforce, with a great shyness and shrinking from all of them I could not master. The face was my first glimpse of him, and, somehow, all of Aunt Barbara's tender words and kisses were nothing to the silent soul with which, at that moment, it spoke to me.

We led a quiet life. Aunt Barbara had resided but a little time at Bonnycrest, and acquaintances were few. It was natural in my loneliness that first fascination should grow on me; that I should steal away often to look up into the handsome face, to think how much pleasanter the house would be when Richard would come back to it.

To wonder—when? He was away, was Aunt Barbara said. It was business, of course—some unpleasant business I felt sure, from her manner, and I asked no question of it. But as the weeks passed on and there was no sign of him, as I waited in vain for some little word or presage of his coming, it grew unendurable; the wonder welling up in my heart broke, one morning, uncontrollably into speech.

"Where is he?" I asked, abruptly. "Where is Richard, Aunt Barbara, and when is he coming home?"

She had started at my questions; there was plainly in her eyes the frightened look, the one might say pleading determination I had brought there again to-day.

"Richard is away," was all the reply she made. I understood the words, the look; the subject was to be dropped forever between us. There was a mystery, then—something beyond unpleasant business; I had felt it for days, and now I knew. What could it be?—through the weeks I stood before the portrait to ask and wonder. Was there a stain on his fair fame? Was it any sin of his committing that barred home and sealed his mother's lips of him? And ever with the questions the eyes looked down at me with keen reproach, yet ever with the fancied eager query in them—would I care if it were?

Over and over with the days, I daily long more and more to resent the base suggestions, yet to answer the fond eyes with a deeper passion as the days went by. For, whether of a girl's romance, or pity, or of what strange thing, there was no more a cousin Richard in the world for me, but, for the first, sweet first, the man who loved me—he who had bound my soul forever, whom I worshipped now for aye.

What cared I if it were?

I was in the fullness of this ecstacy the morning the good news came. It was too young a passion yet to dread surroundings, to admit the dreariness, the doubt of what might be in store for it; there had been a scant time for its absorbing, and so it was with no rallying hope I heard Aunt Barbara's words—only with a deeper joy. He was coming as I knew he would; coming, my own true love, to—

Bliss broken on all too rudely. What meant it, that I was to be thus summarily banished from Bonnycrest? She had fathomed my fond secret; she had surprised me some time with him, talking to him, as I often did when we were alone? She thought me altogether too foolish a little girl for this dear, dear son, of hers? Or, was it simply Aunt Barbara's notion that cousins should not marry?

So I wondered standing before her, amid the rising wrath and defience my very dismay awoke. With a still defiant face I stood now and looked up at Richard's picture—the next moment to laugh a little merry laugh, to wonder only why I cared.

I simply would not go to Medford. I had my plan, and was ready to unlock the door and escape that minute Aunt Barbara's step sounded in the hall. I said no more; I packed my trunk, I wrote the letter announcing my coming, all with a readiness I could see was a charming surprise to Aunt Barbara, and laughing always, always in the very ecstasy of the lie.

Those were blissful days awaiting Richard. Oftener and oftener, with an e'en growing joy, I stole into the parlor to bare my soul to the tender eyes, to whisper fondly, to revel in the precious things the dear lips answered me. Thursday dawned, a bright day in accord with all. Richard was to come on the early train, and, in pursuance of my plans, I managed when I heard the whistle to step out of the house.

There was a little clump of trees down the roadway where I had planned to wait. I reached it only in time to see a man walking rapidly round the curve, gazing about him with a strange, absent air, even that exciting moment I could but note. But it was he, my love; and, with mad, beating heart, I hurried out and up to him.

"Richard!"

I had placed my hand on his arm, I stood gazing up at him—I knew not what in my eyes. His breaking smile, the puzzled look on his face, suddenly recalled to me that we were strangers.

"It is—"

"Elsie, your cousin Elsie," I broke in confusedly, on his question.

"Oh! yes; I remember there was a little Elsie."

He drew my arm in as he spoke, and walked with me, chatting pleasantly, towards the house. Life was a big reality to me these moments. I could but smile as I recalled the weeks' romancing, and yet it was all so sweet, so satisfying, I quite forgot my plan. I remembered in dismay as suddenly as I saw Aunt Barbara hastening down to meet us.

What should I do? I had meant to plead his influence that I should not go to Medford; I knew then, I know now, it would be of no avail. I had done nothing, my chance was over; and yet, more than ever, I could not, I would not go. For unto this reality, unto this man older, gray-locked even—this man so different from my pictured lover—I knew myself drawn with a deeper worship than had moved my most romantic dream.

What should I do? I was debating the question desperately by myself a little later, when Aunt Barbara came to me. The old look was in her eyes.

"Richard insists you must stay here, Elsie, and so you can not, you must not go."

It was a blissful drop. There was a keen ache in my heart that I had no lover; that unto this man I loved so fondly, I was, and doubtless always would be, Cousin Elsie. But hope arose now madly and determination; he liked me; he would, he must.

The days passed, a blissful dream. In their break I saw it all fulfilled; I knew I had my lover. It was all very calm, very quiet; it was long e'er he spake a deciding word. But from the look in his eyes when we were alone, from the sweet, tender ways, the legion of little nothings a girl's heart learns to read so quickly, I knew what I was growing unto him. And I revealed with a bare soul before him in the sure bright days to come.

But I did not forget Aunt Barbara. Whatever the matter in her heart against us, I resolved, as long as it might be, to spare her pain. I guarded my looks, my acts; I maintained in her presence so natural, so cousinly a demeanor toward Richard that after the first few weeks, I saw the troubled look fade from her eyes and knew her fears were at an end.

Till that fateful night. The autumn evenings were balmy and warm, and Richard and I sat on the porch. We were seldom so long together, but Aunt Barbara was busy with some charity work within, and had quite forgotten us. I so hoped he would speak, I so longed for a word, that I could not help looking up with tender earnestness to him from the rocker in which I sat beside him. And—

Love's time came for him and me; with a fond, answering look, he twined his arms about me, and drew me to his breast.

"Little Elsie," he whispered, "you know how dear you are to me."

Love's time, love's perfect moment, too rare a space for many words. A little we sat there, beneath the hush of its entrancing, and then—"Dear," he spoke, suddenly, "I have always been a dutiful son. We must go in and tell Aunt Barbara."

I started from him in affright. I could not, I could not. A sudden strange feeling came over me that I would rather die. But his arms were about me; all unnoting he led me into the sitting-room.

I knew the ecstasy in his eyes; despite me, I could not hide the soul in mine. She looked up at us with—a smile frozen on her face, a moan:

"Oh! Richard, Richard, do you not know this can never be?"

They were the last words that ever moved Aunt Barbara's lips.

* * * * * *

It was a form of heart disease, the doctor said. Some sudden shock must have brought the end.

It was fearful living the hours till the others came; alone with Richard, who had grown so strange, so moody, who would barely speak a word to me; I could not complain; I knew what must be his grief, the weight of that secret I dared not question, and which he did not vouchsafe. But it was hard; and, despite all, my heart leaped joyfully when the next day, towards evening, I heard him seeking me.

He came, and with all the old tenderness looked down into my face. Despite it all, I could not resist him; I only shrank a bit at his words.

"Elsie," he said gently, but firmly, "we must be married. Just now, my dear."

"Married, Richard?"

"Yes, dear, ere they come. Do you not know they will take you from me? You will have to go with them, Elsie. Come. I have one without who will unite us; it is the one thing we can do."

It was awful, awful—most in the presence of the dead who spoke these words. But I could not resist the supplication, the look almost of terror in his face; in the clear eyes I read surely, what e'er it was, there loomed no sin between us, and without another word I put my hand in his and stood up for this strange wedding.

They came, they went, to wonder at its strangeness, and at last we were alone. I could but be sad amid my happiness; I could but dwell much upon the mystery which as yet I dared not question, which he did not vouchsafe.

The more that business called Richard away these days. One rainy afternoon he had left me, I wandered though the house, striving to pass the time as best I could; studying a picture here, opening a drawer listlessly now and then, till finally my eyes fell upon a little book I remembered to have seen often in Aunt Barbara's hand; With no thought or intent, only the same listless way, I turned its leaves—it chanced to be the written page:

"I have kept Richard's trouble secret so far, and I will try to till I die. My poor boy shall not live under such a ban, at least till hope is dead. I grieve to have Elsie go, but it must be, the case is all too plain; the dear child is loving him in advance, and—how will she help loving my boy when she shall see him? She is so young, so innocent, she will let him see it—and he? could he resist, just now, the sweet face, the pretty ways—

It must not risk; I must save my brother's child. If there was only one hope—but, alas! there is not. All is well just now; but it is all uncertain, they say, when the cloud may fall again, perhaps to lift itself never more."

What did they mean, the strange, strange words? With no idea, no fancy, unscrupulously now I turned the leaves for light to find others, but all of the same mysterious rendering, all—all the same to me. With a cry I dropped the book, and shrinking, shivering, with only the consciousness of a great fear upon me, some trouble that was all a blank.

Would only Richard come. It grew at last all a dream, a hideous nightmare from which I realized ecstatically one look of his fond eyes, one clasp of his arms would free my soul forever. I could not free myself; how long I stood there shrinking, shivering, I know not, but there came at last that blissful moment when I heard his step without the door.

"Oh, Richard, my love, my love, where have you staid so long?"

With this cry of joy, I went to meet him; with all the passionate love of my soul I looked to—to a face I shrunk from, though it was Richard's; a haggard face over which the rain-wet locks streamed wildly, set with shining eyes and a frightful smile.

"Where, little Elsie! Why to mother's grave, of course. Where the Summer is, where the little birds are singing, and the flowers are blooming which you long since thought dead. See your favorites I brought you, these pretty roses I thought never to find again. Look dear—"

Still muttering he extended his hands to me, torn, bleeding from the thorn they held. With a shriek I staggered back from him. For—the blank was filled. The cloud had fallen; I was—what from being poor Aunt Barbara sought to save me—a madman's bride.

What A Woman Says.

E. ST. JOHN, G. T. & P. A.,
CHICAGO, ILL.

Your valuable Cook Book came to hand for which accept my thanks. It's a treasure, for its recipes are plain, and the book is well gotten up; its typographical and general make up speaks well for your department. In doing so much for the "Women of America." May your Road be as successful as every woman will be who follows your Cook Book, and every man who eats thereafter.

Yours Truly.

WHAT OUR BOY SAYS.

That a St. Louis millinery firm is said to pay a woman drummer $1800 a year.

That from what he knows of the wiles of women agents she must be a "snare drummer" to command so large a salary.

That he has been trying to settle a great question in his mind with the following result:

"Tell me not in mournful numbers.
Life is but an empty dream,
Or that swollen patent bustles
Are by no means what they seem

Fush! 'Tis false, I don't believe it;
Nature has not formed them so,
Else 'twould not be so adjusted
That it could be removed, you know.

That he has broke most of his New Years' resolutions.

That all the papers are discussing the tariff.

That he wants a tariff put on the cats that give nightly concerts under his window.

That he knows his girl is economical, because to economize is to draw in as much as possible.

That his girl applies this art to her person and the result is a very small waste.

That he heard the "boss" remark that the darkest hour is just after the gas company sends in its bill and doesn't get the money.

That his chum said that "that" was a pronoun.

That he said that they were both right, for that "that" that his chum alluded to was not that "that" that he meant. That will do for that.

That he is going to take his girl to the masquerade.

That it is a wise man that knows his own girl at a masquerade.

There has arisen a class of journal which seize upon the first moment of publication in newspapers of original enterprise, to appropriate news and sell it at a greatly reduced cost. They are at no expense for correspondents, reporters and dispatches; they pay no share of the expense of the associated presses in procuring the news of the world. They are not newspapers, but pirated editions. Most of them have no facilities of publication except the boys who peddle; they are furnished with their news in stereotyped plates from some neighboring city, where it is manufactured upon the instant from the columns of the morning papers, just as their wood-cuts of quack doctors and other matters are furnished by advertisers. These cheap newspapers have secured a large circulation. It can scarcely be claimed, however, that they have imperiled the success of the real newspapers of the country, and so far endangered their revenues as to make necessary the attempt to protect them by legislation. Just as oleomargarine has failed to drive the cows out of existence, the penny press has proved the substantial value and hold upon popular patronage of genuine newspapers.—Springfield Republican.

The Boston Transcript of Sept. 22 1883 speaks thus of the Hungarian Gypsy Band who will appear in the Peabody Institute on the evening of March 17:

The composition of the band is peculiar. Of the dozen or so players, all but two play upon the ordinary stringed instruments of the orchestra. Of the remaining two, one plays a small, high clarionet, and the other the Hungarian zymbal, an instrument which may be described as a sort of piano-forte without a key-board, the strings being set vibrating with two little soft-headed hammers, which the player holds in his hands. The men play wholly without notes. Its great merit is its singular vigor, expressiveness, and the wonderful unity of spirit that animates the whole band. The volume of tone this handful of players on stringed instruments brings forth at times is truly wonderful.

SELLING
BOOTS AND SHOES
— AT
MANUFACTURER'S PRICES.
A DECIDED SUCCESS.

A great many firms in Lynn are puzzled at the large attendance and great success of our special sales, simply because these same firms have failed in their own efforts to attract attention and accomplish the same results. The reasons are plain, for we assert that our establishments can show many advantages over others. We give the following, which are convincing:

First.

Enormous stock. The immense stock of our wholesale house, together with our two retail stores, 84 Market street and 23 Market Square, make a stock to draw from five times larger than all the other shoe stores in Lynn combined.

Second.

Low Rents. While our competitors are handicapped by having to pay exorbitant rents, we with our three stores, have to pay rent only on one—a fact, the significance of which as bearing upon our ability to sell for less than others, will be apparent to all.

Third

Wholesale. Our wholesale trade, which now extends to every city and town of any importance in New England, obliges us to carry an immense stock and gives us an advantage in buying entirely beyond the reach of our competitors. For where they buy of the jobbers in small lots, we buy direct of the manufacturers, and that we can buy as low as the large Boston jobbers is abundantly attested by the fact that we are able to meet and compete with them on their own grounds and build up a wholesale trade which is constantly increasing.

Fourth.

One Price. Marked in plain figures on every pair of boots and shoes, guarantees low prices.—Equal treatment to all classes and shows at a glance the quality of the goods.

Fifth.

Truthful Representations. No misrepresentations are tolerated. Goods are sold for just what they are. Some stores adopt the "bait" plan, advertising great slaughter, immense bargains, etc. Call in half an hour after such stores open and in nearly every instance the salesman has the old story to tell you: "All gone;" "haven't your size;" "too late;" "very sorry, but we have had such a rush they are all out.—Can't we show you something else?" We have no such nonsense. It won't do.

Sixth.

Quick Sales and Small Profits. Quick sales are the life of a successful business. Small profits are sufficient when the business is done on live business principles. You save one profit by buying of the wholesaler.

Seventh.

Exchanging Goods or Refunding Money. When any dissatisfaction occurs because the selection does not please in every particular, the goods, if returned uninjured in a reasonable time, can be exchanged; and it matters not of whom it was selected, any salesman at leisure will pay careful attention to the customer. In case nothing is found to please, the cash will be cheerfully refunded.

Eighth.

Prompt Cash Payments. We are so conscious of the overwhelming advantages we possess both in buying and selling we have no hesitation in asserting that no prudent purchaser can afford to buy anything anywhere else until they have looked through our stock and got our prices. Ready money in our hands enables us to buy goods in large quantities at figures that the average retailer knows nothing about. To-day we stand simply as the connecting link between the manufacturer and consumer.

We have an immense surplus stock which we are going to close out during this sale. In order to accomplish this purpose we know at the outset that it will be necessary to offer sufficient inducements which we are determined to do. Consequently, in this instance as well as all others, we appeal directly to the interests of every purchaser, regarding that as decidedly more potent than volumes of positive assertions.

TO THE PUBLIC!

We have always possessed the idea that the poor man's hard earned dollar should purchase just as much as a like amount of his wealthy neighbor.—WE BELIEVE IT. WE ACT UPON IT. Three years ago it was hard to convince customers that a firm in the FURNITURE business would or could make such a departure. WE DID, and our business to-day is a pleasing monument of its kindly reception by the people of Lynn, Swampscott, Saugus, Nahant, Marblehead, Peabody, Danvers, Lynnfield, Salem, &c., to whom we are more than thankful.

35th. To see if the town will appropriate money for working Aborn Street, in accordance with the order of the County Commissioners.

36th. To see if the town will authorize the Selectmen to sell any of the town gravel pits, should it be thought expedient by them, and to execute deeds therefor in behalf of the town.

37th. To see what disposition, if any, the town will make of the buildings and land belonging to the town, on Foster Street, formerly occupied in part for a police station.

38th. To see if the town will unite with other towns in the County of Essex, to require the County Commissioners to establish a truant school.

39th. To see if the town will give the use and control of the premises on Stevens Street, formerly used as a town house, to the school committee for school purposes.

40th. To see if the town will authorize the Selectmen to purchase of the Old South Society, a portion of the land in front of their Church, for the purpose of widening the way for public travel between said land and the South Reading Branch Railroad, and appropriate money for the payment of said land, or take any order thereon, agreeably to the petition of W. F. Wiley and others.

41st. To see if the town will purchase, if the same can be bought at a reasonable price, that portion of Buxton's Hill, so called, a part of which has already been taken for the use of the water works, and appropriate money therefor; agreeably to the petition of D. S. Littlefield and others.

42d. To see if the town will appropriate a sum of money sufficient to improve the condition of Endicott Street; agreeably to the petition of James P. King and others.

43d. To see if the town will appropriate money for putting in a culvert, sixty feet, on the southerly side of Washington Street, at the head of Dustin Street; agreeably to the petition of Richard Houghton and others.

44th. To hear and act on the report of the Selectmen on the petition of Daniel H. Felton and others, in regard to the widening of Felton Street.

45th. To hear and act on the report of the Selectmen on the petition of George C. Peirce and others, in regard to the laying out the extension of Pierpont Street and certain other private ways, laid out over land formerly belonging to William Sutton, as town ways.

46th. To hear and act on the report of the Selectmen on the petition of Timothy Carroll and others to lay out, as a town way, a private way known as Willow Street, and of continuing the same to the extension of Pierpont Street.

47th. To see if the town will appropriate money for building a sewer in Mill Street; agreeably to the petition of George F. Haskell and others.

48th. To see whether the town will instruct the Selectmen and Assessors to prepare and publish a Book of Valuation of the assessed property in the town for the current year, and appropriate money therefor; agreeably to the petition of Edward Trask and others.

49th. To see if the town will extend the culvert which now terminates at the northerly end of the estate of F. Osborn, on Central Street, to the head of said Street, at Wilson's corner; and appropriate money therefor; agreeably to the petition of Alfred A. Ward and others.

And you are directed to serve this warrant by posting up an attested copy thereof at each of the post-offices and meeting houses in said town, seven days at least before the time of holding said meeting.

Hereof fail not, and make return of this warrant, with your doings thereon, to the town clerk, at or before the time of the meeting as aforesaid.

for Salem and vicinity, respectfully call attention to the following letter, which came to them ENTIRELY UNSOLICITED.

Although the same in substance as they are DAILY hearing from their local patrons, they respectfully submit the same for publication.

NEWPORT, R. I., Nov. 12, 1883.
J. D. & J. W. EATON, Dear Sirs: Enclosed please find check for amount of bill for CRAWFORD RANGE and Ware. It arrived last Friday noon, and we had it set up and a fire in it before four o'clock. We are more than pleased with it. All our cooking was done Saturday morning. It usually takes all day to do it. My wife thinks she shall take to cooking again herself, as it is real fun to cook with such a Range as the CRAWFORD. Hoping you may sell a great many more of them, and every purchaser be as well pleased as we are. I remain yours, very truly,

NEW YORK MERCURY, FOR 1884.

With the initial number of the New Year, dated January 6, 1884, the NEW YORK MERCURY entered upon its

FORTY-SIXTH VOLUME,

and it is by long odds the cheapest, as well as the largest, handsomest and best metropolitan literary journal now published. Each number contains 56 columns, or 1 86 square inches of reading matter, comprising more than 15,000 lines

EQUALLING THE CONTENTS OF A TWENTY FIVE CENT MAGAZINE.

Arrangements have been consummated, both at home and in Europe, to secure for the ensuing year many sterling novelties to increase the already incomparable variety of literary attractions which have always made the NEW YORK MERCURY a welcome guest in every home circle, and

A PAPER SUITABLE FOR ALL CLASSES.

celebrated throughout the length and breadth of the land for its

FIRST CLASS ROMANCES BY AUTHORS OF WORLD-WIDE REPUTE,

THE BEST ORIGINAL SKETCHES TO BE FOUND ANYWHERE,

CREAM OF THE WIT AND HUMOR OF THE ENTIRE COUNTRY,

LATEST FASHION NEWS AND SOCIAL INTELLIGENCE,

A CORRECT AND EXTENSIVE MIRROR OF THE AMUSEMENTS OF THE WORLD,

ALL THE FEATURES OF A REFINED FAMILY NEWSPAPER,

AND ALL THE LIVE SENSATIONS OF THE METROPOLIS.

In fact, the New York Mercury contains more stories than the story papers. More news than the newspapers. More fun than the comic papers. More theatre news than the dramatic papers. More society news than the society papers. More exclusive local sensations than all the papers.

Editors and Publishers.

THE ANNUAL Town Report is in the hands of the printers and will be issued in season for the Annual Meeting. From advance sheets we learn that the net expenditures, including the interest on the town debt, has been $80,535.28. Last year they were $78,580.49. These are the ordinary expenses of the town and do not include the amounts expended for the new Town House, nor for Water Extension. The expenditures of the Poor Department were $14,391.78; last year they were $14,267.80. The expenses of the School Department were $24,222.39, against $24,374.90 last year. The expenses of the Fire Department were $7,484.49; last year $10,048.34. The receipts from the Poor Department were $4,545 90; last year $3,995.32. From the Town Teams $2,213.80; last year $1,862 32. The receipts for Water Rates were $22,979.42 against $19,853.16 last year. Liquor licenses paid into the treasury 3,937.50; last year $3731.25. The number of polls assessed was 2,530; last year 2,317. The expenses of the Water Board have been $6,027 33; against $8,584.72 last year. The debt of the town is $356,579.80; last year it was $263,726.49, making a decrease against the town of $7,146.69, The resources of the town are $122.766.20 which include a balance in the treasury of $34,970.61, unpaid taxes amounting to $13,500, and the sinking fund of $70,919.71. The valuation of town property is estimated $599,016, which includes the new Town House and land, costing, according to the figures, $103,429, the water works $280,100, the school and engine houses, and other property.

By the report of the Water Board it will be seen that the receipts of that Board have been $22,979.42. The cost of maintainance was $6,027.33, and the interest account for the year $12,886.91, showing that the works yielded a handsome revenue to the town beyond the interest and cost of maintainence, the figures being $4,065.28. The number of families supplied with water was 1460, an increase of 250 from last year's report. The number of tanning and currying establishments was 46; morocco establishments 17; private stables 111, besides numerous other supplies. The number of new services put in during the year was 148.

By the report of the Chief Engineer of the Fire Department it appears that there were nineteen fires and alarms during the year; the losses $15,888.16; insurance received $14,188.16; making a total loss of 1700; 2,650 feet of new cotton hose have been added to the department during the year. The Chief Engineer recommends that "one of the steamers be retired from active service, and that a Hose Carriage and company for the same be stationed at the brick engine house, in place of one of the steamer companies." He should not advise the sale of the steamer, but that it be kept at all times in readiness to respond for duty in case of a serious fire.

WE HOPE every voter in town who casts a ballot next Monday will vote yes or no on the question "Shall licenses for the sale of intoxicating liquors be granted In this town?" By the present law the entire question is left with the majority; if that majority finds expression at the polls, the Selectmen, whatever their personal predilections, must abide by the decision.

In the past few weeks we have given expression in these columns to opposing views on this question. We take it for granted that no new converts can be made on either side by any word that we can say. But we do urge everyone to vote. Don't let the decision of the question, for or against your wishes, go by default. Last year there were nearly one hundred, who voted at the election for town officers, who declined to vote either way on this question.

We have stated in these columns, which we repeat, that we are in favor of the enforcement of the law, not as it has been in past years, but strictly and to the letter. If the town votes license, we want to see its provisions carried out; more than this we want to see the Board of Selectmen refuse licenses to those whom they know to be violating the law at the present time, but against whom it is not possible to find evidence to convict in a court of law. There are dealers in town who are known by every good citizen to be violators of the license law. The selectmen and police say that such violation is hard to prove. We grant it. But there is one thing can be done. A license can be refused to these dealers the ensuing year provided the town decides to grant them.

If the voters decide that no licenses shall be granted, it is hinted that a Law and Order League will be formed, though why it should be done any more on this account than if the vote is the other way is more than we can see. There is just as much need of it in the one case as the other. But be that as it may, if the no license vote prevails, there will be an absolute necessity of such a League. And we shall as earnestly hope that the law can be enforced. The temperance people ought to see the work that would be before them,—for a prohibitory vote with no enforcement other than has been previously the case here, means free rum, and free rum only.

THE TOWN Warrant will be found on our inside pages this week, and we commend its perusal to our readers. It contains 49 articles, most of which are of the usual nature, relating to the choice of officers and the usual appropriations of the town. The 30th article is to hear and act on the report of the committee chosen at the last annual meeting to consider whether any change in the manner of collecting taxes is desirable. We understand that this committee are ready to report, giving the collector direct power to issue warrants for the collection of delinquent taxes. This power he has not at the present time, and we think it not only proper but desirable that it should be given. They will also suggest the publication in the Town Report of the names of the delinquent tax payers at the end of each year. Doubtless this would have a good effect, and it is probable that the report of the committee will be accepted without opposition.

Article 46th in reference to the purchase of a portion of land of the South Society on the curve of the South Reading R. R. track ought to pass. The liability to accidents in this place is well known. Probably no driver of a vehicle but has had occasion at some time to desire a change of road in this spot.

Article 48th in reference to the publication of a Valuation Book is something that ought to need no discussion. It is not only of great value for reference but such a book ought to be in the possession of every legal voter. Such a book is published in Danvers and Marblehead and other places. The amount of valuation as assessed by the Selectmen, and a detailed account of the different property, both real and personal, ought to be made known. We believe it will benefit the town, financially, and lead to a more equitable adjustment of the taxable property of the town.

There are other articles which are of more or less interest to different localities, and for which it is probable that small appropriations will be needed. The principal work of laying out the appropriations will devolve upon the Finance Committee to be chosen, and it is for the best interest of the town that a committee of liberal judgment and foresight should be appointed.

THE REPORT of the Trustees of the Peabody Institute is prepared this year by Frank E. Farnham, Esq. It is understood that he will recommend a more liberal policy in the management, together with several changes. He will advocate the retirement of each of the Trustees at the expiration of their term of service, and also more frequent changes in the membership of the Lyceum and Library Committee, in order that more of our young men, who desire to be on this Committee, may have the opportunity. We understand, also, that he favors a more extended course of lectures, and less additions of books to the Library. All these things are worthy of thought, and are on the line of a somewhat different policy from what has hitherto been pursued. There is much reason in his advocacy of the changes, and we commend the reading of the report, which will be ready for distribution at the Town Meeting.

Mr. Charles H. Webber, in a letter ter from Gainsville, Florida, to the Observer, says that Mr. R. M. Clapp, formerly of the Lafayette street marble works, is there and has purchased a tract of about 500 acres, four miles north-east of that place.

J. B. THOMAS' OFFICE.

Ever since J. B. Thomas has been engaged in his extensive business in this town his office work has been done up stairs in connection with his slaughtering establishment. Not only was the entrance inconvenient but the quarters were limited. Mr. Thomas has had his mind on a new office for some time, and he now has nearly completed a building twenty-two by thirty with a French roof, just opposite the slaughter house and stables, which it is probable will be occupied this week. To say that it eclipses anything in the way of an office in this vicinity would be to give but a faint idea of its beauty; it must be seen to be fully realized. Through the courtesy of Walter C. Merrill, Esq., Mr Thomas' right hand man, we were privileged to inspect it. The entrance is on the south side, and the entire room outside the building is nearly equally divided into an outer room, 11 feet square, and the inner office, which is still again divided into a room for the use of the clerks, and a smaller one for the private use of Mr. Thomas. The outer room is elegantly furnished with a sheathing of birds eye maple and a dado of mahogany. With the exception of the maple sheathing and the oak finish in the hall way, the entire finish is mahogany. The elegant finish is entirely in the wood, and the work in this department and all the carpenter work was done by Mayhew S. Clark. The entire room has a marble floor, furnished by A. Wentworth, Roberts & Co., of Boston, and is furnished with a large center table, with top of Japanese marble, and two fine steel engravings in costly bronze frames. The room is elaborately frescoed, as is also both of the inner rooms, the work being done in fine style by P. A. Butler of Boston, the same artist who did the decoration for the Universalist church. Here is also a large Fairbanks' scale, of the finest mechanism, capable of weighing 28,000 lbs. The inner room proper for the use of the book keepers and clerks is twelve by thirteen, with a standing desk fitted into the partition between the rooms, on which is a glass swinging door, opening to the outer room, and there is also an outer shelf for the convenience of those who have business with this cashier. This desk will be occupied by the head bookkeeper and cashier, and over it is a heavy bevel plate of glass, the finest we think, we ever saw. There is also another double desk fitted to the room. All these desks are solid mahogany and correspond in color and finish to the room itself. Opposite these desks and close to the door of the private office of Mr. Thomas is a Derby roll top desk, which will be occupied by Mr. Merrill. In the rear of the room is a large and finely ornamented Geo. L. Damon safe, with combination lock, double doors, and all the attachments. This safe is eighty-nine inches high, sixty-eight wide and three feet deep. A space in the rear is built on to accommodate it, so that the outer edge is just level with the rest of the finish. To the left of this is also the old safe, neatly fitted in to correspond with its more pretentious companion. In connection with this room is a closet and lavatory. Here also are the telephone connections. There is the regular Bell telephone, and five acoustic or Frazier telephones for short distance use. The connections from the office by these are (1) with the wool factory (2) with the morocco factory (3) with the residence of Mr. Thomas (4) with the beef slaughter house (5) with the sheep slaughter house. This latter one is located in the office over the desk of the cashier. This room and the private office is fitted with a neat pattern of Brussels carpet from the establishment of Almy Bigelow & Webber, of Salem. The private room of Mr. Thomas is furnished with a Derby roll top desk, three finely upholstered chairs and a steel engraving to match those in the outer office. All three of these engravings were a present to Mr. Thomas from the boys. The gas fixtures are very neat both in the private office and throughout the building, and were selected by Mr. Merrill from the establishment of Shreve, Crump & Low. The mason work in the building was done by Arthur Trask. Up stairs are two finished rooms which can be used if necessary. The one at the head of the stairs will probably be used for the storage of papers. The heating for the office is done by Geo. H. Little from the cellar, with his steam heating apparatus. Both offices are heated with the steam from the top of the boiler, the hall being heated from a radiator. From the same heating apparatus by connections which have been made by Mr. Little, Mr. Thomas heats his residence and green house, the harness room of his large stable and the sheep slaughter house. In the spring Mr Thomas anticipates heating also his private stable. Mr. Thomas and his clerks may well be happy in anticipation of a speedy occupancy of these rooms with their elegant surroundings, more like the drawing room of some elegant mansion than the usual office of a man of business.

Now just look at what the Legislature was fooling away time over yesterday—this Great and General Court which does not dare to submit to the people the question of the biennial amendment, and which is so afraid our liberties will all be lost, if we do not send them to the state-house every year. Take first the honorable Senate. The Senate had resolves reported in favor of an extraordinary number of copies of the agricultural college reports and experiment station reports—farmers cry for them probably. But we notice the number of students is smaller than ever, now that they can go for nothing. Then a bill came up, whose sole motive and object was to affect a pending law suit between two citizens of the commonwealth and on that most of the afternoon was spent. We are glad to say it was defeated, but if the Legislature had not been in session nobody would have thought of taking it to the state house. We do not mean to say that this was all the business done. Oh no,—a resolve in favor of Bridget Slattery got its third reading, a dozen little bills of no consequence were advanced a stage, and one, of doubtful valor, that in regard to the New York and New England railroad, probably one of those measures which will sometime be regretted. Then there were other very grave measures reported,—one fixing the contents of a standard barrel of cranberries, one in regard to the inspection of veal; inexpedient to legislate in regard to the taxation of mortgages (thanks for small favors), two or three perfectly needless and ridiculous insurance bills, resolve of thanks to the Gay head people, resolve paying $64 to the town of Holden,—and so on an unending stream of pismire legislation of no value to anybody and which could not be puttered with if the Legislature met only once in two years.—Springfield Republican, March 1.

At a regular meeting of the F. M. C. T. A. Society, of Peabody, the following officers were elected:—Pres., Patrick Shirlock; Vice Pres., Thomas O'Shea; Rec. Sec., Daniel O'Connor; Collector, Daniel Mullane; Treas., William McCarty; Cor. Sec., James Mannie; Librarian, John Carbrey; Board of Directors, Matthew Meehan, Daniel Breseahan, William Croughwell, Augustus Meade, Cornelius Fitzpatrick; Board of Investigation Committee, James McSwain, Michael McCarty.

Porter's market on Central street makes a tempting display in their windows, but not half as tempting as they show you inside the store. Mr. Porter buys the best, and his customers know it. He is just now making a specialty of grain fed pork, raised where he knows all about it.

Mr. Frank Winchester while driving along Washington street, last evening, got caught in the car track near the glue works, breaking a shaft.

Now is the time to get house paper cheap. Merrill & Mackintire announce a great bargain, to close out for the spring stock, and now is the time to secure it.

The "puzzle" now is: "If your great grandmothers were all living, how many would you be blessed with?"

RESOLUTIONS OF RESPECT.

L. A. 2921 K. of L.

WHEREAS, it has pleased the Omnipoten Ruler to remove from our midst, one whose untiring zeal and fearless sense of honor made him ever ready to extend a helping hand to the oppressed, and opposed the exercise of selfish tyranny from whatever source it came, and

WHEREAS, in the death of Wendell Phillips, the working masses of America have lost a constant and unswerving champion, ever fearless and entirely unselfish in his advocacy of human rights, an honest, earnest friend on whose sympathy and advice we could always rely, therefore be it,

RESOLVED, That while we bow in humble submission to the decrees of an all wise Ruler we deeply deplore our loss and will ever cherish his name in fond remembrance and endeavor to perpetuate the memory of his courage, honesty and godlike humanity as an heritage to the toiling generations yet to come.

BUSINESS. An active business is carried on at Paine's Furniture Manufacturing Establishment in Boston. Their Custom and retail trade now demands nearly the entire block of four acres in floor room. From this immense establishment thousands of homes are furnished at a cost so much under the usual price that people come from a long distance and save money by it.

TO OUR

CITIZENS IN PEABODY,

Who are anxious to procure a strictly first class bread, I heartily recommend my

as an article that will delight and fully satisfy in every particular all demands in such a direction. I began the baking of this bread, a little more than one year ago, and am the original and only manufacturer in Massachusetts. Since that time, it has constantly increased in sale, and the words of testimonial and recommendation which have been given me by my customers from time to time fully justify me in stating the above.

I also wish to call attention to my line of goods in general. My intention is to make them all of a first class order. I am able to furnish at very short notice, anything in my line, to suit all classes. I have had more than sixteen years experience in this business and think I can make good the above statement. My crackers are baked here in Peabody and, therefore, shall be fresh. Please bear in mind when you wish to purchase.

Respectfully,

C. F. HATHAWAY,

BAKER,

50 LOWELL ST.,

PEABODY.
